Trailing by 5-1 with two out and two runners on base, Ed Levy slammed his ninth home run of the year over the left-field wall and ended Kemp Wicker's turbulent reign on the mound. Wicker had permitted fifteen scattered blows. Sam Nahem was Montreal's fireman, and after Rite Suder beat out a hit to short, Billy Holm ended the game with a pop to Skeets McDaniel, but not until he drove one out of the park foul by inches.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"- by Ripley

Still standing atop Fischer Hill in Brookline, Mass., is the huge stone mansion moved there from Marquette, Mich., in 1903, by John Longyear, iron ore and timber millionaire. A railroad was built along Lake Superior in front of Longyear's $500,000 Marquette mansion. His fight to stop the trains failed, so he determined to move. Rather than abandon his house, he decided to move it stone by stone. Seventy-four freight cars—two complete trains—were required to move it to its new site at Brookline. He lived in the rebuilt mansion early 20 years, until his death in 1922.

CANADIANS BEAT WASEDA, 37-29 BUT ONLY AFTER TOUGH BATTLE

The Canada Westerns, reputed the best basketball team in Canada, made their debut here Friday night at the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens' outdoor court and defeated the Waseda University squad, 37 to 29, but they had no easy time of it. Three thousand spectators were on hand.

The Canadians won out in the last five minutes of the game when the Waseda players, over-anxious because of the stalling tactics that their opponents have seemingly begun resorting to, switched to a long distance shooting game. On this style of play, the Canadians had been concentrating their efforts all evening and it looked terribly bad at times when they lost the ball unnecessarily, but they managed to connect in the dying moments of the game to emerge victors.

It might have been the weather, it was sweltering hot, the Canadians did not possess the speed they had been reputed to have and their passing could have been better. Depending on their height advantage, especially of Captain and Center Joe Ross and Milton Parsons, who played at guard instead of center, both well over 6 feet in height, the visitors played the backboards time and again with view to scoring on follow-up shots. But in this, they had little success as the Waseda players put up a tight defense. Rather, it was the long shots, particularly by Art Willoughby, who wore jersey No. 11 and held a guard position, that won for Canada.

ROSS KEY-MAN

Ross was the key-man for the visitors, both on offense and defense. He was high point scorer of the game with 12 points. With two minutes to go, for instance, he won the plaudits of the spectators with a basket that came purely on his energetic efforts. In possession of the ball, he dribbled his way clear around the Waseda defense to penetrate into close scoring distance and sunk one through the hoop to put his team into a 33 to 28 lead.

But the upshot of the game Friday night is that the Canadians will have to do some tall hustling if they want to beat the All-Japan team. Right now, the odds are slightly in favor of the latter to win the games next Monday and Tuesday nights.

The Canadian players looked impressive in their pre-game warming up in their red silk shirts and shorts.

The nip and tuck nature of the contest can be realized from the fact that the score was tied on as many as eight occasions.

Canada registered the first score of game almost immediately after the opening tip-off when Sonny Watson intercepted a Waseda pass and dribbled down the floor to score without any Waseda player near him. Milton Parsons followed with a field goal and Canada assumed a 4-0 lead. Oda, however, scored a clean shot for Waseda and Munekata followed suit to deadlock the count at 4-all in two minutes. Ross sank one from close range but he fouled Center Kurokawa and the latter sank both free throws to tie the score again at 6-6. Ross came back again with a beautiful one-handed toss and Canada was in the lead again. Munekata took a beautiful pass from Oda to score a field goal and the score was 8-8 after eight minutes of play.

Yokoyama scored a beauty and Waseda was in the lead for the first time with 10-8. Forward Jimmy Bardsley missed two free throws but Willoughly came through with a one-hander and deadlocked the count at 10-all with 11 minutes to go. Oda sent one clean through the hoop from the foul throw line and Yokoyama followed it up with another field goal and Waseda was leading 14-10 with 8 minutes to go. At this stage of the game, the Canadians lost their stride and were shooting recklessly at long range. They could have checked the Waseda rally earlier had they stuck to a passing game. Willoughby came to the Canadians' rescue with a long shot with 3 minutes to go. Ross tallied a one-hander just before the gun and the half ended 14-14.

Waseda fell into a slump during the last five minutes of the first half resorting to long shots.

CANADA RALLIES

On the very first tip-off, with resumption of play, Canada forged into a 16-14 lead when George Sibour, substituting for Watson at forward, scored a field goal. Willoughby then converted a free throw. Munekata registered a field goal for Waseda but Al Beaton sank one to put his team into 19 to 16 lead. Ross missed two free throws on a foul by Kurokawa and Oda sank in a beauty for Waseda to cut Canada's lead down to 19-18. Kurokawa again fouled Ross in the act of shooting and this time Ross converted one. Kurokawa, however, retaliated with a field goal and put the score on a 20-all basis with 16 minutes to go.

It was at this stage of the game that Willoughby, the not so tall Canadian guard, really got going. He sank two beautiful field goals in succession to give his team a 24-20 lead. Ross missed two free throws. Bardsley fouled Yokoyama and the latter sank both shots to put the score 24-22. The brilliant Munekata came to his team's rescue with a beautiful field goal to tie the score at 24-all with 10 minutes left. Willoughby missed two free throws on a foul by Yonekura and was plenty disgusted but he followed it up with a field goal and his team led again, 26-24. Yonekura redeemed himself with a field goal to tie the score at 26-all.

Ross was on the job as ever and sank a field goal to put his team into the lead again at 28-26. And Bardsley followed to make it 30-26 with 7 minutes to go. Yokoyama converted a free throw on a foul by Willoughby and did so again on one by Gordon to put the score 30-28. Here was a chance still for Waseda with 5 minutes left. Ross made good on a free throw and Canada was in front 31-28. Then he followed with a field goal to increase the lead to 33-28 with 2 minutes to go. Dick Wright, who had entered the game only a short time previously, came through with a timely goal to up the lead to 35-28. Oda converted a free throw to make it 35-29. Bardsley sank the game's last field goal to give Canada a 37-29 victory just before the final whistle.

Canada takes on Rikkyo University, the inter-collegiate champions, on the same court at 7:30 p.m. today.

MISS MARBLE ENTERS FINAL AT WIMBLEDON

Domei Tsushin

WIMBLEDON, July 6—Miss Alice Marble, co-holder last year of the women's doubles and mixed doubles Wimbledon championships, and Miss Katherine Stammers, veteran English player, will meet in the single finals of the women's division of the Wimbledon Championships.

Miss Stammers advanced to the final round only after a bitterly fought three-set match with Mrs. Sarah Palfry Fabyan, seasoned American player. Although Miss Stammers took the first set at 7-5, the American player came back strong to take the second 2-6. Miss Stammers, however, swept through the final set at 6-3 to take the match.

Miss Marble, in her match with Mrs. Svend Sperling, the former German star Miss Krahwinkle, had the Danish girl completely at her mercy. Mrs. Sperling found herself completely outclassed and was not able to take a single game. The match was one of the fastest ever run off at Wimbledon, Miss Marble winning in 20 minutes, 6-0, 6-0.

In the quarterfinals of the women's doubles, Miss Helen Jacobs, of the United States, and Miss Adeline Yorke, of England, paired together to defeat Miss Margot Lumb and her sister, Miss Jacobs and Miss Yorke won 6-0, 6-1.

In another women's quarterfinal match, Miss Betty Nuthall and Miss Jean Nicoll defeated Miss Rita, Jarvis and Miss Nina Brown, 6-2, 6-2.

Meanwhile, Elwood T. Cooke and Robert Riggs, of the United States, who will face each other in the finals of the men's singles, paired together in the men's doubles to defeat the veteran French team of Jean Borotra, the "Bounding Basque", and Jacques Brugnon, and advance to the final round. The Americans won in four sets, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In the other men's doubles bracket, Frank H. Wilde and Charles E. Hare paired together to defeat Drage Mitic and Franjo Puncec in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5.

UPPER THAMES CENTER OF ROWING ACTIVITY

The Times, London

LONDON, June 19—The center of rowing activity for the next few weeks will be the reaches of the upper Thames, and on Saturday the Reading Amateur Regatta was held.

The 83 entrants provided a full day's racing, and the management committee are to be congratulated upon the expeditious way in which they dealt with their vast program of 70 heats and finals, to which was added a re-row on account of a dead-heat in the Thames Cup eights.

The rain of the previous days had caused a rise in the level of the river and, with a following wind, the conditions were very fast, which may be appreciated from the fact that the Thames Cup eighth race was won in 31sec. better time than last year, and both the Junior-Senior and Junior eights in 20sec. better time. Imperial College, who had made a favorable impression at Walton, justified hopes by winning the Thames Cup eights from eight other crews. They beat Henley by three-quarters of a length in their opening heat, and Lensbury by a length in the semi-final. The other semi-final was between Quintin, who had beaten the Metropolitan Police, and Twickenham, who had beaten Kensington, and this was the closest race of the day. A few yards from the finish the maroon announcing the start of the next race caused the crews to falter, thinking they had reached the winning post; but they recovered, and the result was a dead heat. Quintin proved to have the better stamina in the re-row and won by half a length, but they failed to find their best form in the final and were beaten by two-thirds of a length. However, with Imperial College, Quintin, Twickenham, Westminster Bank, and London (who have not yet appeared), the English representation in the Thames Cup at Henley is likely to be a strong one.

ONE BETTER

Eight crews took part in the Junior-Senior Eights and the success of the Reading Rowing Club was popular. Reading had reached the semi-final of this class at Walton and the final at Richmond, so it was only fitting that they should make further progress and win. They had to meet Reading University in the final but the Town club were always in the lead. Thirteen crews, including Magdalen and Oriel crews from Oxford, took part in the Junior Eights. Both the Oxford Colleges survived one round and the final was fought out between Thames and Barclays Bank, the former getting away the better and winning by one and a half lengths.

Much interest was taken in the racing for the Wyfold class fours, because the Tigre Boat Club, who have come over from Argentina for Henley, were making their first appearance in this event. They had to meet Midland Bank in their heat and it was a good race until half-way down the course, with the Argentine crew just holding the lead. Then their steering seemed to go wrong and they went out of their station and clashed with the Bank crew, the umpire having no alternative but to disqualify them. The event was eventually won by Walton, who beat Quintin in the final. R. R. Swatton, who has been a tower of strength to Walton for so many years, was absent, H. E. G. Watts taking over as stroke and J. Ormiston going in at bow. It is not often that one finds Oxford and Cambridge crews taking part in junior clinker fours, but on Saturday the final was fought out between Magdalene College, Cambridge, and Wadham College, Oxford, the former being successful.

There were five entrants in the Senior Sculls and J. H. Pinches, of London, gained his first victory in the event. The ease of his victories in the semi-final over W. E. C. Horwood, the N.A.R.A. champion, and in the final over R. D. Burnell, Oxford Blue, leads one to hope that he may yet be a worthy representative of Great Britain in the Diamond Sculls. Another London success was gained in the Junior-Senior Sculls by R. Parker, the American, who last year, when he rowed in the London Grand eight, had the distinction of being the heaviest oarsman ever to row at Henley.

Golf Association Sends Protest to England

The Japan Golf Association passed a resolution Friday to file a protest with the publisher of the Golfer's Handbook, published in Edinburgh, which willfully eliminated to print the results of the Japanese golf championships in 1938 on the ground of the "China war."

Japanese golf circles have never been disturbed by the China Affair for holding championship tournaments. Not only golf tournaments, Japan is carrying all sports as usual without any disturbance, the resolution said. It was signed by Mitsuaki Otani, Shunkichi Nomura and Mitsujiro Ishii.

The Golfer's Handbook failed to print the results of the Japan amateur championship and Japan professional championship of 1938 in pages 120 and 121.

AUTOGRAPH FANS WERE BUSY AT COOPERSTOWN

N.Y. Times

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., June 12—With two of baseball's immortals, Hans Wagner and Eddie Collins, picking teams in the old fashioned sadolt style of "climbing" a bat with hands thirty-two major league stars and one hero of another era, Babe Ruth, engaged in a seven-inning game at Doubleday Field this afternoon as part of the "Cavalcade of Baseball" in the centennial celebration.

Not that it matters much who won, but the Wagners triumphed, 4 to 2. A crowd of 10,000 jammed the stands, overflowed on the field and enjoyed themselves to the full. They applauded good plays and solid hits and had little interest in the result.

That was just as the sponsors intended it. Both leagues had players on each team and hence it was of little concern which came out on top.

VANDER MEER IN DIFFICULTIES

Johnny Vander Meer allowed two runs in the third inning when he bobbled the topped grounder of his Cincinnati coach, Jimmy Wilson, then was touched for ground rule doubles by Marvin Owen of the Tigers and Danny MacFayden of the Bees.

The Collins boys came back to tie the count in the sixth. Johnny Allen of the Indians was on the mound when Hank Greenberg of the Tigers, Taft Wright of the Sentors and Arndt Jorgens of the Yankees singled in succession for one run. Another arrived on an infield out.

In the same frame, however, the Wagners bounced back to the lead with Sylvester Johnson of the Phils on the mound. Ark Vaughan of the Pirates and Frankie Hayes of the Athletics hit ground rule doubles for one run and Moe Arnovich of the Phillies singled to center for the other.

The best pitching trick was turned in by our old friend, Dizzy Dean, who gave no safeties in two innings and fanned two batters. The most dramatic moment was when Ruth pinch-hit for MacFayden and sent up a skyscraper fly that Catcher Jorgens gobbled up.

AUTOGRAPH FANS BUSY

The major league game got slightly out of hand toward the end, autograph hunters surrounding the outfielders in quest of signatures.

Jorgens warmed up Lefty Grove in the second inning and then was the first one to face Old Mose at bat. That sort of thing only happens once in a hundred years.

One fan seemed to be so captivated by the way one of the Knickerbocker outfielders in the Doubleday game caught flies in his cap that he tried to catch a foul later in his straw bonnet. The ball didn't even pause as it went through.

POPULATION FAR EXCEEDED

The population of Cooperstown is approximately 2,800 but the estimated crowd at the ceremonies was 10,000. It was all done with mirrors.

Ruth disclosed that this occasion just missed being an anniversary for him as well. It was twenty-five years ago yesterday that he pitched his first major league game for the Boston Red Sox.

When the Cooperstown Special rolled in this morning it seemed that the entire population was at hand to watch it arrive. It was not only the baseball celebrities who attracted them but the train itself. For this was the first passenger train to come into this village in five years. Yesterday they had to chop down weeds two feet high from between the tracks.

George Ruppert, brother of the late Colonel Jacob Ruppert and vice president of the Yankees, is still a baseball enthusiast at heart. He was spotted securing an autograph from Larry Lajoie.

One exceptionally ardent American league fan was so enthralled at the thought of the "choose up" game that he suggested its adoption for future world series in order to give them an element of competition. A national leaguer growled when he heard of it.

GREENBERG 'SHOTS' SCENE

Operators of motion picture cameras were on a raised platform in front of the Hall of Fame in order to have a clear shot of the proceedings. One tall, broad-shouldered young chap stood with them, intently taking it all on a small portable machine. It was Hank Greenberg, who may some day move into that hall himself.

Some of the big league managers observed were Joe McCarthy, Bill Terry, Pie Traynor, Doc Prothro, Bill McKechnie, Gabby Hartnett, Casey Stengel and Connie Mack.

The veteran Bill Klem, "who never called one wrong," umpired the big league game with Eddie Rommel. He was asked jokingly beforehand if he had known Abner Doubleday. His eyes twinkling, the "old arbitrator" replied that he had never known him but had seen him play. Sheer nonsense.

America Russo, a 16-year-old Cooperstown schoolboy, gave an imitation of Al Schacht, the "clown prince" of baseball. Very good pantominist, too.

Sights never to be seen again: Tris Speaker and Mel Ott having a catch before the game.

The Organ Milton Played

Still in use in the Abbey at Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire, England, is the very pipe organ on which John Milton, famous blind poet, delighted to play. It was installed originally in Magdalen College, Oxford, but was removed to Hampton Court by Oliver Cromwell in 1654. It was while he served as Latin secretary to Cromwell that Milton played on the instrument. The organ was returned to Oxford later and was acquired by Tewesbury Abbey in 1736. It is still used at every service.

WOODERSON FOULED IN U.S., BRITISH NEWSPAPERS CLAIM

N.Y. Times

LONDON, June 19—A clamor for staging a "mile of the century" on Sydney Wooderson's own track and with his own officials arose in London today as sports writers cooled off somewhat and began to admit Blaine Rideout did not really knock down their Sydney and sit on him at Princeton Saturday.

Wooderson himself did a lot to clear the air. Writing in The News Chronicle, he said of the bump felt round the world, "I lost several yards and there was no opening for me to get through. I would not say it was intentional—I do not think it was.

"I am certain I could have won if this incident had not happened."

This is likely to help the situation. Americans have not been as unpopular in London as they were late Saturday night since the disturbance at Bunker Hill 164 years before to the day.

NEWSPAPERS CALL FOR RETURN

Newspapers took up the cry for a return match. Wooderson himself said, "I am very much hoping that Chuck Fenske will come over to England for the international meeting at White City between the United States and Great Britain on the Aug. 7 Bank Holiday, when we could meet again in the mile. I am still confident I can beat him."

Writers who were proclaiming yesterday Wooderson was "robbed," now think he was well below his usual form. The Mail said, "It sounds like a regrettable business, but the three-quarter mile time of 3:14 indicated that Wooderson was running below himself before he was bumped out."

Along with such comment ran calls for vengeance and a return race. Fenske is the one they want. Most writers experting at a 3,000-mile range believe Glenn Cunningham is washed up.

'TROUBLEMONGERS' CONDEMNED

The Manchester Guardian condemned "scavengers" who are going around "nosing for sensations and charges of raw deal in fragmentary accounts which have so far reached us of the overpublicized mile race at Princeton."

The paper commented: "One wishes that athletes and their friends could be muzzled for the first twenty-four hours after disappointments of this kind" and concludes:

"What matters a great deal to him (Wooderson) matters very little to the rest of the world and it is intolerable that his first unguarded words and those of his trainer should be caught up, perpetuated and manufactured into causes of ill feeling between us and the people we like and admire. * * * It will be deplorable if troublemongers persuade us again that all Americans are cheats and all Britons bad losers."

CLAIM FOUL

N.Y. Times

LONDON, June 18—British newspaper correspondents today claimed bitterly that Sydney Wooderson, Great Britain's first-ranking runner, had been "fouled" in his defeat in the Princeton invitation mile yesterday.

The headliness told the story to eager Britons, who were as stunned as if the new Mauretania had suddenly sunk as she left port.

"Wooderson robbed of 'mile of century' by foul," said one.

"Wooderson is fouled, loses almost in tears," said another.

There was some difference of opinion on just what happened. One newspaper said: "His foot touched a board when he was less than 100 yards from the finish. Three Americans flashed past him and Wooderson—still the greatest miler in the world—finished last."

Another said: "The American seemed to balk Wooderson as he passed him on the penultimate bend. The Briton threw out his right hand in a gesture of despair and never looked like a winner after Rideout fouled him."

The Sunday Dispatch held to the "tripped" theory, but Peter Wilson, writing for The Sunday Pictorial from the United States, did not mention the "foul." His account merely said Wooderson failed.

Joe Binks, writing for News of the World, said the crowd "was staggered to see him stumble as he pushed into the boards."

Sydney's father, George Wooderson, commented:

"I think Sydney would have won but for the incident which resulted in breaking his stride. . . . But what could he do when he was knocked off the course after leading all the way?

"Still he is a good sportsman, and will not complain about it. He will take it as it comes. Anyway, they have not beaten his world record for the mile.

"He has gone over to get a holiday out of it. He will stay with relations there, and I'm sure the result of the race won't affect his enjoyment of his stay in America."

Wooderson's mother and father and their 10-year-old granddaughter heard the race over the radio.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

EXPERTS DIFFER

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 19—The victim of the collision between Sydney Wooderson and Blaine Rideout in Princeton's now historic mile on Saturday was not the little Briton but Chuck Fenske. For the bespectacled Wisconsin alumnus apparently would have beaten the holder of the world record even if the race had rushed to its completion without the bumping incident to mar it.

Now, however, Fenske is the winner of a test that will have a cloud hovering over it, even when it becomes a misty story from the past. Saturday was not Wooderson's day, and, the experts agreed, he could not have triumphed even if no one had come close to him in the constant battle for the pole.

The Englishman did not run the right kind of race to begin with. He played the hands of his American rivals by setting the pace for all but the last 220 yards, and he let the speed of the affair drag enough for all of them to stay with him. Tactically he was in error and physically he was not at his peak.

COMPETITOR GIVES VIEWS

One of the American runners in the event who preferred not to be identified said afterward: "I had a good look at Wooderson all the way around and I could see that he was not right. He ran too unevenly and his head began to bob when Rideout challenged him in the backstretch of the last lap. But he sprinted every time Blaine tried to pass him, and when the twin did get just a mite ahead approaching the last turn, the thing happened.

"Wooderson tried to sprint once more. He ran blindly. Rideout, a foot in front, took the natural bend of the curve as he should have done and Sydney went straight ahead instead of sticking to the curb and ran right into Rideout. It was his own fault and there was no foul."

The Briton was just as insistent that he had been fouled. He seemed to feel that it was deliberate because Rideout apologized to him afterward. But Blaine explained that in slightly different fashion. "I went up to Wooderson," he drawled, "and told him that I was sorry we bumped. I though that that was the sporting thing to do. After all, he was a stranger in a strange land and I wanted to be as pleasant as possible in view of the unfortunate collision. He bumped me, not I him."

MANY MISS INCIDENT

Blaine's version of the incident was precisely in accord with that furnished by his fellow-American. This observer missed it entirely because Glenn Cunningham stumbled on the curb a second before and he was watched until he was back in stride. Not until then was attention switched to Wooderson, who was teetering uncertainly on the rail. It had happened, but the majority of those in the press box as well as in the stands had failed to see it.

Only the English writers, who cared not what went on outside of Wooderson's running, saw it. They agreed on the collision but were so confused that most of them thought that Fenske had done the damage, not Rideout.

It was a highly unsatisfactory finish to a race that had carried such bright hopes with it. There will be no encore, either. Although an invitation was proffered immediately by Samuel Clark Waugh, in charge of the National A. A. U. championships at Lincoln, Neb., on July 3 and 4, for Wooderson to compete there, little Sydney declined since he is slated to take a whirl at the English mile title that same week. He sails for home on June 28

Perhaps the 126-pound Briton will get a chance for revenge early in August, since an American team is due to go abroad for meets in England and on the continent. Some one of the crack milers in this country will make the trip. It may be Louis Zamperini if he can beat any of the others at Lincoln. Next year is the Olympic year, and so it will be two seasons at the earliest before Sydney returns—if he does.

A. G. Hill, his trainer, yesterday issued specific invitations to both Fenske and Cunningham to take part in the big Bank Holiday meet at White City Stadium in London early in August. It was not stated whether or not this would be outside of the regular A. A. U. team or as part of it. The Wisconsin graduate student expressed interest in the proposal, but the Kansan's Summer plans are so indefinite that he could not give any answer.

As for Wooderson, he was asked to compete in Buffalo on Saturday. Although the Briton will be in that vicinity at the time for a view of Niagara Falls, he refused to consider such an idea. The proposal that the five Princeton starters run on a board track at the World's Fair whenever they elect is too fantastic to be feasible.

The little solicitor was much more mollified yesterday than he had been when this writer talked with him the night before. He was not as bitter about the alleged "foul" and seemed more anxious to let the entire matter drop than to discuss it in any shape or form. Hill and Stanley Wooderson also had cooled off, although Joe Binks, London sports writer, continued to hold to his theory that there was no foul and that Sydney was not in proper shape for such a race.

AN EGREGIOUS ERROR

Many officials, down on the track, thought that Wooderson was all through when the accident occurred. They seemed to agree that Sydney made an egregious error in setting the pace when the wind began to kick up across the fields. They felt that he should have abandoned all idea of a record then and dropped back to let the bigger Americans break the force of the breeze.

Another thought offered was that Wooderson has never had the bristling competition that his fleet American rivals have been subjected to for years. In other words, in spite of his world record, he is rather inexperienced as compared with the men he faced.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT

NEW YORK, June 20—Sydney Wooderson was inclined yesterday to let the 1939 Princeton mile pass into history without further ado as motion pictures of the event only added fuel to the controversy as to whether he was fouled by Blaine Rideout.

After thinking the matter over, England's little world record holder at a mile termed his collision Saturday with Rideout an "unfortunate accident—an accident occurring in the heat of the race which is best forgotten."

The collision, at the top of the homestretch, threw the Englishman off stride and cost him whatever chance he had for victory. Chuck Fenske came up fast to take the race in 4:11, with Wooderson finishing last in the field of five.

Meanwhile, the movies failed to clear up the argument whether Rideout bumped Wooderson or whether the record holder, apparently tired, hit the Texan when he (Wooderson) failed to straighten out in time for the 200-yard dash to the finish line.

BRITON OFF BALANCE

The pictures showed Rideout passing Fenske shortly before the turn. Then Rideout pulled up even with Wooderson and for a time the two appeared to run shoulder to shoulder. Coming into the turn, Rideout, who was seeking to gain the lead, seemed to crowd Wooderson gradually toward the rail until the Briton half-stumbled and threw up his right arm as if to regain his balance.

Rideout went into the lead, only to have Wooderson regain his stride and pass him momentarily. From the angle of the pictures it was difficult to determine whether there actually was bodily contact or whether Wooderson, seeking to avoid such contact, inadvertently stepped on the rail and lost his balance.

Before the two collided, Glenn Cunningham, who finished second, five yards back of Fenske, also lost his balance when he stepped on the rail. When Wooderson stumbled, Glenn attempted to go through the hole, but the Briton's quick recovery blocked him and he was forced to go around the leaders to make his stretch bid.

RESULT HELD UNAFFECTED

Some track experts felt that the mishap, regrettable as it was, had little effect on the outcome. They pointed out that Wooderson, hailed abroad as the greatest judge of pace since Paavo Nurmi and admittedly aiming at a new record around 4:03, ran the first quarter in the slow time of 64 seconds. This not only cost Wooderson all chance of a new record, but indicated to some experts at least that the Englishman was not in shape. Certainly the pace was just what the Americans wanted.

Pictures of the finish also were significant. All four Americans held perfect form while Wooderson apparently had lost his form, showing signs of sheer exhaustion. In fact, at least one English sports writer expressed the fear before Wooderson went to the post that he had "left his race in England," where he set a world record for three-quarters of a mile and run a 4:07.4 mile.

Attempts to stage another race with the same field also failed when Wooderson declared he would return home June 28 to run in the English championships early in July. There had been hopes he would compete in the National A. A. U. championships at Lincoln, Neb., July 3-4. He also was asked to run in a Buffalo meet and on a board track at the World's Fair.

WOODERSON EXPLAINS REFUSAL

N.Y. Times

PRINCETON, N. J., June 19—Following is the statement issued today by Sydney Wooderson on his plans and the "bumping" incident in Saturday's race here:

"I regret that I cannot accept the many cordial invitations to run again in this country. I came to the United States to run only in one race, then to visit my relations and to see the country, which I should not be able to do if I ran again, as I should have to keep in strict training.

"It is impossible for me to prolong my stay in this country, since I must return for the British championships on July 7 and 8. I shall have a chance of meeting Fenske and the others again in the international meeting in August in London.

"Before leaving Princeton, in order to clear the atmosphere of many false statements attributed to me I should like to say that I regard Saturday's incident as an unfortunate accident, occurring in the heat of the race, which is best forgotten.

"I would like to thank Americans for their very warm reception of me and I hope to be able to come back again some day."

Futabayama Beaten By Mayedayama In Tourney at Dairen

Grand Champion Futabayama, who won the 15-day "Summer" championship tourney over 15 days last month at the Kokugikan bowl at Ryogoku without a defeat and reestablished his reputation as the strongest Sumo artist in many years, was thrown by Champion Mayedayama for a major upset in the exhibition tournament at Dairen Tuesday, according to a Domei dispatch.

Mayedayama attempted a body throw, which Futabayama checked. Mayedamaya then pushed Futabayama to the edge of the ring where the latter attempted to swing his opponent over his body but was forced out of the ring instead.

EIGHT COLLEGES EARN PLACES ON LACROSSE TEAM

Christian Science Monitor

NEW YORK—Eight colleges have placed men on the 1939 all-America lacrosse team selected officially today by the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association. Navy and the University of Maryland are each represented by two players, while Army, University of Pennsylvania, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Hobart, and St. John's of Annapolis each placed one. Eight other colleges placed men on the second and third teams.

"The 1939 lacrosse season which has just closed saw the largest number of college, school and club teams yet represented in the ancient Indian game of lacrosse, and in no season has competition for sectional honors been so close," Royce N. Flippin, President of the Association, stated in announcing the selections. "This is well evidenced by the fact that for the first time in many years no team was able to finish its season undefeated."

"Lacrosse competition in 1939 developed an exceptional group of midfield players and in several cases men with drawing ability played center at the face-off and then shifted to other positions," Dr. Laurie D. Cox of Syracuse University, who headed the all-America Committee, stated in reviewing the selections. "Stephens was a player of this type, being seen at both center and on the inside attack. He was definitely effective in his all-around play, both defensively and offensively, which, coupled with his excellent drawing ability, gave him the first team berth."

"The selection of the all-America team has been made with the idea of securing a strong well-balanced squad representative of the best in American lacrosse and capable of entering an international series if called upon to do so, as several all-America lacrosse teams have done on different occasions in the past," Dr. Cox stated. "For that reason the squad is arranged into a first, second, and third team, the first team representing the starting line-up, and the second and third teams the first and second string alternates."

Rain Postpones Second Canada-Japan Game; Honored at Tea Party

Rain shortly before 6 p.m. Tuesday postponed the second game between the visiting Canadian basketball team and the All-Japan combination to 7:30 p.m. today at the outdoor court of the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens. Plans originally were to have the game played at the National Gymnasium at Hitotsubashi, Kanda, in case of rain but due to the large turnouts of spectators in the past three games, the decision was reached to schedule the game for tonight. At the most, only 200 persons can be accommodated at the National Gymnasium.

The girls teams of the Postal Insurance Department will meet the Takinogawa Higher Girls School quintet in the curtain-raiser at 6 p.m.

Manager Peter Winckler and members of the Canadian team were honored at a tea party given by the Cultural Bureau of the Foreign Office at the official residence of the Foreign Office Tuesday afternoon.

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 16—With just about the fanciest bit of fork-hand flinging a Stadium crowd has seen this year, Don Vernon Gomez yesterday pointed the Yankees back on the victory path as he muffled the Indians' bats with four singles and shut out Ossie Vitt's clan for his fourth straight victory.

The count was 1 to 0, in exactly that kind of ball game. A gathering of 9,619 persons sat through to the end, expecting anything to happen any moment, and went home relieved when the scuffle ended with Jeff Heath's savage drive to left, under which old Twinkletoes George Selkirk twisted and turned before making the catch out near the 415-foot sign on the bleacher front.

The Yanks had only four hits themselves, which speaks eloquently of Mel Harder's pitching finesse, or a distinct lack of explosive power in Marse Joe McCarthy's firing squad. But in the fourth, one of four passes Harder issued before he gave way to a pinch-hitter in the eigth preceded one of the three singles the Yankees struck and Bill Dickey drove in the victory run as he grounded out. The significance of that lone run is found in the fact that the Yanks now are ten and one-half games ahead of the Red Sox.

HARDER MAKES SMART PLAY

Harder turned back the champions in the first inning, when he issued a pass and Red Robert Rolfe singled. Oscar Grimes made an error in opening the second, but Harder, wide-awake, executed a cover-up play in which he retired Selkirk, because George rounded first in the direction of second on the error and then reconsidered. He got the Yanks out one-two-three in the third before the blow fell.

Opening the fourth, Harder walked Tommy Henrich. Joe DiMaggio promptly slashed a single to left, on which Henrich scooted to third while DiMag pulled up at second on the throw-in. Dickey's grounder to Grimes was too deep for a play at the plate, and Henrich scored as Dickey was tossed out, DiMaggio racing to third.

But that was as far as the Yanks went, and it was just enough. Thereafter Gomez was the only Yankee to get as far as second, a feat he achieved twice, when he and Crosetti walked in the fifth and when the southpaw ace struck a surprise double in the seventh for the only Yankee extra-base blow.

CAMPBELL REACHES THIRD

Gomez, on the other hand, saw second base touched only twice by an Indian and third base. Each time it was Bruce Douglas Campbell who got that far. In the fourth Campbell singled and raced to third as Ben Chapman drove a single over first. But the next three men went down without getting the ball out of the infield.

In the sixth, with one out, DiMaggio made a painful muff of Campbell's easy fly and Bruce pulled up at second. But he was doubled trying to scurry back to the bag when Chapman lined to Babe Dahlgren for one of three fancy twin killings the Yankee infield executed.

For the rest, Gomez issued only two passes, one of which was expunged in the first double play in the third inning, fanned three batters and kept his infielders busy. Ken Keltner's single with two gone in the seventh was wasted, and one by Skeeter Webb was erased in a double-play into which Bad News Hale banged when he hit for Harder in the eighth.

EISENSTAT IN RELIEF TURN

Harry Eisenstat, late of the Tigers, did his first hurling chore as a member of the Cleveland staff and retired three in a row in the eighth, after being greeted by Henrich's blast into the lower rightfield stand that was foul by a scant margin.

Dahlgren launched two of the three Yankee double plays. In the third inning he scooped up Harder's bunt and, from a prone position, tossed to Gordon to double Webb.

It was the fifth Yankee shut-out of the year, to the relief of Gomez, who expects anything to happen when he works.

ALL-JAPAN FIVE BEATS CANADA, 30-28; PLAY-OFF SLATED TONIGHT

In one of the hardest fought basketball games ever played in Tokyo, the All-Japan team nosed out the visiting Canadian squad, 30-28, Wednesday night before a crowd of more than 5,000 fans that overflowed the open air amphitheater in the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine. Thus did the Japanese players redeem themselves of their defeat Monday night by a 31 to 26 score. The two teams were scheduled to meet in a third game for the title of the international series at the same court tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The All-Japan basketeers won the game because they made the Canadians' rolling offense in the figure 8 ineffective throughout the greater part of the evening by resorting to offensive tactics.

JAPANESE CONFIDENT

When the first half ended with the score tied at 11-all, the Japanese were confident of winning. But the Canadians gave them an awful scare by forging into a 17-13 lead shortly after resumption of play (and this with what would be called the second string in). The All-Japan players rallied, however, and in turn took the lead at 24-18 after 11 minutes of play. They were playing an all-offense game that seemed certain of stretching their lead but the Canadians, never panicky, fought back courageously and cut the lead down to a mere two points and it was anybody's game during the last two minutes.

Without any intention to put the burden on Forward Art Willoughby, the visitors' long distance shooting star, it can be said that he was a bit off form Wednesday for had he shot the baskets at the rate he did, in the three preceding games, five in each, the Canadians would have won. The best he could do was a basket in the first half and another in the second half. It looked pretty bad for him right at the outset of the game when he made two shots at the goal and missed both. He was always a threat to the Japanese, however, and they were guarding him closely throughout the evening.

ROSS STARS

Captain Joe Ross kept the Japanese players plenty busy and he pulled off some pretty plays. He was high scorer with 10 points. One time, he dribbled right down the whole court and registered a field goal without a single Japanese player even trying to block him. Jimmy Bardsley gave everything he had, especially during the last five minutes of the game when he charged through the Japanese defense time and again. His two baskets in the dying moments kept his team in the running for a chance for victory.

Three field goals by Guard Munakata, who had been kept on the sidelines throughout the first half, contributed considerably to the All-Japan team's victory for they set the Canadians behind by 24 to 18 after 12 minutes of play.

The game was a nip and tuck struggle in the first half. Japan scored the first point when Kin Tei converted one of two free throws on a foul by Willoughby. Ross fouled Center Kanokogi and the latter sank one of two throws and All-Japan was leading 2 to 0 after two minutes of play. Willoughby had two fine chances to score but he missed. Kanokogi fouled Ross who converted. Kanokogi was charged with another foul on Ross and the latter sank the throw to put the score 2-all after 5 minutes of play. Mitsuta registered a beautiful goal but Ross was allowed to get set on a shot and he counted to even the score at 4-all. Mitsuta converted one of two free throws on a foul by Beaton and Yokoyama rang a field goal to put his team into a 7-4 lead after 9 minutes of play.

ROSS SCORES BEAUTY

Ren, who had substituted for Kanokogi at center, fouled Ross who sank one of two shots. Ross then tallied on a beautiful one-hand shot and tied the score at 7-all after 10 minutes of play. Kin Tei sank a long shot and Japan led 9-7 but Willoughby took a pass from Bardsley and scored from near range to make it 9-all. Matsui replaced Ren for Japan, Cho switching from guard to center. Beaton and Mitsuta were charged with a double foul with 7 minutes to go but both missed. With 5 minutes to go, Coach Peter Winckler of the Canadian team changed his entire team. Goh and Boku went in for Japan.

Willoughby converted a free throw on a foul and Canada was ahead 10-9. Boku sent a long one through the net and Japan led 11-10 with three minutes to go. Both teams were fighting hard to score but guarding was close. Boku fouled Siborne and latter made one of the two throws good to deadlock the count, 11-all just before the half ended.

The Canadians opened the second half with the same team that had left the floor with the half, Watson and Siborne in the forward positions, Parsons at center, and Ritchie and Wright at guards. The All-Japan team started with Yokoyama and Boku at forward, Cho at center and Matsui and Kin Tei at guard.

Parsons tallied a field goal in the first minute of play and Canada was in the lead 13-11. Siborne followed with another to increase the lead, 15-11. Wright fouled Boku who converted. Wright fouled Boku again and again the latter converted to cut the Canadians' lead to 15-13 after four minutes of play. Ritchie came through with a timely goal for Canada on a one-hand toss for a 17-13 score. Ritchie then fouled Goh, who made one of two good. Ross and Gordon reentered the game.

TRICK PLAY WORKS

Cho dribbled down the whole floor as a trick play by the Japanese combination worked perfectly and he scored to trim the Canadians' lead to 17-16. Munakata was sent into the game and registered a long shot to put his team into an 18-17 lead after 7 1-2 minutes of play. Cho made good a free throw and Munakata followed with another goal to increase his team's lead to 21-17. Beaton converted one of two free throws on a foul by Goh but Kin retaliated for Japan on a foul by Beaton. Munakata sank another beauty and Japan led 24 to 18 with 9 minutes to go. The Japanese were playing a strong offensive game at this juncture.

Bardsley came through with a much needed goal for Canada after two minutes of play. Kasahara converted a free throw but the indominatable Bardsley rang another field goal and Japan was ahead by only three points, 25 to 22 with 7 minutes to go. Yokoyama tallied with a one-hander and Japan was in front again by 27-22. Parsons was back in the game again and while the Japan team hesitated to block him, he went down the whole length of the floor and scored a field goal to cut the lead down to a basket, 27-25, with 2 minutes to go.

CHO SINKS TWO

But Ross was charged with a foul on Cho and the latter rose to the occasion by sinking both shots and Japan led by four points, 29-25. Willoughby sent one clean through the hoop and Canada again was only two points behind. Bardsley was caught holding Yokoyama and the latter missed. But a technical foul was called on Ross. This time, Yokoyama made the throw good and Japan was out in front, 30 to 27, with 52 seconds left to play. Mitsuta fouled Siborne but the latter missed both shots. Ross converted one of two free throws on a foul and his team was only two points behind, but there were only 6 seconds to go and the gun went off before the Canadians could get that tying basket.

In the curtain-raiser, the Takinogawa Higher Girls School staged a last minute rally to beat the Postal Insurance Girls team, 28 to 24. Score a half-time was 13 to 11 in their favor.

EDDIE COLLINS WAS THRILLED WITH BASEBALL'S CELEBRATION

By EDWIN RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y.—Several hours after baseball's 100th birthday party had broken up and the small army of diamond immortals had marched away from the historic little mountain village of Cooperstown, Eddie Collins—himself a member of the select Hall of Fame group—sat in his Pullman compartment and thought back over the proudest day of his long and colorful career.

"I've had some great times since coming into baseball," said the general manager of the Boston Red Sox, staring out across the green foothills of the Catskills. "It isn't easy to forget that first big league game and those World Series battles. But today, standing up there on that platform with Cy Young, Pete Alexander, Walter Johnson, Ty Cobb and the rest of the old gang, I had the biggest thrill of my life. Why, I'd have been bat boy for that crowd."

WHAT A BAT BOY!

And what a bat boy he would have been! One of the smartest players who ever pulled on a glove; the second baseman of Connie Mack's famous $100,000 infield; an active American Leaguer for 25 years; a great hitter and base runner. They called Larry Lajoie the outstanding second sacker of all time as he walked to the front of the speaker's platform of Cooperstown, but there were plenty of men within hearing of the amplifier who would rather have had Eddie Collins at the keystone bag.

"I was impressed a great deal," Collins went on, "with the affair as a tribute to the game of baseball, rather than to any individual or group. The crowd showed as much enthusiasm in meeting the present-day players, as it did seeing those named for the Hall of Fame. The turnout was wonderful, which, in itself, is a fine tribute to the game. There must have been 15,000 on Main Street for the parade and about 10,000 at the game. There weren't enough seats at Doubleday Field."

'MAIN STREET TOPICS'

Many of the "spectators" standing around under the shade trees on Main Street, absorbing every word that came from Babe Ruth, Commissioner Landis, Ford Frick, Larry Lajoie, Cobb, Speaker and other stars of the profession, may some day climb to that platform themselves. There were Lefty Grove, Charley Gehringer, Johnny Allen, and Hank Greenberg leaning against an iron fence in the background. Dizzy Dean, Joe Medwick, Lloyd Waner, and Pie Traynor sitting on the running board of a car. Joe McCarthy was close by.

Collins continued: "As I said to Mrs. Collins this morning, I would have given almost anything to have John McGraw there. Any celebration involving baseball doesn't seem complete without 'Mac.' In my opinion, he and Connie (Mack) did more for baseball than any other two men. Just stop and think of the players they developed—men who went on to become outstanding and a credit to the sport.

MCGRAW MADE MATTY

"McGraw made Mathewson, and if Matty wasn't the greatest pitcher of all time, he was close to it. When McGraw first went to the Giants early in the 1900's, he found Matty playing—or trying to play—first base. Connie developed so many you couldn't name them. Everything I have made in baseball I owe to him. Grove will tell you the same thing. Yes, it would have been a greater day for all of us if the Little Napoleon could have been on that platform."

As one standing on Main Street said: "Boy, imagine the team you could get together today if fellows like Ruth, Speaker, Wagner and Cobb was still active! Why, it would win nine out of ten games from the Yankees."

Although the Cooperstown affair was not a boisterous one, it has left a lasting impression with all who were fortunate enough to be there. The introduction of the Hall of Fame members on Main Street; the parade from in front of the National Baseball Museum to Doubleday Field; the "choose up sides" game between the Wagners and Collins; the cheer when Babe Ruth went up to the plate as a pinch hitter—Alexander, Young, Cobb, Speaker—the prediction by Judge Landis that the game will develop even more rapidly during the next few years. One of those days you never do forget.

SCOTS DEFEAT U.S. ELEVEN BY 4-2 SCORE

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 19—Two superbly conditioned elevens battled each other all over the Polo Grounds yesterday in an international soccer match. The touring All-Stars from Scotland and a picked team from the American League were tied at 2—2 after ninety minutes of thrilling play.

Determined to reach a decision, since the first meeting last month resulted in a 1—1 deadlock, a thirty-minute overtime period was decided upon and it was during the extra session that the invading outfit proved its superiority. Scoring twice, the Scots clinched the verdict at 4—2 and remained unbeaten on its tour as a crowd of 15,163 voiced its approval.

When the final whistle was blown a group of fans rushed to the field, lifted Jimmy Carabine to their shoulders and began a triumphant march to the clubhouse. For it was Carabine who turned the trick of beating the inspired Americans. Not alone did he boot home the tying goal, but the speedy Blantyre center netted both tallies in the extra stanza.

CHESNEY EXCELS IN NETS

However, a great deal of praise must be given to lanky Stanley Chesney, the American goal-tender, whose brilliant work halted many a foreign attack. Exactly how busy he was kept is shown by the fact that he made forty-two saves. On the other hand, Jerry Dawson of the Scots executed only fifteen stops and few of them were difficult.

Scotland opened the scoring less than five minutes after the start, when John Gilles took a pass from Jim Gaskie and beat Chesney with a terrific drive. Shortly, after the American tallied, but this was nullified because Henry Carroll had handled the ball. Undaunted, the home side continued to attack and at the thirty-two-minute mark Jim Boyle headed one in to even the score.

Less than a minute later Charley Altmose accepted a perfect pass from George Nemchik and also headed the ball in. Then the Americans became a bit too bold, and the visitors tied the score as Carabine drove past Chesney.

SOME REMARKABLE SAVES

The half ended with no further tallying, although the Scots bombarded Chesney often. Ben Ellis, Carabine and Sandy McNab all missed scoring opportunities, and with one minute remaining of the second session of forty-five minutes Chensey came through with a trio of remarkable saves to send the game into overtime.

Eight minutes in the extra period had elapsed when Carabine took Malcolm MacDonald's pass and converted it into a score. For the next seven minutes the defense of both teams prevailed. Goals were changed for the final fifteen minutes, and Carabine booted hard at Chesney, who saved, but failed to hold the ball.

Rushing in for the rebound, Carabine sent a low drive past Chesney and the score became 4—2. By this time the Americns were beginning to weaken and the Scots gave Chesney plenty of work. But there was no more scoring.

Between halves the crowd, held down by threatening weather, was entertained by the Dagenhm Girls Band of bagpipers and dancers from the World's Fair Merrie England exhibit.

RAIN HALTS CANADA-JAPAN CAGE PLAY-OFF

Rain that had threatened before game starting time began to fall immediately after the end of the first half and became heavier with the passing of time that the play-off tilt between the visiting Canadian basketball team and the All-Japan combine Thursday night at the Meiji Shrine Outer Gardens court was halted to be played tonight. The score at the time was Japan 21, and Canada 14.

The Canadians are scheduled to leave Tokyo by the 10:30 a.m. train Saturday from Tokyo Station for the Kansai. They will take on the Kyoto Imperial University team at Kyoto on July 16, the All-Manchuria team at Hsinking on July 22, the Enki College and Fusei College teams respectively at Keijo on July 26 and 27, and the All-Chosen team at Keijo on July 29 and will return to Japan in time to board the Empress of Russia from Kobe on August 6 for Manila.

JAPAN TEAM WORKS SMOOTHLY

Getting back to the game Thursday night, thhe All-Japan team, which had been experiencing trouble to function smoothly, finally hit its stride with a quintet comprised of Yokoyama and Kasahara at forwards, Cho at center, and Munakata and Kin Tei at guards, with Munakata as acting captain. The score was tied only once, after eight minutes of play, and the Japanese combine led all the way through until the gun ended the half. Not a single substitution was made by the All-Japan coach.

In fairness to the Canadian team, it must be pointed out that Captain Ross, its key man, was given a rest after the first 10 minutes of play, and this certainly had much to do with the Japanese team's lead at the end of the half.

The All-Japan team led 4-0 in the first minute of play with Yokoyama and Munakata scoring field goals. That by Yokoyama came on a pass from Cho after the latter had intercepted the ball from the Canadians. Ross scored an overhand goal and then sank one of two free throws to cut the Japan team's lead to 4-3. Cho rang a field goal. Willoughby sank a long shot to make it 6-5. Kasahara registered a goal from a difficult angle but Ross countered with another to put the score 8-7. Yokoyama converted one of two free throws and Japan led 9-7. Siborne came through with a basket for Canada to deadlock the count at 9-all with 12 minutes to go. Munakata sank a long one to put Japan out in front again. Rain began to fall at this juncture. Kin Tei scored a field goal on a beautiful pass from Munakata and Japan led 13-9 after the first 10 minutes of play.

JAPAN LEADS

Parsons replaced Ross. Watson went in for Siborne. Parsons rang a basket for Canada to make it 13-11. Kin Tei and Cho converted a free throw each and Japan led 15-11. Bardsley sank one of two free throws and Canada was behind 15-12. Kasahara scored for basket to lead 17-12 with five minutes to go. Writchie, who had replaced Bardsley, sank two free throws to make it 17-14.

Cho converted two free throws to increase the lead to 19-14 and Munakata scored on a long shot as the half ended.

CRICKET FURNISHES BRIGHT EPISODES

By R. MAILLARD STEAD
Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—The English Inter-County Cricket Championship, which has often been held partly responsible for a certain lack of colorful enterprise in England's national Summer sport, has this season furnished us with some episodes just about as bright as anything we could desire.

A great deal is heard these days about the desirability of playing in order to get more zip and gusto into the proceedings. But I have always felt, as have many others no doubt, that merely one thing was needed to make the desired transformation. Namely, a change of attitude toward the game by the people who play it. Meaning in particular those players whose attitude is most readily reflected on the field of play—the Captains.

UNDUE INMPORTANCE

Obviously the Captain of a County side engaged in the championship has to concern himself with such prosaic considerations as points in the team standing. But, when these considerations are given undue importance, then it is the cricket which becomes prosaic, and spectators, whose continuous interest and support mean gate-money, tend to become rather bored with the whole business.

What the public pays to see is adventure. It does not demand recklessness or foolishness, but it abhors unenterprising play and over-caution. That is why such keen and fearless quests for victory as those in the Yorkshire vs. Gloucestershire and Middlesex vs. Essex matches are so thoroughly and widely appreciated. The latter contest at Lords showed us, among other things, that the art of spectacular hitting is not yet lost, though in the past few seasons it has certainly seemed to be declining.

PLAY DEFENSIVE

Modern batsmen, as a whole, tend to play on the defensive. But in the game in question big Jim Smith of Middlesex—to cite one instance—did anything but that. For in only 18 minutes he hit up 45 runs, including one six and five fours, and, as the pace of his scoring was gallantly maintained by the batsmen who followed him, Middlesex won won with two minutes to spare—as thrilling a finish as anyone could wish to see, having rattled up the 224 runs required in the second innings for victory in 2h. 8m. As only 2h. 10m. were available for the performance and 20 valuable minutes were lost through a fall of rain, it is quite clear that a touch of "safety first" anywhere along the line would have meant a relatively uniteresting draw instead of a dashing victory.

Nobody who witnessed this occurrence could have blamed the Inter-County Championship for exercising a stultifying effect upon cricket. Though this very criticism has been levelled at the competition for many years past, and probably quite a large number of cricketers would not feel that they had been deprived of very much that mattered to them if the tournament were abolished. After all, it is the individual matches that they are most interested in.

BARE STATISTICS

When you come to think of it, the Championship is rather a queer sort of affair, an attempt to translate into bare statictics the many considerations required for a fair and proper estimate of relative merit among cricket teams. All sorts of mathematical experiments have been tried to achieve this end, but none has been really fully satisfactory, for the factors that have to be taken into account include such untranslatable influences as the weather, the state of the pitch, and the turn of the toss for choice of innings.

Formality has rather a repressive effect on cricket. The Inter-County Championship began as an informal sort of business, just a calculation made by writers in newspapers. And in those days the only thing that a County tried to do when it met another one was to win the match, regardless of how the two teams stood in the table of merit at the time and equally regardless of how they would stand afterward.

The consequence of this approach to play was light-hearted cricket, with victory as the only goal, except cases where it was clearly impossible to obtain it. This season we have again seen lighthearted cricket, and, if the good work goes on, it is a fair prognostication that, whatever the positions may be of the 17 first-class Counties in the final standing, the Inter-County Cricket Championship of 1939 will be accounted a far greater success than many that have gone before.

HARTNETT HITS HOMER TO AID DEAN TO VICTORY

By ROSCOE McGOWEN
N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, June 18—Jerome Herman Dean, Charles Leo Hartnett and General Bill Lee tonight were rated as the North Side's most distinguished citizens after sinking the Dodgers for the Cubs almost without a trace in both ends of a double-header, 1—0 and 9—1, before a packed house of 27,192.

The great Dizzy, who, on his season's record, is strictly a hometown Sunday pitcher, allowed six hits in the opener, while Luke Hamlin of Brooklyn was touched for only two in seven innings. But the second of the pair off Hamlin was Leo the Lion's sixth homer of the year, a 400-foot blast into the center field bleaches in the fifth inning.

Diz now has won three games, all in Wrigley Field and all on Sundays, and has lost none. He beat the Bees, 4—0, on May 21 and the Pirates, 6—2, on May 28.

BALK SPARES DODGERS DOUBLE ZERO

The handsome Mr. Lee, recovering his recently mislaid efficiency, judiciously distributed eight hits in the nightcap, and but for a balk that advanced Gene Moore to second in the sixth would also have pitched a shutout. Dolf Camilli followed this faux pas with a single to right that brought Gene home with the only Brooklyn tally of the eighteen innings.

It meant little, however, as the Cubs already owned five runs, having counted one each in the first and fourth and three more on four hits off Vito Tamulis in the fifth. In the eighth they broke loose again for a quartet of markers on the same number of hitis, and only by the most heroic effort was Tammy able to retire the side and get the small consolation of having pitched a complete game.

Ol' Diz, displaying uncanny control and a great pitching motion, wasted no energy in giving a fine performance. But he needed an assist by the plate umpire, Larry Goetz, to insure his triumph—at least in the opinion of all the Dodgers.

PHELPS AND KOY FAIL

In the seventh Camilli led off with a two-bagger down the right field foul line and remained on second while Babe Phelps and Ernie Koy failed—as they have failed throughout the series—to produce a scoring blow. But Lippy Leo Durocher lined a single to short right which Glesson fielded on the first hop.

Camilli rounded third, almost stopped, then came on in what seemed a foolhardy attempt to score. However, Hartnett, taking it for granted Dolf would stop at third, was well out in front of the plate taking Gleeson's none too speedy throw. Camilli appeared to have slid home safely, and when Goetz called him out the Dodger first baseman voiced his first real argument since joining the club.

Backed by nearly all the other Dodgers, Dolf stormed around the umpire for five minutes, but of course Goetz didn't reverse his decision.

Three other scoring chances were snuffed by Dean without much difficulty and in the last two frames he set down six men in order.

Carl Reynolds single to left in the second for one of the two hits off Hamin and got on base again in the seventh on Durocher's fumble. Otherwise no Cub reached base except Hartnett, and Gabby paused only briefly at each station. Tot Pressnell set down three Cubs in the eighth after Hamlin had departed for a pinch hitter in the Brooklyn half.

Reynolds and Red Russell led the hitting three for five. Russell drove in three runs, Reynolds two. Augie Galan's single in the eighth with the bases filled accounted for two more.

BARTELL STRUCK ON ELBOW

Dick Bartell was hit on the point of the left elbow by Tamulis in the fourth but stayed in the game despite a doctor's attempt to get him out.

Galan, normally a switch hitter, batted left-handed against Tamulis because of a sore shoulder that interfered with his right-handed swing. He batted from the right side when he sacrificed in the fifth.

Phelps and Koy, who had supplied so much batting punch at home and in St. Louis, were shut out in the three games here. Koy got on base when he drew a pass in the first game.

MISS BARTON WINS ENGLISH GOLF TITLE

The Times, London

LONDON, June 17—Miss P. Barton (Royal Mid-Surrey) won the Ladies' Amateur Golf Championship at Portrush yesterday, when she beat Mrs. T. Marks (Malone) in the final round at the 35th hole. Miss Barton deserved her victory. She is an accomplished golfer, young, with great power, and the temperament of which champions are made. If she nodded at times, she never let her failure to play the shots as she meant to upset her, and she kept her head and her lead until the end.

She would be the first to agree that Mrs. Marks deserves a special word of praise for the brave show she made. Outranged as she was, her long game wilted a little under the strain, and this rather neutralized her accuracy round and on the greens. It even affected this once or twice, but she fought bravely on, and if never in a really attacking position, she had to be beaten and did not beat herself. Nothing could have been better than the last putt she holed which compelled Miss Barton to undergo the strain of holding a short one in her turn for victory.

AN ADVANTAGE LOST

It was a lovely morning when the first round started, with a fresh westerly wind blowing and a sunny sky. After the first hole had been halved in 4, Miss Barton was too strong with her approach to the second hole, and Mrs. Marks drew first blood. She promptly threw away this advantage by cutting her drive to the third out of bounds and lost it to a 4, Miss Barton playing the hole perfectly. Mrs. Marks became one down at the fourth, where a pulled drive and a duffed second brought a peck of trouble in their wake. The short fifth was halved in 3, Miss Barton failing to hole a 12ft. putt for a win in 2, and then Miss Barton gave a glimpse of what she can do at her best.

To the "Primrose Dell" (455 yards) she hit a grand drive down wind, followed it with a lovely iron shot that drew the post of the two-sentinel hillocks and ran down a long putt for a 3, robbing Mrs. Marks of a half that a fine recovery almost entitled her to. White Rocks brought a good half in 4, where Miss Barton swung her putt round Mrs. Marks's ball, but at "Colts" Mrs. Marks got in a shrewd blow. Her tee shot cannoned off the bank at the right of the green, leaving her with an eight-yard putt for a win in 2, which she holed, and was only one down. At the ninth, however, her long game again broke down and Miss Barton became two up again, even though she missed her second completely going all out for the long carry over the sleepered bunker. Miss Barton was out in 37 to 39 by Mrs. Marks.

The 10th hole ("Glenkeen," 460 yards) was halved in 5 and the short 11th in 3, and then once again Mrs. Marks got within striking distance by winning the "Causeway," where Miss Barton missed a holeable putt. However, Miss Barton made instant amends with a fine 3 to the "Skerries," won that and "Calamity Corner," where Mrs. Marks was down in the depths to the right off the tee, and, having recovered well, failed to hole a long putt only by a bare inch. Both were in the same bunker on the right of the green at the "Bushes," the result of weak seconds, and then came three holes at which both players showed signs of strain and weakness. At the 16th both hit downright bad seconds and thirds, and the half in 6 that resulted was eminently fair. At the 17th both again played bad seconds, and Miss Barton so weak a third that a 5 was problematical. Here was Mrs. Marks's opportunity, for she was holehigh to the left in 3 and in the very short rough. Nine times out of 10 she would have got down in 2, but this was the 10th. She hit her chip too hard and had to be content with a half in 6. At the 18th hole it was Miss Barton's turn to come to grief. To it she missed her second and third shots, and Mrs. Marks, with a good third from the green, got her 5, and went in to luncheon very tired but only two down.

THE SECOND ROUND

Mrs. Marks opened the second round with a fine 4, and Irish hopes rose. But Miss Barton countered immediately, put a grand second within 7ft. at the 20th, holed her putt for a 3, and, after a half in 4, won both the 22nd and the 23rd holes in 4 and 3 respectively to be four up. A half in 5 folllowed, and then Mrs. Marks bravely counter-attacked, winning the 25th in 4 and the 26th ("Colts") in a magnificent 2, laying her tee-shot two yards form the pin. However, the long 27th found her long game out again, and Miss Barton, winning it in 5, was three up with nine to play, out in 38 to 39 by Mrs. Marks. Mrs. Marks became four down again at the 28th, distance again telling against her, but she won the short 29th in 3, where Miss Barton was bunkered, and the "Causeway" in a fine 4.

Both came to sad grief at the "Skerries," Mrs. Marks finding the bunker on the right from the tee that had proved such a bugbear to her, and Miss Barton making a bush of her second and three subsequent shots. That hole was halved. "Calamity Corner" was halved in 4, but at the "Bushes" Miss Barton half-topped a chip when she hat do stand with one foot in a bunker. Mrs. Marks took the chance and won the hole to be only one down with two to play. Again Irish hopes rose, but the 34th hole ("Meadows") is long and testing. Mrs. Marks gallantly carried the crosshazard with her second, but was left with a very difficult long putt along a ridge. Miss Barton then showed her quality, for she hit a great second right up to the hole and won it in 4 to 5 to be two up. The long 35th was all in her favor, but Mrs. Marks went down with flying colors, for she holed from five yards for a 5, and so Miss Barton had to face a last effort of just under a yard that she must have longed to be spared. To her great credit she holed it and so became lady champion for the second time.

Thai Tennis Team To Play in Tokyo, July 22

Exhibition matches with the Thai tennis players, expected to arrive at Kobe on O.S.K. liner Saigon Maru on July 17 on a goodwill mission, will be played at the Denyen courts at 2 p.m. July 22, according to announcement Thursday.

The Japanese team to play in the matches is expected to be selected shortly.

CALIFORNIA BACK IN FAST COMPANY

By RUMILL
Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON—"The hibiscus nodded brightly in the lot across the street," says a prominent eastern writer in the latest issue of Collier's, on the news stands today. "A mocking bird spilled melody from the gently nodding palm. Florida's copyright sun was banging down in full crescendo. It was a beautiful afternoon, even for a Florida March, one fit for beautiful thoughts and all-absorbing peace of mind.

HAD NOT UNDERSTOOD

"Yet the tall young kid standing out there on the sidewalk with his luggage was bitter. Pugnacious were his thoughts. He probably was close to tears. A show of braggadocio is usually the transparent shield of an inferiority complex. That's what he'd shown 'em from the first—these Red Sox. Somehow, it hadn't gone over. They hadn't undestood—they and their sports writers and the elderly Boston fans who arrange their Winter vacations so they could spend them in the Red Sox training camp at Sarasota, calling themselves the Royal Rooters.

"The ballplayers had ridden him. The Royal Rooters had taken keen delight in twitting him about a natural and almost exclusive subject with him—California. Naturally, he'd stood up for his home state, and the baseball of the Coast League. That had got him branded 'fresh,' when he told them a thing or two. A fresh rookie, a popper-offer. And now they'd told him he wasn't enough ballplayer.

TOO GREEN FOR MAJORS

"They'd called him that noon after practice and told him they felt he was too young and too green for the majors, that they were sending him to Minneapolis where another year of seasoning might bring him along all right, provided he tried, and listened to what he was told. They'd handed him his bus fare to the Millers' training camp, and here he stood with his belongings waiting for the big blue carryall to come along.

"And there was no way to duck the ignominy of it all. That's where the bus stopped. That's where he had to stand—right exactly in front of the team's hotel.

"The blunt nose of the bus showed far down the road just as one of a passing group called with a snicker: 'Hey, California, are you going somewhere?' The others sitting around laughed. The anger in the tall 20-year-older blazed.

"'Yeh,' he said, shaking his first, 'but don't worry too much. I'll be back and chase some of these pitchers right out of the league!'"

Well, "California" is back in American League company, and although he may not be chasing pitchers off the campus, he isn't making the world brighter for them either. For Teddy Williams today is giving Hammering Hank Greenberg a duel for that coveted offensive leadership—the runs-batted-in crown. That year at Minneapolis was what he needed. And he made the most of his opportunity.

There are some high-class rookies in the majors this season. Among them are Charley Keller, Yankees; Eddie Miller and Henry Majeski, Bees; Joe Gallagher, formerly of the Yanks and now of the Browns; Manuel Salvo, Giants, and Gene Thompson, Reds. The Red Sox also have Jim Tabor, the third baseman, and Woody Rich, who was a winning pitcher until he recently came up with a bad arm. But when the October returns are in, despite the strong New York wave in favor of Keller, Williams will probably win the "rookie of the year" award.

HITS BEHIND FOXX

When this was written, California was still under the .300 level. But who cares about a batting average when a fellow has sent more runs across the plate than anyone else in the league except one—Greenberg? Games are won by runs, not by personal averages. And the freshman hits fifth in the Boston line-up, just behind Jimmy Foxx, who does a fair job of producing runs himself. With a less consistent slugger ahead of him, California would no doubt be far ahead of Greenberg.

And another thing. If Williams ever gets his average up above .300 again—he was over earlier in the campaign—he should pile those runs more rapidly. They made him look bad at the plate with a change of pace a while back, but he recovered just about the time Joe Cronin was ready to bench him. Not even the 402-foot mark on the right-field wall at Fenway Park has fazed the cocky kid.

JAPAN TAKES CAGE SERIES FROM CANADIANS, 2 TO 1

YOKOYAMA AIDS NIPPON TO WIN BY 34-32 SCORE

Thanks to the scintillating performance of Kenshichi Yokoyama, Waseda University star who has seen action in the Berlin Olympic Games, the All-Japan team nosed out the visiting Canadian basketball squad, 34 to 32, Friday night at the outdoor court in the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine to triumph in the third game of their two out of three international series.

Yokoyama not only was high point scorer of the evening with 15 points but he was the "fightingest" player on the floor, even shadowing Jimmy Bardsley, the aggressive Canadian player who despite three personal fouls called on him in the first half and with a mental handicap of being omitted from the game any minute with another foul kept this from slowing him down and registered three beautiful goals in the second half to keep his team in the running. He finally was discharged from the game with four fouls with the score standing at 32-all with less than two minutes to go, and was without doubt one of the contributory causes for the Canadians' defeat.

YOKOYAMA LEADS ATTACK

But to get back to Yokoyama, this well-built fleet-footed player led the Japanese team's attack, was brilliant equally on the defense, and scored at critical stages of the game to encourage his team-mates. He was especially effective in converting free throws, sinking seven out of ten.

The Canadian team lost no prestige because of its defeat. It was anybody's game until the final gun. Behind 19 to 16 at the end of the first half, the Canadians rallied and were out in front by 24 to 20 after the first five minutes of play in the second half. At this juncture, the starting five of the Japanese squad that had played throughout the first half but had given way to another contingent with resumption of play was rushed back into the fray. This group, including Yokoyama and Soichi Kasahara of Rikkyo University at forwards, Cho Ri Chin, of Rikkyo and a veteran of the Berlin Olympic Games, at center, Uichi Munakata of Waseda, likewise with experience at the Berlin Games, and Kin Tei Shin, of the Enki College in Keijo, at guards, tied the count at 24-all with 11 minutes to go, and finally managed to emerge victors with a two-point margin.

Art Willoughby, the Canadians' long distance shooting star, was back in form after a mediocre night in the second game of the series, and thrilled the fans with beautiful baskets. He accounted for 12 points, scoring five goals in the first half. Captain Ross, center, played another good game for Canada and was always a threat especially when near the basket. He was responsible for seven point. He suffered from the handicap of having three fouls called on him in the second half.

Not only was Yokoyama the star of the victorious All-Japan team. Kasahara was an able running mate on the offense. Cho and Kin. Tei were brilliant on the defense, taking the ball away from the Canadians time and again. Munakata pierced the net on three occasions with long goals and was a man sharply watched by the Canadians.

3,000 SEE GAME

It was a warm night but a capacity crowd of 3,000 fans took in the game that had been postponed from Friday night because of rain. Friday night's encounter was called off at the end of the first half with the Japanese team leading 21 to 14.

Starting for the Japanese was the same five that had played the entire 20 minutes on Friday night: Yokoyama and Kasahara at forwards, Cho at center and Kin Tei and Munakata at guards.

The Canadians scored the first point of the game when Bardsley converted a free throw on a foul by Kin Tei. Yokoyama rang a field goal and Japan was out in front, 2 to 1. Munakata followed almost immediately with another basket. Ross converted a free throw but Yokoyama did likewise. Willoughby got going and scored three field goals in a row and Canada forged into a 8-5 lead after five minutes of play. Cho rang a field goal in seven minutes and Kasahara sank one of two free throws on a foul by Bardsley to deadlock the count at 8-all.

Yokoyama sank two free throws and Japan was in the lead by 10-8 but Willoughby came through again with a beautiful goal to tie the count at 10-all with 9 minutes to go. Munakata sank a long shot and Yokoyama converted a free throw for a 13-10 lead. Cho scored a field goal and Yokoyama followed suit for a 17-10 lead. It was Willoughby again to cut the lead down to 17-12 with 5 minutes to go.

JAPAN LEADS

Cho came through with a goal in 17 minutes and Japan led 19-12. Ross, who had reentered the game after a brief rest, sank a one-hander to put the score 19-14. Bardsley, who also had been sent back into the game, took a long shot which counted and the score was 19 to 16 shortly before the gun ended the half.

With resumption of play, the Japanese bench sent a completely new team on the floor, Boku and Goh, forwards, Ren, center, Kin Tei and Matsui, guards. This team could not get going, lacking any offense to speak of. Taking advantage of this, the Canadians rallied. Ross dribbled through the entire Japanese team and scored from close range. Then he converted a free throw and the score was tied at 19-all after the first minute of play.

Ren converted one of two free throws on a foul by Ross and Japan led again, 20-19. Bardsley's one-hand toss from a difficult angle counted and Canada was out in front 21-20. And Ross registered on a rebound shot to give his team a 23-20 lead. Ross sank one of two free throws on a foul by Boku and Canada led 24-20 after five minutes of play. The same Japanese five that played the first half was rushed back into the game.

CANADA LEADS

Yokoyama converted a free throw on holding by Ross and sank one of two free throws on a foul by Willoughby and Japan was behind by only two points, 24-22. Kasahara came through with a basket in nine minutes to deadlock the score at 24-all. Siborne was sent in for Willoughby. With the Japanese team putting up a tight defense, Bardsley shot one from the middle of the court and it spun through the hoop to give his team a 26-24 lead with 10 minutes left to play.

Kasahara scored on an out of bound play from underneath the net to tie the score at 26-all. Cho sank one of two free throws on a foul by Ross and Japan led 27-26 with 8 minutes left. It was Bardsley again counting on a long shot and Canada forged into the lead, 28-27. Bardsley was omitted with his fourth foul. The indomitable Yokohama rang a field goal and Japan led 29-28. Then he came through under fire to sink a free throw and increased the lead to 30-28. Milton Parsons tied the score with a basket, 30-30. Yokoyama scored an angle shot and Japan led 32-30 with less than 2 minutes to go.

Willoughby, back in the game, scored a field goal to deadlock the count at 32-all. It was anybody's game with game ending time nearing. Munakata took a beautiful pass from Kasahara and scored to put his team ahead, 34-32 with less than a minute left. Parsons gained control of the ball after Cho had missed the basket but the game ended just before Willoughby took a shot at the goal, which missed.

HALCYON DAYS FOR MINOR CLUBS OVER

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK—Hereafter minor league club owners are likely to find a falling market for their prize rookies. Those halcyon days when a minor league club could command anywhere from $25,000 to $100,000 or more for an untried fledgling are gone forever.

The majors are going to raise their own prize chicks. Some rookies have been worth the high prizes paid for them but all too often the major league club owners have been left holding the bag.

There was a general lifting of eyebrows when Detroit paid a reported $50,000 for Fred Hutchinson from the coast league. Many experts, including the Yankee scouts, said at the time that he wasn't worth a fraction of that sum and it is worth noting that the young man is now toiling for Toledo in the American Association.

RESTRAINT SHOWN

A few years ago there would have been a mad rush to land the youngest of the DiMaggio brothers now playing the outfield for San Francisco but today the major league owners are showing commendable restraint in bidding for the young man's services.

Dominic DiMaggio may be as good or better than brothers Vince and Joe, as some extravagant coast reports would have us believe, but the major league scouts are somewhat skeptical and in no hurry to bid for him.

Of course, Joe DiMaggio was virtually a gift at $25,000 but scouts think back to Willie Kamm and his $100,000 price tag rather than to DiMaggio.

The Athletics paid Baltimore $100,000 for Lefty Grove—the payments spread over 10 years—and Grove undoubtedly was worth more than Connie Mack paid for him. In fact, at that price, he was one of the cheapest purchases the game ever knew.

But Grove was a rare exception and the high priced rookies who made good in the majors could be counted on the fingers one hand.

Of course, there have been some huge sums paid for players who had already proved their worth such as the $138,000 the Yanks paid the Red Sox for Babe Ruth. Babe would have been cheap even at twice that sum.

RISK TOO GREAT

But the risk is too great for such large investments. The Cubs found that out when they paid $187,000 for Dizzy Dean on top of a baleful of cash for Chuck Klein.

Nowadays, the major league club owners are pointedly asking their scouts why they can't dig up worth while prospects in the sandlots and in the colleges for development on their own baseball farms.

These club owners like to recall that Ty Cobb cost about $700; that Honus Wagner cost only carfare; that Connie Mack paid about $38 (most of it in cash) for McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker; and that Tris Speaker, Lou Gehrig, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson and a host of other stars cost only peanut money.

And because they are thinking along these lines, the next minor league star who carries a six-figure price tag will have to be a combination of Ruth, Cobb and Speaker if he's an outfielder and if he's a pitcher he'll have to be a combination of Mathewson and Johnson.—King Features.

PITT HEADED FOR BERTH IN 'BIG TEN'

By ED KIELY

PITTSBURGH—Pitt's athletic policy, doused freely with the simonpure philosophy of the Big Ten conferenec in the hope of absolving the Panther's alleged athletic errors, apparently is heading for a berth in the Midwestern alliance.

The most recent, tell-tale move was a short, crisp announcement handed down by the Panther's publicity office, towering 27 stories above the ground, in the Cathedral of Learning, the world's tallest schoolhouse.

The statement declared that Pitt would meet the University of Purdue, a member in good standing of the Big Ten, on the gridiron. The game is scheduled, according to the brief bulletin, for Pitt Stadium, Oct. 4, 1941. Previously, the Panthers had scheduled Minnesota for a game of football at Minneapolis on Oct. 18 of the same year.

Booking of two Big Ten schools adds to the belief of close observers here that the Smoky City school definitely is moving closer and closer to a spot in the conference. Last February 1, Maj. John J. Griffith, dictator of the Western conference's athletic policy, was given almost a free-hand in ruling upon the athletic destiny at Pitt.

At that time, Pitt began a so-called "cooperative agreement" with the Big Ten. That organization, it was pointed out then by Athletic director James Hagan, with its rich experience, should set Pitt on the straight and narrow path. He voiced:

"I feel Pitt is making the correct move by gaining the cooperation plan," but that the University, as far actual membership with the conference, it has none.

The statement handed out to the press on that cold wintry night, explained the new principle as follows:

"By this agreement, instead of the University acting alone in an investigation of all types of rumors concerning alleged violations of eligibility, subsidization and proselyting in relation to the conduct of its athletics, the University will have the cooperation of 10 other similar institutions."

Since that time, rumors and counter rumors are rampant that Pitt, in 1941 or '42, when the Big Ten's present football schedule runs out, will replace the athletically-faltering University of Chicago, governed by the eminent Dr. Robert ("10 cent football") Hutchins.

Pitt authorities, when such questioned are brought forth, merely shrug their shoulders and offer an evasive snicker; while others in the know aver: "Is that so;-well, that certainly is news to me."—King Features.

Vander Meer A Rembrandt In the Making

BOSTON,—Already something of an artist in the box, Johnny "Double No-hit" Vander Meer of the Cincinnati mound staff is planning to extend his artistry to the field of painting.

Johnny is out to crack the old tradition that there has never been a great southpaw painter. Applying pigments as well as pitches with his port fin Vander Meer has already taken his inaugural lesson in canvas daubing with an eye toward giving the right handed masterpiece manufacturers a run for their honors.

Johnny's interest in painting zoomed from zero to the zenith when he learned that he was a direct descendant of the great 17th century Dutch master, Jan Vermeer. After poring through an exhaustive biography of his artistic ancestor Vander Meer became imbued with a desire to apply color to canvas as well as whitewash to the opposition.

He confided his ambition to Aldro K. Hibbard, Boston and Rockport artist, who is also a case-hardened baseball fan. When Johnny came to Boston during the eastern swing of the Reds Hibbard brought him up to his studio, dressed him up in a smock and pan-cake beret and set him to work copying a print of Vermeer's "Music Lesson." Johnny found his paint brush as hard to control as a knuckle ball, but was beginning to make progress when the Reds left town.

PLANE WILL DROP BALL TO PLAYERS

WICHITA, Kan.—A new all-time height record for catching a baseball will be attempted in a novel manner at the opening of the fifth annual national semi-pro baseball tournament here the night of Aug. 11.

Players of any team represented in the national tournament will be permitted to try for the new record. An airplane will drop three baseballs from a height of 600 feet. Any player catching one of the balls will be awarded a cash prize of $100, Dumont said.—King Features.

Giant Rookie Looks Like Major Prospect

COLUMBUS.—A 21-year-old hurler toiling for the Minneapolis club in the American Association has given notice that in a year or two he will be ready for a tryout with a major league club.

The youngster is Wilburn E. Butland who packs his 180 pounds on a six feet, five inch frame.

At the tender age of 18 in 1936, Butland was acquired by the Millers and farmed out to the St. Augustine club in Florida. He won nine and lost 13. In 1937 he won 11 and lost six for the Eau Claire club and last year with Crookston in the Northern League, he had 19 wins and six losses.

His performance in Crookston earned him the right to come back to the parent club, Minneapolis.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

VINCE DIMAGGIO IS COMING UP AGAIN

COLUMBUS, O.,—One reason why the Kansas City Blues are in the thick of the American Association baseball pennant chase is Vince DiMaggio, 27-year-old brother of Joe DiMaggio, fence busting outfielder of the murderous New York Yankees.

Vince, an outfielder for Kansas City, had clipped off 20 home runs at the end of the first week in June and was batting better than .320. He is more feared by pitchers than any other batter in the Association.

In his first year in the AA loop, as a member of a New York Yankee farm club, Vince is displaying such widespread ability that close followers of the Blues are willing to bet he will hold down a berth in 1940 with the parent club—alongside his hard hitting and straight throwing brother.

With Boston in 1937 and 1938, Vince hit only .256 and .228 respectively. That accounted for his demotion. But under the capable tutelage of Billy Meyer, Kansas City pilot, Vince learned the reason for his mediocre showing with the Bees.

He was inclined to be too eager, a regular "sucker" for bad balls. Crafty big league pitchers quickly learned of his unfortunate trait and baited him with "borderline" tosses. Vince nearly broke his back swinging at pitches which would have been called balls, had they been allowed to pass.

Now, whereas he used to be the pitcher's goat, DiMaggio has reversed the tables and when he strides to the plate it is the hurler and not himself who is in the hole.

He wouldn't go for a bad ball now if it was plastered with $10 bills. If he continues to improve, boosts his slugging average as the season grows older, DiMaggio is almost a sure shot to be with the Yankees next year.

Vince started his baseball career in 1932 with Tuscon, of the Arizona-Texas League, where he hit .347. In 1933 he alternated between San Francisco and Hollywood in the Pacific Coast loop, hitting .333—his best mark to date. After three more years in the east, staying with Boston for two years before landing with Kansas City for that big comeback which looks to be the McCoy.—King Features.

JOE JACOBS KNOWS ALL TRICKS OF THE BOXING BUSINESS

Two-ton Tony Galento, the Beer Barrel Who Fights Like a Man, didn't bother taking a shower and rubdown when—at Madame Bey's Camp in Summit, New Jersey, one hot afternoon last July—he finished training for his fight with John Henry Lewis. It was already 4:30 and in an hour the evening rush would start at his larynx-spraying studio in Orange, twenty miles away as the touring car flies. So, drenched with perspiration though he was, Tony slipped a sport shirt and a pair of trousers over his gymnasium suit, jumped into an open car and was whirled through the Jersey countryside to his thirsty public.

Tony hadn't taken more than a dozen beers and was only halfway through the night's bartending chore when he began to feel woozy.

"It musta been somethin' I et," he apologized to his admiring clientele. "I guess I'll flop early tonight and get plenty of shuteye so I'll be okay tomorrow, though I don't need no sleep at all to lick that bum."

At Tony's bedside next day, his doctor broke the news to his manager, Joe Jacobs. It was double pneumonia. Jacobs was stunned for a moment, because it meant thet the Lewis-Galento fight, promising a fat purse, was off. But recovering quickly from the shock, Joe—who is known in the Sock-and-Bust-'Em Guild as Yussel the Muscle—turned to the doctor and said: "Say, Doc, we might as well get all the publicity we can out of this as long as the fight's off. Wouldn't it be a better story if we told the press it was triple pneumonia? Tony's a pretty big guy, you know."

SIX CHAMPIONS AND NO MONEY

Yussel had the right idea there. By ballyhooing Tony's battle with "Kid Ammonia" as if it were a boxing match, Jacobs made him a rational character and laid the foundation for a campaign that will be climaxed when Galento steps into the ring at the Yankee Stadium on the night of June 28th as challenger for Joe Louis' title.

Louis won by a T.K.O. in the fourth round of their scheduled 15-rounder...Editor.

A year ago, Jacobs' fat, fabulous, froth-blowing fighter was little known outside of his native Jersey and near-by New York. Today, thanks to Little Joey's mastery of the art of ballyhoo, the Biffing Barkeep is the most talked-of and written-about boxer in the business.

If a miracle should happen and Galento becomes the world's heavyweight champion, he will be the seventh champ Yussel the Muscle has managed. At forty-three, the little Hebrew with the merry twinkle in his eyes and the long cigar in his mouth is, paradoxically enough, both dead broke and the most successful manager of fighters in the business.

Yussel Jacobs owes his unusual shrewdness to the accident that his father, Samuel Jacobs, an immigrant tailor who came to New York from Russia in 1880, settled in Hell's Kitchen on New York's West Side. How was the pious little Jew to know that only Irishers lived in that neighborhood? Nor were his new neighbors lace-curtain Irish. They'd fight at drop of a hat. In this environment Jacobs, the tailor, raised his family of three boys and two girls.

Little Joey, a pale, delicate-looking kid, was the smartest of the lot. Instead of getting himself involved in the neighborhood brawls with the tough Irish lads, he let them do all the battling while he offered advice from the side lines. Willie and Dave Astey were the leading fighters of Hell's Kitchen then and, with unusual acumen for one of his years, little Joey promoted himself into the job of managing them.

DUMB DAN GETS SMART

At the time Yussel was attending high school and adding such words as "irregardless" and "stood" (as the past tense of "stay") to his colorful Hell's Kitchen vocabulary, the leading fight manager in New York was a voluble Irishman named Dan Morgan. In that era, practically all the fight managers were Irish. The Jews hadn't yet taken over the profession. Resolved to be a fight manager and to learn the business from the best man in it, Yussel went to Morgan and applied for a job as his office boy. Amused by the kid's impudence and the twinkle in his eyes, Dumb Dan hired him.

Yussel's genius for publicity first asserted itself when he observed that Barney Oldfield, the famous automobile racer who was then in his prime, always had a cigar in his mouth when photographed. Barney's cigar was his trademark. Yussel the office boy resolved to make Barney Oldfield his model, and from that day to this he has never permitted himself to be surprised in front of a camera without a cheroot.

Yussel learned his managerial lessons so well under Tutor Morgan that he soon branched out as manager of his own stable. Willie Herman, the lightweight, was one of his early herring-retrievers. Yussel also hustled bouts in New York for out-of-town fighters, getting a percentage of their manager's cut. But his first real job of ballyhoo was accomplished with Benny Valgar, a French Jew whom Doc Bagley had discarded as all washed up. Yussel signed him to a contract, rechristened him "The French Flash" and built him up via newspaper headlines into an important figure in the lightweight division.

Yussel kazotskied into the Big Time in 1923. That year, Mike McTigue had won the light heavyweight title from Battling Siki on St. Patrick's Day in Dublin, where the poor benighted haythen had made the mistake of straying. Michael being without a manager at the moment, Yussel beat everyone else to the cable office and applied for the job.

McTigue hired him.

Yussel committed his first real boner when he agreed in the Summer of that year to allow McTigue to defend his title in Columbus, Georgia, against a young Georgia boxer called Young Stribling, just then coming into prominence. The Ku Klux Klan was still waging a racial and religious war from behind sheets and pillowcases in Georgia and points south, and this circumstance promised complications for an Irish fighter and his Hebrew manager. But Jacobs had never heard of Young Stribling and thought the Ku Klux Klan was a species of shellfish. Besides, wasn't he bringing along his own referee, Harry Ertle, for protection?

Arriving on the scene and sizing up the situation, Yussel tried to pull out of the fight by claiming McTigue had "hoited" his hand. The Columbus promoter, John Paul Jones, produced several doctors who certified Mike's duke was as sound as the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street. Yussel, on the other hand, dug up the town's only Irish Catholic physician, Dr. Callahan, who pronounced Mike unfit to fight because of an injury to his right mitt. The issue was settled when the local branch of the Klan scowled a few times in Jacobs' direction. "The fight's on," said Yussel.

The unanimous sentiment of the Klan boys who packed the ball park was that the native son had made Mike look pretty sorry as a world's champion. Referee Ertle didn't like the situation at all, when the tenth round was over. He called the fighters to the center of the ring, held up their right hands to signify that his decision was a draw and tried to duck. But he hadn't reckoned with the Klan boys. They climbed into the ring and surrounded Ertle.

"You'd better change that decision if you know what's good for you," warned the Klansmen, menace dripping from their voices.

"I gave the decision and I can't change it now," protested the referee feebly.

FAST WORK IN THE CLUTCH

Just then Yussel's hair-trigger brain detonated an idea.

"That's right, boys," said Jacobs with spurious cheerfulness. "The rules says he can't change his decision. It's up to the promoter or boxing commission to change it."

"Then I change it to Stribling," said Promoter Jones, raising Stribling's right hand.

With the crowd thus temporarily appeased, Yussel, McTigue and Referee Ertle, guarded by a few soldiers from near-by Fort Benning, pushed their way through the mob to their cars and were whisked away. Arriving in Atlanta at 4 a.m. they went to the offices of the Associated Press, where Ertle cleared up the confusion over the decision by reiterating that the fight was a draw. McTigue's title had been saved by Yussel's fast thinking in a pinch.

After this Jacobs formed a partnership with Pete Reilly and Billy McCarney, two smart Irishmen whose talents dovetailed peculiarly with his own. Yussel had Frankie Genaro, the world's flyweight champion, under his wing, and also managed Johnny Dundee at the period when Johnny held the junior lightweight title. As an associate of Reilly and McCarney, Jacobs was also implicated in the management of Jack Delaney, the world's light heavyweight champion, and Andre Routis, the little Frenchman whom they maneuvered into the featherweight title.

About this time, a German heavyweight named Max Schmeling came to New York to look for fights, accompanied by his manager, Arthur Buelow, a bewildered-looking little Berlin sports writer.

Schmeling was at Madame Bey's camp in Summit, New Jersey, letting a broken hand knit when Routis, the Frenchman, as emissary of his three managers, approached him. Routis planted the idea in Schmeling's mind that with Buelow as his agent he'd never get anywhere in America. He would quickly reach the top, even as Routis himself had, with the three smart Americans, Reilly, Jacobs and McCarney, handling his business. The idea, planted in fertile soil, flourished and it wasn't long before Buelow went back to Germany, broken-hearted, while Schmeling suddenly blossomed into prominence in the the heavyweight division under his new managers.

Thus did little Joey Jacobs from Hell's Kitchen come by his sobriquet, Yussel the Muscle. He had muscled in on another manager's fighter and thus greatly enhanced his reputation for smartness in his profession. At first, Messrs. Reilly and McCarney were active in the management of Schmeling, but Pete sold his share and McCarney later was eased out, leaving the Muscle in supreme command.

There are many critics of Yussel's methods in getting Schmeling to the top but few deny that it was Yuss and no one else who did the trick. Once again it was that hair-trigger mind that worked for Yussel at the precise split second when Opportunity knocked. Schmeling was fighting Jack Sharkey in the final match of an elimination tournament that was to crown Gene Tunney's successor as heavyweight champion. The bout was being held at the Yankee Stadium on the night of June 12, 1930, before a $749,935 house. For two rounds, Sharkey had scored at will. But in the third, Schmeling, always a slow starter, had begun to come on and the Lithuanian Lalapaloosa didn't seem to relish it. Soon after the fourth got underway, Sharkey planted a hard right in Max's mid-section that caused the German to drop to the canvas, doubled up with pain. Referee Jimmy Crowley began to count him out when Yussel leaped into the ring crying: "Foul, foul! Stop counting that man out. We wuz fouled!"

The referee, confused, stopped counting and looked around for advice. Near Yussel's corner sat the late Arthur Brisbane, professional dispenser of advice, and he came to Crowley's rescue.

"If you don't disqualify that man for fouling I'll kill boxing in New York State," he shouted to the befuddled official.

Now alarmed, the referee asked the two judges if they had seen the blow. One, the late Charles F. Mathison, admitted he hadn't seen it. The other, Dr. Harold Barnes, who was later suspended indefinitely by the commission for another decision, said it was a foul. While all this was going on, Yussel was screaming "Foul!" at the top of his voice and many in the crowd had taken up the cry. Crowley, his mind finally made up for him, disqualified Sharkey and proclaimed Schmeling the world's heavyweight champion, the first in history to be crowned on the flat of his back.

Yussel took a wide detour around Sharkey in 1931, at the same time squaring an old score. Though Sharkey was the logical opponent for Max that year because of the highly unsatisfactory ending of their 1930 fight, Yussel handpicked Young Stribling, now pretty shopworn. The match was moved to Cleveland to avoid the wrath of the New York State Athletic Commission. It took Max just short of the regulation fifteen rounds to finish an opponent who had no more relish for fighting him than a mule has for a juicy tenderloin steak. But, though the bout added little to Schmeling's prestige, it was a master stroke for Yussel, not because it enabled Max to hang onto his title for another year but also because it permitted Yussel to erase the Columbus, Georgia, score from the tablets of his memory as "settled."

Forced by public opinion and the New York State Athletic Commisiosn, Yussel had to accept the Sharkey bout for Max in 1932. After a close and featureless fight, Sharkey won the decision. When the decision was announced Yussel squealed like a laboratory full guinea pigs. He ran around ringside, charging that the whole thing was a plot engineered by his archenemy, Jimmy Johnston, who had a piece of Sharkey. Asked by the radio announcer to say a few words about the decision, Yussel, without removing his panatella, screamed into the mike: "We wuz robbed!" Yussel's wail has since become a byword in the fight racket.

Australia Downs Philippines in Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

LONG BEACH, California, July 15—The Australian Davis Cup team eliminated the Philippines from the 1939 series today by winning the doubles event between the two countries in straight sets.

The Australian combination of John Bromwich and Adrian Quist easily overcame Ampon and Sanchez, of the Philippines, by a score of 7-5, 6-4 and 6-2.

Australians are now scheduled to meet the winner of the Canada-Cuba contest.

CANADA BEATS KYOTO IMPERIAL FIVE BY 51-42

In their last game in Japan, the visiting Canadian basketball players defeated Kyoto Imperial University by 51 to 42 late Sunday afternoon at the Kyoto Higher Girls School court.

Kyoto got off to a good start and led during the first part of the contest but the Canadians deadlocked the count at 9-all in eight minutes. Thereupon, it was a nip and tuck struggle but Kyoto assumed the lead at 15 minutes and finished the first half with a 25-22 lead.

Canada put its best team on the floor to start the second half and in three minutes was out in front by 28-25. From then on, the visitors lengthened their lead and at 12 minutes, the score was 39 to 27 in their favor.

The Kyoto cagers never gave up and four continuous field goals by Center Ren, who gave a mediocre performance as a member of the All-Japan team in the Japan-Canada series, cut the Canadians' lead to 44-38. But the Canadians tightened up and finished the game ahead by nine points.

Feeling the physical strain from the five games in Tokyo the week previous, the Canadians used two teams alternately.

Kon Retains Title As Intercollegiate Table Tennis Champion

Takashi Kon of Waseda University retained his title as national intercollegiate table tennis champion in the finals of the ninth annual championships Sunday morning at the National Gymnasium at Hitotsubashi, Kanda.

Kon defeted Sai Kon Ko of Kwansei Gakuin but only after a nip and tuck battle, the score being: 14-21, 21-13, 23-25, 21-18, 21-9.

Hiroshi Negami Killed In Halha River Battle

Hiroshi Negami, graduate of Rikkyo University, one of Japan's best middle distance swimmers a few years back, died in gallant action during the recent fighting on the Halha River between Japan-Manchoukuo forces against Soviet-Outer Mongolian troops, according to an official announcement on July 15. He was a sub-lieutenant.

He was a native of the Hokkaido. He set a new world's record in the 1,000 meters in August, 1934. At the Berlin Olympic Games in 1936, he was in a slump but he placed fifth in the 400-meter freestyle race which was won by Jack Medica of the United States.

PENNANT BUG BITES FANS OF CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI—Summer has hardly commenced but Cincinnati's rabid baseball fans already are dreaming of late September and the chance of seeing World Series baseball games in their own backyard.

The brewery business is usually pretty good in Cincinnati. But of late there has been a more than slight upturn in trade because on these hot Summer evenings the most popular pastime is sitting on the front porch, sipping the suds and discussing the Reds' latest conquest in the National League.

Last year, for awhile, the natives got all heated up along about midsummer but the enthusiasm soon expired when it became apparent the Reds weren't quite ready.

This year it is a different story. Everyone from the river boat captain to the industrialist will tell you that Lombardi, Craft, Goodman, Derringer and all the rest of the lads are going to hang the pennant from the flagpole in Crosley Field.

Privately, Bill McKechnie, the manager, tells his friends that his ball club is "pretty well balanced" but the main reason for the success thus far, he asserts, is that "my boys have just been playing good ball every day."

Remembering last year when the boys cracked right in the thick of the chase, McKechnie has done his level best to beat down signs of conceit on the part of any of his charges. He figures that if he can convince the players they are just average they might strain a bit harder during a vital moment.

Club executives have received thousands of application for world series tickets but naturally the senders have been politely informed that the other seven clubs in th league are still very much on the loose and eager themselves to snare top honors.

All applications have been returned, a necessary procedure in view of the uncertain status of the grind to this point.

The last time the Reds won a pennant was back in 1919 so it has been a long spell since the ardent and eager fans have had opportunity to exercise the lungs and indulge in the enjoyable art of bragging.

Anyhow, it will be a gala holiday season, if, by chance, the world series comes to the Ohio River.—King Features.

JERSEY CITY TOPS MONTREAL, 5-4

N.Y. Times

JERSEY CITY, June 18—The Jersey City Little Giants took the fourth and final game of their set with the Montreal Royals today, 5 to 4, to earn an even break in the series.

Bill Harris, veteran right-hander, making his first start since Decoration Day, went the route for the Giants to chalk up his seventh victory of the season. Harris allowed eight hits, walked two and fanned two.

Kemp Wicker, Montreal starter, experienced only two bad innings, the second and seventh, when the Giants bunched all five of their hits for all five of their runs.

JACOLA HAS CHANCE YET ON U.S. TURF

By LU BINDMAN

NEW YORK—Edward Friendly's filly, Jacola, which last year and the year before cut such a prominent figure among the ranks of the leading thoroughbreds, may not be the same speedster in the future as she was in the past. The daughter of Jacopo-La France, always an equine to be strongly feared whenever her name appeared on the lineup of any contest, went lame during the running of the New Castle Handicap at Delware Park recently, leaving her future status in doubt.

Jacola, whose dam, La France, is also the mammy of this year's current three-year-old sensation, Johnstown, once administered a thundering wallop to none other than the champ handicap horse of past seasons, Seabiscuit. Then the little lady was in her prime and she could respectably measure strides with any thoroughbred in the land, male or female. While, despite her New Castle mishap, she isn't counted out yet, it put a damper on her future aspirations.

Jacola is a fighting type of filly, even though fillies, as a rule, are a temperamental lot. They are not as stable or consistent as colts. Occasionally one finds a really steady one and while Jacola falls in that category, there is no telling how she will react when brought back to the turf again after her lameness has been cleared away.

In the New Castle, as in most of her other essays, Jacola put up a game and stalwart battle. It took only the unfortunate mishap to put her down as it seemed near the stretch turn of the mile and a sixteenth contest, she would go on to win. Running in the second slot at that point, about a length behind the pacemaking Bunny Baby, she was moving up steadily when she suddenly fell back and wound up a limping 11th in the field of a dozen. She was under top weight of 126 pounds, giving away as much as 21 pounds to her rivals, which is asking a great deal of any thoroughbred.

Jacola holds one triumph this year which came at Jamaica on May 1 when she put away such sturdy campaigners at Tatterdemalion and Brown King in a mile and a sixteenth handicap. She shouldered 122 pounds on that occasion and pulled away easily to click by two lengths. Prior to that tilt she had wound up twelfth in the San Antonio Handicap, sixth in the Santa Anita Handicap and third in the San Juan Capistrano Handicap, all at Santa Anita, Calif. In the latter tilt, she held a short lead in the stretch but was overhauled by the long distance running Cravat and Today.

Since her Jamaica score, Jacola registered a couple of good thirds—one in the Dixie Handicap at Pimlico behind Sid Damion and Tatterdemalion, and the other in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park in the wake of Knickerbocker and Heelfly. Her unfortunate New Castle engagement followed.

PROMISING CAREER

Now four years old, Jacola still has a promising career ahead of her if she responds satisfactorily to treatment and training and comes back to the turf with anything like the sizzling speed she was wont to uncork in days gone by. The race for filly honors of the season is still a tight one and opportunity is not shut to her in her quest for the titular diadem.

The year is but half over and some of the most lavish turf classics are still to be decided and anything like her old form will find her a tough lady to whip.

Most horsemen believe that before the season is over, she will be right up there again with the best of them because she is a filly of heart and courage, besides the speed and endurance she is known to possess. After a hectic campaign, however, the little turf lady is now primarily entitled to a good cure and a well-earned rest before allowed to put her foot forward in competition again.

Dress Is the King At Horse Show

CHICAGO—There's a world of formality to a well conducted horse show, especially as regards the accouterments of the participants.

This fact was emphasized in fashionable hoss circles preparing for the Lake Forest horse show.

Rules for personal appointments, prepared by officials of the Masters of Foxhounds Association are laid out for the master, honorary huntsman, professional huntsman, honorary whipper in, professional whipper in, member, lady member (side saddle) and lady member (astride).

The style rules that govern the garb of the Master are: Coat: Square cornered singlebreasted frock coat, cut of course to suit the wishes of the owner. Flaps on waistline and pockets on outside of coat with the exception of whistle pockets are not allowed.

There should be not less than four nor more than five large "hunt buttons" in front, two behind, and two or three small "hunt buttons" on cuff of each sleeve. Scarlet is the orthodox color for hunting, but if the regular hunt uniform is of another color there is no reason why same should not be used. The material should be melton cloth of heavy twill.

Breeches should be brown or white, of heavy cord, or leather, or of any other heavy material.

Regulation hunting boots of black calf (not patent leather) with brown or colored toes, preferably polished and white or brown boot garters to match the breeches must be worn.

If the master carries a flask and sandwich case, which is optional, it must contain food and drink.

The garb of the honorary huntsman should be the same as that of the master while that of the professional huntsman differs only in the respect that the flask and sandwich case are not allowed.

The dress of a lady member astride includes: Black, gray or color material hunting coat; buff or brown, cord or leather breeches, a black bowler hat, veils, and a flask and sandwich case that must serve its purpose by containing food and drink.

JEFF HEATH, WHO PLAYED IN JAPAN IN 1935, STARS WITH CLEVELAND

Christian Science Monitor

SEATTLE—His rise to the Big Leagues was slow, but progressive, and fanfare that accompanied Freddy Hutchinson, this year's highest-priced rookie. But this column would like to call attention to a lad that the Northwest can be proud of—John Geoffrey Heath.

It's a long story from the Jeff Heath that was the freshman star of Seattle's Garfield High School nine in 1932, to the heavy slugger of the Cleveland Indians, who was second only to Jimmy Foxx in the 1938 American League batting honor roll.

TWO PATHS UPWARD

It seems there are two ways to arrive at Big League baseball. The first, and most uncertain, is to jump immediately from a minor league team to the major leagues, attended by much publicity, and heralded as a "prize rookie." Some, like Joe Di Maggio, make good at once and continue rising to baseball fame—but more often it is like the case of Freddy Hutchinson. The rookie has too much to live up to, and never has a chance to get started.

The other way up is more certain. It is to climb the "farm" ladder. And that is just what was done by Jeff Heath.

Young Heath was graduated from Garfield high school in 1935 with a four-year batting average of .390, a record of three years on the all-city home team, and named the outstanding fielder in the prep league.

WENT TO JAPAN

In the Summer of 1935, Jeff played with Yakima of the Western International League. A .420 batting average and his high school record attracted the attention of A. A. U. officials, and Heath was named on the all-star United States amateur team that toured Japan in the fall of 1935. On this trip Heath learned much more from the famous coach, Max Carey, and soon after his return to Seattle, was signed to a contract by the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland had enough good fielders, and after training camp sent Heath to their Zanesville farm. Here he spent the season of 1936 and modestly led the league in every department except home runs, with a batting average of .387. Cleveland recalled Heath for their last 12 games, and he batted .320 for his short big league sojourn.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

In the 1937 training season, Heath again tried to break into the Indian outfield. But the Cleveland management decided it would be better for Heath to play regularly with Milwaukee in the American Association than ride the bench with Cleveland, so he was again farmed out.

American Association pitchers couldn't stop the Seattle slugger, as he batted .367 to finish second in the league.

Back again in 1938 came Jeff to the Cleveland Spring training quarters, more determined than ever. Manager Oscar Vitt decided to give the youngster a chance, and let him start the season at left field. Immediately Heath showed major league calibre, and hit so well it was impossible to let him go.

BATTED .344

Heath showed his appreciation by batting .344, to finish in second place in the American League—and this, mind you, in his first year of regular play.

When Heath dropped into a batting-slump early his season, some of the rail-birds said he was just a flash-in-the-pan, and advised Vitt to trade him. But the Cleveland manager had faith in the black-haired, stocky Seattle youth, and gave him a chance to get back in stride.

Heath gained more fame in high school as a football player than at baseball. He was a brilliant full-back, weighing almost 200 pounds. But he turned down offers from many colleges, preferring the safer sport of baseball, and desiring to earn his own education. During the Winters, Jeff has been attending the University of Washington, taking a business administration course.

HEATH HOMERS

PHILADELPHIA, June 25—The Athletics divided a twin bil with Cleveland today before 19,392 fans—the largest crowd of the year at Shibe Park—winning the second game, 10 to 2, after bowing in the opener, 8 to 4. The even break enabled the Mackmen to square the four-game series.

The Indians unleashed a home-run assault in the seventh inning to clinch the first game. With two out, Ben Chapman, Hal Trosky and Jeff Heath slammed the offerings of Buck Ross for consecutive circuit drives. Johnny Allen was the winning pitcher.

George Caster held the Indians to seven hits in the nightcap to chalk up his fifth triumph of the season. Eric Tipton's triple in the sixth drove in what proved to be the winning run.

WOMEN'S HIGH JUMPING IMPROVES

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Dorothy Odam's new world's record high jump here this season—5ft. 5¾in.—provides us today with one more striking illustration of the way the feminine standard for track and field athletics is going up. Why, when I went to see the first British women's championships for this particular form of sport, back in 1923, the world's record for the women's high jump was 6 inches less than Miss Odam's best effort. And the improvement in this event is matched by that in all others to which the ladies have given their attention.

During the same period of time, the male standards have gone up too, of course. But not to the same extent. So I guess it is true to say that women are really catching up with the men in such strenuous matters as running and jumping. How near they will be able to approach to masculine abilities is an interesting speculation, in connection with which I would cite the performance of Helen Stephens, U. S. A., when she won the women's 100 meters dash at the last Olympic Games. While doing this she covered the distanee in 11.4s., which is faster by 6s. than the time T. E. Burke, U. S. A., returned when he won the first men's Olympic sprint at Athens in 1896.

The average male sprinter of ordinary athletic club ability could not travel as fast as Helen Stephens did at Berlin, and (on the evidence of the times) she could have given Burke five yards start and a beating.

Who were the pioneers of track and field sport for women in Europe? Most people, if you put that question to them, would probably answer, "Why, the British, of course." But this is not correct. The first damsels to take seriously to competitive running and field events were the French, and it was chiefly owing to their energetic promotion of international matches and repeated invitations to England that the latter country first raised a team (in 1920) and sent it abroad.

The team in question, raised by private enterprise, was selected from people who were engaged in physical training at one or two big gymnasiums and the success that attended its efforts brought many girls into athletics and led in 1922 to the formation of the Women's Amateur Athletic Association, an administrative body established, at the suggestion of the men's A. A. A., for five main purposes. Namely, to co-ordinate and control women's athletics in England; to ensure that women competed only in suitable surroundings and desirable conditions; to register authenticated records; to give assistance and advice as to proper training and choice of events suitable to women, and to improve the physique and physical efficiency of the nation.

Just how well the W. A. A. A. has achieved these objects you can tell, not only from the raised standards and the hundreds of clubs now in existence here, but also from the prominent part that British women play in international athletics these days. Last year, for example, nine girls were sent out to compete in the British Empire Games at Sydney (New South Wales), Australia; six represented England against France and Belgium at Lille, winning five of the six events on the program; and twelve represented Great Britain in the 1938 European championships at Vienna.

Today, athletics for women are accepted everywhere as a matter of course. But, in the early days, the ladies had to face a great deal of criticism and ridicule. And the triumphant manner in which they did so has been a source of wonderment to everyone. Except, perhaps, the ladies.

French-Polish Pair Win Doubles Crown

PARIS, June 19—Simone Mathieu, France's No. 1 woman tennis player, teamed with Jadwiga Jedrzejowska of Paland to add the French hard-court women's doubles championship to the singles title she won Saturday.

The French and the Polish aces defeated the Yugoslavian pair of A. Florian and H. Kovac, 7-5, 7-5.

Japan Skiers will Compete in 5th Olympic Games

Japan will be able to compete in the 5th Olympic Winter Games next February at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, scene of the 4th Olympic Winter Games, and will do so with expenses all paid by the German National Skiing Federation, it became known Monday.

By air mail, the Japan Skiing Federation Monday received an invitation from the German athletic organization to dispatch a team to its annual international meet at Garmisch-Partenkirchen since the 1936 Games to be held from January 26 to 29. The invitation did not specify the number of persons to make the trip but said traveling expenses and living expenses will be provided.

Inasmuch as the Fifth Olympic Winter Games will be held at the same place a week afterward, there will be no trouble for the Japanese skiing team to compete, it is said.

UNKNOWNS LEAD HITTING IN MAJORS

NEW YORK, June 24—Morie Arnovich and George McQuinn have made such a steady assignment out of their batting leadership that most of the fun lately has been left to their pursuers.

Arnovich, star outfielder of the Phillies, has maintained a fast gait above or close to the .400 bracket for several weeks and had a mark of .399 Friday while McQuinn, the St. Louis Browns' first baseman who headed the American League cast for nearly as long, had .353.

However, this stability hasn't extended to their associates among the select 10 leaders in each league. For instance, Ken Keltner of Cleveland, who was among the leaders in May, droppd out the first week in June, then popped up two weeks ago with a .340 average, and was out again within a week on a 19-point skid.

Now he is back again, this time batting .341 and ranking third among the American League hitters.

Zeke Bonura of the New York Giants was another climber this week. A 19-point boost in his percentage to .361 lifted him to second place among the National Leaguers as Frank McCormick of the Reds dropped from .350 to .352 during the week.

An even longer skid was made by Brooklyn's Ernie Koy, who dropped from third place at .344 clear out of the 10 leaders.

Two noteworthy additions to the National League group were Mel Ott of the Giants and Johnny Mize of the St. Louis Cardinals. Another newcomer on the American League list was Doc Cramer of the Boston Red Sox.

Pikes Peak to Stage Amateur Golf Meet

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—For the fourth time in a span of twelve years, the rolling greens of famed Broadmoor at the base of Cheyenne mountain in Corolado Springs will be the scene of the third ranking American amateur golf event—the Trans-Mississippi tourney scheduled for July 17 to 23.

The tournament, topped only by the United States and Western Amateur, was played on Broadmoor's par 70 layout in 1927, 1930 and 1933.

Officials predict the greatest array of talent in the 39-year history of the mammoth sectional event. Current champion Ken Savage, who won the title last year at Lincoln, Neb., will be here to defend his title.

Champions of the last eight years who also will compete include Johnny Goodman, Gus Moreland, Leland Hammann, Johnny Dawson, and Don Schumacher. Goodman won the title in 1931 and 1935 while Moreland was victor in 1932 and 1933.

Eddie Held, now of Denver, who won the cup in 1923 and 1926 and was runnerup to Schumacher in 1937, also is expected to enter.

Veteran golfers who have played here before know there is something besides scenic attractions at mountain-walled Broadmoor. It was here in 1927 that a young unknown named Johnny Goodman won the tournament and the very next year captured the United States Open, the target of them all.

In 1933, a young Stanford University student, Lawson Little, won the Broadmoor Invitation and was runnerup in the Trans-Mississippi meet. Little since has won the amateur titles of both America and Britain and now is a pro.

One more golfing luminary received his start at Broadmoor. He is Charley Yates of Atlanta, Ga., who astounded the world in 1938 by winning the British Amateur championship. In 1935, Yates copped the Western Amateur on the Broadmoor lawns. Prior to that his only golf distinction was a victory in the national intercollegiate matches.

YANKEES LOSE 1 TO BROWNS IN TWINBILL

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 26—The law of averages caught up with the Browns in the first game of yesterday's double-header at the Stadium, and that equally inexorable force, the Yankees, caught up with them in the second.

St. Louis had lost all eight games played with the Bombers when they squared off for the opener. And since that sort of thing could not go on indefinitely, the Browns bagged a neat 7-3 victory with a five-run outburst in the ninth.

This last-minute larceny so irritated the New Yorkers that they promptly put the Brownies in their proper place in the nightcap. The Bombers slashed away with thirteen hits for a lopsided 11-to-2 victory. This division of the spoils seemed to set all right with a bipartisan crowd of 40,861, largest of the season at the Stadium.

BATTING PRACTICE IN NIGHTCAP

The second game was good batting practice, but the first one was tense and exciting. Marse Joe McCarthy had gambled with young Marius Russo, and the former L. I. U. athlete did a magnificent job for seven innings. Permittting only three hits in that stretch, he was riding a 1-0 lead, thanks to a homer by Bill Dickey.

But in the eighth, the left-hander tired and yielded a walk and three singles for two runs. In fact, he was wabbling so badlly that Fireman Johnny Murphy was summoned.

Murphy pitched one ball to retire the side. Then Dickey drove another ball into the right-field stands with Joe DiMaggio on base. That was all very well and good but the fireman had made one mistake when he left the bullpen. Instead of bringing water to put out the flames he had picked up a tin of gasoline.

Murphy was wild and uncertain. He walked two men, gave up two singles and a double—and the game. Steve Sundra relieved him but served the Browns more of the same until five runs were over and victory was assured for 21-year-old Johnny Kramer, who, except for what he offered Dickey, had twirled beautifully.

ROLFE OBEYS COMMAND

After that unhappy episode Marse Joe gave strict orders to his operatives not to fool in the second encounter. Red Rolfe obediently hit a homer with Frankie Crosetti on base in the first inning.

But that was only the beginning. Oral Hildebrand spun a gaudy five-hitter to hold St. Louis in check and made only one slip. He threw a home-run ball to Myril Hoag after walking Marland Clift in the fourth. That tied the score momentarily, but the Yanks went to work on Vernon Kennedy, Roxy Lawson and Bill Trotter soon afterward.

In the double bill Dickey not only hit his eighth and ninth homers but cracked three singles for a perfect day at bat. Four times he walked and once he slammed a towering sacrifice fly. DiMaggio and Crosetti also had five hits apiece.

Most spectacular play of the day came in the first game when Johnny Berardino "singled" past Red Rolfe. But Crosetti bobbed up with the ball in deep short, then Babe Dahlgren made an impossible backhand pick-up of an errant throw. The Babe is the nearest thing to Hal Chase that the sport has had in many a year.

Another gem was a throw by Henrich after Donon Heffner had hit to deep right in the third inning of the opener. Berardino tried to go to third on the safety, only to have Baby Face nip him with a strike to Rolfe. Henrich couldn't have pegged more accurately from the pitcher's box.

As if the afternoon was not long enough, President Ed Barrow of the Yankees spent the period between games watching a sandlot fray from the Stadium clubhouse.

Flash Gordon made one amazing throw that practically caught Crosetti flatfooted. Frankie was so flabbergasted that he was unable to complete a double play, even though he did make a force out. The Flash, incidentally, hit one of the longest balls of the long afternoon, sending Chet Laabs practically into the Yankee bull pen to haul down his drive. It went over 400 feet.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

PIRIE, WOLFE AND BIDDULPH COMING HERE

Bob Pirie, Canada's greatest swimming star, Paul Wolfe, one of the best short distance freestylers in the United States, and Robin Biddulph, Australian middle distance star, may compete in the national championships to be held at the Meiji Shrine pool here on August 12, 13 and 14.

All three competed recently at the Pacific Carnival championships at the Waikiki 100-meter natatorium in Honolulu.

The desire to compete in Japan was expressed in a telegram received by the Japan Swimming Federation last Saturday from Manager Hay.

FEDERATION ACCEPTS

At an emergency meeting on Monday night, the Federation moved to accept the offer and wired accordingly to Mr. Hay in Honolulu. The offer was a godsend to the Federation, whose plans to invite a number of German swimmers and then Kiyoshi Nakama and Takashi Hirose, American-born Japanese stars of Hawaii, fell through.

In the wire to Mr. Hay, the Federation also expressed a desire that Nakama be included as a member of the team if possible. Nakama is not expected to come as he is scheduled to compete in the American national championships by way of preparation to make him eligible as a member of the 1940 American Olympic team.

All indications are that the swimmers will leave Honolulu on August 1 aboard the Tatuta Maru and arrive at Yokohama on August 10 in time for the national championships.

Pirie won the 100-meter freestyle at the Pacific Carnival in 59.1 seconds and the 200-meter event in 2 minutes 12.8 seconds. He lost the 400-meter event by a yard to Nakama. The latter beat the Canadian also in the 800-meter race. Pirie competed on the 1936 Olympic Games at Berlin.

Wolfe was second in the 100-meter freestyle race in the Honolulu meet.

Biddulph, who has been credited with 4 minutes 53 seconds in the 400-meter event and 10 minutes 14.2 seconds in the 800-meter placed third in both races in the Honolulu meet.

GOOD TIMES

All times in the Honolulu meet are considered good inasmuch as they were made in a 100-meter salt water pool. The turns in a 50-meter pool contribute considerably to a swimmer's performance.

Pirie is expected to furnish plenty of competition for Shigeo Arai, Shigeo Sugiura, Takeshi Sasaki and Morio Takahashi, local intercollegiate stars.

KLEIN OUT FOR A COMEBACK

By ED KIELY

PITTSBURGH—Charles ("Chuck") Klein, at one-time considered one of baseball's most valuable players, tucked his belt a notch shorter and announced he was buckling down to stage a "Comeback."

Big Chuck broke into the National League with the Philadelphia Phils in 1928. For four years, this perfect specimen of manhood was the only joy Philly fans had. The American League entry, the Philadelphia A's, were the Yankees of their time, but Klein kept all and sundry informed that the Quaker Cubs. It was thought prior to the senior circuit.

BEST IN 1932

Although the league followers honored Klein with the "most" valuable player award" in 1932, he had his best major league season with the hapless Phils in 1933. In that year, he led the league in nearly every department offensively.

He was the leading batter with a lusty .368 average. He had the most hits—223. He was tops in total bases—365. He knocked the most runs across the home disc—120. He also scored 101 runs, but that didn't lead the league.

Almost as always, following the 1933 campaign, the Phils allegedly were hanging from the ropes financially. They had to do something; they were desperate. So—

It was a saddened Philadelphia that day when it was announced that the new "King of Quakerville" was pushed upstairs to the Chicago Cubs. It was thought prior to the trade, that Klein could win the pennant hands down with any first division outfit.

In the deal, the Phils received Mark Koenig, a veteran infielder; Ted Kleinhaus, a pitcher; and Outfielder Hendrick. The Cubs also tossed in $65,000 and the trade was completed. The three players the Phils received since have passed out of the major league picture.

LEMON AT CHICAGO

At Chicago, our hero proved to be a "$100,000 lemon." He played in-and-out during 1934-35 and part of 1936. He also played poorly.

On May 21, 1936, without much pomp or pageantry, the Cubs, in a terse bulletin, announced that Charles ("Chuck") Klein had been traded to the Phils, the team of his baseball birth, along with Fabian Kowalik, a pitcher, for outfielder Ethan Allen and Pitcher Curt Davis. Thus ended a transaction that proved worthless to both teams involved.

Klein stayed with the Phils until June 7, 1939, then he was passed along to the Pittsburgh Pirates from which point he hopes to stage a comeback.—King Features.

GIANTS BEAT REDS

By JOHN DREBINGER

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, June 24—Those tremendously aroused Giants wrenched their second successive game from Bill McKechnie's suddenly becalmed Reds today, and while it would be wholly inaccurate to say that the great panic along the American Rhine is already on, there is no denying that the 10,718 spectators drew no relish from this latest disaster to explode in their midst.

Again there was an early ripping and tearing apart of Redleg defenses. This time it was a pair of first-inning home runs by Harry Danning and Zeke Bonura that sent the Giants winging to a three-run lead, and behind this impressive margin Manuel Salvo, Bill Terry's stalwart freshman ace, turned in another highly commendable mound job to bring the onrushing New Yorkers home in front, 7 to 2.

As a result of this latest triumph, their twelfth in the last fourteen games, the Giants advanced within five and a half games of the still front-running but hard-breathing Cincinnatians.

APPROACHES LOHRMAN'S FEAT

Although not quite so brilliant as the shut-out with which Bill Lohrman smothered the Reds yesterday, young Salvo's performance was almost as effective and impressive.

The first of the two tallies that fell to the Reds came as the direct result of a misplay, and not until the ninth, with the game pretty definitely settled, did the Cincinnatians finally come up with a run wholly earned. In all, the towering Californian gave only six hits in hanging up his fourth victory of the year against three defeats.

However, it was the homers of Danning and that mighty Bonura, both struck off Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, that really scuttled the Reds and left them in a comatose condition for the rest of the afternoon.

With one down in the first inning, Billy Jurges drew a pass off Moore and stole second. Billy could have saved himself the trouble, for Harry the Horse slammed the next pitch over the left-field wall for his eighth circuit blow of the season.

HOMER BONURA'S SEVENTH

Then, after Mel Ott had taken a pot shot at the same wall, only to fall short a few feet for an out, the great Zeke sent another drive screaming over the fence for his No. 7. That made it 3—0.

In the fifth the Giants launched another offensive which, without the help of any more home runs, resulted in another cluster of three and sent Moore to the showers.

Jurges started this drive with a single. Danning walked, then came a whole lot of running as Ott and Bonura blazed singles to left to drive in two runs. Moore here went to pieces, and after hitting Jimmy Ripple and walking Alex Kampouris to force in a third tally, was mercifully withdrawn by the sad-eyed McKechnie.

The left-handed Lee Grissom pitched the rest of the way and held the Giants well in hand until the ninth, when Jurges walked, stole second again and scored on a single to left. The last hitter? Why, Bonura, you know. Bonura, who with this blow made it three for the day.

An excusable misplay by Kampouris, who, in trying for a double play, allowed the ball to slip out of his hand, gave the Reds their first tally in the third. Not until the ninth did they get the other. Then Lee Gamble singled and Billy Myers doubled. But it took a sacrifice fly to bring Gamble home, and the next two batters could do nothing at all.

FINES SURPRISE PLAYERS

Reverberations of that water carnival in Pittsburgh last Thursday were still soaking the Giants today. Terry announced to a stunned audience of players that he, along with four of his men, had drawn the official ire of President Ford Frick and in consequence had been fined.

Frick, who apparently must maintain the dignity of his umpires, even if a few do not know enough to come in out of a cloudburst, slapped a $50 fine on the old colonel and ordered the following to cough up $25 apiece: Bonura, Chiozza, Ripple and Jurges.

The reasons given for the fines were: "Prolonged argument, rushing Umpire Charles Moran and causing a disturbance on the field."

Another most extraordinary finding, inasmuch as there was no "prolonged argument" at any time, so far as any occupants of the press box could see, nor was there any disturbance on the ball field. Whatever rushing and bawling out Moran received took place in the dugout and under the stands after the game, by which time even Uncle Charlie had become cognizant of the rain and seemed as eager as the next one to get out of it.

AN EXPENSIVE SHOWER

All in all, it was a pretty expensive shower for the Giants, costing a ball game, $150 in fines and the temporary services of Walter Brown, who, in the scramble to get in out of the rain, slipped on the dugout steps and sprained an ankle so badly he has been sent back to New York.

Although the team is winning, woes are still piling up for Terry. This morning Joe Moore, who was just beginning to hit his real batting stride, bobbed up with a stiff neck and had to be replaced in left field by Ripple.

The Danning and Bonura homers brought the Giants total for the season to forty-three, within two of the league-leading total of forty-five held by the Reds.

Larry Benton, right handed pitching ace for the Giants in the days of John McGraw, was around before the game paying his respects to a few of the old guard, such as Terry, Ott, Carl Hubbell and Coach Travis Jackson. Larry is now engaged in the bus business in this city.

WHITEHEAD NEARLY READY

Although Burgess Whitehead has about recovered from the torn finger nail which has kept him on the sidelines since this trip began, Terry has decided he might as well take advantage of Kampouris's recent good work at second and so give Whitey as much additional rest as possible.

The hitting streak of Chiozza and Demaree were finally stopped today, but Ott, Danning and Bonura kept right on with one or more blows for each game of the trip.

REICH PREPARES FOR 1940 GAMES

BERLIN—Host, and according to one system of calculating, victor over the United States at the last Olympics, Germany is preparing to make the next games another series of "Deutschland ueber Alles" events.

Private sporting cubs, in the old pre-Nazi sense of the word, no longer are in vogue. But under the Reich's sponsorship and genius for organization, National Socialist sport clubs and National Socialist sportsmen are being marshalled into line for the 1940 games.

Both the spectator and the athlete himself are being taken care of in the sports ministry of the Reich, headed by Hans von Tschammer und Osten, Reich's sports Fuehrer.

The official news agency stated that "the active sportsmen will be accompanied by trainers, doctors, veterinaries, mechanics and referees. The German quota of tickets will be first at the disposal of the German participants."

The Reichs Bund for sports will cooperate with the Kraft Durch Freude (strength through joy) movement in the transportation of crowds expected to travel up to Helsingfors.

The Hamburg-American lines North German Lloyd, the two famous German passenger ship companies, as well as the regular boats running from East Prussia to the Baltic countries, expect to do a rushing shuttle business to the Olympic center. The fleet of modern cruiser lines, to which the recently commissioned "Robert Ley" belongs, built by the strength through joy movement, will be at the call of groups going to Finland.

The participation of Germany in the Winter sports was in doubt so long as the games were scheduled at St. Moritz was in doubt, but now they have been moved to Garmisch-Partenkirchen there is no doubt Germany will be strongly represented.

After success last Winter at Zakopane and other snow spots, Germans strongly opposed the omission of skiing from the Olympic program. They didn't want to give up this sport, in which they offered the Finns, Norwegians and Swedes competition, because of a disagreement between Olympic authorities and the International Ski Federation.

"The worth of the Winter games as an Olympic competition has been considerably diminished because of the omission of skiing," von Tschammer und Osten said.

German skiers do not pretend to stand alone in their demand that skiing again be put on the sports program, even though Germany agreed to hold the Winter games without that sport. "Almost everybody," they say, "feels that the entire understanding of the Winter sports is missing if they are undertaken without consideration of the most important sport."

BORICAN LOSES TO BURROWES IN QUARTER-MILE

N.Y. Times

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., June 24—The Shore A.C. of Elberon rolled up 116 points in Rutgers University Stadium today to capture the team title in the annual New Jersey A.A.U. track and field championship.

The Newark A.C., winner of the crown last year, did not field a team today.

Second place went to the Winged Foot A.C. of Newark with 61 points, while the Prudential A.A. of Newark was third with 10.

HOLD COMMANDING LEAD

With ten events completed, the victors held a commanding lead. Shut out only in two events—the pole vault and the two-mile walk—Shore A.C. athletes had piled up 52 points, 35 more than their nearest rivals from the Winged Foot A.C. The Prudential A.A. was in third place with 8 points.

Edward Burrowes Jr. of the Princeton University A.A. defeated John Borican, Negro middle-distance star of the Shore A.C., in a blazing quarter-mile final. Burrowes's time of 0:48.2 set a new State A.A.U. record.

WEATHER CONDITIONS IDEAL

George E. Little, director of athletics at Rutgers University and vice-president of the State A.A.U., said ideal weather conditions and the excellent condition of the new Rutgers track were contributing factors to the record-breaking performance. He described the field as one of the best in years.

England Wins Soccer In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, June 19—England defeated South Africa 3-0 in an international soccer match played Saturday before 32,000 spectators. The touring forwards performed brilliantly and led 2-0 at halftime.

Interest in the game was so great that the gates were closed some time before the start and hundreds were unable to gain admission. J. W. Lewis, Walthamstown Avenue amateur inside-right opened the scoring after eight minutes and netted again shortly before the interval. England's third goal went to Michael Fenton, West Ham United center forward.

The clever English vanguard tested the Springbook defense severely but the South Africans showed only one or two flashes of combination and missed several chances in front of goal.

GEHRIG CASE IS EXPECTED TO SPUR RESEARCH INTO BAFFLING MALADY

CHICAGO, June 25—The descriptive, non-technical name for the trouble which has forced the retirement of Lou Gehrig, the famous baseball player, is hardening of the spinal cord. Hardening, with degeneration of some parts of the cord, describes the actual facts. The trouble has long been known and is fully set forth in books in the library of the American Medical Association headquarters here.

Most books no longer call it chronic infantile paralysis, which was a diagnosis made before the true nature of infantile paralysis was well known.

A full grown man's spinal cord is about eighteen inches long and weighs not more than an ounce. It does not extend all the way down the spinal column, or backbone. It is so intimately connected with the brain's control that, with the brain, the cord forms the central nervous system.

The nerves which network the body stem from the spinal cord and when something is wrong in the cord the results show up usually elsewhere through these nerves.

The part of the cord most affected by the hardening is the nerve line controlling muscles. The medical name is amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. Amyotrophic means atrophy pertaining to muscles. Lateral describes the place involved in the cord, which is divided into three sections. These are the anterior or front, lateral or side, and posterior or back. Sclerosis means hardening.

The results are grave, as described in the medical records here. The cardinal signs, according to Appleton's Neurology and Psychiatry, are atrophy or muscular wasting; fibrillation, which means twitching not of entire muscles but of fibres in muscles, and an alteration in the reflexes.

There is weakness, and early signs may include exhaustion, cramps or numbness.

The trouble is most likely to appear in the muscles whose nerves take off from the spinal cord in a girdle about the shoulders. Medical records state that the most usual first sign is atrophy in the muscles of the hands, one or both, but more often the right first. These muscles weaken.

Other results have been atrophy of the tongue and difficulty in pronouncing consonants like l, r, d and t. Some persons have been affected in such a way that they laugh or cry without accountable motive. Lips sometimes flutter or there may be difficulty in swallowing.

Occasionally, in the records, the lower limbs waste at the start and the gait may be slow or stiff. There may be pains in the lower limbs, but as a rule, the medical books declare, the trouble is not painful.

Wasting of muscles sometimes has proceeded to the point where a person resembled the "living skeleton" freaks of shows.

The hardening usually comes between 45 and 60, and to men more often than women. Gehrig is affected nearly ten years early.

The national interest in the baseball star is more than likely to result in medical advances in this trouble. At present there is no known cause. Blood examinations indicate no clues. Medical authorities believe it virtually certain that the trouble is not infectious. Medical books note that heredity has been suspected, but indicate that there are no convincing facts to prove this.

There is no recognized medical treatment for the cause of the trouble.

The later medical books have eliminated the infantile paralysis name because infantile paralysis is directly traceable to an infectious agent, a virus.

SAN ROMANI BREAKS MILE RECORD IN METROPOLITAN CHAMPIONSHIPS

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

JERSEY CITY, N.J., June 24—Tuning up for the nationals, slated for Lincoln, Neb., on July 3 and 4, most of the leading local track and fields stars competed for metropolitan senior A.A.U. championships today at sun-drenched Lincoln Park, and though only one record was broken close finishes marked most of the events.

Before a crowd of 6,000 persons, who came early and stayed late, Archie San Romani of the Grand Street Boys Association turned the tables on Leslie MacMitchell, the highly regarded N.Y.U. freshman, in the mile run, which produced the lone record-breaking performance of the hot afternoon.

RUNS A FRONT RACE

This was no ordinary record that San Romani eclipsed. Running a front race practically all the way, the transplanted Kansan was caught in 4:13.7 over a soft, slow track and lowered Glenn Cunningham's 1937 standard of 4:14.1, achieved at Glen Park in Yonkers. Some twenty yards behind trailed MacMitchell, with Andy Neidnig of the Millrose A.A. five yards to the rear in third position. MacMitchell, the defending titleholder, was unable to cope with San Romani's backstretch spurt and Archie won going away.

This was one of the few tests in which the winner enjoyed a wide margin at the finish. Of course, the battle for the team crown was no battle at all, with the New York Athletic Club athletes, perennial winners, romping off with the trophy with a total of 110 points. The Grand Street Boys Association placed second with 44 points.

Two brilliant sprint victories by 23-year-old Herbert Thompson stamped him as a distinct threat at the nationals, considering that he triumphed over star-studded fields that included Ben Johnson, Perrin Walker and several others. In the century he led all the way to win in 0:09.8 ahead of Johnson, the defender, while in the 220 he rallied to conquer the same man in 0:21.4.

GORDON GETS A DOUBLE

Incidentally, the only other double winner was the veteran Eddie Gordon of the Grand Street Boys Association. The 1932 Olympic broad jump champion annexed his specialty and the 120-yard high hurdles, as well as finishing second in the high jump. Gordon defended the hurdles and broad jump laurels.

Perhaps the most thrilling of a series of thrilling races was the 440. Here Jimmy Herbert, N.Y.U.'s defending champion, evened matters with young Johnny Quigley, now with the New York A.C., with a 0:49.4 quarter, coming from behind to defeat the Princeton meet victor by two feet, with John Kelly Jr. of the Winged Foot third.

Trailing in the middle of the field most of the way, Herbert moved out of a fifth-place pocket, swung to the outside and thundered up the homestretch, still about five yards behind the leaders. Quigley, the early leader, had just been passed by Eddie O'Sullivan, his team-mate, but the former regained the upper hand an instant later.

Herbert fled past the fading O'Sullivan, but it appeared to be a futile rally. But five yards from the tape Jimmy caught Quigley and then virtually threw himself at the worsted to supply the winning margin in a magnificent race.

GOLDBERG A VICTOR

A similar test was the 880, in which Sanford (Cousin) Goldberg of the Millrose A.A. came out of seventh place in the middle of the backstretch, pulled even with Lou Burns of the Sixty-ninth Regiment A.A. shortly after they entered the homestretch, moved two feet ahead and remained there until the finish. He was clocked in the commendable time of 1:55.7.

A special handicap three-quarter-mile run was an added feature of the long program. This event was held at the request of Cunningham, who felt that he needed the workout. Running with a nasty gash in his right ankle, the result of a spike wound suffered in the Princeton mile, Glenn handed out liberal allotments to the opposition and won by a yard from Allen Hillman of Bayside High School.

Many were of the opinion that Cunningham would lower Sydney Wooderson's 2:59.5 world record, made recently. Glenn himself, however, made no pretense of running for the mark, and after an 0:58.1 quarter and two-minute half, he finished in 3:01. Hillman, allowed 125 yards, gave Cunningham a tussle and the great miler did not catch him until just before the tape. This event did not count in the point score.

RUFFING GETS 11TH TRIUMPH, BEATING BROWNS

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 26—Being a mere matter of almost thirty games off the pace, the Browns faced the Yankees at the Stadium yesterday with light hearts and no delusions of grandeur, so they turned in a workmanlike job, only to meet the fate that the Bronx Bombers have dealt out indiscriminately to all rivals this season.

Red Ruffing was on the hill for the home forces, an item that might make stronger men than the Brownies pause and consider. But Big Red had to work diligently indeed to squeeze through with a 2-to-1 victory before a gathering of 11,382, a result that put the Browns twenty-nine and one-half games behind the league-leading Yanks.

It was a seven hitter that Ruffing unfurled for his eleventh triumph of a campaign that has seen him yield only one decision. But Bob Harris, on the hill for St. Louis, pitched beautifully himself before going down under the timely blows of the Bombers. The 23-year-old right-hander allowed only eight safeties, but three of them were bunched for all the Yankee rallies as they gained their fifth straight.

ONE MISTAKE DECISIVE

That's the trouble with pitching against the Yankees. One mistake is generally fatal. Harris's came in the third inning and the game slipped from his grasp right then and there. At that, he might have wriggled clear had not some superlative fielding by Marse Joe McCarthy's hands and some magnificent tossing by Ruffing saved the Bombers from two danger spots.

The first of these was in the second frame, when the Browns came through with their single counter. Ruffing, who had not yet settled down, walked Joe Gallagher and Harlond Clift to open the frame. Joe Glenn sacrificed both along and Big Red was in trouble.

Johnny Berardino popped to short left as the base runners tagged up. However, Frankie Crosetti lost the ball in the sun and it fell through his glove for a single, Gallagher scoring. Flash Gordon made a gorgeous stop on Don Heffner's grounder but failed to retire the batter and the bases were full with only one out.

DOUBLE PLAY ENDS RALLY

It was then that the Yankees delivered in grand style. Harris slashed a ball over second but Gordon came up with it, tossed to Crosetti and it was a double play.

The Brownies led, 1—0, when Ruffing opened the third with a single to center. Crosetti flied out but Red Robert Rolfe got a freak hit when his bounder hopped over Berardino's head. Tommy Henrich lined to right to send Big Red home and Little Red to third. From that station Rolfe scored on Joe DiMaggio's sacrifice fly to center. And that was that.

Ruffing went along smoothly until the eighth. With one out, he walked Billy Sullivan and George McQuinn lashed a drive to right. Things were prety tense when Gallagher stepped up to the plate. The ex-Yankee had doubled on each of his previous trips and looked like a mighty bad man in such a situation.

But Ruffing hitched his trousers and fanned Manhattan Joe on three pitched balls. After that, however, he eased up silghtly and walked Clift to fill the bases. Joe Glenn finally supplied the last out of the inning by popping weakly to Gordon.

HADLEY AND RUSSO TO PITCH

It will be a double-header with the Brownies today. Bump Hadley is scheduled to pitch the first game and young Marius Russo, the recent Newark farmhand and Long Island University ace, is to make his first big league start in the nightcap. A delegation from Ozone Park will be at hand to cheer him on. First game, 2 P. M.

Crosetti singled in the first but so anemic is the Crosetti battiug average these days that Frankie must have stopped to figure out how many extra points he picked up with that hit. While he was engaged in his arithmetic, Harris pegged to McQuinn at first and picked him off the bag.

McQuinn, by the way, was lucky he was able to finish the game. Henrich belted a bullet drive that struck him on the right kneecap, toppling the first baseman in agony to the turf. McQuinn crawled after the ball and flicked to Harris for the put-out, but it was quite a few minutes before he could hobbie back into position.

YANKEE FIELDING GEMS

Henrich provided one fielding gem when he crashed into the right field boxes to rob Heffner of a home run in the seventh. Babe Dahlgren pulled another bit of larceny on Sullivan with a glove hand pick-up in the first.

Speaking of Babe: George Herman Ruth was in a box back of the Yankee dugout, taking a day off from his golf. Believe it or not the Babe was not discovered by the crowd.

Another veteran on hand was Moose McCormick, the old Giant pinch hitter and now dean of the baseball school at the World's Fair. The Moose watched the Browns for a few minutes and suddenly realized that this was the first time in his life he ever had seen them play.

This was Harris's first start for St. Louis since he was traded from Detroit this season. His record now is one victory and two defeats, but he really looked better than that.

Hiroshi Negami Reported Very Much Alive

Paymaster Sub-Lieutenant Hiroshi Negami, one of Japan's best swimmers a few years ago, who was recently reported killed on the Outer Mongolian-Manchoukuo border, is very much alive, according to a telegram received by Wednesday.

Chief Accountant Kawamura, of the Tokyo Denki K.K., where Negami was employed prior to his being called to the colors, from Sub-Lieutenant Abe, a comrade of Negami.

Mr. Kawamura told the press as follows:

"As we received the sad news of his death, we were trying to get details, when unexpectedly we received the news that he is alive. It's like a dream."

A similar telegram was received by Sub-Lieutenant Negami's father who is now living at Yoichi Town, Hokkaido.

MISS MINOPRIO USES ONLY ONE CLUB IN GOLF

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—The person least affected by the new limitation of golf clubs in Britain to 14 per player per round must surely be Miss G. D. Minoprio, well-known participant in in women's big-time tournaments here. For, as far as this dashing young lady is concerned, you could cut the permissible number of weapons down to two and still leave her with one more than she needs. Because she uses only one club, anyway. It is a cleek, and in the course of a round it is liable to be put to the most un-cleek-like work, from long drives and short putts to blasting operations in the sandtraps.

I would not have you think from this that Miss Minoprio takes her golf with undue levity. Far from it. As a matter of fact, she spent two whole months practicing on the links of the Royal Portrush Golf Club prior to this year's British Open Championship for Women, there. So it seemed rather pathetic that she should be called upon to use her local knowledge over only 13 holes while being defeated, 7 and 5, by Peggy Edwards' champion of Lancashire.

NO SERIOUS HOPE

Miss Minoprio strode very confidently into action, swinging her solitary club and wearing what I saw described subsequently in a fashion note as her, "stream-lined" trousers. But, of course, she really did not have a serious hope of victory, battling with just a cleek against a thoroughly competent opponent equipped for all emergencies. It is only because this original young lady is potentially a very good golfer indeed that she makes any sort of a show under the handicap that she imposes so quaintly upon her game. Against Miss Edwards she payed some excellent shots—one specially notable one was a prodigious putt at the 8th hole for a 2—but you do not have to think very deeply to realize that she is asking overmuch of her cleek and her capability when she applies both to shots that would make Henry Cotton or Bobby Locke resort to a sand-iron.

Coupling the name of Locke and Cotton in this way, I do only what a great number of people have been doing enthusiastically in their conversation ever since the talk of a challenge match between this pair of famed professionals was first mooted some while ago. Locke, spectacular young champion from South Africa, expressed himself immediately as in favor of such a meeting. But Cotton, who is several other things, including a shrewd business man, as well as Britain's No. 1 golf professional, took a different view. He reasoned that since he served a long and hard apprenticeship in competition in order to reach the top of the tree, he would be unbusinesslike to take the chance of a spectacular tumble in public prestige for the sake of attempting to prove himself better than a youngster with everything to gain and nothing to lose.

GAINING PLENTY

Locke, I may say, is gaining plenty. Experience, renown, money, skill. A fact illustrated very strikingly when he won his recent challenge match with Reginald Whitcombe, winner of the British Open Championship at Sandwich last season.

This contest at Coombe Hill saw a golf match televised for the first time. Or rather the viewers did. And what they saw was decidedly impressive. The match, as you may recollect, was over 72 holes for £500 a side, and Locke's margin of victory was the unexpectedly large one of 6 and 5. Which was the result of a sort of landslide against Whitcombe that seemed to bear no explicable relationship to the golf he had played before it occurred or the golf that he played afterwards.

Whitcombe was 1 hole down at the end of the first 36, and he transformed that deficit into a lead of 1 up at the turn on the third time round the course. Then, to the amazement of one and all, he lost 7 of the 9 homeward holes, and consequently started the last eighteen five to the bad. With the match, to all intents and purposes, in the bag, Locke's golf in the last stage was justifiably confident and carefree, and he was a one-putt man on 7 of the 13 greens visited on the afternoon of the second day.

Directly after the battle ended there was talk of a return match. But, when these lines were written, the plans for such a thing seemed to have fallen through. And conversation focussed on the discussion of Locke versus Cotton prospects. Cotton is understood to be willing to consider such a match if Locke finishes higher than he (Cotton) does in the British "Open" at St. Andrews, starting July 3. Which adds additional interest to a tournament that, with so many fine golfers from abroad named on the list of entrants, is an extremely interesting proposition anyway.

YALE CAPTURES U.S. COLLEGIATE POLO CROWN

By KINGSLEY CHILDS

N.Y. Times

BEDMINSTER, N. J., July 17—Four Yale poloists impressively avenged last year's setback in the national intercollegiate outdoor championship final by dethroning Harvard, 12 to 5, on Schley Field this afternoon.

The Elis galloped to the title by unleashing a strong second-half scoring spurt after the teams had battled to a 4-all standstill through the first three stanzas.

In gaining its first leg on the Gerry Trophy, emblematic of the laurels, Yale exhibited better team work and crisper hitting. For the most part there was little to choose among the mounts, but the aggressive blue-shirted riders were constantly carrying the attack to their opponents.

WINNERS' ATTACK PERSISTENT

Harvard was trying valiantly right up to the final gong, but could do little in the second half in face of the persistent Eli offense. The victors were hitting hard and well, while giving the defending champions little opportunity to hit their stride.

Individual scoring honors went to Alan L. Corey Jr., who banged in five Yale tallies. His team-mate, Billy Chisholm, followed with four. These two forwards—Chisholm at the front berth and Corey at the No. 2 post—were shining lights throughout.

Nevertheless, Yale's victory was largely a team affair, for C. Mott Woolley Jr. and Coolister (Cody) Johnson, filling the No. 3 and back positions, were valuable cogs. Woolley went scoreless, an unusual experience for him, but he passed the ball ahead frequently to set up goals. Johnson handled the defense assignment capably and registered three markers.

HARVARD AHEAD AT START

From the manner in which Harvard started it appeared that a surprise was in the making. The Crimson was away to a 2-1 lead in the opening period, Jack Lewis counting twice in the early minutes. Sandwiched between his shots was a beautiful sixty-yard angle smash by Johnson for Yale's initial marker.

It was a different story, however, in the second stanza. Yale had a distinct advantage and moved out in front at 3-2 when Chisholm scored twice. He picked up a neat backhand pass from Corey for his first tally and later capitalized on a fine two-hit run.

Free hits kept Harvard running in the third after the score had mounted to 4-2 when Corey tapped through a set-up by Wooley. Midway in the period Gaylord Dillingham had five free shots in a row and made good on the fifth for Harvard's third marker. A few moments later he walloped in another sixty-yard drive following a penalty, to deadlock matters at 4-all.

JOHNSON BEGINS RALLY

Coming out for the second half, Yale began clicking more efficiently than in earlier stages and the Blue quickly obtained a commanding lead. Johnson scored from thirty yards out to commence this spurt. Corey banged through a short near-side thrust, and Chisholm succeeded on a long solo dash. The count thus stood at 7 to 4 as the fifth stanza opened.

A goal from scrimmage by Gaylord Dillingham was registered between tallies by Chisholm and Corey in the fifth. Then Yale finished up with another three-point spree in the sixth, Corey recording two markers and Johnson one.

All four of the Yale riders saw action in the final last season, when Harvard prevailed on the same field to the tune of 7 to 1. On that occasion, however, Johnson played No. 2, Corey was No. 3 and Wooley back.

The defeat ruined Harvard's hopes of capturing the trophy, at least for another year. The Crimson entered the fray needing only one more leg to retire the prize, having triumphed in 1936 as well as last season. Army, the 1937 victor, is the only other squad holding a leg on the Gerry Trophy, which was placed in competition in 1936 for the first time.

After the game the trophy presentation was made by the Duchess of Roxburghe, who flew by plane from Long Island.

STAR WILL RETURN

Both teams expect to have two of their players available again next season. Chisholm and Corey are slated to return to Yale. Lewis and Gaylord Dillingham have another year at Harvard.

Late in the sixth period Bennett Forbes drove the ball down close to his own goal before he realized he was heading the wrong way. Chisholm was in a good position to score, but, preferring not to take advantage of the Harvard man's mistake, the Yale No. 1 batted the ball over close to the sideboards.

The line-up:

YALE (12)
1—W. H. Chisholm
2—A. L. Corey Jr.
3—C. M. Woolley Jr.
Back—Collister Johnson

HARVARD (5)
1—J. H. Lewis
2—R. B. Forbes
3—H. G. Dillingham
Back—B. F. Dillingham

SCORE BY PERIOD

Yale	1	2	1	3	2	3	—12
Harvard	2	0	2	0	1	0	— 5

Goals—Yale: Chisholm 4, Corey 5, Johnson 3. Harvard: Lewis 2, H. G. Dillingham 3.

ANOTHER ONE FOR THE BROWN BOMBER

The above soundphoto, transmitted from New York to San Francisco, shows Tony Galento on the floor in the second round of his fight with Joe Louis on the night of June 28 at Yankee Stadium. Until he ran into one of Joe's rights, Tony had never been knocked down in the ring. Observe the puzzled expression on his face. Louis won by a technical knockout in the fourth round.

JOE LOUIS HAS 9 POSSIBLE CHALLENGERS

NEW YORK—Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion, has no less than nine possible challengers to face according to the latest survey of the National Boxing Association. They are: Bob Pastor, Lou Nova, Max Baer, Tommy Farr, Red Burman, Willie Reddish, Roscoe Toles, Johnny Paychek and Tom Kenneally.

It is the first time that England's outstanding leather-pusher, Farr, is included as a possible champion-to-be in the Association's honor list, which is being released every three months and an object of keen interest to all first-rank fighters who see their chances fluctuate according to the official ratings of America's prize-fighting brain-trust.

On the previous list, issued by the end of March last, Nova was rating second and Pastor third, while the honor of being Joe Louis' first challenger was bestowed upon Galento.

Honorary mention is made in the June issue of Arturo Godoy, Chilean hope and Gunnar Barlund, the pride of Finland.

In the light-heavy category, the N.B.A. proclaim that they will recognize as holder of the world crown the best man of the coming contest between Melio Bettina and the victor of elmination bouts to be staged between Gus Lesnevitch, David Clark, Len Harvey, Jack McAvoy, Billy Conn and Don Richards, in view of the fact that the throne is now vacant.

Solly Krieger is officially recognized as middleweight champ. His challengers are Apostoli, Al. Hostak and Ceferino Garcia.

In the welterweight category, while the crown rests on Armstrong's semibald head, the challengers are Jimmy Letto, Charley Burley, Fritzie Zivic and Pedro Montanez, of Porto-Rico. Honorary mention is made of Marcel Cerdan, of France, and Kid Azteca, who hails from Mexico, as the name implies.

Lightweights: Champion: Armstrong. Challengers: Lou Ambers, Sammy Angott and Davey Day. Honorary mention: Yucatan Kid, another Aztec hope.

Featherweight: Champion: Joe Archibald. Challengers: Petey Scalzo, Leo Rodak, Jackie Wilson, Joey Silva, Simon Chavez (the bright boy of Venezuela).

Bantamweight: Champion: Escobar (Porto-Rico). Challenger: Georgie Page, Johnny Organ, Lou Salica, Aurel Toma (Rumania).

The flyweight title has no holder at the present moment, and keen competition is expected between such first-class rough-house specialists as Little Dado, Jackie Jurich, Tony Bostock and Pierre Louis, France's latest. Another French fighter, Angelman, gets an honorary mention.

Kobe Wins Cage Title

Kobe won the national basketball title for higher commercial schools by defeating Takamatsu, 46 to 33, in the finals Thursday afternoon at the National Gymnasium at Hitotsubashi, Kanda. The score at half time was 22-all.

Kanto Swim Meet To Be Held Aug. 4

This year's Kanto swimming championships, which will serve as tryouts for the national championships as well as for the team to be sent to the 1940 Olympic Games at Helsinki, will be held at the Meiji Shrine pool at 1 p.m. August 4. Entries will be open up to July 27.

Water polo and diving will be held at 1 p.m. The races will start at 5:30 p.m.

The races for men include: freestyle—100, 200, 400 and 1,500 meters; backstroke: 100 meters; breaststroke—200 meters.

The races for women include: freestyle—100, 200 and 400 meters; backstroke—50 and 100 meters; breaststroke—100 and 200 meters.

Those placing within the first six places will be eligible to enter the national championships.

Drawing Made For Tennis Matches With Thai Team

The exhibition matches between the Thai tennis players and local stars will be played Saturday and Sunday at the Denyen courts according to Davis Cup arrangements, four singles and one doubles. Play will start on Saturday at 2 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Sunday.

The matches have been announced as follows:

SATURDAY

Special Women's singles: Miss Sanguan Sujaritkul of Thailand versus Miss Junko Kamo, national women's champion.

Sano Varnangkul versus Yoshito Tsuruta; Muang Roeng Vasantasingh versus Fumiteru Nakano.

SUNDAY

Doubles: San Varnangkul and Kasom Chatikavanij versus Nakano and Tsuruta.

Special mixed doubles: Sano Varnangkul and Miss Sanugan Sujaritkul versus Miki and Mrs. Oura.

Muang Roeng Vasantasingh versus Tsuruta; Sano Varnangkul versus Nakano.

The visiting Thai players lost all matches in their debut this week in the Kansai. They are here on a goodwill mission.

Arriving at Tokyo Station by the Kamome express at 5:20 p.m. Thursday, they registered immediately at the Sano Hotel.

MARTIN STILL IS SPARKPLUG OF CARDINALS

By GENE ROGUSKI

ST. LOUIS—It was in early October, 1931, that a young man from Oklahoma almost single-handedly led the St. Louis Cardinals to a thrilling victory over the powerful Philadelphia Athletics in the world series of that season.

He was John Leonard (Pepper) Martin, center fielder of the Cardinals. Martin batted .500 in that series and "stole the socks" of the Athletic catcher Mickey Cochrane. Pepper stole five bases all of which played a major part in bring victory to the Cardinals in the seven-game series.

Martin is still playing with the Cardinals and with the spirit of a rookie. In this his eleventh season with the club, Martin's sparkling, all-around play is one of the reasons the Cardinals are in the first division of the National League.

Though he is 35-year-old, Martin doesn't act it on the ball field. He still is plenty fast and his bat carries plenty of dynamite. Opposing players get the jitters when Martin steps up to the plate. An infielder scooping a ground ball from Pepper's bat knows he must make a hurried throw to first base if he wants to retire Pepper. When Martin hits safely to the outfield, the fielder has got to be on his toes or Pepper will try for an extra base.

Martin came to the Cardinals in 1928 from Houston in the Texas League. He was sent back to Houston in 1929. The next year he rejoined the Cardinals, but later was optioned to Rochester. In 1931 he was back with the Cardinals and has remained with them ever since.

The highlights of Pepper's major league career have been many, the outstanding of which were the 1931 and 1934 world series in which the Cardinals defeated the Athletics and the Detroit Tigers, respectively. Martin went wild in the 1931 series, batting .500 and stealing five bases. He also starred in the 1934 series, batting .355. His life-time major league batting average is .297.

Throughout his career with the Cardinals—whether the team was in first or last place—Martin has always tried to win. And, that's the way he is finishing one of the most spectacular and colorful careers baseball has ever known.

YACHT CONTENDER WINS CALIFORNIA-HAWAII RACE

Domei Tsushin

HONOLULU, July 18—Galloping like a polo pony, Richard Lyon's crack 106-foot yawl the Contender, with a brisk northeast trade wind abaft, pranced across the Diamond Head finish line at 8:20 o'clock tonight as first arrival in the annual transpacific yacht race to Honolulu from Treasure Island, San Francisco.

Powerful army searchlights and headlights from hundreds of automobiles trained on the bay from Diamond Head first made out the graceful form of the yacht as she slid into goal under full canvas and all hands on deck, waving and shouting.

The 26 starters had left Treasure Island on July 4 as part of the Independence Day celebrations at San Francisco's World Fair. The Contender's crew of 16, all "monkey-wrench navigators," discovered definitely that they were in the lead when a dense fog lifted early this morning in mid-ocean.

The Blitzen, owned by Richard J. Reynolds, of New York, finished second in a close last-minute struggle with the Fandango, which came bearing down behind with a ripped spinnaker and crossed the line 51 seconds later.

Edwin Pauley, of Los Angeles, is proprietor of the Fandango, which gave a good account of itself throughout the race. He lost second place on elapsed time probably when a sudden squall tore her spinnaker boom barely an hour before the finish. The Blitzen also had trouble with her spinnaker.

TITLE RETAINED BY MISS RAINS IN A.A.U. SWIM

By L. DE B. HANDLEY

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, June 25—An enthusiastic crowd estimated to number more than seven thousand persons yesterday saw fourteen-year-old Miss Helen Rains, of the Women's Swimming Association, national 220-yard breast-stroke champion, successfully defend her Metropolitan A.A.U. senior 320-yard medley title, and another W.S.A. star, Miss Lorraine Fischer, capture the national junior 110-yard breast-stroke crown at a carnival in the fifty-five-yard Manhattan Beach pool.

Miss Rains scored an overwhelming victory in the medley event, which consists of consecutive 110-yard stretches with breast, back and crawl strokes. Gaining a commanding lead in the breast-stroke leg, the versatile little ace held it in the dorsal swim, then drew farther away, winning by nearly fifty yards in 4:40.2. Miss Jeanne Laupheimer, of the St. George Dragon Club, national 220-yard back-stroke champion, was second in 5:12, eight yards ahead of Miss Ferne Bramhall of the Shelton Dolphins, the only other contender.

Miss Fischer also set the pace throughout in the breast stroke test and won by four yards in 1:33. Her fourteen-year-old clubmates, Miss Harriet Tayler and Miss Rozanne Hamilton, surprised by earning the places in the order named, less than a yard apart. Miss Evelyn Spamer, of the Dragon Club, followed three yards back and was fourth. Six started. Miss Mildred O'Donnell, of the Women's S.A., scored in a 220-yard free-style handicap, being timed in 2:45 and beating by one yard Miss Peggy Malone, of the Dragon, who had a fifteen second start on her.

Miss Gloria Callen, of the W.S.A., national long-distance champion, made the fastest actual time in a 165-yard back-stroke handicap, returning 2:10.5 in the heats. But she failed to figure in the final. Miss Erna Stueve, her teammate, allotted fifteen seconds won by five yards in 2:22.4.

The Summaries:

330-Yard individual medley (Metropolitan A. A. U. senior championship)—Won by Miss Helene Rains, Women's S. A.; Miss Jeanne Laupheimer, St. George Dragon Club, second; Miss Ferne Bramhall, Shelton Dolphins, third; no fourth. Time, 4:40.2.

110-yard breast stroke (National A. A. U. junior championship)—Won by Miss Lorraine Fischer, Women's S. A.; Miss Harriet Tayler, Women's S. A., second; Miss Rozanne Hamilton, Women's S. A., third; Miss Evelyn Spamer, St. George Dragon Club, fourth. Time, 1:33.

220-yard free style, handicap—Won by Miss Mildred O'Donnell, Women's S. A. (6 secs.); Miss Peggy Malone, St. George Dragon Club (21 secs.), second; Miss Ruth Stevenson, Bayville A. C. (15 secs.), third. Time, 2:45.

165-yard back stroke, handicap—Won by Miss Erna Stueve, Women's S. A. (15 secs.); Miss Jean Wesolowski, St. George Dragon Club (13 secs.), second; Miss Constance Lang, Women's S. A. (11 secs.); third. Time, 2:22.4.

110-yard free style, girls under twelve, handicap—Won by Miss Peggy Mueller, Women's S. A. (17 secs.); Miss Florence Schmidt, Women's S. A. (5 secs.), second; Miss Barbara Yodice, Women's S. A. (scratch), third. Time, 1:50.2.

Japanese Track and Field Team Arrives at Berlin

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 20—Twelve members of the Japanese track and field team led by captain Kamikichi Oshima arrived here by train from Italy to participate in sports carnivals to be held in Berlin and Stuttgart on July 28 and 29 respectively.

The Japanese team was greeted at the station by an enthusiastic crowd of local Japanese residents and leaders of German sport organizations.

Captain Oshima, in behalf of his team, thanked the German reception committee and expressed hope that the forthcoming competitions may contribute further to strengthen bonds of friendship between the two countries.

HIS PLAYING DAYS ARE OVER

NEW YORK—Lou Gehrig, "iron horse" of the New York Yankees, is shown (left) with Yankee manager Joe McCarthy in New York recently after the findings of physicians at the Mayo Clinic who had examined Gehrig were made known. Gehrig will be "unable to continue active participation as a baseball player," runs part of the report, which states that the man who played more consecutive games of baseball than any other man in history is suffering from amyotrophic lateral solerosis, a mild form of infantile paralysis.

LOU GEHRIG'S CAREER WAS ONE OF THE MOST AMAZING IN BASEBALL

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, June 22—Lou Gehrig, the robust Iron Horse whose baseball endurance record of 2,130 consecutive games may never be broken, is suffering from a mild attack of infantile paralysis, it was disclosed yesterday upon the return of the Yankee captain from a week long examination at the Mayo Clinic.

This shocking news was revealed by President Edward Grant Barrow of the Yankees just before yesterday's game at the Stadium. As a result, the spectacular career of the big first baseman is at an end.

It was on May 2 of this year that Gehrig, aware that his continued presence in the line-up was a detriment to the team, voluntarily withdrew to complete his unbroken string at 2,130 games. Last year he had started to slip and this season his downhill descent was alarming. When he quit he was batting only .143.

TEXT OF THE REPORT

With his health worrying him he visited the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., for a thorough examination. Tuesday night he returned to New York by airplane and on his arrival at the Stadium yesterady presented Mr. Barrow with the following report from the Mayo Clinic:

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that Mr. Lou Gehrig has been under examination at the Mayo Clinic from June 13 to June 19, 1939, inclusive.

After a careful and complete examination, it was found that he is suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. This type illness involves the motor pathways and cells of the central nervous system and in lay terms is known as a form of chronic poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis).

The nature of this trouble makes it such that Mr. Gehrig will be unable to continue his active participation as a baseball player inasmuch as it is advisable that he conserve his muscular energy. He could, however, continue in some executive capacity.

(Signed) H. C. HABEIN, M. D.

BARROW RECEIVES DATA

Along with this formal statement Gehrig had with him a complete set of charts, X-rays and all manner of detailed reports. He presented them to President Barrow and the two, along with Manager Joe McCarthy, were closeted for about ten minutes.

Then Barrow summoned the baseball writers. Holding the statement in his hand he said:

"Gentlemen, we have bad news. Gehrig has infantile paralysis."

The writers stared at him in disbelief. It seemed inconceivable that the broad-shouldered iron man could be laid low in such fashion.

As for Gehrig, he merely grinned. "I guess I have to accept the bitter with the sweet," he said. "If this is my finish I'll take it."

Neither he nor Barrow could venture to guess what Gehrig's future would be. "We'll keep him on the active player list at full salary for this year at least," declared Barrow. That full salary, by the way, is said to be $35,000.

Columbia Lou said that he had been given a list of doctors in every city in the American League circuit where he could go for treatments. But he had not the faintest idea of what those treatments would be.

FAILS TO SOLVE MYSTERY

Nor could he supply any solution to the mystery of when or where he had contracted the disease. Whether or not he ever would recover was beyond his ken as well. Perhaps in a few years, he seemed to think, he might shake loose from the grip of the infantile paralysis, but since he became 36 years old on Monday that would definitely place him beyond the pale of active playing days.

When Gehrig walked into the Yankee dressing room he found his team-mates waiting for him uneasily. As the door opened some one started to cheer and then the rafters rocked with the acclaim he received from his fellows. They wanted to show him that they still were with him to the man.

The big captain dressed and sat on the bench with his fellow Yankees clustered around him as he described all the tests he had had out at the Mayo Clinic, telling his story with a ready laugh and ever-present grin. They tried to look unconcerned and as if nothing had happened. It was a brave attempt, but it failed. Bill Dickey, Gehrig's room-mate, sat on the steps, his chin on a bat, staring morosely at Lou and never saying a word.

When he stepped up to the plate before the game to hand the batting order to the umpires in his role as captain, the crowd gave Lou a rousing cheer, most of the fans in total ignorance of what had happened.

But Lou Gehrig, the player, has come to the end of the trail, thus ending one of the most amazing careers in baseball.

PLAYED AT COMMERCE HIGH

That career began more than a score of years ago with the High School of Commerce in New York City. Then he pitched, played the outfield and first base for Columbia. The Yankees signed him in 1923 but he saw service in only thirteen games before being shipped to Hartford in the Eastern League, where he batted .304. A year later it was the same process—ten games with the Yankees and the rest of the season with Hartford. That time, however, he hit .369.

In 1925 the Yanks held onto their prize. Wally Pipp was the regular first baseman, but on June 1 Gehrig entered the line-up as a pinch hitter. He singled, and Miller Huggins decided to gamble on the strapping youngster the next day. He gave him a try at first base, and Gehrig stayed there without interruption until May 2 last.

During that time he compiled all sorts of records. In 1925 he hit under .300, and also in 1938, his last full season, he was under that mark. But in between his averages read .313, .373, .374, .300, .379, .341, .349, .334, .363, .329, .354 and .351. His lifetime average is .350. He was in seven world series for a lifetime series average of .361, twice batting over .500.

No accurate picture can be given of his earnings in his fifteen seasons with the Yankees, but the general impression is that he has received $361,500. Together with his cuts of the world series his total income has been around $400,000.

Last season the iron man began to fade. His reflexes were not as sharp as they had been and his hitting fell off. That was strange, because ball players rarely lose their batting eyes with advancing years. It is generally their legs that go first.

In training camp at St. Petersburg last Spring Gehrig seemed to be over the hill. His drives lacked power and he slumped so seriously in fielding that he was covering no territory at all. When he made only four hits in the first eight games this year Columbia Lou seemed to feel that he should quit.

He played against the Washington Senators on April 30, but when the Yankees resumed their schedule at Briggs Stadium in Detroit on May 2 Captain Gehrig handed to the umpire a line-up that did not have Player Gehrig on it for the first time in fifteen years. The clever-fielding Babe Dahlgren took his place and has been at it ever since.

A week ago Monday the Bronx Bombers engaged in an exhibition game with their farm team at Kansas City. Gehrig played three innings, but did nothing to convince himself that he was ready to return.

LOU'S BRAVERY DISCLOSED

ROCHESTER, Minn., June 21—Lou Gehrig, baseball's Iron Man, showed he had iron in his make-up when Mayo Clinic physicians told him he had chronic poliomyelitis and could never again play baseball, it was disclosed today.

Discovery that he could not return to the Yankee line-up was made several days ago. Neither physicians nor Gehrig would announce the findings here, the Yankee slugger preferring to tell club officials first.

During a series of tests and examinations physicians ascertained more and more of Gehrig's condition. Announcement of the findings was not made to Gehrig abruptly. His knowledge of his complaint came about gradually.

Gehrig bravely received the news, merely saying:

"I suspected something was wrong." He recalized, he said, that he was slowing up and seemed not greatly shocked.

The former Yankee slugger was cheerful throughout further examinations.

Monday he was a guest at an informal birthday party, and at no time did he show any evidence that he had heard the verdict. One of his last acts at the airport yesterday before leaving was to autograph a 10-cent baseball for a small boy.

Gehrig told clinic representatives he is prepared to adjust himself to his new condition in life.

PACIFIC COAST STARS DEFEAT BIG 10 TEAM

BERKELEY, Calif., June 21—Pacific Coast track and field athletes demonstrated their superiority over Big Ten rivals late today by winning a 94 1-3-to-36 2-3 victory from the Middle Western stars in the third annual dual meet between picked teams of two big conferences.

Held on the longest day of the year, the first major twilight meet ever held in the Far West attracted 12,000 fans.

They saw a full-sized dual competition run off in the probably record time of 1 hour 25 minutes. The Coast athletes, rounded up from eight of the ten Conference schools, took thirteen first places in the fifteen events.

The Westerners also scored one clean sweep, taking every place in the 100-yard dash.

Times and distances were average mostly, although the 880, mile and two-mile runs produced outstanding speed.

Bill Dale, Washington State College, headed the field in the half-mile in 1:51.5 and Louis Zamperini, Southern California, came through with a winning mile of 4:19.9. In the long race Ralph Schewartzkopf, captain-elect of the University of Michigan team, ran away from the rest in 9:12.8.

The Coast mile relay quartet edged out the Big Ten boys, according to official ruling, in the closest race of the meet. Motion pictures were to be studied later to confirm the decision. The time was 3:12.8.

The 440-yard relay was called no contest when Myron Piker of Northwestern pulled a leg muscle while running the first lap and was forced to stop. The Coast team finished the event but it was not counted in the point total.

Clyde Jeffery of Stanford was the individual high-point winner, taking the 100 and 220 yard dashes for 10 tallies. He was clocked in 0:9.9 and 0:21.1, respectively.

Bill Watson, Negro star of Michigan, was second high point-getter with 9. He took second places in the discus, shot-put and broad jump.

The Big Ten squad won only the two-mile run and the 220-yard low hurdles, in which Roy Cochran of Indiana breasted the tape ahead of Earl Vickery of Southern California in 23.3 seconds.

Hawaiian-Born Japanese Girl Sets Swim Mark

Domei Tsushin

HONOLULU, July 19—Miss Fujiko Katsutani, stellar Hawaiian-born Japanese swimmer, today hung up a new American record for the women's 220-yard breaststroke event, when she negotiated the course in 3 minutes 13 seconds at a meet held at the Punahou pool.

ENGLAND BEATS WEST INDIES IN FIRST TEST MATCH BY 8 WICKETS

The Times, London

LONDON, June 23—England beat the West Indies in the first Test Match at Lord's yesterday by eight wickets, but with only half an hour to spare. If ever a case were required to be made for the three-day Test Match in preference to more prolonged exhibitions this was an outstanding example. England no doubt were the better side; they held the advantage throughout the game; yet there was a time yesterday when the West Indies fought back so well that it seemed that they were likely to deprive England of sufficient time in which to win the game.

Had they succeeded it would have been a drawn game, and many people would have talked of the futility of a game which has no definite result, but for all that it would have been a great achievement. As it was, three remarkable catches meant three quick wickets, and England in the end had all the sunny evening to spare. The day was made historic by G. Headley, who followed his century in the first innings with yet another in the second, a feat which has been accomplished seldom before in a representative match. He is the first to have done so in a Test Match at Lord's. Headley has long established himself as one of the three best batsmen now living; yesterday he did all that a man could do to make good bowling look easy, but in fact that bowling was always just a little too good for the other man.

A WISE DECISION

There was a buzz of argument in the morning as to whether W. Hammond should declare England's innings closed with a lead of 127 runs or whether it would be better to gain some quick runs, with Hardstaff still there, and attempt to force an innings victory. Hammond decided to send the West Indies in again at once, even if it did mean that he might lose some wickets in the evening in a rush to score the necessary runs in the fourth innings. Events proved that he was wise, but some of these West Indies batsmen were very stubborn, and it wanted all the luck of the game to be rid of them.

The wicket was still good, fast and true, in the morning when the West Indies started their innings. Bowes bowled an over from the Pavilion end, and when Copson came on at the other end in his first over he had J. Stollmeyer caught in the gully off an unpleasantly rising ball winch flew quickly off the bat into the air. Copson is economic in his run, but he makes great pace in his delivery, and yesterday he made the ball fly off the pitch. Headley was not impressed by his array of slips, nor by the three short legs, for he at once cut him superbly, drove him to long on, and then made yet another late cut which whizzed past Hammond's feet at second slip. R. S. Grant entered into the argument by forcing a ball from Copson with a cross-batted blow straight to the sight screen, but he was missed at short slip when Wright, who yesterday seemed to be bowling slower, came on with the score at 41. It was only a temporary release, however, for soon afterwards Bowes unloosed a ball of perfect length, a little faster than usual, which came down the hill and flattened Grant's off-stump.

CLEAN FIELDING

Headley's answer to this was to attack Wright, while Verity at the other end bowled to two short slips with the suggestion that the wicket would take spin if he could persuade it to do so. Actually he bowled very straight, but he succeeded in dragging Headley out occasionally with some deception of flight. Bowes, who was taking his time over his business and not bursting himself in an exertion for pace, bowled one splendid over to Sealy, who, in the next over, jumped in the air and thrashed the ball away to the off. The runs were hard to find, for England's fielding was as clean as could be, with Paynter at coverpoint and Hardstaff, away on the leg side, particularly energetic. The returns of Gimblett, too, in this match deserve more than passing mention. Once Bowes tried his slow ball; so slow and so tamely obvious that Headley hit it into the tavern.

Compton then was given a short experimental spell, Headley cutting him square, but perhaps higher than he intended, and then making a stroke which was definitely false in the direction of third man. Bowes tested him with two yorkers in one over, which were stopped in a cloud of dust, but his worst anxiety came when he had made 44 and was utterly beaten and confused by Wright. The hundred was up when Copson came on again to have Sealy caught wide at the wicket, and K. H. Weekes was no sooner in than he put a ball from Bowes only just short of Hammond at first slip. Some say it was a catch; if so it must have been a very sharp one, or Hammond would have caught it.

TREATED WITH RESPECT

At the luncheon interval the West Indies score stood at 117 for three wickets, Headley then having made 54, and every prospect of leaving England some few runs to make before half-past 6. Bowes afterwards tried bowling round the wicket, which was of little use against Headley, who is so quick on his feet that he can play the ball which comes across the wicket and yet force it away on the on side. Wright he treated with respect until he found a ball which he considered to be short of a length, and he then thumped it away to mid-wicket, while Verity bowled a series of over which quietly met the middle of the bat and provided mid-off with some not over-anxious fielding and stooping practice.

Weekes had done well, even if he had been a shade lucky, until he was caught at the wicket, and the game, which had become almost closed once again, became very much alive, for the West Indies were then only 27 runs ahead, and there were still 3½ hours left for cricket. Constantine decided that this was the occasion to play sedately—not even Sutcliffe could have been more tolerant to bowling. Suddenly he changed his mind, his old impulse regained possession, and he swept a ball from Wright which was pitched well outside the off stump, away to the square-leg boundary. A few more eccentricities and he paid the penalty by cutting a ball off the leg stump into Hammond's hands at short slip. That was a very queer thing to do, and when J. H. Cameron played a shade too soon to be caught and bowled six wickets were down for 199 runs.

Worse was to come, for one run later Headley himself hit a ball straight to silly mid-off, and a great innings was at an end. If this match will be remembered for nothing else one will think of Headley's batting; the ease with which he could move his feet to good and threatening bowling and make Bowes and Copson look half pace.

CLEVER CATCHING

Then came the first of three catches when Bowes elegantly held his right hand out a mid-on to hold a ball, which Martindale hit hard enough to pass any fieldsman. It is in no spirit of disrespect to the fielding of Bowes that I state that it was one of the most surprising events of the match. A few more runs and then Hardstaff held another amazing catch from a hard slash low down on his boots at cover-point, and to keep the keenness alive Copson, off his own bowling, followed up down the wicket to hold a catch as near the bat as the ball had pitched.

All of which meant that England had to score 99 runs to win in 110 minutes. The start was terrific: Gimblett hit a full pitch from Martindale for 4, which he followed with a full-blooded blow over the square-leg boundary for 6. Hutton then treated himself to a hook for 4, and with Gimblett making a grand on-drive off Martindale 35 runs had been scored in 20 minutes. At that score Hutton played outside and late to a ball and was bowled, and when Gimblett, rather impertinently, tried to hit a yorker away to leg two wickets were down.

Hammond was in no mood for the loss of another wicket, although he once all but dragged a ball from Martindale on to his wicket. Paynter neglected the invitation to play the left-handed batsman's stroke into the hands of slip, but when the ball was pitched a shade shorter he lashed it square and hard to the boundary. Hammond took matters leisurely enough, with an occasional forcing stroke which makes him look to be a better batsman than anyone else in the world, while Martindale, Hylton, and Constantine bowled their hearts out in an effort to take at least one more wicket. They were denied that pleasure, but they at least knew that their bowling had been not the least distinguished feature of a splendid game.

Pirie, Wolfe and Biddulph Definitely Coming Here

Robert Pirie, Canada's leading freestyle swimmer, Paul Wolfe, one of America's best short distance stars, and Robin Biddulph, Australian middle distance luminary, are definitely coming to Japan to compete in the national championships on August 12, 13 and 14 at the Meiji Shrine pool here, according to a telegram received by the Japan Swimming Federation from Honolulu Friday.

Kiyoshi Nakama, Hawaiian-born Japanese star and considered the best in America today from 400 meters to the mile, whose visit the Federation was most anxious of, will be unable to come, it was informed.

Pirie, Wolfe and Biddulph are scheduled to sail from Honolulu on the Tatuta Maru on August 1.

Yamagishi Will Play Against Thai Team

Jiro Yamagishi, who is now a lieutenant in the Japanese Navy and is attending the paymasters' school, will play in the exhibition matches against the Thai tennis team on Sunday at the Denyen courts, it was announced by the Japan Lawn Tennis Association late Friday.

Yamagishi, one of the best players in the world, will take Fumiteru Nakano's place in the doubles and will be teamed with Yasuo Tsuruta, his erstwhile teammate at Keio University against the Thai team of Sano Varnangkul and Kasom Chatikavanji. Then in the singles, Yamagishi will take Tsuruta's place against Muang Roeng Vasantasingh.

Play will start at 3 p.m.

JAPANESE PRESS OPINION

July 23

INDEFATIGABLE FAITH

MIYAKO—Notwithstanding the fact that the Anglo-Japanese conversations appeared to be faced with an impasse on frequent occasions due to the stubborn attitude of Britain, the latter has made a sharp turn to make a wholesale concession before the Japanese demand, and has accepted the three fundamental principles set forth by the Imperial Government. This abrupt change in the British attitude has resulted apparently from the fact that Britain, in accordance with her traditional materialistic policy, has come to make an alert judgment on the difficulties in connection with the Anglo-Soviet negotiations, the calm attitude of the United States and the growing anti-British agitations in China. However, the development is due basically to the indefatigable faith of Japan which is founded on the justice of the world, to which Britain has finally come to give in.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita ably conveyed the unified public opinion in Japan against Britain, and made strenuous efforts in a most logical manner to induce Britain to revise her false knowledge and interpretation of the situation in the Far East. It must be realized anew that diplomacy based upon the moral principles can attain a victory only when it is backed by the irreproachable national faith.

While opinion prevails here that, negotiations on detail questions which are to be started from next week will progress without difficulty as long as the basic understanding has been reached, due importance must be given to the view that Japan should take caution in view of the probability that Britain will display her traditional, shrewd diplomatic methods hereafter. Utilitarianism usually gives greater importance to individual, actual questions, than to the basic problems, and Britain is liable to show greater tenacity with respect to the detail questions which are to be discussed henceforth. Moreover, there is room for doubt as to whether the British authorities in China will actually drop their hostile attitude toward Japan in line with instructions of their home government. The nation must therefore assume a watchful attitude toward the forthcoming detailed negotiations in order to realize the expected object.

It makes anyone smile with pity to hear that the favorable progress of the Tokyo conversations has dealt a grave shock to the Chungking government officials who are reported to be in consternation. They are reaping what they sow by adhering to the anti-Japanese policy, depending on what has from the beginning been unreliable, and Hades are before them. It is quite natural that officials of the Chungking government are increasingly joining the peace movement inaugurated by by Wang Ching-wei. It is perhaps the only way left for them to save themselves.

ANGLO-JAPANESE CONVERSATIONS AND 3 BASIC PRINCIPLES

HOCHI—Perhaps it is not proper to discuss about the three principles upon which an agreement was reached between Japan and Britain, but it is indisputable that the three principles alone do not cover all the general questions. It is greatly problematical whether we are justified to interprete that the understanding on the three basic principles has solved all phases of the present question.

While our competent authorities appear to be boasting in an elated manner of the outcome of the conversations, it is impossible to find in the understanding anything that would signify the restoration of the Concession. Nor is it possible to grasp even a glimpse of a careful reserve on the part of Japan to discuss later about the question relating to the restoration of the Concession. When the Anglo-Japanese conversations were actually slated, the public opinion arose like raging billows, and what was aimed at was the restoration of the concessions to China. Neglecting this principal objective, any understanding on basic questions is an unfinished thing in our eyes. The triumphant attitude of the authorities is disgusting indeed.

FATE OF THE BILL FOR SANCTION AGAINST JAPPAN

TOKYO ASAHI—The Foreign Affairs Committee of the U. S. Senate decided to postpone the discussions of the bill calling for a revision of the existing Neutrality Act until the next Congressional session in January, 1940, and a check has been given to the aggressive diplomatic policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

Subsequently, however, Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, introduced the so-called anti-Japanese economic sanction bill, in an attempt to refuse supply to Japan of arms, munitions, heavy oils, iron, steel and such other materials necessary for the execution of a war, evidently regarding Japan as a violator of the Nine Power Treaty. This action of the U. S. Senator irritated us in not inconsiderable measure, but more recent reports indicate that this bill followed the same fate as the Neutrality Act Revision bill, and has been shelved.

Whenever dealing with the bill for revision of the Neutrality Act the President and Secretary of State of the United States reiterated that unless the United States helps invaded countries and enforce economic sanctions against aggressor nations by revising the Neutrality Act, peace of the world cannot be ensured and moreover crisis would become more and more tense to drive the world to a second Great War. Viewed from the reverse side, however, it can be interpreted that the positive diplomacy of the United States has been actually spurring the European crisis. Similarly, it is extremely doubtful whether the bills for economic sanction against Japan are really for an earlier settlement of the Sino-Japanese armed hostilities for the maintenance of peace in the Far East, or for further prolongation of the China Affair.

Britain at the Tokyo Conference agreed to drop her policy of assisting the Chiang Kai-shek administration because it has realized that the biased policy of help Chiang and the anti-Japanese policy would delay the solution of the situation in East Asia and would resultantly hurt her own interests in China.

To discuss the anti-Japanese economic sanctions in the United States Congress is indeed out of date in view of the progress of the Anglo-Japanese conversations here. Moreover, the United States would be required to brand Japan as a violator of the Nine Power Treaty before it enacts the bills in question. Further, the United States would be willing to accept the judgment as a violator of the treaty of commerce and navigation with the most favored nation clause, which is considered the potential principle of the International Laws.

It is thus very natural that the bills were shelved. We firmly believe and hope that members of the United States who are known for their common sense, would refuse to approve the bills even if they are reintroduced to the Congress at its next session.

NISEI MEN AND WOMEN IN JAPAN DIFFER IN DESIRES OF MARRIAGE, SURVEY SHOWS

That the men wish to get married to Japanese girls and stay here while the gentler sex wish to return to their home countries, either the United States mainland or Hawaii, to do so with America-born Japanese is the general trend of Nisei or America-born Japanese residing here, according to a survey of 437 America-born Japanese residing in Tokyo and Yokohama conducted by nine graduates of the Keisei Women's College at Funabashi, Setagaya-ku, Tokyo.

They are the Misses Masuye Hoshi, 22, Yemiko Murayama, 21, Mitsuko Shimotsukasa, 22, Haruko Ishikawa, 22, Misono Nagata, 21, Yeiko Tajima, 22, Tsuyuko Kimura, 22, Toyoko Nakatsuka 21 and Kikuye, Yamada, 21, who, all America-born Japanese girls, have graduated from the special department of the Keisei Women's College.

Choosing the survey of Nisei residing here as the theme of their graduation examination, they started the work last Fall and completed it recently. The result of the survey was announced in the form of a round table conversation among the nine and broadcast from the JOAK station Friday afternoon.

The survey was conducted in such a way that they sent questionnaires to 500 America-born male Japanese and 600 America-born female Japanese residing in Tokyo and Yokohama. Of the number 205 men and 232 girls, totaling 437, replied, of which 22 persons were married.

The result of the survey is outlined as follows:

1. It is painful for America-born Japanese here to be treated neither as Americans nor as Japanese for the reason that they are Japanese by nature but brought up in an American atmosphere.
2. As to the purpose of their visit to this country, 250 persons of the total came here for study.
3. Although they find it easier than in their home countries to find employment, they find it extremely difficult to adapt themselves to the life mode of Japan. Especially etiquette of Japanese women is difficult for them to understand.
4. As to nationality, of the total, 239 persons have dual citizenship.
5. As to the marriage problem, almost all of America-born Japanese men wish to get married to Japanese girls born and educated here, while women desire to make a home in America and Hawaii, getting married to America-born Japanese men.

has boldly evinced hostility against Japan.

"Unless Japan peremptorily crushes Britain's hostile attitude toward Japan at this time, Japan will not be able to save China for the ultimate object of bringing prosperity in East Asia.

"Therefore, we, the Japanese residents of Nanking, hereby resolve to impeach Britain for her hostile policy against Japan, which is inimical to the future prosperity of East Asia and to drive away all British influences from the soil of China, even if we have to use force, in case Britain does not correct her mistaken policy."

The meeting also passed a resolution the substance of which says as follows:

"The Japanese residents of Nanking have held a meeting, and in accordance with the will of the meeting, it is hereby resolved that the British Far Eastern policy designed to assist Chiang Kai-shek and to put obstacles in the way of Japan's endeavors to build up a new order in East Asia for establishing permanent peace and prosperity in this part of the world shall be relentlessly dealt with."

Britain Urged

BRITISH SEE IMPROVEMENT

By SEIJI HASEGAWA
Domei Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 21—Although the Foreign Office is not yet in possession of an official report on the latest meeting at Tokyo between Ambassador Robert Craigie and Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, press dispatches telling of the prospects of a compromise have obviously occasioned satisfaction among leading officials.

The new ray of hope for a fundamental settlement of the Anglo-Japanese differences has especially brought relief to those in Britain who had been pessimistically anticipating that the Tokyo conversations would fail.

BRITISH CONCESSION SEEN

Judging from the information available thus far, Britain has contracted an important concession by recognizing that a state of war exists in the Far East justifying the Japanese "defensive" measures against British interest. Upon this premises it does not seem excessively optimistic to anticipate an early solution of the major pending problems, including the extradition of the Chinese assassins responsible for the Tientsin blockade, suppression of terrorism, British cooperation with the Federal bank notes and even eventually transference of the currency holdings in the British Concession.

Thus, a large section of British opinion apparently has swung to the belief that there will be a gradual but steady improvement in Britain's relations with Japan in connection with the Far Eastern situation.

Some reports state that high officials of the Government, including Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, are highly hopeful of the outcome of the Craigie-Arita talks. It is said the Government has instructed the British press to refrain from all statements likely to irritate the Japanese public or otherwise likely to prejudice the diplomatic meetings in Tokyo.

STEP FOR COOPERATION CITED

According to unconfirmed rumor, the Bank of England is already considering proposals for economic cooperation between Japan and Britain in the Far East. Britain's indifference toward the continued fall of Chinese currency at Shanghai is regarded by some as definite substantiation of the rumor.

PARIS PESSIMISTIC

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 21—The reported Anglo-Japanese compromise at Tokyo received prominent attention in the Paris press this morning when the majority of newspapers attributed the compromise to British Concessions and therefore were not in any jubilant mood.

The Paris-Midi linked the compromise to postponement of neutrality legislation by the American Congress, while the Paris-Soir, in a slightly more optimistic vein, pointed out that an Anglo-Japanese agreement in the Far East would tend to strengthen Britain's role in European politics.

Humanite and Ce Soir, as well as a number of other leftist papers, angrily characterized the Tokyo conversations as "the Munich in the Far East."

The semi-official Temps opened an editorial by voicing doubt whether "Japan has corrected her attitude," cited what the paper believes to have been Japan's demands and concluded by declaring:

"It would be a most promising development both for Britain and for Japan if the two countries can truly find a basis for cooperation in the Far East and to restore their relations to normal. However, continued emphasis should be attached to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's warning in the house of Commons that Britain's foreign policy cannot be dictated by a foreign Power."

Curriculums Decided For Koto Gakko

The curriculums in the new Koto Gakko (colleges) to be opened by the Education Ministry were decided last Friday.

The curriculum for students in the Bunka (literary) department includes courses in ethics, philosophy, psychology, the national language, history, geography, Chinese classics legislature, economics, mathematics, natural science, English, German or French, Japanese martial sports, military training, gymnastics and labor service.

That for students in the Rika (science) department includes courses in ethics, philosophy, psychology, the national language, Chinese classics, history, legislature, economics, physics, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, biology, draughtsmanship, English, German or French, Japanese martial sports, military training, gymnastics, and labor service.

In teaching civil law and economics, part of sociology will be inculcated on the students. They will be also made to understand the structure of the national politics and economics. The Chinese language will be taught to those who wish to learn it.

Students will be graduated in four years. Teachers will emphasize the importance of national spirit, the situation in the world and especially in the Far East, national defense and arts.

Minseito Stresses Need Of Guiding Masses

Necessity of guiding national livelihood of general masses which is greatly affected by the China Affair and of establishing social welfare facilities was emphaszed by Kinsaburo Nishimura, chairman of the Social Welfare Committee of the Minseito, at the committee meeting held at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The following were pointed out as the main points for further discussion by Mr. Nishimura.

1. Strengthening of military relief measures.
2. Measures coping with economic situations developing with the China Affair progressing.
3. Measures for promotion of national health.

After careful investigation in actual situations in urban and agrarian districts in this connection, the Minseito party is expected to formulate a concrete plan for this purposes by the middle of August.

MANY ARE THE ATTRIBUTES THAT MAKE A FIGHT CHAMPION

By RICHARD MONTAGUE

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK—They sidle toward each other under the hard lights and the murmur out of the darkness swells to a roar. They stab at each other with lefts and there is a sudden flurry of blows; then they are tangled up like a couple of wrestlers. Not quite tangled, though, for heads bob to vicious uppercuts and bodies quiver to wallops over the kidneys. Still, if you don't know much about fighters, you wonder why each of them is getting a fortune for stuff that any big husky could probably do.

Everybody in the fight game knows what a real champ has to have. His strength is the rangy strength you see in the hurdlers and javelin throwers at track and field meets. He has also the stamina of a cross-country runner, for he often hits the road for seven miles in training. His speed may be gauged from the fact that practically any good lightweight can step a hundred yards in ten flat or better. Welters, middles, light heavies and heavies are naturally somewhat slower, but all can run the average man of their weight off his feet.

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

These attributes are taken for granted in a champ. So is heart. This is the quality which kept Dempsey going after John Lester Johnson had smashed several of his ribs. It pulled Tunney up from the canvas after the famous long count in Chicago and lifted Louis from the deck in his fight with Jim Braddock. Many experts were doubtful of Louis until Braddock bopped him. Yet heart and ability to take it are usually proved at the outset of a fighter's pro career. The time-honored test is to put him in, a green kid, with a hitter. If he won't or can't get up and tear into the man who nearly knocked his head off, his career usually ends right there.

Strength, speed, stamina, heart and ability to take it begin to decline after the age of 25. Occasional freaks like Bob Fitzsimmons can bowl them over at 40, but the average pug is through ten years earlier. So add youth to the raw materials out of which champs are made. And, after that, throw in the tricks of the trade and what is known as good handling.

The tricks, official and foul, are essential, and their perfection demands years of practice. Every champ knows how to duck, bob, block and counter in one movement, slip punches or roll with them to ease the shock. He knows the intricacies of footwork. He can time his blows so that they land at the instant and the distance for maximum shocking power. He has practiced his Sunday punch—his best one—faithfully on both the light and heavy bags and on the battered mugs of many sparring partners.

In order to do these things properly he has kept himself in tip-top physical shape. He has shadow-boxed, skipped rope and run miles on the road. He has laid off booze and cigarettes. He has been careful to eat plenty of wholesome food. He has been in the feathers in time to get at least nine hours' sleep every night. As a result, he can keep moving fast for fifteen rounds or more. If you don't think that's hard, try shadow-boxing for three.

The champ knows several tricks which aren't sponsored by the rules book. He refers to them as "emergency measures." One of the most useful, when the going gets tough, is a highly effective ability to butt. He can also use thumbs, knees and elbows in the seemingly accidental ways best calculated to discourage impetuous opponents. If detected in these practices, of course, he loses the round in which they occurred. But it's worth losing a round if you can open up a guy's face by using your head, or blot out an eye with a smart bit of thumbing.

Not less important than the tricks at his command is the champ's supreme confidence in himself. This confidence is the result of a long build-up. Good handlers try to see to it that when a lad turns pro he wins his first fifteen or twenty fights. His first opponents are apt to be veterans who are on the way down. They extend the kid, but don't hurt him. And they don't win. For their consideration they receive anywhere from $25 to $60 from the kid's manager, who naturally does not tell his charge of these little transactions.

Later fights may or may not be barneys—fixed ones—depending on how much build-up is required. For build-up not only establishes confidence; it makes a fighter a good box-office attraction.

HARD TO FIX

Most champions win their titles on merit, for championship bouts are hard to fix. For one thing, there's a lot of money involved. For another, the opportunity for a double-cross is too tempting. Suppose you arrange for a champ to take a dive when he fights your boy. What's to prevent him from flattening your fighter and then claiming it was an accident?

But the champion, whether few or all of his fights were on the level, believes in himself. He's proud of his title, too. For fighting, whether it's honest or crooked, is a rough, tough game; and "it takes plenty" to be the champ.

The average barroom or lumberjack bruiser would have about as much chance with a champion as a tapir would have with a tiger. If the champ had room to move around the contest would approximate murder; and if he didn't he'd get in the gouging and kneeing first. Yet the tough guys never tire of trying. Three of them tried it on Benny Leonard one evening on a road near Coney Island. They were driving a big car and they kept crowding Leonard's little puddle jumper. Finally the lightweight king got fed up. He hopped out and held up his hand for them to stop.

"Listen," he said, as the trio piled out. "I'm Benny Leonard. Now, you've got a big car and I've only got little car, and that sort of stuff is dangerous. So lay off, will you? Go on ahead and let me alone."

Whereupon the toughs started swinging—and passed the next few minutes in merciful oblivion.

When the tough appears to succeed, it usually turns out to be another version of the story about the fellow who looked like Kid Broad. He traded on this resemblance in various saloons for years. "Cheese it. I'm Kid Broad," he would snarl. And that would end the argument.

But one day he made the announcement, and the other chap kept coming. Presently the bogus Kid was sound asleep in the sawdust. The victor grinned at the awed patrons and calmly turned to the barkeep. "Set 'em up all around," he said. "I always knew them prize-fighters couldn't fight."

Manchoukuo's application for admission to the International Track and Field Federation has been approved by the Federation at its general meeting held on June 3 and June 4 in London, according to an announcement made Sunday by the Japan Track and Field Federation, which received a cable of confirmation of the approval from J. S. Edstroem, President of the I.T. and F.F.

DIZZY DEAN WINS AGAIN FOR CUBS

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, June 22—Dizzy Dean gave further proof of his return to consistent winning from today by pitching the Cubs to their fifth straight victory, a 7-to-1 decision over the Bees.

In achieving his fourth triumph of the season against no defeats, Dean limited Boston to six hits. The Bees failed to get a safe blow until the fifth inning, when they bunched three for their run.

Meanwhile the Cubs pounded two hurlers for eleven hits, Dick Errickson giving way to John Lanning after two innings. Chicago concentrated its attack in the second inning, when five hits, including Augie Galan's homer with the bases full, accounted for five runs.

Blitzen Announced Winner of Frisco To Honolulu Race

Domei Tsushin

HONOLULU, July 23—The 55-foot cutter, Blitzen, owned by Richard J. Reynolds, of New York, today was officially announced the winner of the transpacific yacht race to Honolulu from Treasure Island, San Francisco, which was completed here Tuesday. The winner is elapsed time was given as 11 days nine hours 58 minutes and 41 seconds.

The 106-foot yawl, Contender, backed by Dick Loynes, of Long Beach, California, which crossed the goal line first, completed the trip in the elapsed time of 14 days seven hours 50 minutes and twenty-fifth seconds, or considerably slower than the Blitzen.

Officials indicated that the winning time was exceedingly poor, and that the race was uneventful other than the discovery of a stowaway aboard the Contender.

YAMAGISHI STILL VERY GOOD

Lieutenant Jiro Yamagishi of the Navy, showed fans Sunday that his absence from the courts now for several months had not in the least affected his playing. He lost but one game in his match with Muang Roeng Vasantasingh, No. 1 player of the visiting Thai tennis team, Sunday at the Denyen courts. Bottom photo shows Miss Sanguan Sujaritkul of Thailand, who on Saturday put up a good fight against the Japanese champion, Miss Junko Kamo.

THAI PLAYERS LOSE ALL TILTS IN EXHIBITION

Members of the visiting goodwill tennis team from Thailand were no match for the local players in exhibition matches Saturday and Sunday at the Denyen courts here.

Jiro Yamagishi, one of the top ranking players in the world, whose inability to compete was responsible for Japan's withdrawal from the Davis Cup competition this year, had a day off from his duties with the Navy (he is now a lieutenant attending the Paymaster's School) and paricipated in the matches on Sunday. He had no trouble defeating the Thai No. 1 player, Muang Roeng Vasantasigh, losing but one game in two sets. The visitor put up a fight but Yamagishi's smashing to the corners and his very effective dropshot proved too much for him.

DROP ONLY ONE GAME

In the doubles, Yamagishi paired with his Keio University team-mate, Yasuo Tsuruta, and downed Kasom Chatikavanji and Sano Varnangkul in two sets, 6-0 and 6-1. The Thai players concentrated their attack on Tsuruta and Kasom rushed to the net and executed some beautiful shots but Yamagishi and Tsuruta were too effective with their smashes. Yamagishi also lobbed too well for the visitors.

Miss Sanguan Sujaritkul, the lone woman player among the visiting team, made a great hit with the fans on Saturday. She displayed a strong service and good form in forehand drives and smashing but her backhand was woefully weak. Miss Junko Kamo, the Japanese champion, was quick to detect this and directing her drives to that side of Miss Sujaritkul's defense, emerged a winner, 7-5 and 6-4.

In the singles on Saturday, Muang Roeng showed a good forehand drive and backhand and gave Fumiteru Nakano, last year's Davis Cupper with Yamagishi for Japan, considerable trouble but he lacked speed in his shots as well as on his feet. Nakano won out 7-5 and 6-3.

Sano Varngkul committed too many faults with his volleying and Tsuruta defeated him without trouble, 6-1 and 6-1.

TROPHY TO JAPANESE

To the winning Japanese team went the trophy presented by the Thai Minister, M. Phya Sri Sena.

The scores follow:

SATURDAY RESULTS

Miss Junko Kamo defeated Miss Sanguan Sujaritkul, 7-5 and 6-4.

Yasuuo Tsuruta defeated Sano Varnangkul, 6-1 and 6-1.

Fumiteru Nakano defeated Muang Roeng Vasantasingh, 7-5 and 6-3.

SUNDAY RESULTS

Yamagishi-Tsuruta defeated Kasom Chatikavanij-Sano Varnangkul, 6-0 and 6-1

Yamagishi defeated Muang Roeng Vasantasingh, 6-1 and 6-0.

Miki and Mrs. Oura defeated Sano Varnangkul and Miss Sanguan Sujaritkul, 2-6, 6-1 and 8-6.

BRITISH FAILED IN AMERICA FOR GOLF HONORS

The Times, London

LONDON, June 23—The great adventure is over and again we have failed to recover the Westchester Cup. We had every chance to do so; our team had the ponies (if only they all could have been fit) and ample time for practice together, both in California and on Long Island before the games, but they just could not manage to bring it off. Having seen the first two games, I am still of the opinion that they could have won, especially the first match, but the unfitness of Roark, who has been suffering for weeks with a "growling" appendix, meant that he never played a game within two goals of his real form. He can be brilliant when well, as every one admits on either side of the Atlantic, but he was the weak link in the chain of attack.

Casualties are inevitable in any big expedition, but it is permissible to say that this year's venture has been dogged by a singular ill-fortune. By herculean labors Hurlingham succeeded in collecting just enough ponies, if all went well, to carry our team to victory. Then Alarido and French Cottage went wrong (though the latter will shortly recover), which robbed Mr. Tyrrell-Martin of least two brilliant chukkas in each international match; Skene's Persil, a lovely bay mare by Silvius, who was performing grandly, was lame, while Guinda was worth a good chukka for anyone, and Ardagh might have inspired Roark to great things. The Kashmir string had not lived up to expectations.

The result was that each man in England's team was short of one or two top-class ponies, who might have made all the difference. Instead we had to double up on ponies who, however brilliant for one chukka, tired, nearly all of them, the second time out. The fatal chukkas for England in both matches were the sixth and seventh, when our ponies came out a second time. If those notable casualties had not been casualties we should, if anything, have out-ponied the Americans. This, however, is not offered as an excuse.

A TERRIFIC COMBINATION

Although America was not represented by their 40-goal team, they were represented by a team that was definitely superior to that team. If Smith had not been prevented by that calamitous fall on the Cochran Field from taking his justly earned place in the team they could have been a terrific combination. My personal view is that Phipps, Smith, Iglehart, and Guest would have been the strongest combination that had ever ridden on to a polo ground. None the less, Hitchcock certainly won the second game for America as if in denial of the suggestion that he is going off. If it is true, as I believe, that was his last international match, it was an utterly suitable ending to a tremendous career. If we had to be beaten we could not have chosen a more suitable vehicle of wrath with which to be chastised.

From the financial point of view, this year's venture has been disastrous, and it remains to be seen after the sale of the ponies how much can be saved from the wreck. The attendance has been disappointing, because of bad weather on the first day and the constant competition of the World's Fair. The Hurlingham ponies are not likely to do much to remedy the deficiency, for only three gained their places in the internationals. I fear that the guarantors, for the first time, may have to foot the bill rather heavily. I do not think there will be another British challenge on such a scale. But the experiment was worth trying. If we come to America again in quest of the cup this system is unlikely to be repeated, but I still maintain that this venture was admirably conceived, was carried out, up to a point, equally admirably, and I am as convinced as I was on the evening of June 4 that we ought to have won that first match.

Our ponies were as good as or better than theirs. We had four good players, but the crowning blunder was the persistence of Balding in taking the penalties. On the old scoring we actually should have won the first international on fractional points for fouls by a quarter of a point. That is not a good way of winning a polo match, but the Americans earned their penalties, though Phipps's foul on Roark has now been proved to have been no foul at all. If Balding had told Skene to take all those penalties in the first game I estimate that we should have started the second half with a lead of two or three goals. He had not once succeeded in getting even a shade of "devil" or loft into any free hit he had taken since coming to Long Island. Surely the experiment should have been made? For the first half of that game England was in the ascendant.

A FINE TEAM

Apart from that, Balding played splendidly and showed much of his old brilliance and splendid anticipation. Tyrrell-Martin was probably the best player on the field, and young Skene, with a weak No. 2 behind him, did everything that could have been expected of him. The second match was a fine game of polo, but though we held the Americans for most of the time we never looked quite like getting away with it (as we had in the first) after the second half was begun. Balding was magnificent, Roark was distinctly better than in the first game, Skene played as good a game as ever he played, and Tyrrell-Martin proved himself the most thorough back, after the Lockett example, that I have seen for many years.

The root of the matter is this: the English player lacks length, rides too long, and sits too far back and will not give himself the chance of hitting a long ball by getting all his weight forward over the ball. There is no time to "ride pretty" in first-class polo. The essence of hitting the ball in any ball game is correct footwork. Of our team this year Skene alone has discovered the art. In the meantime Skene, time and time again in the internationals, was compelled to "hook up" and wait for a pass to come up to him thus wasting the all-important, split second in which to develop his pony's pace. No No. 1 can do himself proper justice if he is unable to get going because of his colleagues' weakness.

England will not beat America until we learn to hit the ball as far as they do and discover the secret of command of balance without relying on the reins. And we must practice more at individual strokes, get our ponies properly schooled before serious polo begins, and thereafter refrain from schooling our tournament ponies between games. The Americans do not play "pony games" once the season is under way. They play every club game at top pace, and that gives them the confidence and judgment of pace that enables them to develop their amazingly strong and accurate hitting. Their ponies have to run for their lives each time they come out, but they come out obviously eager for the fray.

To get an enormous stud fit and ready, maintain it so, and captain a team was perhaps too much to ask any one man. One knows Balding has slaved for months and has done wonders, but the dice were loaded against him. It was a joyous, valiant venture, and I am sure to this day that it was all worth while.

DOLFINS PLAY TOKYO GIANTS FOR TITLE

The Dolfins and Tokyo Giants fought their way to the finals Sunday in the third annual professional baseball championship series sponsored by the Yomiuri Shimbun at the Korakuen Stadium at Suidobashi. They were scheduled to meet at 2 p.m. today for the title.

Bombarding three pitchers with 13 hits, the Giants ran roughshod over the Senators, 11 to 5. Second Baseman Chiba led the attack with five hits out of as many times at bat. He poled a homer, registered a three bagger and a two bagger.

It was tough luck for the Senators as earlier in the day, they had eliminated Nagoya, 1 to 0, after a 13-inning battle.

The Dolfins came from behind to nose out the Hanku team 4 to 3, to get into the finals.

MCGRAW'S NAME WILL STAND AS ONE OF BIGGEST IN BASEBALL

By BILL BRANDT
National League Service Bureau Manager

Christian Science Monitor

Enshrined among Baseball's immortals in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., the name of John J. McGraw will stand for posterity as one of the topmost figures in the history of the National Game's first century, a name written large and bold across four stirring decades of National League history, a man whose baseball deeds and conflicts began in the '90's when professional baseball even in the great cities of the land was played inside wooden-fenced fields with seats for 10,000 or less.

John McGraw's career moved along with baseball up the scale of importance in the American scene. His Giants won the first world's series played under central control in 1905. The World Series marked a new epoch in public interest in the deeds on the nation's diamonds. McGraw kept pace with the upward progress and widening scope, his name and his teams always in the forefront of the campaigning as the National Game waxed; when it survived a war of competition from capitalists organized into the short-lived Federal League of 1914-15; kept its ranks intact through the two-year period of the nation's participation in the World War, while at the same time cooperating with mobilization, armament, and A. E. F. morale stabilization; sailed on into the Golden Decade of the 1920's, that still-glamorous period of post-war efflorescence in national life.

STARTED FLAG WINNING IN 1904

New York began winning pennants as long ago as 1888, the first of two successive championship years for Jim Mutrie's original Giants. After Mutrie there were no more Giant pennants until McGraw. Starting with the 1904 flag, "The Little Napoleon" won 10 pennants in his 30 years as Giants' manager and when Baseball celebrated its Hundredth Birthday this Summer, no manager in major league hisory had succeeded in equaling that number of championships won.

On the Birthday, too, there was no manager in the record books with four straight pennants to his credit except the same little Napoleon McGraw, whose last great team, The Giants of 1921 to 1924 inclusive, held a monopoly on the National League's annual title. As the Cavalcade moved majestically down the main street of Cooperstown, N. Y., baseball's birthplace, there was in its ranks of marchers another manager, Joe McCarthy, whose Yankees had won three straight pennants and in June, 1939, were well on their way to the fourth straight, an eleventh hour tying of a record which had stood as McGraw's supreme triumph.

When Baseball is 200 years old it is probable that the name and fame of the St. Louis Cardinals will loom brightest in the historian's eye turned on the period between the World War and the 100th birthday. Inside of nine years, from 1926 to 1934, The Red Birds of Missouri won five pennants and three world championships. They overthrew the American League's proudest banners. Each in its day, the Yankees in 1926, Connie Mack's greatest Philadelphia Athletics in 1931, Mickey Cochrane's fiery Tigers of 1934.

GAS HOUSE GANG

For conduct and courage, for conquest and color, the Gas House Gang became immortal. The Pittsburgh Pirates of 1925, National League champions, after losing the first three games of the World Series, won four straight to take the World championship. The Chicago Cubs of 1935 staged a 21-straight winning streak in their great September drive to the pennant.

These Pittsburgh and Chicago exploits, however, were one-year achievements. The glamor of the Cardinals though bracketed by less than than a full decade, nevertheless represented really three different teams, rather than one great team. The heroes of 1926—Alexander, Hornsby, Thevenow, Sherdel, were not there in 1931. The pitchers who won all four victories in the 1934 world championship achievement—The Dean Brothers—had not been on the Cardinal roster of 1931.

McGraw's four-straight champions represented the culmination of the Little Napoleon's managerial lifetime. His first Giants won two straight pennants, 1904 and 1905. His next great team won three straight, 1911, 1912, 1913. He had a team in the making which won 25 straight in September, 1916, the all-time record for consecutive victories. This team won the 1917 pennant and perhaps if the demands of the war emergency had not supervened, might have done further.

GREAT TEAM AFTER THE WAR

But not until the war was over did the McGrawian genius mould his greatest team. It was his greatest because more than any of his former teams, it expressed the McGraw baseball philosophy the theory of the master operating the chess-men, the best chess-men obtainable by the exercise of keen selection and training.

The Little Napoleon imbued his team with the fire and fury of his own baseball ancestry, the old Orioles of the '90's, of which he had been the battling third-baseman. He picked pitchers as close as possible to the pre-war greats, his own Mathewson and Marquard, the Browns and Alexanders and Reulbachs who had fought him in hostile uniforms. He arranged fast fielders and dashing offensive performers in the other positions, so that his defense moved with the dexterity and authority of the old Cubs, his offense with the daring and power of his own pre-war teams.

The distinctive characteristic of the four-flag Giants was McGraw; McGraw in his capacity of generalissimo-in-the field-behind the lines. Undoubtedly no manager of a baseball team before or since ever dominated his team's play to as great a degree and in as minute detail.

PICTURE-WORDS

Scribes of the day used picture-words to describe this. Himself was called "The Master Mind." The Giant catcher of the day, because he looked over to the Giants' dugout before giving the pitcher the signal for the best pitch, was called "The Switchboard Man." There was popularly believed to be a complicated code of signals by which the "Master-Mind," through the use of substitutes on the bench as wigwaggers, communicated with every man on the field at every point in the the course on the game.

It is because of this that the vision called up by mention of the four-flag Giants is not a Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination, as in the case of the Cubs, or a fighting tangle of great names, Keeler-Kelley-Jennings-McGraw-Robinson, as in the case of the Orioles, no Wagner nor Alexander nor Mathewson, as in the cases of other great teams in baseball history.

The four-flag Giants were the expression of one central leader, John McGraw. They were the embodiment of his baseball genius, his creation. They were his thoughts, ideas, concepts, actions, moving on the face of the ball field. As nearly as is possible, they were McGraw.

NOT MERE PUPPETS

These Giants individually had personalities of their own, color, expressiveness, ingenuity, initiative. They were not mere puppets or automata. No thought of McGraw could be colorless, drab or wooden. Frank Frisch, Casey Stengel, George Kelly, were, and have continued to be down through the 15 years since, as colorful and individualistic as any athletes that ever stepped on a ball-field.

The pattern of the four pennants was as if the master had plotted his course like a skilled navigator, planning to win three out of every five games played all season. The pennant percentages ranged between .604 and .621. The Giants won 94 games in 1921, 93 in 1922, 95 in 1923 and 93 again in 1924. The margins were four games over the second-place Pirates in 1921, seven games ahead of the Reds in 1922, 4½ in front of the Reds in 1923, and a game and a half above Brooklyn in the close 1924 finish, in which Giants, Dodgers and Pirates swirled into the final week almost neck and neck for the flag.

The McGraw team beat the Yankees in the World Series in 1921, 5 games to 3, the last of the three World Series in which five victories were required for the championship. It was an uphill fight for the Yanks won the first two games. In 1922 the Yanks could not win a single game, the Giants taking the first, third, fourth and fifth, the second ending in a tie.

TIDE SWINGS OTHER WAY

In 1923 the tide swung the other way. After the two New York teams broke even in the first four games, Miller Huggins' Yanks won the fifth and sixth to capture the last of three "Subway Series" in three successive years, also the last strictly metropolitan World Series the baseball world was to stage until 1936 brought the Terry Giants into the spotlight against the Joe McCarthy Yanks.

Giant fans record that only a pebble in front of third base kept the Giants of 1924 from delivering a world championship to the McGraw coat-of-arms as the added trophy of his fourth straight pennant-winning year. American League fans and the delirious hosts of the National capital saw the stalwart of the great Walter Johnson standing in the path of the greatest Giants team time and time again as it was on the brink of victory in that 12-inning super-battle which was the seventh and deciding contest of one of the greatest World Series ever played.

The deciding hit was a sharp grounder, bouncing high over third-baseman Lindstrom's head in Washington to drive home the winning run. But it was Johnson who, with the winning run on third as the result of Frank Frisch's three-bagger, fanned George Kelly and retired Irish Meusel for the third out on an infield grounder. In the 11th, with the winning run on second, Johnson fanned both Frisch and Kelly for the second and third outs.

GIANTS RAN SECOND

The great Johnson thus prevented the fourth straight Giant pennant from blossoming into the third world championship in the four years. In 1925 a Pittsburgh team which had been knocking at the pennant gate for four years past broke into the championship fight at last. The Giants ran second, 8½ games off the pennant pace. In 1926 they lapsed into the second division, then in 1927 the Little Napoleon started building again, but although he won his 92 games in 1927 and 93 in 1928, there were no more pennant. He was a second-place and third-place manager for the five remaining years of his managerial career.

On the greatest of Giant teams the names that won fame as pitchers were Art Nehf, Jess Barnes, Shuffin' Phil Douglas, Wilfred Rosy Ryan, Hugh McQuillan, Jack Scott, Jack Bentley—a serried array, but pitching the same McGraw series of tactical slants, prescribed by the master on the bench. Of them all, Nehf, the stocky southpaw now resident in Arizona and discoverer of Hank Leiber, the slugger of 1939, was the only pitcher represented by a victory in every one of the four World Series.

Frank Snyder today Manager Bill Terry's coach with the modern Giants, was McGraw's No. 1 catcher, with Earl Smith his assistant the first two years: then in the last two years Hank Gowdy, of 1914 Boston Braves fame and today Bill McKechnie's coach in Cincinnati.

1921 INFIELD

Kelly, Johnny Rawlings, Dave Bancroft and Frisch comprised the infield lineup in 1921. The next year Frisch shifted from third base to second and Heinie Groh, Giant scout of today, played the hot corner. The last two years saw the budding efforts of three great Giant infielders whose careers continued on into the 1930's, first-baseman Bill Terry as Kelly's understudy in 1924, shortstop Travis Jackson taking over the duties of shortstop from Bancroft, and Fred Lindstrom at third.

Ross Youngs was McGraw's greatest outfielder on his greatest Giant team. Irish Mensel, great right-hand hitter, was varsity outfielder all four years, too. George Burns patroled center in 1921, in the middle two years Casey Stengel and Bill Cunningham were the main prowlers of the mid-pasture, in 1924 Billy Southworth.

No Giants slugger became batting champion in those four years because they were the middle four years of Rogers Hornsby's unbroken six-year reign as National League batting king. The four-year Giant heyday was a team achievement, but because the team really represented the projection of the "Master," the greatest Giants of all time must be written into history thus:

They WERE McGraw!

REDS CONTINUE TO LEAD RACE IN NATIONAL

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 7—Although the St. Louis Cardinals won all of their seven scheduled games last week, the league-leading Cincinnati Reds continued to maintain the top position in the National League by a wide margin of seven games over the second-place Cardinals. The Reds last week won two games and lost four. The Chicago Cubs moved into third place, nosing out the Pittsburgh Pirates, which placed fourth.

In the American League, the Yankees of New York won three out of seven contests, but continued to lead the second-place Boston Red Sox by nine games. The Red Sox won four games and lost three, while the third place Chicago White Sox won three games and lost four. Detroit nosed out Cleveland from third place by winning four games out of six. The Cleveland Indians lost six games out of the six played, its standing in the League dropping to fourth.

The standing of the teams, including the games played today, for the two circuits follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	69	30	.697

NIGHT BASEBALL WINS PLACE

By GARRY SCHUMACHER

NEW YORK—Cleveland's Alva Bradley threw in an electric power switch at Cleveland recently and, with that gesture, flood-lighted not only the vast Municipal Stadium on the lake front, but all the ball parks in the major leagues.

What had been only one of Larry MacPhail's daffy innovations was recognized at that moment as a trend of the time in baseball. When the sweeping head lights picked out fifty-seven thousand people in the cavernous stands they established the fact that night baseball is here to stay.

The very next day Chicago's Louis Comiskey announced that he'll install lights at Comiskey Park, and we've only to wait until the end of the season to learn that the Yankees, Giants and all the others will fall into line for 1940. They play this baseball game for money—and the lights don't do anything but paint the customers' greenbacks with gold.

FANS LIKE IT

This reporter will admit that he believed that night baseball, when first introduced by MacPhail, was some form of heresy. But time has convinced him he was wrong. No objections can be sustained in the face of the fact that the fans like it and want it. "The public will decide." That's as good a rule in baseball as it is in politics.

From the box office standpoint, the nocturnal games are the greatest money-making scheme outside of the mint.

Let's take Alvan Bradley's Indians for example. They drew 57,000 people the first night. When the Yankees play there in July they'll draw 70,000. The other five games allowed by the rules should boost the count up to or beyond 200,000. And right there the Cleveland club will have its payroll.

This thought should brush aside what few objections to the night game the veteran ball players can still muster. It will fatten their livelihood, or, at least, guarantee to maintain it at present levels. In these times that's something.

Naturally, some of the night game's appeal lies in its novelty. It's new stuff to the customers. But that impression needn't wear off if the games are properly spaced. Seven games per year is the ideal arrangement, and the magnates will be wise if they stick to it. Seven games will pay the freight and more and, as "different" entertainment, will keep the clients interested.

CIVIC PRIDE UP

One new responsibility the magnate assumes with the increased revenue. He is morally bound by the increased customer support to spend that money in the interests of a winning team. Not to do so will be bad business judgment. Civic pride in a winner is still the strongest influence in baseball and the owner simply can't afford to ignore it, now that he'll have the wherewithal to alter it.

The New York fan can now ask: "If you play at Cleveland and Philadelphia at night, why not at home?" There's no answer to that one, and, what the Yankees do, will be done in double harness. The Giants will follow the example just as they moved into the radio field with the Yankees.

The Giants are now the only team in either league that doesn't play under lights. Bill Terry is still opposed to it. But even he must recognize now that he's standing against progress, not a fad—and friends say that the right invitation will persuade him to play even before the end of this season.

Germany Invites 30 Track Athletes To Meet Next Summer

In addition to the delegation of 20 that has been invited to compete next February in the German Winter sports competition at Garmisch-Partenkirchen (which will enable Japan to send a team to the 5th Olympic Winter Games at the same site), from Germany has come another invitation, that of dispatching a track and field team of 30 members to Berlin in the Summer of next year with all expenses paid.

This will mean that Japan will be able to send a track and field team to the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki next Summer.

The invitation from the German Track and Field Federation came as a result of negotiations made by the Japan Track and Field Federation by way of preparation for participation in the 12th Olympic Games.

SCHMELING AFTER ANOTHER SHOT AT LOUIS

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK—Max Schmeling soon will make his 33rd crossing of the Atlantic Ocean.

An intimate friend of the former heavyweight champion advises us he had a letter from Max in which the German Schlager intimated he would soon be on the high seas.

Max did not say definitely that he is coming for a third crack at Joe Louis but anybody familiar with Max's single track mind is well aware that he is still not convinced that Louis is his master.

As far as Max is concerned, he and Louis are all even. He knocked out Louis. Louis knocked him out. Now Max would like to play the rubber.

THINKS HE IS AS GOOD AS EVER

His recent one-round knock-out of Adolf Heuser convinced Schmeling that he is as good as ever. And maybe he is.

Max probaly is the most conscientious trainer the rig ever knew. Physical condition is a religion with him. He knows himself like nobody else possibly could, maps his own training routine and follows it religiously. That is why there never was a more superbly trained athlete in any sport than this same Schmeling.

He also is by all odds the most intelligent fighter we have ever met outside the ring. He can and does think along original lines and for all his apparent phlegmatism he is highly imaginative.

And speaking of imagination reminds me of the time he visited Joe Louis' training camp with promoter Mike Jacobs. This was after the first Louis-Schmeling fight in which Max had flatted Joe, and Joe was training for his impending bout with Jack Sharkey.

"Louis is in great physical condition," Max told Jacobs, "but I think it is a mistake to put him in with a good man like Sharkey so soon after being knocked out by me. He will remember that knock-out and he may be punchshy."

Schmeling was mistaken in crediting Louis with the same kind of imagination he himself has. Louis has little or no imagination and his managers made a smart move in tossing him right back into the ring rather than give him a chance to think about the beating he had received.

Schmeling realized that he himself would have been gun shy if forced to go back immediately after a knockout. "I have a very good reason for taking a long vacation after getting a beating," he told us one time.

"They tell you a knock-out doesn't hurt. Well, in a way that's true because you don't feel it. But don't you believe that it doesn't leave its mark both physical and mental.

TAKE VACATION

"Every time I've been knocked out I've taken a vacation for many months. I always went off fishing and hunting and never saw a fight nor talked fight. In that way I brought my body back into fine condition and after many months I'd forgotten all about the losing fight and was always eager to get action again. That is why I'll be able to fight many more years than the average fighter who doesn't know how to take care of himself."

Max apparently is still following his old routine. He was knocked out by Louis a year ago. Then he returned home to Germany and went hunting and fishing for many months. When he felt he was ready to fight again he did so and his one-round knock-out of Heuser was the result.

That is why it will not surprise us to see him return here for two or three tune-up bouts and then another shot at Louis.

OGASAWARA TO TAKE UP LEAGUE PURGE

Reform measures of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league are expected to be decided in the near future through the efforts of Dr. Michio Ogasawara, who on Tuesday succeeded Hiraku Iwahara as director of the physical department of the Education Ministry under whose supervision all sports in the schools are conducted.

Talk of a purge of the Tokyo varsity league has been on for several years and received more emphasis since the outbreak of the China Affair.

Although Mr. Iwahara resigned on the plea of ill health, it is believed that he did so hemmed in between the stand by Education Vice-Minister Ishiguro for a one-game schedule between the teams and opposition of the powerful Tokyo Six University Baseball League.

It is expectd that the following items will be discussed for a decision by the time the Fall season of the league gets under way in September:

1. Prohibition of week-day games.

2. Prohibition of radio broadcasting of the games.

3. Prohibition of admission charges.

Dr. Ogasawara is 40 years old and a native of Okayama prefecture.

Cunningham Will Not Retire This Year

SALT LAKE CITY,—Rumors that long-striding Glenn Cunningham will retire in the very near future are just so much twaddle to Salt Lake City admirers of one of the world's greatest milers whose age admittedly is becoming an increasing handicap.

The seemingly tireless Cunningham, who recently came in second in the Princeton Mile which was won by Chuck Fenske, and which incidentally was supposed to produce a new record by England's famed Sidney Wooderson who came in last, competed here in the Intermountain A.A.U. Special Mile.

As expected, Cunningham led the parade around the University of Utah oval. He breezed to victory with a thirty yard lead in 4:12.2, considerably less than his record-smashing indoor mark of 4:04 at the Dartmouth meet last year, but fast considering he was running "under wraps" with an undoubted altitude handicap.

After the race, Cunningham was asked the inevitable question of when he was going to retire.

"I hope to run as long as my job doesn't interfere with my training," retorted the lanky Kansan. Cunningham is employed in the University of Kansas Extension Department.

"I have been kept rather busy with my work in the last year," he continued, "and I've traveled about 2,000 miles since last September. But I'd like to enter more races. I've competed in only three outdoor races this year and that's hardly enough to keep me in top condtion."

The rumor that he would retire popped up again after the Princeton event which was publicized as the "Mile of the Century" between Cunningham and Wooderson. As usual, there was no apparent basis for the rumor although wiseacres predicted Cunningham "was through."

In the mountain country, Cunningham is still a topnotcher and not through.

Dogs Now to Get Degrees Like Masters

NEW YORK—During the past three years since Obedience Test competition has been a feature of bench shows of pure-bred dogs held under the rules of The American Kennel Club, 265 specimens of 44 breeds have been awarded the "C. D." degree. Of these, 57 dogs have gone on to gain "C. D. X." These dogs represented 19 breeds. And of these, just nine specimens from four breeds have captured the "U.D." which is the highest award possible under the rules.

Altogether, 57 different varieties of pure-bred dogs have taken part in the tests. The fact that not all of them as yet have gained degrees is no reflection on their intelligence. Some have not been competing long enough for such honors.

The working dog group has made the best showing in the tests, with 152 in this division winning the "C.D.," 37 the "C.D.X.," and six the "U.D." Next comes the non-sporting group, with 47, 9 and 2, followed by sporting with 30 and 4; terrier with 21 and 4; hound with 13, 2, and 1; and toy with 2 "C.D.. 's"

The German shepherd dog fanciers have entered more of their dogs for this work than have other exhibitors, and this breed is the individual leader, with a record of 74, 21, and 5 in the three brackets of the competition. Doberman pinschers have accounted for 43, 10, and 1. The combined total of the two breeds puts the working group out in front. The non-sporting group is lifted into a commanding position by the poodle, which has a mark of 40, 8, and 2.

Many of the dogs that have won obedience test degree also have won their bench show championships. All of them compete in regular classes at the shows. As yet, no one has produced a dog that has won bench show, obedience tests, and field trail titles. It is a goal at which some breeders are now aiming.

TINKER TO EVERS TO CHANCE COMPRISED WONDER BALL TEAM

In 1905 Christy Mathewson pitched three shutouts in the first official World Series ever played—a record never equalled in 33 subsequent autumnal classics. Winning that world championship was the culminating achievement of John McGraw's first great team of Giants, National League champions in 1904 and 1905.

Pittsburgh won three-straight pennants, the first three National League championship of this century. There was a great Pirate team in 1909, with the all-time greatest shortstop, the immortal Honus Wagner, agile afield and on the bases, mightly at bat, just as in his youth with the three-time Pirate champions. A youth of 1909 vintage, Babe Adams, was the stellar mound ace when the Buccaneers beat Detroit that year for the world championship.

MARQUARD'S STREAK

The second great McGraw team won pennants in 1911, '12 and '13, with Rube Marquard's 1912 streak of 21-straight victories aiding the verteran Matty; a great baserunning record stamped the team for history.

The 1914 Boston Braves performed a one-year wonder whose story will live forever. In last place as late in the season as July 19, these Braves of "Miracle Man" Stallings' devising and leadership made the incredible record of winning 61 against 16 defeats in the season's last half.

With the Rudolph-Tyler-James pitching trio and colorful figures such as John Evers, Rabbit Maranville and Hank Gowdy sparkling their play, the team carried on past the National League pennant to win the world championship from the Philadelphia Athletics in four straight games, the first time the World Series had been played without both leagues tasting victory in at least one game.

ALEXANDER'S CREST

Grover Alexander's crest as a pitching maestro was represented by the Phillies' 1915 pennant. Wilbert Robinson's first pennant at Brooklyn came in 1916.

But in the same year, another Giant team—really two different teams because between May and September John McGraw made wholesale changes in personnel involving key positions—wrote its name in the book of all-time fame. In May the Giants had a winning streak of 17 straight. Sept. 7 the McGrawmen launched a winning streak which still stands as the all-time record—26 straight.

Such was the woe of the Giants that year, in between streaks, however, that the McGraw team's September streak began and finished with the Giants in fourth place—26 straight without moving out of fourth place! The Phillies were Brooklyn's closest challenger for the flag, the battle lasting until the season's last week; the third-place Boston Braves applying the final quietus to the Alexandrian Phils commanded by the late Pat Moran.

TRIO IMMORTALIZED

But on the scroll of pre-war National League history, the deepest mark for posterity's ragard was inscribed by the Chicago Cubs of the century's first decade, the Cubs commanded by Frank Husk Chance, the "Peerless Leader," its keystone combination Joe Tinker and Johnny Evers.

Pat Moran, who won the pennant in his first year as a manager with the 1915 Phillies, and repeated this feat by winning the 1919 pennant in his first year as Cincinnati manager, was a scion of the Chance Cubs. Like the Orioles of the '90's, the Peerless Cubs individually lived on in the championships of other cities after their order was broken and their fame faded in the rush of Pirates and Giants and Braves and Phillies and Dodgers.

Their preeminence in the National League's 20th century prewar scene was a collective achievement; it was team fame, rather than the work of any one individual star whose greatness carried along a lot of lesser lights. McGraw and Mathewson of the Giants are enshrined in Baseball's Hall of Fame. Honus Wagner of those great Pirates is high among the Immortals of Cooperstown as well as treading the sod daily in 1939 Pirate uniform. Alexander the Great of the 1914 Phillies is galleried with the National Game's All-Time Greatest.

The Peerless Cubs were great in all departments. They were perhaps the only one of all the great pre-war ball clubs which, until age took its toll and slowed up the players' speed a-foot, had no weakness. They were truly the one team in baseball history which, in its heyday, 1906 to 1908, could be called "The Team That Was Everything."

SECOND TO NONE

They had great pitchers, great hitters, a great fielder at every position. They were second to none in any age or era in pugnacity, indomitability of spirit. They had, above all, the quality which was indispensable in their period perhaps to a greater degree than in any epoch before or since—"smart baseball brains."

It was this that made their fame an achievement of team-play. Their fielding expertness and pitching artillery were centrally controlled by busy brains—Johnny Evers at second base; Johnny Kling behind the bat. Their batting power and base-running speed was similarly planned and executed. Cohorts of those Cubs who survive today, after three decades have rolled by since the last Tinker-Evers-Chance double play, call them the greatest "Inside Baseball" team of all time.

DOUBLE PLAY TAG

Certainly in their day they were thus hailed; just as certainly today whenever fast heads-up ballplaying is the topic quick-thinking-in-emergencies, the right move at the right time, the whole strategic phase of the game, the discussion is never complete without including the great ball club whose label in the language of modern baseball is the double play tag they made famous in the agate type of the box score summary, "Tinker to Evers to Chance."

This great team had a great author, Frank Selee, the genius who had presided over Boston's golden decade in National League baseball, the '90's. Selee was Chicago manager for four years, 1902 to 1905, and although in that quadrennium the Cubs never achieved the pennant, running 5-3-2-3 under Selee management, it was the Selee organization that put together the salient parts of baseball's most famous Inside-Baseball mechanism.

THE PEERLESS LEADER

Frank Chance, who took charge as player-manager in 1906, was "The Peerless Leader" because under him the Selee-planned machine spun off three-straight pennants, finished second to the Pirates in 1909, then came back for its last National League flag in 1910, the last Cub pennant until the war year, 1918, when a different Cub team crashed through to the championship.

In 1906 the peerless leadership not only won the pennant, but established the all-time high for games won in a season, 116. Beaten by the Chicago White Sox "Hitless Wonders" in the World's Series that year, the Cubs repeated their pennant-winning in 1907 and 1908, scoring fewer victories in the course of the league season but twice defeating the Detroit Tigers for the world championship.

THREE KEY MEMBERS

Selee put together the Tinker-Evers keystone combination in 1902 to throw the ball to Chance Three-Finger Brown, Ed Reulbach and Carl Lundgren, three key members of the great pitching staff around which the Cub's baseball science revolved, were gotten together during the Selee administration. Frank "Wildfire" Schulte and Jimmie Slagle two-thirds of the 1906 three-S outfield, joined the colors in 1904.

Preparing for the 1906 campaign, Chance secured Harry Steinfeldt from Cincinnati for third base to complete the Tinked-Evers-Chance infield combination; Jimmie Sheckard from Brooklyn to play left and round out the three-S outfield. Jack Pfiester, fourth member of the championship pitching staff of 1906, joined the Cubs in the spring of 1906 after a two-year Pittsburgh career and Orval Overall augmented the mound forces in a mid-season deal with Cincinnati.

GREAT STRATEGIST

Johnny Kling, the great strategist, one of the greatest catchers—mechanically as well as mentally—in the whole first century of the national game, was, like Chance, a Cub when the 20th Century dawned and continued as the backstop mainstay throughout the decade, understudied first by Pat Moran and, in the last years of the great Cub dynasty, by Jimmy Archer.

Lesser lights in the picture, though each played his part in his day, were Arthur (Circus Solly) Hofman, Chick Fraser, and, near the decade's close, Heinie Zimmerman.

Crowning feature attesting that the Chance-led Cubs reached greatness by team-play is their comparative obscurity individually and collectively in the scroll of all-time records. Their 116-win pennant in 1906 was all-time high. Ed Reulbach, in the 1906 world series pitched a one-hitter. There's never been a no-hit game in 30-old years of World Series history. This was the only onehitter ever recorded to date.

FOUR-STRAIGHT SHUTOUTS

The same Reulbach, in the heat of the very last and bitterest stages of the hottest pennant race in a league famous 63 years for close races, 1908, pitched four-straight shutouts, a modern National League record, equalled by Alexander in 1911 and Bill Lee of the modern Cubs last year, but never surpassed.

Brown was pitching champion in 1906 and 1907; Reulbach in 1908, but the Chance Cubs never owned a league batting champion and for sensational record-making by Cubs collectively and individually one must look in other years and decades, for Chicago not only won the first National League pennant in 1876 and the most recent, 1938, but 13 other flags in every decade of parent circuit history except the 12-club '90's.

LONGEST STREAK

Even in their ebullient 1906 campaign, Chance's Cubs' longest winning streak was 14 straight, paling by comparison with the 21-straight streaks of Anson's 1880 Chicagos and Grimm's 1935 Cubs. The Peerless-led Cub's picture of greatness, as eloquently as it can be painted today, 30 years after, could be done by re-creating high moments of their triumph rather than by quoting figures from record-books.

Such a moment was the climax of the 1908 world series, which as a whole can be rated as their peak of performance, coming as it did after the closest pennant race in National League history, a race in which the Cubs were ultimate champs by a one-game margin over the Giants and Pirates.

The only post-season play-off game in National League history won the Cubs the pennant Oct. 8, 1908, a play-off necessitated by the tie game at the Polo Grounds Sept. 23, in which the still-famous "Merkle play" prevented the Giants from winning the game.

The Merkle play—Merkle failing to run from first to second while the winning run was scoring—nullified the winning run, leaving the score tied. The crowd swarming the field prevented the game's continuance. The result of the game stood as a tie in the league records. When the season's last scheduled game was finished, Cubs and Giants stood tied for first place a half-game ahead of the Pirates.

Victory in the play-off game pitted the Cubs in the World Series against Detroit. The Cubs won the first two games, lost the third game, then rode to the world championship in the fourth and fifth games on a pair of shutouts, a four-hitter by Mordecai Brown, then a three-hitter by Overall.

As a picture of how those Cubs played baseball—their "inside stuff" technique, and what it meant in deciding battles—the fourth game's sixth inning is graphic. The day before had staged an 8-3 Tiger victory. A Detroit triumph today would square the series.

The 6th inning began with the Cubs ahead, 2 to 0. The Tigers had made two hits off Brown in the first five innings. But Charlie O'Leary opened the sixth with a single. "Wahoo" San Crawford followed with a single that sent O'Leary to second.

COBB BUNTED

Detroit fans sounded the call for a Tiger charge. The man at bat was Ty Cobb, American League batting champion that year and for nine straight years thereafter, greatest batter of all time, considering both power and finesse, greatest bunter, considering his baserunning ability as well as the handling of the bat in the act of bunting, all-time greatest baserunner, and with a baseball brain unexcelled by any man's on the field, even the razor-sharp Cub cerebums.

Cobb bunted, but Brown had bounced off the pitching tee before bat touched ball. Brown fielded the bunt to Steinfeldt at third for a force-out of O'Leary. One out.

Claude Rossman at bat. Brown seemed concentrating on the batter. Rossman swung and missed. Catcher Kling fired the ball like a bullet to second base, where shortstop Tinker had closed in behind Crawford as "Wahoo" Sam leaned a step the wrong way before seeing that Rossman's swing had missed. Tinker tagged out Crawford as Crawford slid back to second base. Two out.

Two strikes on Rossman now Brown pitched again. This time Cobb, most daring and most dreaded of all base-stealers, lit out for second. Kling's throw was high. Second-baseman Evers had to leap off the ground. Evers speared the ball with his glove, came to the ground sprawling as he threw his body out of reach of Cobb's feet, slapped the ball against Cobb's leg as the foot speared for the bag.

"Out!" proclaimd base-umpire Bill Klem, his nose right down on the play at second, sniffing the dust-cloud.

But back of home plate another umpire, Tommy Connolly, had his right hand raised on high. "Strike three!"

The Tiger rally was over. Not only three outed but four outed! The Tigers made no more hits that day and only three the next day as the Cubs beat Wild Bill Donovan, 2-0, to cement the world championship.

That's how the old Cubs played ball.

NATIONAL SWIM CHAMPIONSHIPS START SATURDAY

Candidates for Japan's swimming team to the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki will be picked on the basis of their performance in the national championships to be held at the Meiji Shrine pool next Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights.

For the first time in several years, there will be no foreign stars competing. Plans of the Japan Swimming Federation to invite German and American champions did not materialize. Kiyoshi Nakama and Takashi Hirose, outstanding stars of Hawaii, were invited but they informed the Federation of their inability to accept because of participation in the American national championships. When it seemed as if Bob Pirie, Canadian champion, Paul Wolfe, California star, and Bob Biddulph, Australian champion, might compete in the meet, their trip became abortive at the last moment when the American A. A. U. and the Australian A. A. U. objected to their visit to Japan prior to the Olympic year.

Diving and water polo will be held at 1 p.m. and the swimming events at 6 p.m.

ARAI FAVORED TO WIN

Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University is a strong favorite to win the 100 and 200-meter freestyle events. In the Kanto championships last week, he negotiated the century in 58 seconds flat from the new dead starting system that is practiced now, and it will be no surprise if he betters it by a full second, in which event he will be considered the greatest sprinter in the world today.

Arai is even more promising in the 200 meters. The experts are expecting him to shatter his own national record of 2 minutes 9.6 seconds and speed on his way to a new world's mark.

Miyamoto and Sugiura of the Waseda Swimming Club and Michiaki Sagitani and Takeshi Sasaki of Nihon University will fight it among themselves in the 200-meters race to be picked as candidates for the 800-meters relay team, an event which Japan was victorious both at Los Angeles and in Berlin in 1932 and 1936. All four of them are capable of making the 200 meters in 2 minutes 15 seconds.

The 400-meters freestyle event is expected to be a battle royal among Takahashi of Keio, Tomikatsu Amano of Nihon University, and Tanaka and Miyamoto of the Waseda Swimming club. In the Keio-Waseda meet, Takahashi won the event in 4 minutes 48 seconds. Miyamoto negotiated the distance in 4 minutes 47.2 seconds in the recent higher technical schools meet. The indications are that the two will fight it out for the top honors. But there is Amano, world record holder in the 1,500 meters to consider too.

AMANO PICKED

Amano has recovered from his appendectory and is favored to win the 1,500 meters. But Tanaka of the Waseda Swimming club and Koshido of Nihon University may give him a close battle.

Yasuhiko Kojima of Keio is favored to take the 100-meter backstroke. He is expected to set a new national mark.

Tetsuo Hamuro, Olympic champion, is a hot favorite to retain his championship in the 200-meter breaststroke. It will be his fourth if there is no upsetting result.

Soccer Team to Play At Hsinking Is Picked

Seventeen players have been selected to make the All-Japan soccer team competing in the Japan-Manchoukuo-China athletic meet at Hsinking the beginning of next month, according to announcement Wednesday.

Shigemaru Takekoshi, Tokyo Imperial University graduate, will be coach.

HUTCHINSON IS A FAILURE TO TIGERS

NEW YORK—Although the Detroit Tigers gave up $50,000 in cash and four players for Fred Hutchinson, the Seattle pitcher, there was some doubt among baseball men from the very start as to whether he would win in the major leagues, and their skepticism recently was borne out when the 19-year-old nothing-baller was shunted off to Toledo of the American Association. He not only failed to win for the Tigers in his brief tenure with them, but even had difficulty getting anybody out.

He may come back into the majors again some day because he is young and big and strong, but it is unlikely that he will ever stick around long. He seems destined to be a chronic bush leaguer, and not the first of his breed either. Before now there has been many a ball player carrying on sensationally in the minors year after year only to fail every time he was brought into the big time.

HAS NEITHER CURVE NOR FAST BALL

Hutchinson admittedly has neither a curve nor a fast ball. He relies on control, which has deserted him, and on his gameness, which can carry you just so far. After that you'd better have some talent. He could get by at Seattle, with only a grimace and a prayer, but will need considerable more than that against major league lineups, and he probably will never have what it takes.

The trouble with poor Hutch is that he hasn't got the groundwork upon which to build—no speed and no curve. In the majors control isn't enough for a rookie, although with that alone he won 22 games for Seattle last season in his first year of professional baseball, proving again the wide difference between the fastest minors and the majors.

A sharp contrast to Hutch's predicament is offered by the case of Bob Feller. He too lacked control when he came up to the Cleveland Indians three years ago. But Feller really could zing the ball in there. For all anybody can tell about him he may pitch the fastest ball ever seen, faster even than Walter Johnson at the latter's best. With that speed as the basis, he has turned into potentially one of the great pitchers of all time. He has acquired control through steady practice and probably will break all strikeout records this season.

Feller also has been busy acquiring a curve, a not too difficult task because of his speed, and finally will windup with everything a great pitcher needs apparently. Hutch has all that, and even if he gets control back at Toledo it won't be enough to get him by in the majors. Occasionally there has been a pitcher with little more than control on the ball but invariably he is some cute old-timer who has spent years learning his trade.

HIGHLY IMPROBABLE

Of course, Hutch can spoil all this by doing the well high impossible, which would be to come bouncing back from Toledo to pitch winning baseball for the Tigers in spite of his shortcomings. But it is highly improbable that he ever will be able to make the grade, and you wonder then how the Tigers ever came to lay out all that money for him.

It just so happens that several scouts who had looked him over promptly turned him down, despite his great record in the Coast League. But a few clubs wanted him, the Tigers made the highest bid, so Toledo gets a pitcher from Seattle.

JESS WILLARD, NOW REFEREE, REMINISCES

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—"So the boys around the ranch kept on pestering me about becoming a fighter until finally one day I packed up and went into Kansas City and started training," Jess Willard said. "The boys were pretty heated up over Jack Johnson being the heavyweight champion and their idea was for me to get good enough to beat him and take the title away from him.

THOUGHT HE WAS TOO OLD

"I didn't think I could do that. Being 25 already, it seemed to me I was too old. I just figured that maybe they were right about my being able to fight because I was so big and what I aimed to do was to see if I could win a few fights and make enough money to buy a ranch of my own. But I got to going pretty good and the first thing I knew I was fighting out around California, later on in New York and they were calling me the "white hope" and then I was matched with Johnson for the title at Havana and knocked him out in 26 rounds."

It was all as simple as that when the six foot, six inch 250-pound cow hand belted his way from a ranch to the heavyweight championship of the world.

"I calculate I made a million dollars out of fighting, touring with a circus and trading in real estate in California," Willard said. "I didn't drink my money up or pitch it away gambling. It was that real estate that got me when the boom busted. I had my money spread out too thin. Anyway I'm doing pretty good now, refereeing fights and wrestling matches."

The foregoing is, in a few words, virtually the life story of Jess Willard, except for one important item, his loss of the title. This occurred on July 4, 1919, when he met Jack Dempsey, a comparative midget of 184 pounds, who, nevertheless, that day at Toledo was "probably the greatest fighter in the history of the world," according to Willard. The latter does say this with the idea that Dempsey had to be the greatest to beat him. That doesn't enter into it. Willard just doesn't think any heavyweight could be faster, a better puncher, better trained or more vicious than Dempsey was that day.

Big Jess was battered to the canvas seven times in the first round and was all but beheaded in the second and third. That's all there was to it.

Willard, as a matter of fact, was never a very good fighter, but he could hit and he was so big that he captured the fancy of the crowds. His cowboy background gave him a halo of heroics which took on the glitter of a Broadway Neon billboard with the publicity he got for killing Bull Young with a punch. Moreover he came along at exactly the right time, when Jack Johnson was the most despised figure in sports and everybody was eager to see the negro whipped.

Johnson later said in a book of his that he quit to Willard. Reliable critics insist that he didn't quit at all and actually was lucky to go 26 rounds, considering that he was 37 years old and no longer was in physical condition for fighting.

KNOCKED OUT GOLD TEETH

"All I know is that he had a habit of talking to his opponents to try to confuse them and he pulled it on me until I knocked out a handful of his gold teeth," Willard said.

The big Kansan is among the comparative old-timers who insist that the modern fighters are better than those of the past, with the notable exception that the present crop of heavyweight contenders is pretty poor.

"As for the heavyweights we've got around now, I'd like to be able to take off about 20 years and that many pounds. I could use some of the easy money they get today," he said.

TRADITION OF BALTIMORE ORIOLES LIVES TODAY BRIGHTER THAN EVER

By BILL BRANDT
National League Service Bureau Manager

Maryland's first city has a major league history of only 10 years; eight of them in the National League of the '90's, the last two in the American League's first two years of existence.

In modern baseball the Baltimore Orioles made a momentous mark in International League annals—seven-straight pennants in the heyday of Jack Dunn, 1919 to 1925, the longest string of successive championships ever recorded in any league in the whole history of the National Game.

Yet Baltimore's brief National League span wrote the city's name even more momentously than this on the pages of baseball history. The tradition of "The Old Orioles" lives today brighter than that of any other 19th century ball club except perhaps the first all-professional team, Cincinnati's undefeated "Red Stockings of '69". Great as was the achievement of "seven-straight pennants by the post-war Orioles in the lexicon of baseball the name "Baltimore" will always conjure first the picture of that rough-and-tumble, loud-talking, hard-riding, swashbuckling band of olden-time heroes who dominated the diamonds of the nation in the four years just preceding the Spanish War.

COLOR CARRIED ON

There were other great ball clubs in the National League's quarter-century of history before the 20th century's dawn. None left so deep and lasting an imprint in the story and legend of the game. The color of "The Old Orioles" carried on through the first quarter of the present century in the persons and influence of their hardiest members, McGraw, Jennings, Wilbert Robinson, Kid Gleason, Keeler, Brodie, and Jack Doyle.

Baltimore joined the National League in 1892. It was one of four cities dropped after the 1899 season when baseball's senior circuit organized in the eight-city formation that has stood firm from 1900 to the present day. It was the Orioles of the middle four years, 1894 to 1897 inclusive, that built the tradition and made high history.

OTHER GREAT TEAMS

The 19th century had other great teams; the original Chicagos, organized by Spalding and captained by Anson, which won the first National League pennant in 1876, four of the first seven pennants, six of the first 11; the St. Louis Browns of the American Association, which won fourstraight pennants, 1885 to 1888; the original New York Giants, Jim Mutrie's team that brought pennants to the metropolis in 1888 and 1889.

In the '90's there flourished a great Boston team, which throughout the reign of the Orioles disputed their dominance, and finally broke the Orioles' string of three-straight pennants by crashing through in 1897 in the race that wrecked Baltimore's baseball kingship.

HUGH DUFFY'S BAT

This was Frank Selee's Boston team; the great Kid Nichols in the box; Marty Bergen catching; Hugh Duffy the power pacemaker, recording the all-time high for a league champion with his 1894 average of .438; Long and Lowe the keystone combination, Herman the lanky "Dutchman" at shortstop, his second-baseman Bobby Lowe who on Memorial Day, 1894, became the first major leaguer ever to hit four homers in one game; Fred Tenney on first; Sliding Billy Hamilton the baseline flash; Jimmy Collins guarding third as it was never done before or since; Chick Stahl teamed in the outfield with Duffy and Hamilton after the passing of Tommy McCarthy broke up the Duffy-McCarthy "Heavenly-Twins" combination.

It took a super-team like the Orioles to vie on even terms with this Boston empire which otherwise would have dominated the baseball world of its era. When John McGraw named the 1894-97 Orioles as his section for the title of "Greatest Baseball Club in History" he pointed out that the Orioles broke through Boston's dominance after three-straight Boston pennants, 1891 to 1893, and even when the Selee myrmidons from Down East had won the 1897 pennant, the Orioles met them in the Temple Cup series and outslugged them, 4 games to 1.

BOSTON OUSTED ORIOLES

It was this Boston pennant of 1897 which sounded the knell of the Orioles, forecast the demise of Baltimore as a major league city. In 1898 Boston swept through the league again to a one-sided championship, the 5th Boston pennant in eight successive years. In 1899, Ned Hanlon, Orioles' organizer and manager, moved to Brooklyn, and as far as big league baseball achievement was concerned, the Maryland metropolis was on its way to join Nineveh and Tyre in the dusty achieves of the past.

In their four-year reign, however, the Orioles held the fancy of the public far and wide, as well as their home fans, to a greater degree than any club had ever done before, in a way that no club ever did again until John McGraw, Oriole himself, began leading his New York Giants into hostile cities amid storms of public animosity to lay waste the land and win pennants with Matty and McGinnity and "Turkey" Mike Donlin.

JENNINGS WITH DETROIT

The Orioles won pennants in 1894-5-6. They were broken up in 1899, but their paladins swaggered on into the 20th century, winning pennants for other cities, even in other leagues. To match McGraw and his Giants, the red-headed Oriole shortstop, Hugh Jennings, mobilized a Detroit Tigers' pack which won three-straight American League pennants, 1907 to 1909, and although beaten for the world championship each year, twice by the Cubs, the third time by the Pirates, the Oriole-bossed Tigers took thier place among the great American League teams of all time.

Wilbert Robinson, Oriole catcher worked as McGraw's aide until 1913, then began a 17-year Brooklyn managerial career. Orioled the Dodgers to National League pennants in 1916 and 1920, was president of the Brooklyn Club when he retired from major league activity in 1931.

Last Winter the Baseball Writers' Association of America elected Wee Willie Keeler to the Hall of Fame where John McGraw had been the Orioles' representative among the Immortals enshrined at Baseball's birthplace. Keleer was the Hugh Duffy of the Orioles; Keeler's batting average of .432 in 1897 ranked second only to Duffy's .438 as an all-time high for a major league batting champion.

Joa Kelley and Steve Brodie were Keeler's main mates in the Oriole outfield. Kelley made his mark as a major league manager, too. He had a three-year career leading the Cincinnati Reds starting in 1903. He managed the Boston National in 1908.

WENT TO BROOKLYN

Hanlon, a great outfielder himself in the '80's, star of Detroit's 1887 National League champions, took Keeler and Kelley with him to Brooklyn as the nucleus of the champion Brooklyn Superbas of 1899 and 1900. Jennings, a veteran shortstop when Hanlon brought him from Louisville, went along to Brooklyn, too, but as a first-baseman.

The Keeler-Kelley-Brodie outfield was Hanlon-trained, rookies all when they became Orioles. McGraw was a rookie. Robinson back of the bat and second-baseman Reitz were rookies. But on first base Hanlon posted the sage old satrap Dan Brouthers, Hanlon's teammate at Detroit a decade before, National League batting champion as long before as 1882 and 1883 when he formed a quarter of Buffalo's "Big Four," co-champion as a Brooklyn batter with Cupid Childs of Cleveland in 1892, the year before Hanlon invited him down to Baltimore.

SECURED JACK DOYLE

Brouthers was Oriole first baseman only the first year. In 1896 and 1897 the guardian of the initial hassock was Jack Doyle, young Jack Doyle, the man who today is closest to the big league scene of the few surviving Orioles. In the active and keenly-alert scout of the Chicago Cubs, baseball men of today, 40-odd years since, still see and feel the spirit of the Orioles living and busy.

For catchers Hanlon had Nig Clarke flanking the huge Robinson. His pitchers were chiefly the redoubtable "Kid" Gleason, "Sadie" McMahon, Charlie Esper, George Hemming and Billy Hawke. Of these the longest-lived in baseball's spotlight was the redoubtable Gleason. As a National League player in this century's first decade, he was the indomitable Oriole in the flesh. "He was an old man, as ball-players go, when I joined the Giants," said Moose McCormick, McGraw's great pinch-hitter of prewar years, "but he could handle anybody in the league even then."

GLEASON RESPECTED

The venerable "Kid," respected by the younger players for 20 years after his own playing career ended, knew the triumph of managing a pennant-winning team with his Chicago White Sox and was assistant to Connie Mack with the Philadelphia Athletics at the time of his passing on in 1933.

Hanlon raised the Orioles from last to first in less than three years. He took charge in June, 1892, but the club finished last in a 12-club league. The next year the Orioles finished eighth, but in 1894 they won the pennant by a three-game margin over John Montgomery Ward's New York Giants.

TEMPLE CUP SERIES

That year inaugurated the Temple Cup series, a post-season series between the National League's pennant-winner and runner-up. It was a revival of the post-season classics of the '80's, in which the champions of the National League and American Association met in what constituted the forerunner and inspiration of the 20th century World Series, each season's annual climax.

William C. Temple, president of the Pittsburgh club, was the donor of the Cup. It was in competition four years and although its final series in 1897 marked the last great triumph of the Orioles, they were decisively beaten in the first two years. In '94 the Giants, with Amos Rusie and Jouett Meekin pitching, beat them four straight, the scores being 4 to 1, 9 to 6, 4 to 1 and 16 to 3.

GLEASON TO SECOND

The pennant-winning Orioles of 1895 had Scoops Carey, a light-hitting but fancy-fielding first baseman, in place of the elderly Brouthers and, when Reitz was out of action from injuries, Kid Gleason transferred from the pitching department to second base, the position he graced during this century's first decade.

Oliver Tebeau's Cleveland Blues finished second in the 1895 pennant race, but first in the Temple Cup, beating the Orioles 4 games to 1. That was a great team, too. Cy Young, of the Baseball Hall of Fame, headed the Cleveland pitching staff, seconded by Nig Cuppy, with Chief Zimmer catching. Jess Burkett, the National League batting champion that year, was top power-man in the batting order, with second baseman Cupid Childs, former co-champion batsman, and outfielders Jim McAleer and Jimmy Burke prominent on the offensive. Tebeau played first base, taking throws across the diamond from McGarr and McKean at third and short.

ORIOLES' PEAK

The 1896 season was the Oriole peak, the only year they won both the pennant and the Temple Cup. Hanlon secured Jack Doyle from the Giants to play first base. His new pitching find was Joe Corbett, brother to Gentleman Jim, the world champion heavyweight boxer.

The Orioles won the pennant by a 10-game margin. They knocked off Cleveland four straight for the Temple Cup, 7-1, 7-2, 6-2 and 5-0, exactly the same Cleveland team which had taken them so handily the previous Autumn.

For '97, Hanlon discarded Brodie in favor of Jake Stenzel, mighty Pittsburgh outfielder who had been a consistent .350 hitter since his majestic average of .409 in his freshman year, 1893, representing 51 games, while the champion, Boston's Duffy, batted .378 in 131 games. But in '97, the Selee Bostons were not to be denied. Nichols and Lefty Klobedanz, Stivetts and Lewis helped with the pitching. By a two-game margin, Boston nosed out Baltimore for the pennant.

KNOCK-DOWN SERIES

Then came the last Temple Cup series, a slambang knock-down and drag-out shambles in which Boston won the first game, 13-12, then the Orioles swept along to four-straight by scores of 13-11, 8-3, 12-11 and 9-3.

In the light of 20th Century World Series totals, it seems incredible that when the Orioles divided their spoils, each received only a couple of hundred dollars, while each Boston player's share was only slightly above the $100 mark. Vox Populi, speaking at the turnstiles voted "No" on the Temple Cup series.

By a six-game margin Boston beat Baltimore for the 1898 pennant and in 1899 the Orioles were no more. Hanlon had moved to Brooklyn, taking with him Jennings, Kelley and Keeler, as nucleus of the Superbas which won the pennants in 1899 and 1900. Back in Baltimore Hanlon left John McGraw at the helm of what was left of the Orioles.

OUT OF LEAGUE

In his first year as manager, the Little Napoleon did nobly. His Orioles finished fourth in the 12-club race. But fourth was not good enough for the Oriole fans. After 1899, Baltimore passed out of the National League.

"The Old Orioles" thus climaxed and culminated a colorful chapter of baseball history, the quarter-century of the National Game's development and organization as a professional sport of nation-wide scope. They climaxed, culminated and closed the book of 19th-century baseball. They made a name for the ages; their fame comes down to posterity with the glamor and luster of a legend that lived luridly and loudly, then came to a complete and utter finis; a full stop, permitting of no further chapters or verse.

BRITISH WANT EVERY PUTT TO BE HOLED

By HOWARD BERRY

LONDON,—All points but one of the list of the greatest "evils" of golf drawn up by American golf professionals have been endorsed by J. H. Taylor, five times British Open Champion and professional to the Royal Mid-Surrey Club, Richmond, Surrey.

The point on which Taylor did not altogether agree with his American colleagues was their first and foremost golf "hate"—beginners who do not know the courtesies of the game.

"How can a raw beginner be expected to know the courtesies of the game?" Taylor commented.

"You cannot begin to learn the courtesies of golf until you have played and so can appreciate the finer points involved.

"It is too much to expect the beginner to sop up etiquette before he plays his first round, because until he has played a round he will not have the faintest idea what the etiquette is all about.

"My advice to beginners is to have one or two rounds and then study the courtesies of the game—and study them hard.

"The knowledge he has obtained of the general outline of the game in his preliminary round will enable him to understand why these courtesies are so necessary.

"Having studied the rules of etiquette in this way, the player should strictly follow them throughout his golfing life, because breaches of etiquette among those who should know better are to my mind definitely the worst evil in golf today.

"As in other walks of life, it is all a question of give-and-take. What is wanted is less selfishness on the golf course. Among some golfers today there is a tendency for too much hurry and for lack of consideration for one's opponent or for others on the course."

Taylor was in complete agreement with the second point of the American list of "evils"—conceding short putts.

"It is common among all classes and calibres of golfers in Britain" he said. "I should like to see the same rule embodied in match play as in medal play—that no putt should be conceded but that all should be holed out.

"That would sometimes save a tremendous amount of ill-feeling."

Gambling for high stakes is another of the American "evils," but Taylor is of the opinion that Britain is not nearly as bad as America in that respect.

"Except possibly in very wealthy circles, there is very little heavy gambling over here in these days," he said. "People realize that if the game is good enough to play it ought not to depend for excitement on huge side stakes."

Taylor wholeheartedly agreed with the American professional's condemnation of men and women who begin to play without taking lessons.

"To start playing without proper instruction," he said, "may cause tremendous injury to the future of one's game—an injury that may never be eradicated."

Tentative Selections Made for U.S. Davis Cup Squad

Domei Tsushin

RYE, NEW YORK, Aug. 10—Walter Pate, non-playing captain of the United States Davis Cup squad, which will meet the winner of the inter-zone finals in the challenge round of this year's Davis Cup competitions, today made his initial selections for this year's American team.

Captain Pate declared that four players would be chosen from the following to defend Davis Cup.

1. Robert "Bobby" Riggs
2. Frank Parker
3. Bryan "Bitsy" Grant
4. Elwood T. Cooke
5. Sydney B. Wood
6. Gene Mako
7. Donald McNeil

Captain Pate indicated that he would not pick a team until the last moment. He pointed out that other names may later be included in the foregoing list.

FINNS SPARING NO EXPENSE TO STAGE GAMES

HELSINKI, Finland,—This capital of Finland is already preparing for the rush of visitors to the Olympic Games which are to be held here next year. The Finns are sparing no expense to put over the games in a big way.

The gigantic games stadium with its huge white tower is almost completed. New hotels are being built and old ones are being re-decorated and new wings are being added. The whole town is a hive of industry. At Malm, a suburb about 6 miles out of Helsingfors, a magnificent new airport has been built to cope with the air traffic.

Air Transport Companies are at present planning special services to operate between England and from all parts of the Continent to Helsingfors.

K.L.M. Royal Dutch Air Lines, working in cooperation with A. B. A. Swedish Air Lines this year are operating a fast same-day connection from London, Manchester, Doncaster, Liverpool to Helsingfors, via Amsterdam and Stockholm. It has not yet been decided whether this service will be duplicated or triplicated during the games period in 1940.

A.B.A. Swedish Air Lines plan to operate no less than 30 services a day between Stockholm and Helsingfors while Aero, the Finnish Air Transport Company, plans to operate services at regular intervals from 4 o'clock in the morning until midnight from Helsingfors to Tallim and from Helsingfors to Stockholm, calling at Abo in Finland. The Finnish Company are purchasing two giant new Focke-Wulf Condor air liners to cope with the traffic.

It will be possible for English people to fly from the North of England and London to Stockholm, spend their holidays there and pay flying visits to the Olympic Games at Helsingfors.

Pro Football Players In Demand as Grid Coaches

NEW YORK—Colleges throughout the country are engaging National Football League players as gridiron coaches in increasing number.

These college demands have taken a heavy toll of the league's Brooklyn Club. Four of Potsy Clark's Dodgers have been lured away by offers to coach.

Johnny Druze, Fordham's star end, was one of the first appointees of Boston College's new head coach, Frank Leahy, to act as his assistant. Norman Cooper, the wiry center from Howard College in Alabama, will be head coach of his alma mater this Autumn. Likewise, Wendell Butcher, the husky back of Gustavus Adolphus College in Minnesota, will be his college's head coach this season.

Bill Waller, Indiana end, who went back to his university for another semester this year to get his diploma, will be teacher-coach at Benton School in Benton, Ind.

MRS. HOPMAN TO PLAY TENNIS HERE IN FALL

Mrs. Harry Hopman, wife of the captain of the Australian Davis Cup team, second ranking woman player in her own right in Australia and co-holder of the mixed doubles title with her husband, will come to Japan in the Fall and compete against the leading woman stars here.

Mrs. Hopman will accompany her husband, Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, the last three having accepted the invitation of the Japan Lawn Tennis Association to play here while en route home after the Davis Cup matches.

Request that Mrs. Hopman be invited to Japan was made by Mr. Hopman and the local Association promptly agreed. The Association at the same time wired Mr. Hopman to have John Bromwich, Australia's No. 1 player, to make the trip too if at all possible.

The Australian team is favored to down Yugoslavia in the inter-zone finals and is believed to have a good chance of downing America in the challenge round. America's chance of retaining the trophy will depend on the play of Robert Riggs, who won the Wimbledon championship this year in his first appearance there. The Australian Davis Cuppers preferred to stay in America to prepare for the Cup matches and did not go to Wimbledon.

AD WOLGAST IN HOSPITAL

By BURDETTE JAY

LOS ANGELES—Down Memory Lane with Ad Wolgast, the great former lightweight champion of the world:

We stopped on the way to Soper's ranch at Camarillo, where Jack Roper is training for his bout with Joe Louis, and picked up Ad Wolgast, and "Hobo" Daugherty, his old friend and trainer. Once every week or so, "Hobo" visits Wolgast at the State Hospital and takes him for a ride or a visit around the neighboring countryside.

Wolgast climbed slowly into the automobile. He has to be helped around now.

LOOKED LIKE ORDINARY MAN

He settled heavily into place. He looked like the average man of 50, his face bearing no more signs of battle than the ordinary man of the ring except for the right eye, which might have been jammed out of focus in some fight of the past.

He smiled happily and joined freely in the conversation as we rolled along.

"Do you still keep in condition?" asked Dick Donald, the boxing manager who saw Wolgast in many of his greatest battles.

"No," said Wolgast.

"No," he repeated. "There's nothing wrong with me except I can't remember things that happened recently."

As we chatted Wolgast said definitely and later repeated several times, that his name was really Adolph Izzo and that he was born in Venice, Italy, coming to Cadillac, Mich., when he was a child. Everyone was surprised.

"Now that's a story," suggested Bill Miller, the publicity man. "That is the first time I've ever heard the Fighting Dutchman was really an Italian."

"How do you spell your real name "How do you spell your real name, Ad?"

"I-Z-Z-O," replied Wolgast. "Izzo. I was adopted by a Dutch family in Cadillac."

"Hobo" Daugherty, his trainer when Ad was in his prime, shook his head and told us to ignore this statement. He said he knew Wolgast's parents back in Michigan.

Daugherty switched the conversation to Wolgast's fighting days. Wolgast picked up immediately and narrated incidents and figures that tallied exactly with facts.

"How did you finally beat 'Bat' Nelson?" asked Donald.

"The referee stopped it in the 40th," said Wolgast. "But I don't remember much about what happened after the 23rd round. He knocked me down in the 22nd.

"He was hard to fight because he was so tall. He could see over my head. He used to swear at me. I never learned to swear until I found out how from Nelson in the fights we had.

"I weighed 124 pounds that afternoon and gained one pound during the match," he added. "I wore my business manager and trainer out climbing into the ring by the 34th round." He chuckled at the thought.

Donald kept asking Wolgast what he thought of the Rivers fight which ended in a double knockout.

But Wolgast wouldn't discuss Rivers. He talked right over the question. He said George Memsic always gave him his toughest fights. He said Willie Ritchie, the man who lifted his title, was a very good man.

Wolgast really wanted to talk about other things and time and again he'd retell the same story. But you could always steer him back to fights.

The question "How did you happen to become a fighter" brought this answer:

WHERE HE MADE START

"I had a street fight in Cadillac. I was a kid of 15. My opponent said I was so good I ought to be a fighter. He said he knew boys who were making $50 two or three times a month in the prize ring. That sounded good to me so I went in for fighting. In three years I beat 'Bat' Nelson."

Wolgast always claims he beat Nelson in their first. He did get credit for a newspaper decision but officially it was a no decision bout.

"It's a funny thing about me," mused Wolgast. "I never could box. I never met a man who couldn't outbox me. But I could always beat 'em anyway."

Donald ventured that it was his great courage and strength that did it.

"It was stamina all right," acknowledged Wolgast. "I'd wear 'em down," he said.

Fresh in Wolgast's memory is the favor he once did for a promoter. He voluntarily gave up a bigger purse in order to help out a friend. Later the friend wouldn't loan him a few hundred when he needed it. He repeated this tale several times.

One of his favorite tales is about a $250 sealskin coat he had which his father-in-law borrowed one morning and went out to "rassel freight with."

Also he likes to talk of the time he came home with a $10,000 note and almost made his wife's eyes pop out.

Wolgast is friendly and quick to acknowledge greetings of those he knew in the past.

When Daugherty introduced him to Dick Donald, saying, "You remember Dick Donald don't you?" Wolgast replied: "I don't remember the face but the name is familiar."

Later at Soper's Ranch, he was quite interested in learning that Jack Roper was to fight Joe Louis in Los Angeles.

"Do you want to see the fight, Ad?" asked "Hobo."

"Who wouldn't?" he returned quickly.

Ad tires soon and Daugherty doesn't keep him out long. He was soon on his way back to Camarillo with the great old champ.

All-Kansai Beats Chosen Track Team

By an overwhelming score of 75½ to 39½, the Kansai All-Stars defeated the All-Chosen track and field team Thursday afternoon at the Koshien stadium, near Osaka.

Kin Yoku Sawa of the visitors was the bright star of the meet, winning the 100-meter dash in 10.5 seconds, which is the best time record in Japan this year. He was off to a good start and defeated Yoshihara of Kyoto Imperial University by 2½ meters.

The points were split as follows:

	Chosen	Kansai
100-m.	4	6
400-m.	2	8
800-m.	5	5
5,000-m.	4	6

PEACE MOVE GAINS STRENGTH IN N. CHINA

China Affairs Board Head To Make 10-Day Inspection Trip of Peking and Kalgan

Domei Tsushin

PEKING, Aug. 12—A fresh political development in North China as the result of Wang Ching-wei's peace movement is seen in a strong desire among political circles here to strengthen the existing regimes.

It is yet premature to anticipate the establishment of a single rule in China in a short span of time, political circles believe, because all the facilities in the fields of politics, economics, finances and police are still out of order.

It is evident, the same circles opine, that in case such a single administration be brought into existence it will be impossible for it to take over immediately the task of maintaining peace and order in the occupied areas as the Japanese Army is doing now.

Accordingly political circles maintain that the existing administrations ought to be strengthened as an immediate step to help construct a new order in the Far East.

Such under-current is becoming stronger throughout North China, especially in Kalgan, it is said, with the result that serious consideration is being given toward reinforcement of the Autonomous Government of Inner Mongolia.

Lieutenant General Heisuke Yanagawa, director-general of the China Affairs Board, it is learned, will make a 10-day trip late this month in and around Peking and [illegible] with the object of inspecting the actual political situation in this part of China.

ADVOCATES REFORM

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12—The Chung Hwa Ji Pao, an organ or Wang Ching-wei and his peace faction, in its editorial this morning says that the Kuomintang or the National Party must be re-organized so that it can be qualified to conclude peace with Japan. Below is a summary of the Chung Hwa Ji Pao's editorial:

"In his radio speech from Canton Wang Ching-wei made it clear that General Chiang Kai-shek is standing in the way of peace and for this reason all the Chinese people both at the front and the statesmen behind the line should at once free themselves from General Chiang's sphere of influence and that they should strive to usher in an era of peace in the fields where they can freely act.

"In view of the fact that General Chiang does not seem to reconsider his present attitude of continuing the campaign of resistance in cooperation with the Communists, there is only one way and that is to reorganize the Kuomintang outside the sphere of influence of the Chungking Government, so that a central body qualified to talk peace with Japan can be established.

UNITY STRESSED

"In order to accelerate peace with Japan it will be advisable to conclude peace at each local province, but in realizing this there must be a central organ which can lead such peace, so that the peace movements can be unified. Therefore, it is the duty of all Chinese statesmen to rally to the peace movement of Mr. Wang and effect re-organization of the present Kuomintang, so that it will be entirely free from the yoke of Communism.

"Japan once put up a slogan 'Down with the National Government, Down with the Kuomintang and Down with the Three People's Principle.' But we cannot agree with Japan on this score. We insist that peace with Japan must be concluded in accordance with the Three People's Principles and with a Government suported by a new Kuomintang which follows the Three People's Principles. Let it, however, be borne in mind that we admit that the Blue Shirts clique and the Communists do not pay respect to the Three People's Principles. The Chungking Government by its association with the Blue Shirts and Communists has lost its qualifications as Kuomintang. Therefore, it is a matter of urgent importance for the Chinese people to re-organize a new Kuomintang, including those members of the present Kuomintang, who do not agree with General Chiang.

of the Japanese landing party in Shanghai, today issued the following statement:

"The Japanese landing units in Shanghai two years ago opened fire against the Chinese troops, accepting their challenge and thus the Japanese operation in Central China was started.

"On this memorable occasion, the Japanese here express their condolence to the fallen comrades and at the same time pledge their efforts to attain the final objective of Japan's holy campaign.

"The rehabilitation work in and around Shanghai has made a remarkable progress and the city of Shanghai is now playing an important role in reconstruction of Central China. In cooperation with the municipal councils of the International Settlement and French Concession and the foreign garrison forces, the Japanese Navy is making efforts to maintain peace and order here which are indispensable for rehabilitation work.

"The Chinese terrorists who take advantage of extraterritoriality of the foreign concessions have been considerably disturbing peace and order, but they are steadily being suppressed since the Japanese authorities made an agreement with the concession authorities with regard to the control of anti-Japanese elements."

SHANGHAI TAKES PRECAUTION

With the second anniversary of the Shanghai fighting falling on today, authorities of the International Settlement and French Concession in Shanghai took special precaution to prevent any outbreak of terrorism. Chile and Spain Sever Relations

Special to The Japan Times

SANTIAGO, Aug. 11—Relations between Spain and Chile are now believed to have been virtually severed following the rupture of negotiations for the handing over of Spanish political refugees in Chile to the France Government.

After the representatives of the two governments had failed to reach an agreement in the negotiations, the Chilean Government formally announced the discontinuance of the parley day before yesterday, simultaneously notifying the diplomatic representatives of the American States to that effect.

JAPANESE PRESS OPINION

August 13

DELIVERY OF MURDERERS

MIYAKO—The British Government on the evening of August 11 abruptly announced that it had decided to hand over to the Japanese military authorities the four Chinese terrorists who murdered Cheng Hsi-keng, an official of the Provisional Government at Peking. The delivery of the murderers is one of our demands and therefore the British decision is quite natural.

However, it is extremely difficult for us to understand the action of the British Government in separating this questions from the remaining ones and issuing unilateral announcement at this moment when the Anglo-Japanese parley is faced with a serious impasse. Perhaps the British Government has come to realize that it is conspicuously illegal to protect the murderers, and reached a conclusion that it is advantageous for it to hand them over to the Japanese authorities, irrespective of success or failure of the Anglo-Japanese negotiations. It is also quite imaginable that Britain may utilize the present action in making an excuse in the event the Tokyo parley proves a failure. Shrewdness is rather amazing.

The question of delivery of murderers is the very factor which caused the Tientsin issue, but the purpose of the present Anglo-Japanese negotiations is not to solve such a partial question. The object of the conference indeed is to cause Britain to understand and recognize the actual conditions in East Asia and to abandon its policies hostile to Japan and helpful to Japan's enemy. It is a dirty trick to make a deceptive interpretation as if delivery of the murderers constiutes a settlement of the Tientsin issue, in an attempt to evade responsibility. It is impudent on the part of Britain to ask the Japanese authorities to alleviate the blockade against the Tientsin Concession on the strength of the delivery of the murderers. Britain is advised to assume promptly a clear-cut attitude without resorting to a petty trick.

SPIRIT RATHER THAN FORMALITY

TOKYO NICHI-NICHI—As is stated in Cabinet instructions gazetted on August 11, the Asia Development Service Day has been set up to be observed on the first day of each month, on which the entire nation, especially appreciating the hardships suffered by the Imperial forces on the war front, fully applies the spirit of self-admonition and self-reflection to the actual life, so that the people in fullest cooperation may participate in the great undertaking of establishing a new order in East Asia, and to push forward to the realization of the stronger Japanese Empire. The Service Day is to start on September 1. It may well be said that this is an effective and appropriate attempt to bolster and emphasize the National Spiritual Mobilization Campaign along with the increased gravity of the prevailing situation.

On the Asia Development Service Day, the entire nation must sincerely adjust their living conditions in consonance with the spirit of self-reflection and self-admonition, as stressed in the Cabinet instructions. Yet, how to fully apply this spirit to the actual life is a serious question. There may be many ways in which it can be realized either individually or organically. However, the best is to leave the matter to spontaneous, independent and voluntary measures that may be adopted by individuals or organizations. The Government's interference, direction and order must be avoided as far as possible.

The China Affair has entered upon the third year, and all the people must have fully realized the gravity of the situation. They ought know how to observe the Asia Development Service Day. The spirit is more important than the formality in observing the Service Day.

FORMULATION OF BUDGET PLAN

HOCHI—Budget plans of different departments of the Government for the next fiscal year have been submitted to the Accounting Bureau of the Finance Minister more than a month earlier than usual, in line with the agreement among all the departments. This reflects the serious attitude assumed by officials under the wartime situation. However, reform in the budget formulating method cannot be confined to a mere promptness in submitting the plans.

In the first place, the Government should drop all the time-worn methods and ideas with respect to the Budget, which must be formulated in line with the planned economy.

All the methods and ideas which were prevalent during the era of capitalism must be completely discarded. The scope of the budget plan may be expanded to ¥7,000,000,000 or even to ¥10,000,000,000, if such expenditures are essential to meet the prevailing emergency situation. Yet any appropriations for the customary and unnecessary items must be flatly rejected.

Again, the budget is inseparably connected with the material resources mobilization plan, and therefore, the budget plan formulated prior to decision on the material mobilization plan is meaningless. The budget plan of the Government must be formulated mainly by the Cabinet. The Cabinet at least should determine essential undertakings for the next fiscal year, prior to the commencement of technical consideration by the bureau officials. Matters relating to the budget may be left to the hands of the bureau officials in peace-time, but such cannot be permissible in wartime.

2ND ANNIVERSARY

TOKYO ASAHI—Today marks the second anniversary of the outbreak of what is known as the second Shanghai incident. It was on this day two years ago that illegal firing by the Chinese on the Japanese forces at Shanghai compelled Japan to abandon its non-enlargement policy which it had pursued since the eventfull night of July 7, the day when the present Affair started.

It is worthy of special mention in world history how our naval landing parties at that time fought against heavy odds, defended our positions with desperate efforts and yet continued to repulse the enemy forces until reinforcements arrived there.

Following this, our naval forces began to seize Shanghai and then carried out the historic transoceanic air raids on Nanking and thus attained brilliant achievements in blockading the China waters as well as the Yangtze River.

We cannot but be deeply moved when we review the past brilliant achievements on both land and sea at this particular juncture.

We must not review the incident, however, merely as the case which already ended, but review it with a firm determination of making further efforts in the future in view of the current situation which is more complicated and aggravated.

As it is clear in the statement issued by Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma Friday in connection with the establishment of Asia Promotion Service Day to the effect that more exaltation of the national spirit and display of national unity must be necessary for the realization of the object of our "sacred war," our review must be backed once again by a firm determination.

Naval Air Force Continues Activity in South China

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12—Japanese naval air force on Friday carried out a series of air raids on Chinese positions in and around Haiteng in southeastern Fukien province, the press section of the Japanese Naval Fleet in China Waters announced this afternoon.

Chinese troops remaining at Fengki, Paotai and Huhsiang, all near Chaochow in eastern Kwangtung province, were heavily bombed and machine-gunned by Japanese naval planes, according to the announcement.

Tydings to Be Candidate For Presidency of U. S.

Domei Tsushin

BALTIMORE, Maryland Aug. 12—Senator Millard E. Tydings, Democrat and prominent anti-New Dealer, has accepted to put forward his candidature for next year's presidential elections at the request of the "Calvert Club" group of Baltimore, it was disclosed here.

Senator Tydings, co-author of the Tydings-McDuffie Philippine Independence law, is a firm opponent of the New Deal and was re-elected to the Senate in 1938 despite President Roosevelt's attempts to have him defeated at the polls. He is 59 years old and was elected to the Senate for the first time in 1926. He was re-elected in 1932 and 1938.

tant development in this connection is a movement planned for spontaneous suspension of all motorcars and boats in July for the purpose of contributing sums of money equivalent to one day's gasoline expenses to the Government. This plan is supported by all classes of people, and there is a possibility that it would develop into a broad-scale national movement, and thus the Government ordered to stop the agitation in fear of serious incidents.

It appears that the present oil controversies between the Thai Government and the foreign oil companies, has tended to intensify and broaden the nationalistic movement in Thailand and the situation is considered very grave.

Emperor Decorates Finnish Minister

His Majesty the Emperor graciously decorated Hugo Valvanne, outgoing Finnish Minister to Japan, with the First Class Order of the Sacred Treasure, in recognition of his services rendered for promotion of friendly relations between Japan and Finland, it was announced by the Imperial Household Ministry Saturday.

Mr. Valvanne will shortly leave here for his country.

ANGLO-CHINESE FAPI TALKS CLOSELY WATCHED

Only Way Out for Chungking Is to Create New Currency, Think Hongkong Observers

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, Aug. 12—With arrivals here of Cyril Rogers, economic adviser to the National Government, from Shanghai this morning aboard the Victoria, financial circles are watching with great interest what remedial measures will be taken by the Anglo-Chinese Financial Conference.

On the other hand, possibility of strengthening the Exchange Stabilization Fund is being dismissed as hopeless in all quarters, and there is a strong belief among well informed circles that the only way out of the impasse is for the Chungking Government to issue a new currency.

TWO MEASURES

According to reliable information gleaned from high officials of Chinese banks, it appears that Chungking is contemplating two measures in connection with the issuance of a new currency. One is to issue convertible notes with silver specie for the issue reserve, making the comparative value with the present fapi at the rate of 5 to 1. The issue reserve is to be under the control of a joint Anglo-Chinese commission.

The other plan is to induce both America and France to join hands with Britain in making an investment and thereby making an international issue reserve.

FAPI DROPS

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, Aug. 12—With the report of the retrun of Mr. Rogers from Shanghai, the legal tender which made a sharp drop yesterday recovered to $25.5 at one time but it soon dropped to $23.5. Yesterday's quotations were $25.5 at the highest and $21.5 at the lowest.

The quotation opened at $23.5 this morning but an atmosphere of insecurity still prevails throughout the market.

SHEN PAO COMMENTS

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, Aug. 12—In the face of the continued chaotic condition of fapi or the legal tender on the Shanghai Exchange market, the Anglo-Chinese Financial Conference is being watched with great anxiety, although it is generally believed here it will be practically impossible to formulate any effective measure to cope with the alarming situation.

The Chinese circles here are holding a very pessimistic view of the future of fapi in view of the fact that the British attitude is still hanging fire. In this atmosphere the Shen Pao, editorially commenting on the British attitude toward fapi in this morning's issue, attached great importance to the assistance of Britain, which the paper says is most anxiously awaited. A summarized translation of the editorial follows:

"The legal tender in Shanghai forms the mainstay of the Chinese currency, for it is the medium of China's overseas trade, and at the same time as it serves as a principal object of speculation. Therefore, the question of the legal tender in Shanghai is very much complicated. However, to allow the fapi to take its own course will bring about a very serious effect.

NO REACTION

"The British Government in the past made clear its attitude toward the legal tender, and if it really intends to maintain and support the fapi, it should be an easy matter for Britain to do so with her economic power. So far the frequent statements made by the British Government that no change had undergone in the British attitude to support the fapi have had no favorable reaction on the exchange market. Some quarters are of the opinion that although Britain has support of fapi on her lips, at heart she is not intending to do anything any more. So long as Britain does not translate her promise into action, suspicion naturally arises.

"We are firmly convinced that Britain will not mind some sacrifices for the maintenance of a reasonable level in the value of fapi, for we feel that the rise or decline of the legal tender is the key to the rise or fall of the British interests in China. We do not think that the foundation of the legal tender is by any means weak. What with the loss of the principal maritime customs and the huge amount of imports through Shanghai, it is only natural that these facts react unfavorably on the Chinese dollar.

"Therefore, we sincerely hope that Britain will consolidate the power of upholding the fapi. If Britain should go a step further and enlist international support toward the fapi, the problem, we are sure, can be easily solved. In her international relationship, China is most closely related to Britain, and the former naturally holds out the greatest hope for help."

BEST TIMES FOR YEAR MADE IN 2 EVENTS IN NATIONAL SWIM

No records were shattered in the national swimming championships Sunday night at the Meiji Shrine pool but the contestants showed great promise for Japan in the 12th Olympic Games next year at Helsinki by registering the best times for this year in two events. Despite rain that fell heavily from early in the evening up to 9 o'clock when the trials for the men's 1,500-meter freestyle were held, a good-sized crowd hung on and cheered enthusiastically until the final race for the night. The meet will come to an end tonight with finals in the women's 200-meter breaststroke, men's 200-meter freestyle, men's 100-meter backstroke, women's 200-meter freestyle, men's 200-meter breaststroke, women's 100-meter backstroke, and men's 1,500-meter freestyle. The first race starts at 6 p.m.

HAMURO STARS

In winning his heat in the 200-meter breaststroke, Tetsuo Hamuro of Nihon University, the Olympic title-holder in this event, set the best time for this event when he negotiated this distance in 2 minutes 41.6 seconds. He was off to a lead at the bark of the gun and increased it all the way through. The world's record is held by Jack Kasley of the United States at 2 minutes 37.2 seconds, but set in a 25-yard pool, in which a contestant gains considerably by the turns. Hamuro's national record is 2 minutes 40.4 seconds. His Olympic record is 2 minutes 42.5 seconds.

Shigeru Miyamoto, husky youngster from Waseda University, captured the 400-meter freestyle championship in a humdinger of a race. His time was 4 minutes 48 seconds. He and Hiroshi Takahashi of Keio and Eisaku Tanaka, also of Waseda University, turned simultaneously at the 350-meter mark and it was a battle royal down the last 50 meters. All three swimmers had been off to a fast start that they seemed to have slowed down considerably at the 300-meter mark but they spurted, from about the 325 mark. Miyamoto shot up his pitch at the 370 mark and pulled ahead to beat Tanaka by two strokes. Takahashi was a stroke behind Tanaka.

All three times by Miyamoto, Tanaka and Takahashi were the best yet recorded for the year. The best up to then had been Kiyoshi Nakama's time of 4 minute 51 seconds in Honolulu.

ARAI WINS

Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University won the 100-meter freestyle but he failed to meet the expectations of the experts. His time was 58.6 seconds when some had hoped that he might make it in the 57's. The rain was heaviest when this race was held.

Demonstrating a strong stroke all the way through Miss Yuriko Miki of the Dohi Girls School became new titleholder of the women's 400-meter freestyle. She won by three meters from Miss Hiroko Kajio of the Aichi Shukutoku School. Tomiko Hatada of the Tokyo Prefectural Girls High School a mere slip of a girl, finished fourth, behind Miss Tsuneko Furuta of the Girls School. The winning time was 6 minutes 5.2 seconds.

Miss Chisako Nanri of Kobe defeated the titleholder, Miss Kinuko Nakayama, unattached in the women's 100-meter breaststroke by a touch. Both were timed at 1 minute 33.6 seconds. Miss Kimiko Nonaka the Kanto champion, was third, only two-tenth second behind them.

2 NEW CHAMPIONS

Two new champions were crowned in the women's 100-meter freestyle and 50-meter backstroke in the persons of Miss Miyo Inouye of the Aichi Daiichi Girls School in 1 minute 18 seconds and Miss Satoshi Ito of the Girls Physical School in 40 seconds.

Tomikatsu Amano of Nihon University, world record holder in the 1,500-meter freestyle, made the best time among the qualifiers with a 19 minutes 32. 8 seconds performance.

Miss Masayo Osawa, Olympic contestant, won both the springboard and high diving titles with 102.04 and 37.77 points respectively. Second in both cases were Miss Fumiko Tatematsu of the Seijo High School with 100.89 and 36.19 points.

The results were:

FINALS

Women's 100-m. freestyle:—Won by Miye Inouye (Aichi Daiichi); 2. Kinuko Nagata (Komatsu); 3. Michiko Yoshida (Kure Seika). Time—1 min. 18 secs.

Men's 100-m. Freestyle:—Won by Shigeo Arai (Rikkyo); 2. Takeshi Sasaki (Nihon); 3. Shigeo Sugiura (Kokai). Time—58.6 secs.

Men's 400-m. freestyle:—Won by Shigeru Miyamoto (Waseda); 2. Eisaku Tanaka (Waseda); 3. Hiroshi Takahashi (Keio). Time—4 mins. 48 seconds.

Women's 50-m. Backstroke:—Won by Satoshi Ito (Joshi Taisen); 2. Masako Hotehama (Dohi Jogakuyen); 3. Kikuko Hirota (Hyogo Nijo). Time—40 seconds.

Women's 400-m. freestyle:—Won by Yuriko Miki (Dohi Jogakuyen); 2. Hiroko Kajio (Aichi Shukutoku); 3. Tsuneko Furuta (Joshi Taisen). Time—6 mins 5.2 secs.

Women's 100-m. breaststroke:—Won by Chisako Nanri (Hyogo Nijo); 2. Kinuko Nakayama (Unattached); 3. Kimiko Nonaka (Tokyo Prefectural 4th Higher School). Time—1 min. 33.6 secs.

Motor Boat Speeders After World Marks

NEW YORK—World motor boat speeds, which are topped by the unlimited hydroplane mark of 130.93 miles an hour Sir Malcolm Campbell made with his special mile trial boat, Bluebird, in Switzerland last Fall, may have a general revision this Summer in view of the many record attempts planned here and abroad.

Campbell himself will lead the assault on the speed tables and is planning to make a run next month, probably on Lake Bala, in Merionethshire, England, with a new boat built from American designs.

Jean Dupuy, French outboard driver, now lays claim to the world Class X outboard record of 79.03 miles an hour, made over a one kilometer course on the Seine at Paris. This mark, approved, will surpass the 78.12 m.p.h. speed made two years ago by Bedford Davie, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and probably will start American outboard pilots working to bring the toga back to this country.

Among other international water speed records the Gold Cup, or 12-liter standard of 91.408 m.p.h. established by Count Theo Rossi, of Italy, at Washington, D.C., in 1937, may be subjected to attack. Rossi is still racing the same record holding craft, Alagi, but several new American Gold Cup boats have been built for which speeds of upwards of 100 miles an hour are claimed.

With the unlimited speed already at 130 miles an hour, motor boat officials hesitate to comment on what the next few years may contribute to the record tables. From 1929 to the current season the mark has jumped nearly 38 miles an hour in the span of 10 years. This rise has been due largely to the determination of the British to hold the water speed mark and although Gar Wood, Harmsworth champion of Detroit, gave them a battle for a number of years, Campbell's accomplishments have gone unchallenged.

YALE TO GET WATER POLO STAR FROM OXFORD

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Yale University is to gain one expert water-polo player next Fall—R. M. Lodge, captain of this year's Oxford University team. Lodge, the Oxford-born son of a British judge on the bench in India, played a remarkably fine game against Cambridge in the 1939 inter-varsity match at the Empire Pool, Wembley, and obtained two goals. But he did not fulfill his great ambition of leading the Dark Blues to victory against the Light, because the Cantabs scored five goals, all registered by their brilliant captain, R. B. Garforth.

This man, who has played for England in international competition, was absolutely on the top of his form. As Lodge did, he found the net twice in the first half of the match, and, after the interval, there was no stopping him. Altogether Garforth has been responsible for 13 goals against Oxford, for he notched four in both 1937 and 1938.

The water polo match, instituted in 1891, is one of the few inter-varsity clashes in which one side has managed to gain and sustain a pronounced superiority. Twenty-four times has Cambridge proved victorious, against Oxford's fourteen, and seven battles have ended with honors easy. The last occasion of a tied match, by the way, was as far back as 1908.

These results would seem to postulate that the Light Blues, generally speaking, have speedier swimmers. And evidence in support of this supposition is furnished by the records of the inter-varsity swimming match itself. This was first held one year after the water polo game was inaugurated and only 11 times have the Oxonians been victorious. Cambridge, on the other hand, can claim 29 successes and four contests in the 47-year-old series have been drawn.

This season, however, the Dark Blues carried the day—by the narrow margin of 28 points to 25. A fact for which they had mainly to thank D. L. Powell, a freshman from Monmouth School. In Wales, Powell has won several national championships, so it came as no surprise to people who have followed his swimming career when he outpaced the pick of the Cambridge racers over 220 yards and 440 yards, freestyle. His times for these distances were 2m. 31s. and 5m. 30.4s., respectively, the latter constituting a record for the inter-varsity meet. The previous best for the Oxford-Cambridge quarter-mile was 5m. 35s. by Robert Mitchell, Cambridge, in 1934, the year when the contest was first held in public. Up to that time it was just a private affair, staged at the Bath Club, London.

SOUTH AFRICAN STAR

The only individual event won by Cambridge this year was the 150 yards backstroke, in which the Light Blues were represented by the well-known South African swimmer, A. L. Brink, champion of the South African Universities for the backstroke in 1936, champion of the Transvaal in 1937 and captain of swimming at Witwatersrand University last year. He won against Oxford in 1m. 56.4s. Another South African to distinguish himself was W. S. Webber, who gave the Cantabs an excellent start in the 4x50 yards freestyle relay. R. R. Garforth, R. D. I. Gibson and M. A. Liddle carried on the good work and the result was a victory for them in 1m. 49.4s.

All the other races on the program went to Oxford. Namely, the 3 x 100 yards medley relay (backstroke, breaststroke and freestyle), the 100 yards freestyle and the 200 yards breaststroke. G. C. Stockwell won the "100" in 60s. precisely; N. E. Monie repeated his breaststroke victory of last year (his time, 2m. 48.2s. was 2s. slower than the inter-varsity record he put up in 1938); and, for the purposes of the medley relay these two men joined forces with a backstroke specialist, M. E. A. Rowden, the trio winning in 3m. 38.8s.

OLYMPIC CHAMPION SHINES

Tetsuo Hamuro of Nihon University as he negotiated a time of 2 minutes 41.6 seconds in the trials of the 200-meter breaststroke Sunday night in the national championships at the Meiji Shrine pool, which is the best time yet recorded this year for the event. The Olympic champion is a hot favorite tonight to retain his title for the fourth time.

MACK SAYS HIS 1911 TEAM IS THE BEST HE HAS MANAGED

By HENRY P. EDWARDS
American League Service Bureau Manager

Christian Science Monitor

With only the few changes in line-up to be expected in a course of five years, the Philadelphia Athletics won the American League pennant and world championship in 1910, repeated in 1911, dropped to third place in 1912 and then went on to win two more flags and a third world championship in the next two years. Connie Mack, the noblest veteran of them all, declares firmly that his team of 1911 is the best he ever managed, even better than the great teams he piloted to victory in 1929, 1930 and 1931.

The Athletics won the American League pennant in 1902 and again in 1905, thanks to the great pitching of Rube Waddell, Chief Bender and Eddie Plank. The famous Chicago "Hitless Wonders" won in 1906. Hughey Jennings then went to Detroit as manager and, under his meteoric leadership, the Tigers, including such famous players as Ty Cobbs, Sam Crawford, Bill Donavan and George Mullin, captured three pennants in a row but failed to win a World Series.

REBUILT CLUB

During those three seasons, the Athletics finished second in 1907, sixth in 1908 and second again in 1909. It was in the Spring of 1909 that Connie Mack announced that he had rebuilt a championship club, despite the fact he was sending an infield of youngsters into the campaign.

Who were those youngsters? Stuffy McInnis, who could play either short or first base and had been discovered playing on a New England semi-pro team; Eddie Collins, who, under the name of "Sullivan" had played a few games for the Athletics in 1906 and then returned to Columbia University, rejoining the Athletics in 1908 to play under his right name; Jack Barry, Holy Cross shortstop, who had been recommended to Connie by his own brother; Frank (Home Run) Baker, who had had but one year of professional experience at Reading, Pa. Catchers Ira Thomas and Paddy Livingstone also joined the Mackmen that year.

BENDER, PLANK, COOMBS

These youthful athletes found the Athletics equipped with a veteran pitching staff, including Chief Bender, Eddie Plank and Jack Coombs, all three of whom had jumped right from the college campus to join the Macks, Bender from Carlisle, Plank from Gettysburg and Coombs from Colby. Other pitchers were Jimmy Dygert, a spitball pitcher from New Orleans, Cy Morgan, a powerful right hander; Rube Vickers, a rather erratic hurler; Harry Krause, a skillful southpaw. Harry Davis, veteran first sacker, was still on the job. So were Outfielders Danny Murphy, Rube Oldring, Topsy Hartsel and Heitmuller, while Jack Lapp was a holdover behind the bat.

This mixture of veterans and youngsters finished only three and a half games out of first place in 1909, but it really went to town the following year, winning the pennant by fourteen and a half games from New York and then proceeding to trounce the Chicago Cubs in the World Series, winning four games out of five, Jack Coombs being the victorious pitcher in three games. The Athletic line-up was slightly changeed in 1910. Bris Lord replaced Hartsel in the outfield while Amos Strunk became a rookie gardener, taking part in the World Series, being out of the game with an injured leg most of the year. McInnis failed to break into the series, Davis playing first. By the way, Eddie Collins stole 81 bases that season and a few more in the World Series.

PRACTICALLY STOOD PAT

Such was the material that Connie Mack had at the end of the 1910 campaign. He practically made no changes for the campaign of 1911. In other words, he stood pat, except that he installed Stuffy McInnis on first in place of Harry Davis. But when Eddie Collins was injured in a collision with Danny Murphy, Derrick, utility infielder, went to second base for 20 games and when Jack Barry was forced, out of the line-up for close to a month, McInnis went to short and Davis returned to first base.

It was a nip and tuck battle between the Athletics and Detroit that season until Aug. 4 when the Athletics went into first place to stay, winning the pennant by thirteen and a half contests and 22 games in front of the third-place Cleveland Naps. The Philadelphians led the league in batting with a mark of .297. Eddie Collins topped the team with an average of .365. Jack Lapp batted .353, Frank Baker .334 and also led the league with nine home runs. Danny Murphy batted .329, Stuffy McInnis .321, Bris Lord .310, Rube Oldring .297, Iran Thomas .273, Jack Barry .265 and Amos Strunk .256.

COOMBS WON 28

Jack Coombs, who had been an iron man the previous season, again proved he could stand hard work by winning 28 games and pitching 337 innings. Eddie Plank won 22, Chief Bender 17, Cy Morgan 15 and Harry Krause 11. Second-string pitchers won the other eight that gave the Athletics 101 victories for the season.

Then came the World Series with John McGraw's New York Giants. Mr. Mack was out for revenge because of the defeat by the Giants in the World Series of 1905. McGraw was out to show that he could continue to trounce the American League champions. The Giants had a strong club that year. They had the great Christy Mathewson, Rube Marquard, Bugs Raymond, Hooks Wiltse, Red Ames and Otis Crandall as pitchers, Chief Meyers, Grover Hartley and Al Wilson behind the bat, an infield composed of Fred Merkle, Larry Doyle, Art Fletcher, Buck Herzog and Arthur Devlin, with Josh Devore, Fred Snodgrass, Red Murray and Beals Becker in the outfield.

GIANTS WERE SPEEDY

The Giants stole 347 bases that season and the big league experts declared that their speed and wonderful pitching would give them the edge over the Athletics; but when someone told Catcher Ira Thomas of the Macks that he better tie his big mitt on securely or the Giants would steal it as they probably would run wild on the bases, Ira just said: "They are not going to reach first base to be in a position to steal on me."

The Giants did steal four bases in the six-game series that followed; but as they made only 33 hits in the six contests, they won only two games and the Athletics won the world championship. Eddie Collins also stole two bases in that series and so did Jack Barry. Frank Baker, by the way, carried off the batting honors as he had in the 1909 series. I have always believed, however, that much of Baker's success as a batsman was due, indirectly, to Collins. Eddie got on first more often than Baker and once he reached the initial hassock, he began to worry the opposing pitcher and catcher.

COLLINS HELPED BAKER

Eddie would persist in making bluffs to steal second. Naturally, the National Leaguers, knowing his great reputation as a base runner, figured, much too often, that he was going to steal when Eddie had no such intention. Waste balls would be called for and with Baker at bat that was not the wisest thing to do. By the time Eddie really got ready to steal, the count was either 2 or 3 and nothing on Baker with the result the pitcher had to groove one for the Mack slugger.

Connie Mack says that Eddie Collins is the greatest second baseman in the history of the game. Not only was Eddie a most brilliant fielder, but he also was way above the average as a batsman, one of the leading base runners of his time (and they used to steal bases in those days) and one of the smartest players I ever have seen. And, could he grab signals!

BARRY WAS SMART

Jack Barry, while never a .300 batsman, was one of the most intelligent shortstops of all time. In fact, I never have seen an infielder who shifted with each pitch as Barry did when in his prime. And it was Barry, I believe, who invented the double squeeze, scoring runners from third and second on a bunt.

The Athletics had the pitching that year. They were tops in batting, second in fielding and third in base running. And they also had a star center fielder—in fact two of them, in Amos Strunk and Rube Oldring. Then again, in Ira Thomas they had a catcher who was "hot" that year. Probably Connie Mack's 1929 outfield, composed of Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Bing Miller, was superior to the 1911 outfit, but the $100,000 infield of 1911 had it on the 1929 inner line of defense. I would say that Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg in 29 were the equal of Bender, Coombs and Plank in 1911, while there is no doubt of Mickey Cochrane having been one of the really great catchers, but Thomas was "hot" that one year, and we are talking about the 1911 team. Personally, I would say that if Cochrane, Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons Haas and Miller, as they were in '29, were added to the 1911 club, there would be a team that scarcely ever would lose a game.

LENGTHY SERIES

A few more words about that 1911 World Series. As might be expected, Bender and the great Matty clashed in the first game. The Giants won, 2 to 1, although they made only five hits off Bender. The next day the Athletics won, 3 to 1, with Plank pitching. That was the game in which Baker hit one of Marquard's offerings for a home run with Collins on base.

Back at the Polo Grounds, Mathewson had the Athletics 1 to 0 with two out in the ninth. Then Baker came through again with another home run and the score was tied, the A's winning in the eleventh. The Giants made only three hits off Jack Coombs that day.

BOTTLE FLIES FROM STAND AS REDS WIN

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK July 20—Umpire trouble (What, again!) threatened for a time to bring out the reserves at Ebbets Field last night, where a crowd of 27,665 saw the Dodgers drop a ten-inning 4-2 thriller to the pace-setting Reds.

Two decisions by Dolly Stark, one of the National League's better arbiters, both against the Dodgers, almost held riotous repercussions. One Flatbush fan tossed a bottle, Lippy Leo Durocher was ejected and Whitlow Wyatt had to be held in check by three of his mates as the loyal Brooklyn rooters bombarded Stark, working at first base, with hoots and catcalls.

As for the ball game, the Reds, thanks to a pinch double by Wally Berger, tied the score in the ninth and won in the tenth on what is known to the trade as a "blooper" by Bill Hershberger. With the bases filled and one out, the Reds' backstop dropped a lazy fly just beyond second and over the heads of the drawn-in infield. Bill Werber and Lonnie Frey crossed the plate and that was that.

ALL COMES AS SURPRISE

Regarding this latest outburst of disputes with Ford Frick's boys in blue—they wore white pants last night—it all came as a surprise. Stark's work always has been well liked. However, the first battle was precipitated in the third inning when Wyatt, advancing from second to third with plenty to spare on a fly to center by Pete Coscarat, was ruled out for leaving the bag before the catch was made.

Durocher, Wyatt, Chuck Dressen and several others rushed Stark. There as a bit of pushing and elbowing and Manager Durocher was ordered out of the game. Lippy Leo continued to gesticulate wildly and did not leave until persuaded by the others.

But the bigger blow-off came in the fourth, even before Durocher had time to leave the dugout. With one out, Frank McCormick shot a hard drive to Johnny Hudson, Leo's replacement at short, and Johnny, on a brilliant play, tossed to first, apparently in time to complete the out. Stark though differently and in a flash he was besieged by at least twenty Dodgers, including Durocher.

Wyatt, still fuming about the previous decision against him, stormed at Stark, fighting off his own mates who sought to stop him. Three times he was literally carried away by his fellow-players, he was that angry about the whole thing. A bottle came flying from the upper stand and a half dozen city police suddenly appeared.

USE BETTER JUDGMENT

Under ordinary conditions it is likely that Wyatt would have been thumbed out. But the umpires, using better judgment, let matters ride. Ejecting Wyat in addition to Durocher would have brought about a riot.

After that there were no more fights, but Wyatt and some of the fans continued to sulk. Wyatt, replaced by Russ Evans in the tenth after Werber walked and Frey's bunt fell safely between Wyatt and Cookie Lavagetto, was the losing pitcher. Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, who followed Junior Thompson and Johnny Vander Meer, was the victor, scoring his eighth decision of the season.

Both teams counted in the first frame. For the Reds Werber doubled and scored after sacrifices by Frey and Lee Gamble. Tuck Stainback's double and Lavagetto's single evened the score. In the sixth Stainback's single, his third hit, and Dolf Camilli's triple sent the Dogers ahead.

Trailing, 2—1, the Reds came up with the tying run in the ninth, a walk to Hershberger and Berger's double against the left center-field fence turning the trick.

The Dodgers no longer hold fifth place undisputed. They are now tied for the position with the Pirates.

JAPAN'S HOPES TO WIN OLYMPIC SWIMMING MOUNT

ARAI, AMANO, HAMURO, YOSHIDA REGISTER WORLD'S BEST TIMES

Hopes for Japan to retain her men's swimming championship at the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki next year for three titles in a row mounted considerably Monday night with the brilliant performance of contestants on the final night of the national championships at the Meiji Shrine pool. The best times for the year in any country were registered in the 200-meter breaststroke, 100-meter backstroke, 1,500-meter freestyle, and 200-meter freestyle. The first three mentioned are Olympic events. Sunday night, Shigeru Miyamoto of Waseda University had won the 400-meter freestyle, another Olympic event, in 4 minutes 48 seconds for the world's best time yet recorded this year.

Members of the Olympic team selection committee met after the final race Monday night and candidates for the Olympic Games team were to be announced today.

ARAI WINS 200-METERS

Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University won hands down in the 200-meters freestyle final. In doing so, he equalled his own national record of 2 minutes 9.6 seconds which he set in last year's meet. It also was the world's best time yet recorded this year for the event. At the same time, actually it is a better time that the world's record of 2 minutes 7.2 seconds held by Jack Medica of the United States, inasmuch as the latter was made in a 25-yard pool.

Shigeru Miyamoto up and coming star of Waseda University was expected to give Arai a battle but there was no question about Arai's victory at the 100-meter mark when he was four meters in the lead. Kunio Tsuda of Osaka was right up with Miyamoto when they headed for the other side of the tank. Arai sped up his pitch down the last 50 meters and stretched to win by nine meters from Miyamoto. Michiaki Sagitani of Nihon University was third.

HAMURO STARS

Tetsuo Hamuro of Nihon University, the Olympic titleholder in the 200-meter breaststroke, placed second to Tsutomu Noda of Meiji University in the semi-finals but he won the final in 2 minutes 40.4 seconds, tying his own national record and registering the best world's time for the year. This mark is considerably better than the world's mark held by Jack Kasley of the United States of 2 minutes 37.2 seconds for the reason that it was made in a 25-yard pool. Hamuro took the lead from the start and at the 100 meter mark he was a full meter to the good over Seichiro Oura off Rikkyo Uiversity. Noda was third. Hamuro put on plenty of speed down the last 50 meters and he finished by a five-stroke lead over Oura.

Kiichiro Yoshida of Waseda University realized an ambition for the last two years by replacing his rival, Yasuhiko Kojima of Keio University, as 100-meter backstroke champion. And in doing so, he set the world's best time for the year of 1 minute 8.8 seconds. Swimming in adjoining lanes in the middle of the tank, Kojima turned a fraction of a second ahead at the 50-meter mark. They then came splashing through the water neck and neck with the same pitch. Yoshida forged into the lead in the last 10 meters and won by a touch. Toshihiro Taniguchi of Nihon University was third in 1 minute 11.2 seconds.

The other best time for the year was turned in by the indomitable Tomikatsu Amano of Nihon University, who last Summer shattered the 11-year standing record of Arne Borg in the 1,500-meter swim by hanging up a new time of 18 minutes 58.8 seconds. He won this race in 19 minutes 21.8 seconds, beating by a wide margin the time of 19 minutes 48.9 seconds of Franco of Yugoslavia which had been the best time for the year up to then. Amano could have bettered his time with a little more competition as he finished strong, spurting down the last 50 meters as if he were in a 200-meter race. Toshio Honma of Rikkyo University was 20 meters behind, being clocked in 19 minutes 34.4 seconds. Takashi Katayama of Keio was third in 19 minutes 41.8 seconds.

Eisaku Tanaka of Waseda University, who finished fourth in 19 minutes 53.8 seconds stole the show in the first 500 meters by hugging on to the lead with Amano close behind in the lane next to him. Their times at this distance were 6 minutes 12.4 seconds and 6 minutes 12.6 seconds respectively. It was a fast pace from the start. The times compared with the lap time of 6 minutes 26.2 seconds by Kusuo Kitamura's Olympic record set in 1936 of 19 minutes 12.4 seconds and the 6 minutes 9 seconds of Amano's world record last year. Tanaka was ahead by the same margin at 600 meter mark but thereafter it was all Amano's race. He was seven meters ahead at the 900-meter mark. Amano's time for the 1,000 meters was 10 minutes 6 seconds and hope of a new world record began fading away as his lap time for this distance in his record smashing feat last year was 9 minutes 59.2 seconds. By this time Honma had crept up to be in second place. At the 1,200 meter mark, Katayama was in third place and Tanaka fourth, in which order they finished.

Miss Kinuko Nakayama, unattached of the island of Shikoku, retained her championship in the 200-meters breaststroke. She had a battle on her hands with little Nushiko Amano of Kure putting up a fight all the way. Miss Nakayama was only a stroke in the lead at the 100 and 150 meter marks but she spurted to win by a full meter. Her time was 3 minutes 10.4 seconds.

MISS SATO WINS

One of the best races of the evening was the women's 100-meter backstroke. Miss Satoshi Sato, the champion, and Tomiko Iijima raced neck and neck down the last 50 meters and it was only Miss Sato's stronger stroke that pulled her ahead a winner by a stroke. Her time was 1 minute 26.8 seconds and that of Miss Iijima, 1 minute 27 seconds.

A new champion was crowned in the women's 200-meter freestyle. Miss Hana Miura of Yokohama, the defending champion, did not compete. Miss Yuriko Miki of Kobe came from behind to make the 100-meter turn at the same time with Miss Tsuneko Furuta of the Girls Physical School and began forging ahead at the 125-meter mark. She made the 150-meter turn ahead by a stroke and with a fine form that continued its coordination, won by three meters. Her time was 2 minutes 50.2 seconds.

The results follow:

Tomio Koyanagi of Waseda won the men's high diving with 53.78 points, nosing out Tsuneo Shibahara of Nihon University, who on the preceding day had won the springboard diving championship. Shibahara's points in the high diving was 50.46 points.

Keio University won the water polo championship for the third straight year, defeating the Toeikai of Waseda in the final by 3 goals to one.

Both the diving and water polo finals were held in the afternoon.

Pictured at top is the finish of the men's 200-meter freestyle final with Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University winning in the world's best time this year of 2 minutes 9.6 seconds, nine meters ahead of the second man. Bottom shows Tomio Koyanagi of Waseda in execution of one of the dives which won him the high diving title.

BUFFALO EIGHT RETAINS CROWN IN U.S. ROWING

N.Y. Herald Tribune

DETROIT, July 22—By winning the final race for senior eights, the West Side Rowing Club, of Buffalo, became official club champion for the second successive year as the national rowing championships ended on the Detroit River late today.

West Side's victory gave it the Julius H. Barnes Trophy with a total of 75 points. In second place was the Detroit Boat Club, which finished fourth in the last race behind the second-place New York A. C. and third-place Western Rowing Club, of St. Louis. Detroit's total was 70½.

A fifth entry, the Leander eight from Hamilton, Ont., shipped so much water on the choppy course that it quit the race at the end of a mile, all but two oarsmen going over the side to keep the shell from sinking.

West Side's victory was won by less than deck length in a driving finish. The time was 6:18 1-5.

Detroit's eight was the same boat that won the intermediate event Friday, thereby qualifying for the senior race today.

The Undine Barge Club, of Philadelphia, won the race for eight-oared shells by a length. The Leander crew was second in a close race with Detroit, which was two feet behind at the finish. The winners' time was 6:21.

The National Association of Amateur Oarsmen re-elected Henry Penn Burke, of Philadelphia, president at a meeting in conjunction with the championships.

Joe Burk, the blond rowing machine from the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia, won the national senior singles sculls championships for the third consecutive year, finishing a length ahead of Frank Silvio, of the New York A. C., who earlier had won the senior singles quarter-mile championship.

Burk took the lead at the start, swinging his tiny shell through the water with a thirty-seven beat to open a half-length advantage at the quarter. He increased his edge to a length coming into the last quarter and withstood a bid from Silvio to mark up his thirty-fourth consecutive victory. The Penn A. C. oarsman covered the mile and a quarter course in 7:20 in the face of a stiff westerly wind.

TORONTO PAIR TRIUMPHS

Ken Thornburn and Jack Flavelle, representing the Argonauts, of Toronto, Ont., overcame a bad start to hold their championship in the senior 145-pound doubles with a length and a half victory over the Ecorse, Mich., Boat Club brother combination of and Louis Tank.

Frank Symes and Phil Cochrane, representing the Melta Club, of Philadelphia, placed third, two lengths behind Ecorse, with the Detroit pair, Frank Van Der Kar and William Reutter, fourth, and Walter Schmidt and James Brown, of the Western Rowing Club, of St. Louis, last. The winner's time was 6:55.

Al Riley and Theo Dubois, of the Winnipeg Rowing Club, scored a two-length victory over Charles Kain and John Keffer, representing Philadelphia's Fairmount Rowing Association, in the senior doubles. The time was 6:58 2-5.

Walter Pfiaumer and Conrad Anderson, of the Bachelors Barge Club, Philadelphia, placed third, with the Penn A. C.'s Tony Gallagher and George McGee fourth, and Angier and Fred Newcomb, of the Union Boat Club, Boston, in last place.

SILVIO OUTFINISHES KONRAD

Silvio, who last year lost his title as senior heavyweight singles sculls quarter-mile champion, recaptured that crown by winning from Harold Finigan, of the Malta Boat Club, Philadelphia.

Silvio who has rowed the distance in 1:02, put on a spurt seventy-five yards from the finish, and beat Finigan by half a length in 1:27 2-5. Edwin Konrad, of the West Side Rowing Club, Buffalo, came in third, three lengths back and a length ahead of T. A. Dubbois, of the Winnipeg Rowing Club.

Thornburn, of the Toronto Argos, took a one-length victory over Edward Vordran, of the Undine Barge Club, Philadelphia, in the 145-pound senior single sculls quarter-mile dash. Van Der Kar, of the Detroit Boat Cub, placed third. Thornburn's time was 1:26 1-5.

BUFFALO FOUR REPEATS

Buffalo's West Side senior four with coxswain, rowing a smooth, workmanlike race, won the event for the fourth consecutive year when the Penn A. C. four of Philadelphia rowed itself out of the race. Trailing the West Side crew only half a length a quarter-mile from the finish, the Penn boat ran off the course, brushed course markers and lost the stroke. The Penn crew reorganized and took second four lengths behind the Buffalo entry. The Lincoln Park four from Chicago placed third, with Winnipeg fourth and Detroit last. West Side's time for the mile and a quarter was 6:40 3-5.

Lincoln Park replaced the Fort William, Ont. four which failed to appear.

GIANTS LOSE 8TH STRAIGHT, DROP TO SIXTH

By RUD RENNIE

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, July 23—Going rapidly down, the crippled Giants lost their eighth straight yesterday in the Polo Grounds and are now in sixth place. They gave the Chicago Cubs the ball game, 8 to 7, and a lift into the runner-up position.

Four errors by Frank Scalzi, the newly acquired shortstop, and two by Ken O'Dea, substitute catcher, let the Cubs get five unearned runs. If both teams had played errorless ball, the Giants would have won, 5 to 3.

As it was, the Giants made fifteen hits, including a home run by O'Dea. The Cubs made only seven safeties, one of them a two-run homer by Augie Galan.

GAME OF SIX PITCHERS

There were six pitchers in the game—Manuel Salvo, Hal Schumacher and Carl Hubbell for the Giants and Claude Passeau, Larry French and Vance Page for the Cubs.

The Cubs got two runs in the first off Salvo after Scalzi let a grounder swish between his legs. The Giants, having done nothing with the bases filled in the first, got one run off Passeau in the third and had two men left when Bonura and O'Dea failed to connect.

By walking Bartell purposely after O'Dea had pegged the ball into center field, Salvo got out of the fourth by fanning Passeau. But he walked Herman in the fifth and threw one to Galan which the Chicago left fielder propelled into the right field balcony for a home run.

A wild attempt by O'Dea to catch a runner off first base, let him get to second and score on a single by Passeau in the sixth.

O'Dea struck a blow on behalf of his team in the last part of the inning, whaling a solo homer into the right-field balcony. Ripple was thrust into this inning as a pinch hitter, but he ended it by hitting into a double play.

ERROR LETS TWO SCORE

So it was 5 to 2 in favor of the Cubs going into the seventh with Schumacher pitching for the Giants. Scalzi got Schumacher in trouble immediately, being wild with what should have been an easy throw. And, after Gleeson walked and Reynolds doubled for one run, and Hartnett was passed purposely, filling the bases, Scalzi booted a grounder and let two men score. So the Cubs picked up three unearned runs, enough to win the game.

The Giants routed Passeau in the seventh, Bonura hitting a lusty triple with two on and two out, and scoring personally on O'Dea's infield single off French. But French fanned Hafey, the new third baseman, for the third out.

The Giants batted French out of the box in the eighth. Scalzi walked and Seeds, batting for Schumacher, singled. Then Russell, the first baseman, made a risky play with Moore's grounder, throwing it to second. It did not work. The throw struck Seeds on the back and let Scalzi score. So Page was summoned to pitch, and before he could end inning Seeds scored on an infield out.

The tying run was on third and the winning run on first with two out in this inning when Bonura sliced a grounder along the first-base line that Russell took.

Needing only one run to tie, the Giants did their best in the ninth to satisfy the clamoring 8,757 rooters. But their best was not good enough.

O'Dea got on through Herman's error. But Hafey tried to bunt and succeeded only in popping up. Johnny McCarthy batted for Scalzi and was thrown out by the pitcher. So the tying run was on second base when Kampouris, batting for Hubbell, ended the game with a fly to left.

Davey O'Brien Preferred for All-Star Team

CHICAGO, July 18—The football fans participating in the nationwide poll to select a squad of college all-stars to play the New York pro Giants are showing a decided preference for Davey O'Brien as quarterback on the composite selection.

O'Brien, brilliant star at Texas Christian last Fall, has polled 242,173 votes, almost three times as many as his nearest rival.

The squad of college seniors will play the Giants in Soldier Field the night of Aug. 30. The poll closes at midnight next Saturday.

The leaders:

Ends—Earl Brown, Notre Dame, 137,516; Bowden Wyatt, Tennessee, 118,948; Bill Daddio, Pittsburgh, 115,726.

Tackles—Bob Haak, Indiana, 124,893; Ed Beinor, Notre Dame, 119,204.

Quarterbacks—O'Brien, 242,172; Ed Hofer, Notre Dame, 88,327.

Halfbacks—Bob MacLeod, Dartmouth, 186,173; Marshall Goldberg, Pittsburgh, 179,486; John Pingel, Michigan State, 171,028; Bronco Smilanich, Arizona, 142,657.

Fullbacks—Howard Weiss, Wisconsin, 194,802; Dave Anderson, California, 87,495.

Father Wanted U.S. Ski Champion To Become Track Star

HANOVER, N. H.—Harry Hillman, veteran Dartmouth track coach and former Olympic record holder, has written a foot-note to the hoary adage: "Like father like son."

Hillman's notation on the subject is: "Oh, Yeah?"

Ever since the time 35 years ago that Hillman, pere set three track records in the 1904 Olympic games at St. Louis he has looked forward to the time when he would have a son to follow in his spike prints.

Now his wish has been gratified in a rather southpaw manner. Harry, Jr., has been named to an Olympic squad—as a skin specialist, a master of the hickory sliphoe.

Showing a tenacious disinterest in track, young Hillman has become one of the best ski racers in the country. Last Winter he won the Vermont downhill championship, the Fiske trophy, and the eastern slalom title, beating his Dartmouth ski-team captain, Dick Durrance, top amateur among the nation's barrel stave pilots in the latter event.

Although a jurisdictional dog fight has somewhat beclouded the future of the next Winter Olympics Durrance and Hillman have been named on an all-American ski squad which will compete in the international Winter games at Norway.

The bitterest ingredient in Hillman, Sr.'s potion of remorse is the realization that his son's switch to skiing is nobody's fault but the old man's.

One of Hillman's pet theories is that no boy should engage in competitive running before he is 19. Boys who start too early, says Hillman, burn out like a corncob pipe. While Harry, Jr. was waiting to become old enough to gallop on the cinders he took up skiing as a diversion at Clark school. Dartmouth college preparatory institution.

The diversion soon became an obsession and by the time Hillman was old enough to don spikes and abbreviated panties he was too engrossed in snow sprinting to bother with track.

JAPANESE CLASSICAL SWIMMING ON SHOW SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Styles of Japanese classical swimming will be demonstrated Saturday and Sunday at the Meiji Shrine pool between 5 and 9 p.m. under the auspices of the Nippon Yuei (Swimming) Federation.

The names of samurai styles of swimming and the provinces where they originated follow:

Styles	Provinces
Iwakura	Wakayama
Kankai	Ise
Kobori	Kumamoto
Mukai	Yedo
Yamanouchi	Usuki
Shinden	Matsuyama, Tsuyama
Suifu	Mito and Yedo
Nojima	Wakayama

An article by Toyama Kouji, appearing recently in the "Tourist", on Japanese classical swimming follows:

In ancient times the Mediterranean area had intimate connections with Europe and the Near East. The area round about the Inland Sea of Japan, which might be described as a pocket edition of the Mediterranean, has had a very important role to play in the development of the Japanese culture, possessing as it does many islands, bays and inlets, a mild climate, and a fertile soil. These two areas, though differing in geographical position and in extension, have one point in common—that they occupy a prominent place in the development, though in different spheres, of culture in its various aspects. Through all times, water has been very favorable to the progress of a people.

USEFUL ART

It is rather strange, and at the same time interesting that, in ancient Greece and Rome, where sports and contests flourished, swimming races were not encouraged. Swimming was looked upon by these ancients as a useful art, to enable one to escape from a watery grave, and in promoting health. Women as well as men took to the exercise of the art. For military men swimming was as important as any other martial art.

Many people seem to believe that the various styles of swimming in Olympic and other games are of very modern origin. The crawl-stroke, for instance, is supposed to be a form of swimming undreamed of by the ancients. But this very crawl-stroke may be called the oldest style of swimming, there being evidence to show that it was in use in prehistoric times. Moreover, it will be found that those swimming styles popular to classical peoples were not invariably indigenous to their cultures. There are grounds for the assertion—grounds that are supported by pictures and engravings on swimming in Assyria, Egypt, and Etruria—that those styles were common among the inhabitants of the Mediterranean area. Among the ancient peoples of the Mediterranean area, the art of swimming was fairly well developed both in quality and intensity. It was said that this was specially so among the Trojans who were reputed to be generally better swimmers than Greeks. To ancient Romans were known such styles of swimming as by-striking of the surface, breast-stroke, side-stroke, standing, floating like a dead body, and diving, but these have gradually been neglected to oblivion.

On the other hand, in Japan, where the origin of the art of swimming dates back to the "age of the gods," it has been kept on developing by actual practice for geographical and cultural reasons. The progress of the art has been greatly stimulated by the exigencies of commerce and war. Its advance was remarkable in the Tokugawa period (1603-1867), when swimming was dignified as one of the material arts. The development of the art of swimming in Japan will here be briefly surveyed. The period extends from the 15th century—a century when the fallacy of the flatness of the earth was burst and adventurers began their daring work of the conquest of the sea leading the way for commerce and colonization. The same spirit of adventure caught the enterprising seamen in Japan. These mariners did not confine their activities to coasting the Island Empire, but pushed out to the opposite continent, visiting Chosen and China. And downward, they extended their risky voyages to Luzon, the Malay group, Siam, and India.

FOR SELF-DEFENSE

As piracy was the order of the day at that time, these merchantmen were armed for self-defense. Yamada Nagamasa, that famous 17th-century warrior of Japan, who became a prominent figure in the affairs of Siam, was one of those soldier-merchants belonging to the fleets of armed Japanese merchantmen. These armed traders of the sea were in need of making themselves well versed in the art of "aquatic war," an anticipation of a navy, and also perfecting themselves in the art of swimming. In those early days, therefore, swimming held a place no less important than that of sea warfare. At the beginning of the 17th century, however, the policy of national isolation was adopted by the decline of the art of aquatic war, which was continued, with little progress, in the form of theoretical study down to the re-opening of the country. The art of swimming, on the other hand, flourished and made much advance as an independent martial art in spite of its separation from the art of aquatic war. The Tokugawa Era was a period of feudalism, and inter-feudal relations were almost as complicated as international. So it came about that system of swimming which were developed along independent lines under the patronage of the many several feudal lords were so diversified that they can scarcely be called by the general name of Japanese swimming. This diversity was no doubt brought about, at least in part, by the natural surroundings of each feud.

As might be gathered from the foregoing, the military arts in Japan were developed side by side with the civil arts. These two phases of culture were called "bumbu ryodo," or the civil and military ways, the two often being compared to the two wheels of a cart. Pains were taken to keep these two ways in harmonious development. The result was that swimming, one of the military arts, was of a high standard in a clan where learning in general was advanced. This may be pointed out to be a feature peculiar to feudal Japan. The schools of swimming independently developed in the clans were more numerous than they can be counted on the fingers of both hands.

As already pointed out, swimming in Japan was originally one of the martial arts, and as such it was considered soul-less when divorced from practical utility in actual warfare. So, in conjunction with swimming, a samurai was also taught the art of reconnoitering before the enemy and that of breaking through a cordon of besiegers.

The methods of life-saving were also carefully studied in all the schools of swimming. In diving, the chief aim was to reach the object of rescue as quickly as possible. As the consequence, unlike fancy diving, the diver took care not to go deep into water so that he might raise his head above water with as little loss of time as possible. In making a plunge from a bridge, for instance, the diver is sometimes careful to keep his head above water so as not to lose sight of the object in view.

As might be gathered from the foregoing, swimming in old Japan was a martial art, not an instrument of contest or sport. In feudal times, the samurai formed an intelligentsia. They were the flower of the nation, and what was expected of them was not mere skill in martial arts. Unless a gentleman combined such skill with book learning, he was not entitled to be called a samurai. A combination of these two elements constituted Bushido. Killing was not what Bushido emphasizes: what it teaches is to relieve others or serve the country and the Throne by making a sacrifice of oneself if need be. The same spirit inspired the learner even in swimming. Rescuing of others or ourselves from drowning was the chief object aimed at, the humanitarian being the primary consideration.

The Japanese are a people noted for their cult of ancestor worship. This same spirit pervades such Shinto observances as Misogino-shiki (Body-cleaning) or Suijin-sai (Water-god festival), these being far from mere shows intended for spectacular effect. The founders or reformers of various schools of swimming in Japan, of whom there are a large number, are held in deep reverence by their followers and the anniversaries of their death are celebrated with appropriate solemnity, usually accompanied by a complimentary visit to their graves.

Takamatsu Lads Hold Yamagata Nine Hitless In Middle School Tourney

In defeating the Yamagata Middle School, representatives of the Tohoku district, the Takamatsu Commercial School nine, representing the island of Shikoku, held its opponents hitless to win 9 to 2 on the third day Tuesday of the 25th annual national middle school baseball championships sponsored by the Osaka Asahi and Tokyo Asahi at the Koshien Stadium near Osaka.

Tada pitched up to the sixth inning, and Shiraishi finished the game on the mound for Takamatsu.

The Takamatsu lads nicked Kuboyama, the Yamagata pitcher, for 10 blows, including triples by Mizuta, Shiraishi, Fujii and Tokawa.

REDS, YANKEES CONTINUE LEAD IN BIG TIME

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 14—Although the New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds continued to lead their respective leagues by wide margins, the Cleveland Indians moved up from fifth to third place in the American loop and the New York Giants advanced one notch higher to fourth position during the past week.

The inspired Indians spurted ahead of the Chicago White Sox and the Detroit Tigers by winning four out of five of their scheduled games last week, while the latter two slumped badly.

In the National League, the Giants won five and lost two and captured fourth place, as the Pitt Pirates fumbled losing four of their scheduled games.

The New York Yankees continued to lead the Boston Bees in the American League by a six game margin, while the powerful Cincinnati Reds maintained a comfortable lead of 6½ games over the St. Louis Cardinals in the other major loop.

Team standings, including games played today, are as follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

DERRINGER GETS 13TH VICTORY

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, July 22—Paul Derringer exhibited his usual mastery over the Phillies today as Cincinnati's star right-hander shut out the Phils, 2 to 0, for his thirteenth victory of the season against four defeats.

Derringer, who has yet to lose a game to the Phils in five starts this year, yielded only five hits, four of them singles, had perfect control and let only three Phils get as far as second base.

In the fourth Jack Bolling reached the mid-way sack when Linus Frey messed up Morrie Arnovich's grounder. In the eighth Heinie Mueller, a pinch hitter, got there on Spud Davis's sacrifice, and in the ninth Arnovich doubled off the left-field wall for the Phils' only extra-base hit.

Walter Beck pitched great ball for the Phils but the first-place Reds bunched four of their nine hits in the third and ninth to score their two runs.

Bill Werber led off in the third with a single. Frey also singled. Lee Gamble sacrificed and Frank McCormick was purposely walked to fill the bases. Werber then scored on Ernie Lombardi's sacrifice fly to Hershel Martin.

In the ninth Derringer started things with a two-bagger to center. Werber bunted and got credit for a hit when Merrill May failed to cover third as Beck fielded the ball. Derringer came home on Frey's sacrifice fly to Martin.

It was the second straight shutout for the Phils and the ninth time they have lost to the Reds in ten games. The score:

3 Homers Aid Tigers To Down Senators, 9-4 At Yokohama Park

Poling out three home runs, the Osaka Tigers bumped off the Tokyo Senators, 9 to 4, in the professional league's double-header at Yokohama Tuesday afternoon. Centerfielder Horio accounted for two of them while Rightfielder Kageura registered the other.

Nagoya routed the Dolfins, 6 to 1, in the other game at Yokohama.

Here at the Korakuen stadium, the Giants maintained their lead by a slight margin over the Tigers by beating the Osaka Hankyu team, 1 to 0, in a game that was halted at the end of the 5th inning because of rain.

Second Baseman Kunihisa's hit brought in the Nankai's winning run in the last half of the 11th stanza over the Lions by 7-6 in the curtain raiser at the Korakuen park.

9 MERMEN PICKED TO GO TO HELSINKI

Nine swimmers who performed brilliantly in the national championships which were held at the Meiji Shrine pool on August 12, 13 and 14 have been chosen as members of Japan's delegation to the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki in 1940.

They are:

Freestyle

Shigeo Arai, Rikkyo University.
Shigeru Miyamoto, Waseda University.
Eisaku Tanaka, Waseda University.
Hiroshi Takahashi, Keio University.
Tomikatsu Amano, Nihon University.

Backstroke

Kichi Yoshida, Waseda University.
Yasuhiko Kojima, Keio University.

Breaststroke

Tetsuo Hamuro, Nihon University.
Seiichiro Oura, Rikkyo University.

Twelve others were selected by the selection committee which met Monday night immediately after the close of the championships as candidates, as follows:

Freestyle

Masanori Yusa (Yokohama Rubber Co.), Takeshi Sasaki (Nihon University), Shigeo Sugiura (Waseda University), Hyogo Makino (Ito Middle School), Michiaki Sagitani (Nihon University), Kunio Tsuda (Osaka Jugo), Moriyei Uda (Waseda University), Toshio Honma (Rikkyo University), Takashi Katayama (Keio University).

Backstroke

Toshihiro Taniguchi (Nihon University).

Breaststroke

Toshi Furukawa (Waseda University), Tsutomu Noda (Meiji University).

Eight candidates for the diving competition were selected as follows:

Men's

Tsuneo Shibahara (Nihon University), Tomio Koyanagi (Waseda University), Kinji Kubo (Waseda University), Takeshi Takahama (Nihon University).

Women's

Masayo Osawa (Yokohama Kikai Kumiai), Fumiko Tatematsu (Seiritsu Higher School), Kazuko Mitsunaga (Tokiwamatsu Higher School), and Reiko Osawa (Seimikai).

Further regular and substitute members will be picked as a result of the national inter-collegiate and Meiji Shrine meets in September.

Masaji Tabata, head man in charge of the Olympic delegation to Helsinki and who was referee of the Championships, and Ikkaku Matsuzawa, chief of the judges in the championships and who was head coach of the championships teams at Los Angeles in 1932 and Berlin in 1936, are firmly convinced that Japan will win the men's swimming title for the third straight Olympiad next year.

INTERNATIONAL BADMINTON PLAY IN LONDON

By R. MAILLARD STEAD
Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—And so we are likely to have, quite soon, an international tournament for Badminton comparable to that for the Davis Cup in lawn tennis. At all events, the countries in membership with the International Badminton Federation are to be asked to give their view on the desirability of such a competition, for which Sir George Thomas, President of the I.B.F., has offered to present a challenge trophy.

A tournament of the kind suggested could well become a very international business indeed, for there are now 16 nations whose governing bodies for badminton are affiliated to the International Federation. The latest recruits being the United States of America, Norway, and Mexico, all elected during the past year.

By contrast with every other sport that is widely practiced, Badminton has been slow to develop international competition. A fact linked, no doubt, with a certain shortage of money in the game, due to the absence of spectators en masse. But now that the "international era" has dawned for the shuttle-smiters—as witness the successes of overseas players in the All-England championships here this year—players of various lands are naturally keen to measure their strength in team play.

SERIOUSLY CHALLENGED

In such international team play as there has been up to the present, England has stood supreme, undefeated right from the time of its first engagement with another country—Ireland—in 1903. Now, however, the English are being seriously challenged from several quarters, and, in their 1939 championships, all events excepting the mixed doubles were won by players from other lands. The men's singles and women's doubles going to Denmark, the women's singles to Canada, and the men's doubles to Ireland.

It is more than 60 years since the game of Badminton was invented, and it is said to have begun in the simplest possible way at a ducal residence one wet day when a member of a house party stretched a cord across the hall and suggested a sort of tennis game using the children's battledores and shuttlecocks. Badminton House—ancestral home of the Duke of Beaufort—was where this occurred.

Well, the impromptu pastime proved to be excellent fun and, bearing the title of its place of origin, it became more and more widely played, until, in 1899, it attained to the dignity of serious championships. But only for doubles, a form of play still regarded by purists as the cream of the game. The next year, singles were introduced at the championships, and that is the phase of competition which gains the most limelight these days, though the doubles game at badminton has not been overshadowed by singles to anything like the extent that it has in lawn tennis.

POONA RULES

Although the game is reputed to have been invented in the circumstances which I have narrated, a theory is put forward that Badminton originated in Western India. Anyway, it is a fact that the laws of play adopted in England were adopted from the Poona rules of 1876. In recent months, by the way, the laws have been overhauled by a special sub-committee of the International Federation. The sequence of them has been altered, a careful attempt made to eliminate all ambiguities, and the code as revised in this manner was formally adopted at the annual general meeting of the Federation's Council held in London a short while ago.

It was on the occasion of this meeting that Sir George Thomas, President of the I.B.F., offered a cup for an international team championships. He, as probably you know, was an English badminton champion for both singles and doubles at one time—his first championship success was in 1906, his last in 1928—he was also a lawn tennis player at Wimbledon; and he is still an internationally famed chess master.

'27 YANKEES PICKED AS 1 OF BEST 3 TEAMS IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

By HENRY P. EDWARDS
American League Service Manager

Christian Science Monitor

It is possible that someone will ask why I pick the Yankees of '27 as one of the best three teams in the history of the American League. So, why waste any time in answering the doubtful fans?

The Yankees of 1927 were powerful at the bat, compiling the best batting average ever made by a pennant winning team, .307. They finished 19 games out in front. They had four pitchers, who, while winning 78 games, did not allow more than three earned runs to a contest. And, that was the year that Babe Ruth set the world record of 60 home runs.

It was not a team that compared with the 1939 Yankees in defense but, nevertheless, its defense was brilliant. While it ranked fourth in fielding, it had players who could turn apparent base hits into outs or double plays at the right time.

POWER AND PITCHING

Power and pitching, however, were the two main reasons why the Yankees of 1927 rate as one of the best three teams in the American League's history. Ruth made 60 home runs, Gehrig 47, Tony Lazzeri 18. Gehrig batted .375, drove in 175 runs and led the circuit with 52 doubles and 447 total bases. Babe Ruth drove in 164 runs and had 417 total bases. Earle Combs was third in the league with 331 total bases and led all batters with 231 hits, Gehrig being second with 218.

The Yanks of '27 never were out of first place during the entire campaign, although they were tied for the lead eight days. They were alone on top after May 1. They also were the first club in the league's history to finish the season with a percentage of more than .700, their mark being .714 as they won 110 games and lost only 44. They finished 123 points higher than the Athletics, the runners up. They set a record up to that time by collecting 158 home runs and 2,615 total bases. They scored 975 runs as compared with 845 for Detroit. They won every series with the other clubs in the league, Cleveland being the only team to hold the Yankees to 12 victories.

MANAGER HUGGINS

Nor should it be forgotten that one of the great reasons why the Yankees did so well is that the late Miller Huggins was manager and he manipulated his players most capably, especially, when it is remembered the Yankees had their share of misfortune. When the season started, Huggins, who had led the New Yorkers to a pennant in 1926 only to lose the World Series in seven games, was rather apprehensive about his defense. He figured Third baseman Dugan was slippig and Sortstop Koenig was rather erratic. Koenig continued to make errors but he fielded better than in '26 while Dugan was brilliant in the field.

Nevertheless, the Yankees began their campaign by winning nine out of 14 in April, and 19 out of 28 in May. Then they started to go. They took 21 out of 17 in June, 24 out of 31 in July, slipped a little in August when they took only 16 out of 26 and then raced to the wire by winning 20 out of 27 in September.

BARROW A FACTOR

Ed Barrow, now President of the New York Yankees, also was a big factor in the Yankees' great success in '27. Mr. Barrow, one day, the previous September, was reading minor league averages. He noticed that a pitcher by the name of Wilcy Moore was winning a flock of games down in the South Atlantic League. He consulted two of the New York scouts in regard to this pitcher and was told that Moore had been released by several minor league clubs, had met with an accident to his pitching hand and was too old for the major leagues.

"I'll take a shot at him, just the same," replied Barrow.

The following Spring, when the Yankees trained at St. Petersburg, Wilcy Moore slow, shambling good natured farmer, was a member of the Yankees. Before the year was over, he proved that Mr. Barrow never made a wiser move than when he disregarded his scouts' opinions and bought this same Moore as the latter proved to be the best relief pitcher in the history of the league—for one season, at least, and that was in 1927.

USED SINKER BALL

The Oklahoma farmer was in the bull pen nearly every day that season. He took part in 50 games, starting six and finishing all six. Of the other 44 games in which he took part, he finished 30, being taken out, now and then, for a pinch hitter, because as a batsman Wilcy was a joke. The Yankees finished 19 games in front that year. Wilcy Moore won 19 and lost seven in addition to saving probably a dozen or more for his colleagues. He was the owner of a great "sinker" ball and how it did baffle the opposing batsmen that year. Even now, 12 years later, I would say that Wilcy Moore, the Oklahoma farmer, was just about as big a Yankee hero that year as Babe Ruth or Lou Gehrig.

The Yankee pitching staff, that year, was composed of Waite Hoyt, Urban Shocker, Herbert Pennock, Walter Ruether, George Pipgras Myles Thomas and Bob Shawkey, in addition to Wilcy Moore. Hoyt won 22 and lost 7. Shocker took 18 and dropped 6, his health failing late in the season and preventing his taking part in the World Series. Pennock won 19, lost 8, Ruether won 13 out of 19 and Pipgras 10 out of 13. Thomas and Shawkey won nine between them, losing seven.

GEHRIG EVERY DAY

The New York outfield consisted of Bob Meusel in left, Earle Combs in center and Babe Ruth in right with Pen Paschal and Cedric Durst as extras. Combs and Ruth missed scarcely a game but Paschal relieved Combs occasionally when a game was cinched. Durst, however, subbed for Meusel about a fifth of the season. Gehrig, of course, went through the season without missing a game. Tony Lazzeri, also, was in there about every day, either at second base or at shortfield. When Tony went to short, Ray Morehart, a .25 batsman, played second and did it well. When Joe Dugan was hurt, Mike Gazella or Julian Wera went to third. Each was a hustling player, full of fight, Gazzella being a better batsman than Dugan was that year.

Behind the bat, the Yankees had no such catcher as Bill Dickey but it so happened that Pat Collins had his best year that season. Behind the bat in 89 games, he batted .275. John Grabowski was in 68 games and Benny Bengough in 30, Miller Huggins frequently shifting receivers in a contest.

After winning the American League pennant in a walk, the Yankees encountered Pittsburgh in the world series. They knew they could not use Shocker, who had been one of their pitching aces earlier in the year, and, to make matters worse, Herb Pennock was hit on the knee in batting practice the day before the series opened and it appeared as if he also were lost to the New Yorkers.

The series opened in Pittsburgh. The Yankees won, 5 to 4, Wilcy Moore coming to Hoyt's rescue in the eighth inning. Kremer and Miljus worked for Pittsburgh. Miller Huggins had planned on using Pennock in the second game, but his mishap caused Huggins to call on Pipgras, whom he almost considered a rookie. George, however performed as calmly as a veteran and beat Aldridge, 6 to 2.

MOORE CAME THROUGH

When the third game was played at the Yankee Stadium, Pennock said he was ready once more. He was. He beat Pittsburgh, 8 to 1, allowing only three hits. Then came the fourth and final game. Miller Huggins sprung the unexpected by sending Wilcy Moore to the rubber to start. Moore did not disappoint, downing the Pirates, 4 to 3, the Yankees scoring the winning run in the ninth inning on a wild pitch by Miljus.

In that series, the Yankees batted .279 to .223 for the Pirates, who had hit .305 during the National League season.

Practically the same team won the 1928 American League pennant and then went on to beat the St. Louis Cardinals four straight in the World Series. The only changes in the line-up in '28 from that of '27 was that Gene Robertson divided the labor at third base with Joe Dugan, and Leo Durocher replaced Wera as an extra infielder. Shocker passed on, while Wilcy Moore was of little use, apparently having shot his bolt in 1927. To replace those two, Miller Huggin had Henry Johnson, Al Shealy and Stanley Coveleskie. But, instead of winning by 19 games it won from the Athletics by a margin of only two and one half games.

DIMAGGIO TOPS BATTING IN AMERICAN LOOP

Joe DiMaggio, reputed the best ball player in action today, centerfielder of the New York Yankees, was on top of the individual batting average in the American league as of July 21 with a grand .406 mark, according to the New York Times.

The averages of the leaders follows:

16-YEAR BOY IS BRITISH SWIM CHAMP

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Champion No. 1 in British swimming this season—chronologically speaking, and maybe not only that—is a young gentleman aged 16 from Hull, Yorkshire, named Jack Hale. The other day he went to town in both senses of phrase, as a competitor in the English long distance championship. Which is a swim in the Thames River from a point opposite the Anglian Boat Club's headquarters at Kew to the University Stone (where the Oxford-Cambridge boat-race starts) at Putney, a matter of five miles and 60 yards with the stream.

Hale's time for this arduous journey was 1h. 3m. 59.4s., which was 35.6s. faster than that returned by the runner-up, C.T. Deane.

Deane, victor in each of the last five years, was fully expected to win again. And if he had done so he would have come within one of the record string of consecutive successes set up by the celebrated J. A. Jarvis from 1898 to 1904 inclusive.

CLOSE STRUGGLE

As you can judge from the times of the two men, Hale and Deane had a tremendously close struggle, the former taking the lead at the very start and holding it gallantly in spite of a very determined challenge from Deane during the last half-mile.

Hale, using an eight-beat crawl, had established a lead of some 50 yards by the time the swimmers passed beneath Hammersmith Bridge, two miles from the finish, and he was moving so well that, in the view of the experts, he would probably have come near to the record time for the race (1h. 2m. 57.6s. by Deane in 1937) if the tide had not been so slack.

ONE-MILE RACE

Deane, a London salesman aged 22, second to cut the corner rather too much coming into the last straight down by the boathouses along the Putney reach—as many a coxswain has done, in the reverse direction, during the Oxford-Cambridge crew race—and, the result was that he found himself over the shallower water above what are known as the Fulham flats.

Now young Hale is set upon winning the English one-mile championship, to be decided at Great Yarmouth, Aug. 11. So keen is he to do this that concentrating upon this distance, he has decided not to compete in the championship meeting at Minehead, July 11 to 14, when the longest race on the program will be the 440 yards.

Last year, at the corresponding meeting, young Hale entered for the half-mile, and gained a place, as a prelude to becoming runner-up to R. H. Leivers, well-known British crack, in the mile.

The long-distance swim in the Thames, which has given Hale his first championship victory, is an event of long standing on the British swimming calendar, for it was established as far back as 1877, when it was instituted under the title of the "Lords and Commons" race. It was given this title because the first trophy put up in connection with it was donated by a number of Members of Parliament.

In 1901, a fresh award was presented by the late W. J. Innes. This goes each year to the winner, who holds it for 12 months; statuettes are given "for keeps" to the men who finish first, second, and third; and certificates are issued to all competitors who finish within ten minutes of the winner. Twelve of the 14 starters earned diplomas this year, and the times and orders of the next four home after Hale and Deane were: 1h. 7m. 5.6s. by J. Brennan, of the Huddersfield Swimming Club; 1h. 7m. 44s. by K. Dungler of the Maccabi Association; 1h. 8m. 26.2s. by F. J. Gill, of the Leander Swimming Club, and 1h. 10m. 8s. by F. C. Oldman, of the Plaistow United Swimming Club.

All Students' Sports On Week-Days Banned

All students sports competition on week-days with the exception of holidays will be banned as the result of an order issued by the Education Ministry on Wednesday.

Vacation days and Saturday afternoons will be exempted from the ruling.

What the Tokyo Six University Baseball league will do about its doubleheaders on Saturday is being watched as the Ministry holds that playing of the first game at 12:30 p.m. will interfere with the students' classes on Saturdays.

No decision has yet been reached on the reported plan of the Ministry to cut the games between the teams from two to one.

To Resume Rugby Play

PARIS—Rugby matches between France and British Rugby Union representative teams will be resumed next year after a nine-year lapse. The French Rugby Federation announced the first match in France would be played against Wales at Paris, March 25.

TEAM SCORING FIRST INNING USUALLY WINS

Christian Science Monitor

LOS ANGELES—It may be anybody's ball game until the last man is out in the ninth, but the chances are that the team that can score in the first inning is the team that wins most of the ball games. At least this is the inference from figures recently compiled by Harry Williams, secretary and one-time president of the Pacific Coast Baseball League.

Mr. Williams, who also used to be a sports writer of wide circulation, thinks up these ideas on statistics in line with the League's efforts to make the national pastime prosper. With too much publicity given these days to run-ins with the umpires and bottle-throwing by the fans, it's good to see some publicity based on perfection of the century-old sport.

Prior to last Sunday's (July 16) regular double-headers, the scoring figures showed that the league-leading Angels led the league also in number of games in which they scored in the initial frame: 34. And before Mr. Williams could make his findings public, in the first game of the Sunday card here the Angels scored 10 runs in the first inning, and went on to win against the pressing Padres of San Deigo.

TWO HOMERS IN ONE INNING

It was a sort of verification of the figures, with emphasis, for there was other significance to the feat. When had another Coast team ever scored 10 runs in any inning? There are clubs that are glad to score that many runs in a week. And Arnold Statz, the eternal center-fielder for the Angels, knocked two homers in the inning, being lead-off man. The pair punctuated Jigger's appearance in the game on "Americanism Day," sponsored by the American Legion, and Jigger Statz is the only remaining Legionnaire in Class AA ball. More than 20 years a top-notch player, Jigger still defies the Angles to find a better fielder, lead-off man, or hitter—an all-around player.

The rest of Mr. Williams' figuring showed that the second-place Seattle team, which led during the overnight lapses of the Angels, also placed great stress on early scoring. The Seattle club scored in 28 of its first innings, making more out of this advantage than did the Stars, the Padres and the Seals, all of which headed the Seattle Rainiers in this respect. However, Seattle managed to score in 29 of the second innings, more than did any other team. This partially explains the ability of the team to harass the Angels whose former manager, Jack Lelivelt, now manages the Rainiers.

NINE-INNING LOOP

That the first-inning score may prove to be the pay-off ball is indicated by the record of the Angels in winning 13 games in the first inning. The Seals follow, having won 10 by knocking their opponents for a nine-inning loop.

Far from a "sure thing," this matter of early scoring to cinch the game is belied by the unfortunate Stars which have sewed up the game in only three of the 32 times they scored in the first; also, the Stars lead the League by scoring both in the first and second innings in 13 games, but up to Sunday they were in next-to-last position.

* * *

The Americanism Day crowd of 15,000 witnesed a significant ceremony in modern baseball. They saw the Legion's local council present certificates of merit to nine Padres and five Angels who had graduated to the big-time from the Legion's junior baseball program. This encouragement of youngsters really pays. Those honored were: Padres—Bill Starr, catcher; Ted Jensen, infield; Al Olson and Joe Gonzales, pitcher, Geo. McDonald, first base; Dominic Dallessandro, left field; Al Niemiec, second base; and Pat Tobin, utility; Angels—Lou Stringer, 2b; Lee Stine and Al Epperley, pitchers; Paul Carpenter, lf; and Tom Lloyd, utility.

Nornay Saddler Takes Top Prize

By LOUIS EFFRAT

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., July 22—Champion Nornay Saddler, a popular choice, indeed, was proclaimed best-in-show in the Southampton Kennel Club exhibition today at the Southampton Golf Club. This famous English-bred smooth foxterrier, winner of forty-two previous top awards, showed his class over the formidable entires brought into the ring for the finale.

Pitted against a Brussels griffon, Doberman pinscher and dachshund, the perfectly mannered foxterrier, owned by the Wissaboo Kennels of Westbury and capably shown by Len Brumby, recorded an easy victory.

Gerald M. Livingston of Huntington, who officiated in the final, and has judged Champion Nornay Saddler several times, praised the soundness and motion of the winner.

For opposition Saddler had an 11-month-old puppy, Rosalind Layte's Champion Burlingame Hellzapoppin, the griffon, who a few minutes earlier had been named the best American-bred dog in the show; the well-known dachshund, Champion Hanko Flottenberg, owned by the Ellenbert Farm, and the Lambda Kennels' doberman, Champion Moritz v. Rodeltal.

Saddler's all-around standards prevailed, however, and the gallery applauded Mr. Livingston's choice. Many took a liking to the puppy and the other finalists also had support.

Six American-bred dogs competed for native honors, including three variety group victors, Mrs. Layte's puppy eliminating the highly regarded Irish setter Champion Larry Lad of Kinsellaugh and the Boston terrier Rockefeller's Tops of Idlewood, division winners.

Despite the chilly weather a good-sized crowd came early and stayed late for the show, revived after an eleven-year hiatus. Among the ringsiders were Alfred E. Smith, minus his brown derby, and Gary Cooper, disguised by smoked glasses.

BURTON SEEN AS NO .1 RYDER CUP BRITISHER

Observer

LONDON, July 23—Arising out of the Open championship and other events of major importance there is a good deal of speculation regarding the composition of the British professional team to meet America in the forthcoming Ryder Cup match in the United States. Changes in the side which lost to America in the last match at Southport are inevitable, but the puzzle is to find the players to take the place of those likely to be dropped.

In the absence of any outstanding new men any changes would seem to suggest the negative policy of jumping from the frying pan into the fire. However, as we cannot hope to win with the same team that met with such a crushing defeat in the last contest, there is no alternative but to seek fresh blood.

As the captain, and also a member of the Selection Committee, Cotton will have a lot to say when the time comes to make the final selection, and it is more than likely that some of his views on the relative merits of players under discussion will meet with a hostile reception. He is not looking for the spectacular player who does a 68 one day and a 78 the next, but for the man who can be relied upon to keep on doing 72's, with an occasional 70 or 71 thrown in.

It is Cotton's view that players of this type will not let the side down, rather will they win more often than not. While an average of fours seems a rather low standard for a match of this kind, it is possible to appreciate Cotton's standpoint, which is based on reliability. At the same time he is all for giving the younger players a chance provided they can produce the figures and are not susceptible to "nerves." "I was once a young player myself, and I know what a chance like this means," says Cotton feelingly. Cotton was fortunate, for he got his place in the Ryder Cup team at the age of twenty-two and made good. No other player has ever received the same distinction at such an early stage of his career.

THE CERTAINTIES

Of the ten men comprising the last team only four may fairly be described as absolute certainties for the present side. They are: Cotton, Padgham, R. Burton, and Perry. As the Open champion, Burton, following precedent, will play No. 1, and his opponent will be Byron Nelson, the new U.S. champion. The two men offer a striking contrast in styles. Burton, one of the mighty hitters, has a full, joyous type of swing in the course of which the right elbow moves away from the body, a method suggesting the occasional wild hook, or slice.

Nelson, on the other hand, gets his effects without apparent effort, the swing being perfectly grooved in the best American manner, and the right elbow kept well into the side. Though not a long hitter, he is extremely accurate. That Nelson is at the peak of his form is shown by recent events. Following his victory in the U.S. Open, he reached the final of the American match-play championship, in which he was beaten by Picard at the thirty-seventh hole. Nelson thus narrowly missed the "double" which only one man—Gene Sarazen—has ever succeeded in winning.

Cotton, presumbly, will be No. 2 in the team, in which position he will meet Picard, a tall man with a slow, measured swing, and whose recent conversion from the overlapping to the interlocking grip—little finger of the right hand entwined with the first finger of the left—is not without interest. It is the grip of the Whitcombe brothers, Sarazen, Ouimet, and a host of other first-class players. There is no magic in the grip, and in the case of Picard, he adopted it to relieve the pressure on the left thumb, which is now carried round instead of on the shaft.

The point arises: "Who are likely to be the players to fill the remaining six places?" One is certain to be R. A. Whitcombe, who, for some unknown reason, was left out of the last team. His record in the last three Open championships makes the omission quite inexplicable. In 1937, the year of the match, he was runner-up; in 1938 he was the winner; and this year he shared third place. No other British player can claim such consistency in the world's premier event.

STOUT-HEARTED SCOT

Another probable newcomer to the team is J. Adams, of the Royal Liverpool Club, a stout-hearted Scotsman, who will fight to the last ditch. A genial soul, and extremely popular he radiates a spirit of optimism in circumstances where pessimism is often inclined to rear its ugly head, and because of this characteristic he would be one of my first choices in a national team. Of the men who played in the last match, S. L. King and D. J. Rees are likely again to get their places, though doubt has been expressed in the case of Rees.

While he is the British match-play champion, and won the Leeds tournament, his record is rather of the in-and-out variety. He was last but one in the Penfold League event, twelfth in the Open championship, and was beaten 4 and 3 by Locke in their recent challenge match. Though none doubts the courage of this gallant little Welshman, doubts do exist about his stamina for a match of this kind.

For the two remaining places consideration will be given to the claims of two Yorkshire players, J. Fallon, of Huddersfield, and W. Shankland, of Temple Newsam, Leeds. Making a bold bid for the Open they shared third place with three others. A young man of twenty-five, Fallon has long been recognized as a player of considerable merit, as in the case of Rees, lacking in physique.

Shankland, on the other hand is of the born-athlete type—muscular, powerful and, at the same time, very lissom. An Australian, he was at one time a champion swimmer. Coming to England he became a force in Rugby League football, and now his fixed goal is the Open golf championship. A determined young man, Shankland has made quite an impressive start. Another candidate is D. Curtis, of Bournemouth, also of the athletic type. The players likely to be dropped are C. A. Whitcombe, the late captain; W. J. Cox, Alliss and Lacey. It will be possible to draw more definite conclusions as to the composition of the team after the matchplay championship at St George's Hill, Weybridge, in September.

BRITISH HAVE TOO MANY ALIBIS, SAYS AMERICAN

By PAT ROBINSON.

NEW YORK—There was a time when John Bull was popularly supposed to be the last word in sportsmanship. That was in the days when Old John was quite a lad in the sports world.

In those days Old John was wont to cast a somewhat disparaging eye on all things American. Old John could afford to be snooty when he was dishing out the punishment.

But what a change has come over Old John today. It seems the old boy can't take it any more. If he can't win, he's ready to howl.

TOO SET ON WINNING

First he tells us we're too set on winning. Old John would have us believe he competes just for the exercise and cares nothing about winning but that winning, he says, is a life and death matter with us.

If we continue to set Old John down on the seat of his fat pants he may not play with us any more.

Old John recently has been quoted as saying it will be a long time before he challenges for the America's cup. It appears that he is tired of having Mike Vanderbilt show him how to sail a sloop.

After his Endeavor II took a walloping from Mike's Ranger last year, Old John intimated it might be a good idea to sail smaller boats. That suited Mike who can sail anything that floats. But when Mike went over there this Summer and consistently outsailed Old John in his own waters he decided that the boat wouldn't make much difference until he found somebody who knew as much about sailing as our Mike.

Then there was the recent sad case of Sydney Wooderson. Old John really believed he had something in this strange-appearing athlete. A record holder, according to Old John, and a world beater who would show his heels to our Cunninghams, San Romanis, Fenskes and Rideouts.

Well, you remember what happened. Brother Wooderson came over here, made all his own pace and then finished a badly beaten last. And what a roar the young man put up in claiming Rideout fouled him.

ANOTHER HOWL

Then we had the Henley regatta. We sent over Burk to defend his Diamond Sculls title in foreign waters—Old John's waters, to be sure—a Harvard crew and a crew from Tabor academy. All of them won. But not without a howl from Old John.

It seems Old John decided Harvard wasn't rowing right. That is to say, Harvard wasn't using the stroke as Old John taught it. The Harvard style was good enough to win so Old John had a few disparaging remarks to make. But it was noted that all his coaches were making notes for future reference.

And then there has been the recent influx of ham fighters sent over by Old John. Tommy Farr, for instance. A game bird, no doubt, but strictly the camembert as a fighter. Old John has been looking for a perpendicular heavyweight for years and when he finally found one in Farr, the fellow couldn't fight a lick.

Then we sent a few lads and lassies over to Wimbledon's sacrosanct precincts and all they did was win everything in sight. Riggs won the men's singles; Alice Marble accounted for the women's singles; Riggs and Marble teamed up to win the mixed doubles; Marble and Mrs. Fabyan won the women's doubles and Riggs and Cooke accounted for the men's doubles.

It would seem from all this that Old John's best move would be to forget his alibis and develop a few athletes.

'Big Six' Votes to Keep 2-Game Series Schedule

The Tokyo Six University Baseball League decided to retain its two-game series between teams for the Fall season at a meeting of its directors and managers Thursday night at the Marunouchi. The decision will be conveyed today to the Education Ministry.

The meeting was called to deliberate the Ministry's new ruling banning week-day games outside of holidays and the regular vacations.

Under the 30-game schedule for the whole season, the opening doubleheader will be played on Saturday, September 2, and the Summer vacation before the school terms begin, Meiji University on September 5 and the others on September 10, will be used to the greatest advantage. For this reason, it is expected that the season will be much shortened.

Education Vice-Minister has been reported to favor a one-game schedule between the teams in his plan to effect reforms in the league.

BURK WINS U.S. SCULLS TITLE

N.Y. Times

DETROIT, July 22—Joe Burk, the blond rowing machine from the Penn A.C. of Philadelphia, won the senior singles sculls championship for the third consecutive year today.

Burk, competing in the national rowing regatta, won by a length from Frank Silvio of the New York A.C., who earlier had won the senior heavyweight singles quarter-mile championships.)

The champion took the lead at the start, swinging his tiny shell through the water with a 37 beat to open a half-length advantage at the quarter. He increased his edge to a length coming into the last quarter and withstood a bid from Silvio to gain his thirty-fourth consecutive victory.

The Penn A.C. oarsman covered the mile and a quarter in 7:20 in the face of a stiff westerly wind.

Silvio, who last year lost his title as senior heavyweight single sculls quarter-mile champion, recaptured his crown by winning from Harold Finigan of the Malta Boat Club, Philadelphia.

Silvio, who has rowed the distance in 1:02, put on a spurt 75 yards from the finish and beat Finigan by half a length in 1:27 2-5. Edwin Konrad of the West Side Rowing Club, three lengths back and a length ahead of Theo Dubois of the Winnipeg Rowing Club.

Ken Thornburn of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto, took a one-length victory over Edward Vorndran of the Undine Barge Club, Philadelphia, in the 145-pound senior single sculls quarter-mile dash. Franklin Van Der Kar of the Detroit Boat Club was third. Thornburn's time was 1:26 1-5.

Thornburn and Jack Flavelle, representing the Argonauts, overcame a bad start to hold their championship in the senior 145-pound doubles with a length and a half victory over the Ecorse (Mich.) Boat Club brother combination of Bill and Louis Tank.

Frank Symes and Phil Cochrane of the Malta Club of Philadelphia placed third, two lengths behind Ecorse, with the Detroit pair of Van Der Kar and William Reutter, fourth, and Walter Schmidt and James Brown of the Western Rowing Club of St. Louis last. The winning time was 6:55.

Star for Giants

NEW YORK—The New York Giants, champions of the National Football League, haven't had a topnotch fullback in 12 years, according to a surprise statement made by Coach Steve Owen.

However, Owen is confident this unusual situation will be remedied soon after Walt Neilsen reports soon for training at Superior, Wis.

Neilsen hails from the University of Arizona. He is a giant in stature with the speed of a star sprinter.

EAST FAVORED TO WIN PRO GRID HONORS

NEW YORK—Football supremacy will be captured by the East this season.

This bold assertion is made by Coach Potsy Clark of the Brooklyn Dodgers. It is confined to the National Football League, whose member clubs are still signing numerous stars from last year's foremost college teams.

With refreshing candor Coach Clark, whose skill for judging gridiron values is nationally known, figures the championship New York Giants will have the edge in the East. That in the championship playoff game early next December the Giants will again battle Green Bay's Packers and for the third straight year the league title will come to the Atlantic seaboard.

"Those Giants are still a young bunch, an up-and-coming team. Steve Owen is strongly fortified in every position with the exception of center where the great Mel Hein unquestionably has passed his peak. Furthermore, the Giants will have the confidence and poise that is characteristic of all championship teams," says Coach Clark.

"Right on the Giants' heels will be our Dodgers. We have a young squad. We'll have some very powerful newcomers. I reckon Brooklyn will be the championship contender in the East." Potsy's dependence on his recruits is well founded. The Dodgers drew a very formidable flock of players in the draft, especially Bob MacLeod, Dartmouth's All-American halfback.

"The Philadelphia Eagles, with the addition of Davey O'Brien, will be tougher this season. So will the Pittsburgh Pirates. Washington's Redskins, however, appear to be on the down grade. They will be a fairly old team and will continue to miss several key men from their 1937 championship aggregation."

The Brooklyn coach believes Green May again will be the class in the West, followed by the Chicago Bears. The Detroit Lions and Chicago Cardinals likely will be big question marks, while Dutch Clark, Cleveland's new mentor, is making what may prove to be a noble experiment with the Rams.

Most of Potsy Clark's gridiron career was spent in the Middle West. He was one of Illinois' greatest quarterbacks and successfully coached National League teams at Portsmouth and Detroit.

SCRIBE ASSAILS SUSPENSION ON UMPIRE

By GARRY SCHUMACHER

NEW YORK—National League President Ford Frick's decision, imposing identical ten-day suspensions upon Umpire George Magerkurth and the Giant's Billy Jurges for their participation in the recent rumpus at the Polo Grounds, recalls to mind something Bill Klem said during the course of a speech at the Baseball Writers' dinner here last Winter.

"As a National League," the old arbitrator orated, "I yield to no man in my loyalty to that organization, but as an umpire I recognize a great debt to the late Ben Johnson. As president of the American League he established the dignity and authority of the umpire, and made his job secure by putting it beyond the reach of political interference or influence."

MORE RATIONALLY IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

The American League has always handled this problem, of proper relations between players and umpires, more rationally than the National. What happened at the Pole Grounds could never happen in an American League park. There are safeguards against such an occurrence, rules and penalties that players know, and because they know they will be enforced, do not violate.

And that's the nub of the recent disturbance. The trouble was not Jurges or Magerkurth, what they did, or whether the home run hit by Harry Craft of Cincinnati was fair or foul, but the excessive freedom allowed the players to argue any decision. The demonstration had progressed for fifteen minutes before it reached the face-spitting and punch-throwing stage, and under the limited authority granted to the umpires they were powerless to stop it.

Had Jurges conducted himself toward an American League umpire as he did toward Magerkurth, he'd be sitting out now for ninety days instead of ten. And, knowing that would be the penalty, you can bet he would have held his wrath under control.

Nor is there any reason to hope that Frick's decision will effect any change in the National League attitude toward the situation. There is nothing in it to prevent a recurrence of the episode. It could happen again tomorrow and the umpire couldn't be sure his authority would be supported by the league office.

The suspension of Magerkurth (deserved or not, is not the point here) can't be other than a new cause of uneasiness among all the National League umpires. It looks too much like a decision aimed to please everybody, or at least placate the Giants for the loss of Jurges. Already there has been much loose talk around the league of "getting jobs." Umpires have been "had" before this by managers and club-owners, and the fear that a decision might "offend" somebody in authority is no aid to good umpiring.

STRICTER SUPERVISION WOULD BE REMEDY

It the umpiring is as incompetent as some of the managers claim, there is a quick and easy remedy. Stricter supervision. Why not a supervisory corps, present at every game, and employed to check on the efficiency of the umpires? Bill Klem would be an ideal nominee now that his health may prevent him from working on the field. And it wouldn't hurt President Ford Frick, either, if he made it a point to look in on more ball games himself.

Incidentally, if Magerkurth were a wholly incompetent umpire, as biased opinions would have us believe, he would never have been in the rumpus. He was the first base umpire, and therefore not directly involved in the home run decision. He came to the plate, shouldered responsibility he didn't have to assume because he felt it his duty to restore order and get the game going again. For that he finds himself docked ten days' pay and $150—and possibly his job is in jeopardy.

And he'll be the only one who'll have to pay, by the way. The Giants will pay the fines for Jurges, Terry and Danning, and at a guess Jurges won't lose a day's pay. That's fair enough, but there would have been no fines or suspensions in the first place if the umpires' status and authority were as clearly defined by the league as it should be.

Bavarian Town Getting Ready For 1940 Olympics

GARMISCH-PARTENGIRCHEN—This picuresque Bavarian mountain-resort is already preparing for the Winter Olympics. Hardly had the news reached Garmisch-Partengirchen that the village of the 1936 Winter Olympics had been unanimously voted for the 1940 Olympiad, than preparations were started to make the affair even more successful that four years ago.

New bleachers will be erected at the ski standium, and the Bob-Run will be further perfected. In addition, various improvements will be made on the ski race course, the long distance ski course, and on the Riessersee, and it is hoped to make a second skating rink on the ice stadium. The date for the 1940 Winter Olympics has been set for February 3-11.

Harvard Praised By Toronto Coach

QUEBEC, July 20—The benefit of long training weighed in favor of Harvard University's rowing crew in its victory over the Toronto Argonauts for the Grand Challenge prize at the Henley Regatta, C. H. Punchard, coach and manager of the Canadians, said yesterday on his arrival in the liner Montrose.

The Toronto oarsmen were described by the coach as a "pretty good crew."

"But the Harvard men who beat us July 8 in the Grand Challenge final were just marvellous," said the Argonauts' coach. "Longer training and the fact that the Harvard oarsmen have been together some years gave them the edge."

YANKEES OF 1937-1938-1939 ARE ALL TIME GREAT TEAMS

By HENRY P. EDWARDS
American League Service Manager

Synchronization is the asset that has won three pennants for the New York Yankees and put them out in the lead this year for possibly their fourth flag in succession.

New York won the 1936 pennant with a margin of 19½ games over Detroit, although it was second in batting and third in fielding. In 1937, it finished 13 games ahead of Detroit although third in batting and fifth in fielding. In 1938, it ended the season 9½ games ahead of second-place Boston, despite the fact it was sixth in batting and fourth in fielding.

Generally, a team that wins a pennant so easily is expected to excel in batting and often in fielding as well, but the Yankees, under the shrewd leadership of Joe McCarthy, seem to be able to set the pace without any such superiority on paper. Why is it? Synchronization is the answer.

TRIFLE BETTER

When an opposing pitcher holds the Yankees to a few runs and hits, the Yankee pitcher seems to do a trifle better. When the Yankee pitchers are knocked out of the box, the New York batters go on the rampage and pile up an even larger score.

This is the first season in many years that the Yankees have been able to show such a brilliant defense. During the last three previous seasons, New York made plenty of errors but they did not seem to hurt for the reason that the Yank pitchers either bore down all the harder or one of the fielders would make a spectacular catch or stop that would pull the club out of trouble.

The 1938 Yankees did pack power although sixth in batting. They were actually fourth in the number of base hits, but were first in total bases, third in doubles and triples, and far out in front with 174 home runs. Moreover, they had a habit of hitting a four-sacker just when it was because of that power that opposing pitchers were over-cautious and allowed the Yankees to excel in drawing bases on balls. A couple of passes in front of a home run and there was the old ball game.

LITTLE CHANGE

The make-up of the Yankees has changed but little during the last four seasons. In 1936, the infield was composed of Gehrig, Lazzeri, Crosetti and Rolfe. Lazzeri gave way to Joe Gordon in '38, while Gehrig had to quit this year in favor of Ellsworth Dahlgren. The 1936 outfield was Di Maggio, Hoag, Powell (obtained in trade for Chapman in mid-season), Selkirk, and Roy Johnson. Di Maggio, Selkirk and Powell are still with the Yankees but Henrich and Keller have supplanted Hoag and Johnson.

Dickey and Jorgens have gone right along behind the bat, Dickey catching practically all of the games. The pitching staff has changed but little, Ruffing, Gomez, Pearson, Hadley, and Murphy being survivors of the 1936 championship team. Sundra was added a year ago while Hildebrand and Donald joined this year. So, it can be seen at a glance that the Yankees have needed very few replacements during the last four seasons. In fact the only players on the Yankee roster today who were not members of the 1936 world champions are: Pitchers Hildebrand, Chandler, Donald, DeShong (with Yankees in '35), and Russo; Catcher Rosar; Infielders Dahlgren, Gordon, and Knickerbocker; Outfielders Henrich and Keller. Gone are Pitchers Broaca, Wicker, Kleinhans, Malone, and Walter Brown; Catcher Glenn; Infielders Lazzeri and Saltzgaver (and you might add Lou Gehrig), and Outfielders Hoag and Roy Johnson.

But, during those four years, New York has had the pitching. Up to July 7, Ruffing had won 78 and lost 28, Gomez 58 and 33, Pearson 51 and 19, Murphy 31 and 11, Hadley 41 and 22, Chandler 21 and 9, Sundra 11 and 4, Donald 10 and 0. In addition, Gomez has won six world series contest, Ruffing four, Pearson three and Hadley one, defeats being sustained by Ruffing and Hadley of the present pitching staff.

While the Yankees never will be referred to as "Hitless Wonders," the fact remains that only three of the 1938 pennant winners batted over .300, Di Maggio with .324, Dickey with .313 and Rolfe with .311. Gehrig, Gordon, Selkirk, and Henrich, who gathered 86 home runs, were below the .300 mark. In fact, Gehrig was the only one close. Nevertheless, the Yankees went into first place to stay on July 13.

With the Yankees being rather deficient in base hits although many of their hits were for extra bases, it was up to the pitchers to hold the opposition in check. They did so. They pitched 11 shut outs. They hurled 22 games in which the opposing teams failed to make more than five hits. On the other hand, the Yankees were held to five hits or less 18 times yet won six of such occasions.

This same 1938 aggregation won 17 games in the final inning, thus demonstrating they played the string out to the finish. They pitched 91 complete games, eight more than the Chicago pitchers, 23 more than the Cleveland Indian hurlers, and 24 more than the Boston Red Sox moundsmen. They had fewer strikeouts to their credit than the Cleveland and St. Louis hurling corps; they allowed more bases on balls than the Chicago and Boston pitchers. Still they won their games. When the season ended, it was found that the New York pitchers had allowed 3.91 earned runs to a game as compared to 4.36 for Chicago, 4.46 for Boston, and 4.60 for Cleveland.

SENSATIONAL PLAY

A sample of the Yankees' defense was placed on display on June 15 of this year with the New Yorkers lining up in the game against Cleveland just as they did in the World Series last October with one exception. Dahlgren was on first base instead of Gehrig. New York won 1 to 0 with Gomez pitching against Harder. The only run was scored on a pass, an infield out, and a single. On the other hand, Cleveland had at least three chances to win the game but each time, Dahlgren, Selkirk, or Gordon made a sensational play that kept the Indians scoreless. Selkirk made one-handed running catches, Dahlgren grabbed a line drive with one hand and also took a pop bunt while stretched out on the ground, starting a double play each time, while Gordon raced over back of Dahlgren on one occasion to make a brilliant pick-up of a ball that had got by the first baseman.

In only one of the last three World Series have the Yankees been forced to play six games. That was in 1936 when the New York Giants won the first game, 6 to 1 and the fifth contest 5 to 4. The Yankees won the other four, 18 to 4, 2 to 1, 5 to 2, and 13 to 5. In 1937, the American Leaguers won in five games from the Giants. Ruffing and Gomez won 8 to 1 and Pearson 5 to 1 before Hadley lost to Hubbell, 7 to 3, Gomez then winning the final game 4 to 2. Last year, the triumph was easy for the Yankees as they won four straight from the Chicago Cubs, Ruffing being victorious 3 to 1 and 8 to 3, Gomez 6 to 3, and Pearson 5 to 2.

BROSCH WINS LONG ISLAND GOLF CROWN

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON

N.Y. Times

EAST WILLISTON, L. I., July 22—Red-headed Al Brosch, who caters to the wants of golfers using the State's magnificent four-ply layout known as Bethpage Park, near Farmingdale, doesn't do much in tournament golf, but when he does do something he does it right.

Seven years a pro, Brosch's chief claim to fame, up to today, was the winning of the metropolitan P.G.A. title, a feat he performed last year by beating Mike Turnesa, one of the seven Turnesa brothers who, taken together, constitute one of the most famous clusters of golfers in the country.

And today, on the well-groomed Wheatley Hills course, the 28-year-old carrot-top laid claim to another Turnesa's title when he won the Long Island open championship with a record-breaking count of 276, eclipsing Macdonald Smith's record of 278, which the old master made at the Engineers Club in 1930.

SUCCEEDS JOE TURNESA

Finishing the championship with a brilliant 67, five under par and within a stroke of the course record established by Tony Longo, the Long Island P.G.A. titleholder, in the opening round of the tourney, Brosch made a runaway race of the event, in which he supplanted Joe Turnesa, Rockville Country Club pro.

The new champion, a native Long Islander, had a chance to equal Longo's mark when he pitched up to within four yards or so of the pin at the last hole, but he was unequal to the task of holing the putt that would have done the trick. It was a narrow miss, however.

Brosch, who made a great showing in the United States open at Detroit two years ago, finishing well in the money, and who also gave Dick Metz a thrilling struggle in this year's P.G.A. tourney, carrying the Chicagoan to the last green, was in front three-quarters of the way in the Long Island event.

Third with a 69 on the opening day, he jumped out in front with another 69 on his second round and virtually sewed things up with his third subpar round this morning when he fired a 71. And then this afternoon he hit such a dip as to cause one wag in the gallery to describe his pace as a "Brosch fire."

LONGO FINISHES WITH 76

Longo, who clipped his own wings when he took 40 strokes to come home in the third round after getting out in 32, finished in second place with a total of 288, soaring to a 76 on his final round, while Walter Schreiber of Milburn captured third money with a seventy-two-hole score of 292.

Young Frankie Strafaci, Brooklyn automobile salesman who holds the metropolitan amateur crown, tied with the veteran Willie Klein, home club pro and threetime winner, for fourth place at 293, and the former Indiana amateur champion, Leon Pettigrew, Al Ciuci's assistant at the Fresh Meadow Club, who had 294, tied for sixth place with Walter Kozak of the home club.

On his final trip around the course Brosch went out in 32, starting with birdies on the first and second holes, where he dropped putts of twenty-five and eight feet, and also beating par on the fifth and seventh. He was not so fortunate on the next nine, however, getting only one, which came on the twelfth hole.

Brosch as good as won the championship in the third round, for after his 71 he was three strokes in front of Longo, who foozled after a great start, almost as good as the one he had on the opening day, when he romped over the nine in 31, five under par figures.

FOUGHT FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TITLE

Pictured in top photo is the Kaiso Middle School team of Wakayama prefecture which on Sunday won the pennant of the 25th annual national middle school baseball championships, sponsored by the Osaka Asahi and the Tokyo Asahi Shimbun, at the Koshien stadium near Osaka, by defeating the Shimonoseki Commercial School team (bottom), by 5-0 in the final on the seventh and last day. In winning the title, the Kaiso aggregation won all its five games of the series without allowing a single run. Pitcher Shima of the Kaiso team pitched two no-hit no-run games on two successive days, Saturday and Sunday, defeating the Shimada Commercial School on Saturday by 8-0. A total of 22 teams competed.

LOCKE BEATS BURTON, 10-9 IN £250 BET

The Times, London

LONDON, July 28—A. D. Locke (South Africa) beat R. Burton, the Open champion, in their £250 a side challenge match, scheduled for 72 holes, on the Mere Club's course, near Knutsford, Cheshire, yesterday, by 10 and 9. Locke started the day with a lead of five holes, gained from the two rounds played on Wednesday, and was always in an enviable position, finishing the first round yesterday with a lead of nine holes. Burton played some of his best golf in the first nine holes of the afternoon, to return a score of 34, but Locke continued his relentless game and took only 33, adding a hole to his advantage to win by 10 and 9.

About two months ago Locke beat R. A. Whitcombe, at Coombe Hill, in a similar match, ov 6 and 5, and Whitcombe was then Open champion. Locke's defeat of two champions in so short a space of time may be some consolation to him for his disappointing displays in the Open championship, in which he finished equal ninth, and the Irish Open of which he lost a title won last year.

As in the first round on Wednesday Burton won the opening hole, this time by sinking a putt of 8ft., but Locke approached to within 18in. of the pin at the second to regain his lead of five holes. He became six up at the fifth, where he holed from six yards for a 3, but the next two holes, being bunkered near the green at each. At the turn for home, therefore, Burton was only four down, and three halves did not widen the gap. But the 13th began Burton's landslide, for he lost five of the next six holes. At the 13th he went out of bounds, from a second shot; at the 15th he incurred another penalty stroke through landing on some wire netting covering a brook, and he putted weakly on each of the last three greens to take three 5's against Locke's 4's. Burton was perhaps unlucky at the 15th as the shot that was penalized was a particularly long one.

The figures for the round were:—

A. D. LOCKE
Out: 5, 3, 3, 4, 3, 5, 5, 3, 4=35
In: 4, 4, 3, 4, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4=34 Total 69

R. BURTON
Out: 4, 4, 3, 4, 5, 4, 4, 3, 4=35
In: 4, 4, 3, 6, 3, 6, 5, 5, 5=41 Total 76

Burton cut his arrears at the fourth hole in the afternoon when he got down a putt of four yards, but Locke was nine up again at the fifth, where he holed from three yards for a 3 at a hole measuring 435 yards. Burton's only slip of the afternoon was to be short and take 3 to reach the seventh green, but it was a costly slip as Locke won the hole to take his advantage into double figures, and two halves ended the match.

The figures were:

LOCKE
Out: 4, 4, 3, 4, 3, 4, 4, 3, 4=33

BURTON
Out: 4, 4, 3, 3, 4, 4, 5, 3, 4=34

For the 63 holes of the match Locke's total score was 241—10 under 4's—as against Burton's 254—two over 4's—on a course with a scratch score of 75—263 for the holes played.

Alexander Named Pilot Of House of David Team

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 21—Grover Cleveland Alexander, former Phillies pitching ace, who has been performing at a side show here, yesterday accepted the managership of the House of David Baseball Club for the rest of the season.

Alexander, who has been voted a place in baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., will take charge of the team today when it plays a night game with Cedarhurst, L.I. L.I.

This won't be the 52-year-old's first appearance with the bearded array. He pitched for and managed the club from 1931-35.

HARVEY WINS LIGHT-HEAVY BOXING TITLE

The Times, London

LONDON, July 11—Len Harvey became a world champion for the first time in his long and remarkable career when he just managed to beat Jock McAvoy on points for the Light Heavy-weight title at the White City last night. The championship had become vacant when John Henry Lewis, of America, was prevented by an eye injury from defending it in England recently against Harvey. For once, Great Britain were in front in the staking of claims.

A fine evening and an attractive program had brought an enormous crowd, and thousands had to be refused admission. These remained outside, protestant and determined at least to hear the shouting and the rumors which always spread quickly to the outskirts of a boxing arena. The great covered stands encircling the standium were filled almost by 8 o'clock. By 9 o'clock, when the chief contest was due to begin—but could not—the expansive square of seats around the ring itself was full too. Gradually the spectators were lost in the gloom, but the shouting grew in intensity as at last, after a preliminary battle to reach the stadium at all, Harvey and McAvoy opened their fourth encounter and the second as cruiserweight.

McAVOY'S BIG EFFORT

It was 9:40 before McAvoy, as challenger, entered the well-lighted ring first. His previous attempt to capture the British title from Harvey had proved unsuccessful at Harringay, but he also had the memory of a victory on points as a middle-weight, and here he was, as confident and aggressive as ever, with a world championship, as well as a British, at stake. He was still giving away weight as well as height, but he clearly cherished the hope that the difference between 31 and 29 years—his own age—might prove a decisive advantage.

The fight had an even more vigorous beginning than had been expected, though it always was an affair of experts and few punches were wasted. Harvey's left was a formidable barrier to McAvoy, who would have liked to attack all the time, but had to watch very carefully for every chance to do so. He got in two or three times with his short-arm blows, but the first round was Harvey's on points. In the next round one of McAvoy's rushes swept Harvey off his feet; but it was the charge, not a blow, which sent him down on one knee. McAvoy, however, persisted, and though fewer punches were landed this time it was a round which much have raised his hopes. It was nearly all in-fighting, or rather fighting in clinches, when the men next met, and Harvey was roused by his opponen's tremendous efforts and perhaps hurt a little by one penetrating right to the ribs. Harvey, indeed, looked a trifle worried in the fourth round, when McAvoy slipped his guard and got home a telling straight left to the face. Still, his own lefts were ample to keep McAvoy off in the second half of the round.

The initiative, however, still belonged to McAvoy. Harvey needed all his calm and highly skilled defense to keep a tremendously keen opponent from finding a way through. Every now and then McAvoy's quickness and power in driving home blows to the body threatened Harvey with a really unpleasant experience. It was, indeed, an open question whether Harvey's clever counter-boxing or McAvoy's assaults would have the last word.

Harvey hazarded a surprise attack with the right early in round seven, but missed—and smiled at his own failure. McAvoy, full of tricks and ideas, crouched, bit his thumb meditatively, rushed in, gave ground, sprang in again, and generally kept Harvey wide awake. It was a grim and cunning fight, with little in it. Harvey was the better boxer at long range. McAvoy was the quicker and more aggressive—more dangerous, too, at intervals.

TELLING ROUNDS

McAvoy's will to charge his way to victory, shrewdly and surprisingly quickly sometimes, remained very much in evidence and Harvey found it increasingly difficult to land the kind of counters which would wear his man down before he himself tired. In the rough infighting he was barely holding his own, for all the exceptional strength of his forearms and superior weight. None too soon, in round 10, Harvey let himself go, and McAvoy for a change had to weather a storm. One awaited the next round with deep interest to discover if Harvey had in fact snatched back the initiative. It was significant that McAvoy under pressure looked much less dangerous and Harvey correspondingly more effective, even deadly, at close quarters. Unless McAvoy in turn effected a timely recovery it really looked as if weight, in alliance with cool skill, would tell after all.

Of course, McAvoy himself had a go, and, not without the aid of his head, got in several times before Harvey took advantage of a miss or two to score back heavily. It was still a most determined and relentless battle, and it grew in intensity in the 13th round, when both men let their punches go for all they were worth. Here, Harvey gained the upper-hand, and, in spite of another determined rally, McAvoy came off the worse in a gruelling round.

That McAvoy still was full of fight and punch, however, was quickly shown in the last round but one. Harvey had to accept some slashing blows. One of these staggered him and another very nearly knocked him off his feet. McAvoy saw his chance, and tore in furiously. Harvey must have been glad when the bell offered him a respite before the last three minutes. Once, his glazed eyes had suggested that he was nearly "out" on his feet.

The last round was bound to be critical, if not decisive, for both men. McAvoy again was in his most dangerous mood and Harvey, after failing to keep him out by stalling, was compelled to fight back for all he was worth. The final gong went with both men hard at it, and it was hardly surprising that every one did not agree when the referee, C. B. Thomas, went to Harvey's corner and held up his hand. It must have been a desperately near thing; but the decision at least went to the more skilful boxer.

DOYLE KNOCKED OUT

And so to Jack Doyle and Eddie Phillips. Here there was little prospect of a decision on points. It was, in fact, all over in less than a round. Doyle at once walked into his man and, after a miss or two, floored him with a right to the side of the head. Phillips soon rose, but he saw or sensed some more rights coming and did not wait for them to land. This delighted Doyle's supporters, but their joy was soon cut short. When Phillips rose for a second time he seemed to realize that all he had to do was to duck the swings and swing back as he rose more or less to the perpendicular. Doyle kept on swinging and missing and, suddenly, he ran into a right to the jaw which sent him down as if shot. He was counted out lying flat on his back undeniably "out." Boxing had another victory.

Much earlier in the evening Fred Henneberry, the Australian middle-weight, had made an effective debut in England at the expense of George Davis, of Notting Hill. Henneberry was much too keen and lively a force for Davis, who always had been a sluggish fighter and seldom able to make a proper use of his own considerable powers as a puncher. Davis had to take several counts before the contest was stopped by the referee in the third round.

RIGGS, COOKE LOSE TO QUIST, BROMWICH

Domei Tsushin

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 19—The championship-bound doubles combination of Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, mainstays of the powerful 1939 Australian Davis Cup team, today easily whipped Robert Riggs and Elwood Cooke, America's No. 1 doubles entry, making this year's National Doubles Championships the first foreign windup in its 58 years of history.

The Australians won the semi-final round by the scores of 6-1, 6-4, and 6-0. The Americans, who recently won the coveted Wimbleden men's doubles crown, played an erratic game. Paced by the excellent playing of the visitors, both Riggs and Cooke were kept running all over the court.

Throughout the entire contest, the Americans were unable to keep the Australians from the net despite every effort. In crucial setups, Cooke and Riggs missed frequently, shot too many lobbs and erred on baseline shots. The losers had great difficulty in controlling their smashes.

The Quist-Bromwich combination will meet the winners of the Parker-NcNeil versus Crawford-Hopman matches in the finals probably tomorrow. From the playing the Australians showed today, observers expressed the belief that they have excellent chances of snatching the coveted Davis Cup from this year's American team.

In the women's division, Miss Katherine Stammers and Miss Hammerseley, of England, defeated the strong American team of Miss Helen Jacobs and Miss Dorothy Workman, by scores of 6-1 to 6-2.

MCINALLY WINS SCOTTISH GOLF TITLE

The Observer

LONDON, July 30—H. McInally (Ardeer) won the Scottish Amateur Championship for the second time when he defeated H. Tomson (Williamwood) 6 and 5 in the final over 36 holes at Prestwich yesterday. There were enthusiastic scenes reminiscent of McInally's first victory in 1937. A great crowd of supporters came over from the Ardeer district to support their champion. McInally received vociferous encouragement, and the President of the Scottish G. U. had to appeal to the crowd numbering about 4,000.

McInally went ahead at the third hole and also took the fourth despite being bunkered, a fine recovery enabling him to secure a 4 to win from Thomson who had played a weak chip. Thomson took the fifth and squared at the eight, but McInally led again at the ninth where Thomson was in two bunkers.

McInally, in the heather at the tenth, lost that hole, but won the twelfth by holing a putt of four yards for a birdie four. McInally also took the fifteenth, and was 3 up at the seventeenth where Thomson was again bunkered. McInally had a putt of 2½ yards which would have given him the eighteenth but the ball hung on the lip and a half there ended the round.

McInally went on to win by 6 and 5 and thus joined the select few who have won the title twice. McInally increased his lead to 4 at the fourth hole in the afternoon, Thomson being bunkered there, but the leader was himself trapped at the ninth, which Thomson won.

Out in 37 McInally turned 3 up but he won the next two holes, taking the tenth, which Thomson played poorly, in 4, and sinking a putt of four yards for a 2 at the short eleventh. The twelfth was a tale of two stymies. McInally putting from twenty yards left himself a stymie. He lofted over with his niblick but the ball hung on the lip and stymied Thomson. The hole was halved in 6. McInally settled the match at the thirteenth which he won in 4 by holing a putt of three yards.

CARDS CUT LEAD OF REDS IN NATIONAL

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—Although the World Champion Yankees managed to extend their lead over the Boston Bees in the American League, the league-leading Cincinnati Reds in the National loop had their substantial lead cut to practically half by the challenging St. Louis Cardinals, during the past week's play.

The inspired Cardinal squad won seven and lost one of its games last week to slash Cincinnati's lead from 6½ to 3½ games, as the latter broke even winning three and losing three of its games played.

In the American League, the Yankees boosted its lead two games over the second place Boston Bees, by playing a top-notch brand of ball. They won five and lost one game during the past week.

The Cleveland Indians, who spurted from fifth to third and appeared as though it would challenge the leaders, slumped again to fourth place behind the Chicago White Sox.

Team standings, including games played today, are as follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	78	34	.696
Boston	70	40	.636

DONALD WINS HIS TWELFTH FOR YANKEES

By LOUIS EFFRAT

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 26—If an infected molar couldn't stop Atley Donald, it probably was too much to expect the Browns to do what no team has been able to accomplish this season. So it came as a surprise to no one that the Yankees launched their home stand with a 5-to-1 victory before 6,075 fans at the Stadium yesterday.

For Donald, the freshman right-hander, it was his twelth triumph without a setback and judging from the manner in which he performed against the cellar-occupants—he was close to a no-hitter—it may be a long time before his streak is stopped. At any rate, Donald, who already holds the record for a first-year major leaguer, is well on the road toward recording the longest winning string ever achieved by a Yankee hurler.

YANKS PLAY ERRORLESS BALL

Ably supported by his mates, who played errorless ball and came through with some timely blows, Atley coasted to this latest conquest. Back in 1932, Tom Zachary fashioned twelve straight and in 1904 Jack Chesbro won fourteen in a row for the Highlanders. It is the latter record that Donald is after now and few would be rash enough to wager against his chances.

Unmindful of the abscessed tooth, which has been bothering him for a few days and which may be yanked today, Donald set the Browns down without a hit for five and two-thirds innings. A clean single to right by Billy Sullivan broke the spell and George McQuinn followed with a sharp hit to center, but nothing further devloped. A walk, single and pinch sacrifice fly by Chet Laabs ruined the shutout in the seventh, but Donald prevailed easily, yielding five hits in all.

So much for Donald and the Brownie attack. On the other side, there was Joe DiMaggio's ninth homer a tremendous wallop high into the left-centerfield bleachers in the seventh. The ball traveled approximately 450 feet and was one of the longest and hardest hit round-trippers witnessed in a long time. As a matter of fact, it was only the second time that a ball ever had been hit there, Hank Greenberg having done it two years ago.

LONG FLY CLOSES CONTEST

Red Rolfe connected for his seventh in the next stanza, but that time Donald's No. 12 was merely a matter of waiting for the final out, which was a long fly by Pinch-Hitter Lou Spindel with the bases loaded. The first three Yankee runs came in the fourth and fifth and clinched the verdict.

Young Bob Harris, a puzzle for three frames, gave a run in the fourth when DiMaggio and Bill Dickey singled, Joe Gordon walked and Twink Selkirk's sacrifice fly backed Sullivan against the right-field wall. In the next inning Harris was reached for only one hit, a single by Frankie Crosetti, but the McCarthymen counted twice more, a wild pitch that really was wild and Selkirk's second sacrifice fly to the same man doing the damage.

Harris was replaced by Lefty Howard Mills in the sixth and it was against the southpaw that DiMaggio's and Rolfe's four-baggers were made. Even the Yankees, to whom home runs are an everyday happening, were thrilled by Jolting a wild pitch that really was wild Joe's long-distance smash. It made Rolfe's homer into the right field sector appear puny and after the game the boys were still talking about it in the clubhouse.

LEAD CUT TO SEVEN GAMES

With the Red Sox taking two from the "hot" White Sox, the Yankee lead dwindled to seven games. Not even Marse Joe McCarthy has reached the worrying stage yet, however.

Most of the worrying is being done by Fred Haney, who pilots the Browns. In fourteen clashes with the world champions, they have been able to capture only one.

Sullivan, who made the Browns' first hit yesterday, had spoiled a no-hitter for Oral Hildebrand in St. Louis last week.... Joe Gallagher did not accompany the Browns. He is nursing a battered rib at home.. Japanese beetles had better not molest the Yankees any longer. Traps set for them Gordon made a sensational stop on a sizzling grounder by Glenn in the ninth... The press box is enlarged and freshly painted.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 21—The Stellar Australian combination of Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, nucleus of the powerful 1939 Australian Davis Cup team, today trounced their teammates, Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman, to win the coveted U.S. Doubles Championships here. The pair won in straight sets, 8-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Miss Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey, of the United States, meanwhile whipped Miss Katherine Stammers and Miss Hammerseley, of England, 7-5, 8-6, to win the women's doubles title.

The finals of the mixed-doubles matches will be held later this week.

AUSTRALIA HAS 50-50 CHANCE AGAINST U.S.

VANCOUVER, July 28—Take Harry Hopman's word for it, Australia has a 50-50 chance against the United States in this year's Davis Cup Challenge Round.

Hopman, Captain of the Australian Cup team, and John Bromwich, his No. 1 man, are here for the Western Canada tennis championships. Newspapermen have been pestering Hopman since the beginning of the week for a prediction on the outcome of cup matches.

Hopman broke his silence. He predicted his team will defeat Cuba in their series at Montreal next month and then would turn back Germany. After that, "well, we have a 50-50 chance against the United States."

New 25-Meter Pool To Be Opened Saturday At Kawana Hotel

Its course officially sanctioned by the Japan Swimming Federation, Kawana Hotel's 25-meter swimming pool will be opened at 1 p.m. Saturday, August 26, with a number of Olympic swimmers in exhibition. Wounded soldiers convalescing in the district will be specially invited.

Shigeo Arai and Takeshi Sasaki, freestyle sprinters, Tetsuo Hamuro, Olympic 200-meter breaststroke champion, Yasuhiko Kojima and Michiaki Taniguchi, backstroke stars, and Hiroshi Takahashi, middle distance freestyler, will be out to smash the national short course records.

Tsuneo Shibahara and the Osawa sisters, Reiko and Masayo, all Olympic divers, will also appear in the exhibition.

REDS STOP BEES, 2 TO 1 WITH HOMER

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, July 25—Harry Craft hit his eighth homer of the season with a man on base in the seventh inning tonight to give Cincinnati a 2-to-1 victory over the Boston Bees before 28,682 fans at Crosley Field. It was Bucky Walters's seventeenth victory of the year and his sixth straight and increased the Reds' National League lead to ten games.

Played in an hour and twenty minutes, the game was the shortest of the year so far in the National League and the pitchers were responsible.

Walters and Bill Posedel, who had blanked the Reds in his last try, set the batters down man after man. Both started a little shakily, Walters giving a single and a walk in the first and Posedel two singles. Sparkling double plays stopped both these threats.

Not until the seventh did either team get a score across. Debs Garms sent a short fly to center and Craft just managed to touch it. It went for a double, and Garms came in on Buddy Hassett's sacrifice bunt and Max West's sacrifice fly.

Lee Gamble opened the Reds' half with his second single and on the hit and run went to second while Hassett threw out Frank McCormick. Ernie Lombardi skied to Garms. Then Craft swung and the last the third largest crowd of the year saw, the ball was dropping behind the center-field fence. Nino Bongiovanni added a single, but was stranded.

Posedel's control was perfect and he struck out three. Walters, who now has given only two runs in his last four games, walked a pair and fanned five as he allowed three hits. The Bees were allowed to leave one man on base, while the Reds stranded three.

10 WEST COAST STARS PICKED FOR CHICAGO TILT

Christian Science Monitor

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29—Like the perennial jack-in-the-box, football pops up again.

This time it's the annual amateur-professional football game held in Chicago Aug. 31. Reason we are interested in it out here is that 10 western grid stars will appear in the uniforms of the amateurs.

The method of securing a place on this team-of-teams is by public vote through a nation-wide poll put on by some 332 newspapers and radio chains. The idea spread like a grass fire the past two years and this year more votes have been cast than ever before. Coaches are selected the same way.

10 OUT OF 69

The West secured 10 out of 69 players, but none of them ranked high enough in the voting to start the game. With the center of population somewhere in Ohio and Indiana it is only natural that the greatest number of votes were cast in behalf of Big Ten players with a proper representation, however, from other parts of the nation.

After the game has started naturally there are many substitutions, and usually the best working combinations as chosen by the coaches are not the starting line-ups as fixed by the voting public. That is why the so-called 'experts" out here on this western slope predict that some of the 10 westerners chosen will be right in there contributing greatly to the strength of the amateurs soon after the opening kick-off.

GREAT LINEMAN

For instance there's Art Means, the sturdy guard from the University of Washington "Huskies" up in Seattle. Art is considered one of the greatest linemen ever to don a lineman's helmet and shoulder pads. Just ask any of the many centers and backs that tried to bowl him over the past three years. Art will be causing just as much trouble for the professionals.... and probably will be wearing a professional uniform (if he wants to) after the professional season starts

The New York Giants—last season's professional champs—admit they have a wholesome respect for the amateurs, and are reported to have stated that it is usually the less publicized player that steals the show in these nip-and-tuck games.

OTHER THREATS

Another westerner that may head for the professional ranks after this game is Jerry Dowd, spectacular St. Mary's center. Then there is Al Wolff of Santa Clara, a cagey and hard hitting tackle if there ever was one. Jim Coughlan of Santa Clara will be snagging passes from an end spot. All-American halfback Vic Bottari of California may or may not start slanting off tackle for the professionals, but he will be in there twisting and spinning for the amateurs to the extent that said money-boys will be wishing he was over their side of the field.

Arizona put one lad on this team—Bronko Smilanich—and that's quite a feat for a school in a state where the population is on the low side. And from all reports Bronko is mighty good at doing what his name implies—bucking.

CALIFORNIA STARS

Pete Fay and Bill Paulman backs, Stanford stalwarts, both made the squad, Dave Anderson, California fullback, is on the list, as well as Tony Calvelli, Stanford center—a game little pivot man who has made some of the larger but slower opposition linemen look pretty bad.

So on the night of Aug. 31, when your ear is located somewhere near that radio loudspeaker, don't be surprised when you hear that one of the 10 westerners has contributed to the success of the all-stars. Of course we aren't prejudiced in favor of the amateur all-stars—no indeed! But that ought to be permissible for a sports scrivener at least once a year.

'BIG 6' LEAGUE OPENS SEASON ON SEPTEMBER 2

The Tokyo Six University Baseball league will commence its Fall season on September 2 and close on October 8 for the shortest schedule ever compiled, influenced by Education Ministry's desire for reforms in the circuit toward a more realistic amateur and collegiate environment. All games will be played at the Meiji Shrine Stadium.

Taking advantage of the Summer vacation up to September, tripleheaders, an innovation, will be played on September 2, 3, 5 and 6. Through this arrangement, half of the schedule will be played up to September 10.

On the tripleheader days, the first game will be played at 10 a.m. The curtain-raiser of a doubleheader will be started at 1 a.m. on Saturdays and at 12 noon on Sundays. When one game will be played, the starting time will be 1:30 p.m.

The traditional Keio versus Waseda series will be played on October 7 and 8.

With the exception of the nightcap, all games will be called off at the end of the ninth inning.

The schedule as approved by the Ministry follows:

Saturday, September 2: Hosei vs. Waseda (first mentioned is home team); Teidai (Tokyo Imperial) vs. Keio; Meiji vs. Rikkyo.
Sunday, September 3: Rikkyo vs. Meiji; Keio vs. Teidai; Waseda vs. Hosei.
Tuesday, September 5: Meiji vs. Keio; Hosei vs. Rikkyo; Teidai vs. Waseda.
Wednesday, September 6: Waseda vs. Teidai; Rikkyo vs. Hosei; Keio vs. Meiji.
Saturday, September 9: Hosei vs. Keio; Teidai vs. Rikkyo.
Sunday, September 10: Rikkyo vs. Teidai; Keio vs. Hosei.
Saturday, September 16: Meiji vs. Waseda; Hosei vs. Teidai.
Sunday, September 17: Teidai vs. Hosei Waseda vs. Meiji; Keio vs. Rikkyo.
Saturday, September 23: Rikkyo vs. Keio; Meiji vs. Hosei.
Sunday, September 24: Hosei vs. Meiji; Rikkyo vs. Waseda.
Saturday, September 30: Teidai vs. Meiji.
Sunday, October 1: Meiji vs. Teidai; Waseda vs. Rikkyo.
Saturday, October 7: Waseda vs. Keio.
Sunday, October 8: Keio vs. Waseda.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

GIRL WHO DIDN'T WANT TO DIVE NOW HOLDS TWO U.S. TITLES

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 28—Helen Crlenkovich, 18-year-old San Francisco girl, didn't want to be a diver, but now she holds two national championships.

When Helen moved West from New York she had ideas about developing into a championship swimmer. After paddling about in a San Francisco playground pool she was recommended as a swimmer to the Fairmount Hotel team. But she didn't come close to making the grade.

Coach Phil (Pat) Patterson however, thought the determined young girl might have possibilities as a diver. He had the right hunch, for Helen won the Northern California three-meter title and National junior championship in 1936.

Under Patterson's tutelage the California girl continued to develop, and came on to win the 1939 Senior Women's A. A. U. three-meter indoor title from 18-year-old Marjorie Gestring of Los Angeles earlier this year.

Yesterday Helen reached another goal by again defeating Miss Gestring, 1936 Olympic champion. This time it was the three-meter outdoor championship that Helen grabbed from Marjorie.

In the feature event of the Women's National A.A.U. meet Helen scored 135.89 points to her rival's 133.97. Marjorie had held the title for three years.

Mary M. Ryan, a 14-year-old Louisville, Ky., girl, and Esther Williams, Los Angeles A. C. representative, were the other winners yesterday. The Kentucky lass, who'll be a sophomore in high school next year, won the mile freestyle in 24:12.8, and Miss Williams finished first in the 100-meter freestyle in 1:09. Miss Ryan defeated second-place Nancy Merk, 13-year-old Portland, Ore., girl by 25 yards.

The events were staged under a blistering sun yesterday and officials decided to start the second session of the meet tonight. Preliminaries however were set for morning competition.

ALL ATHLETES PREPARING FOR 1940 GAMES

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Athletes of all kinds here these days are doing their stuff with one eye on the 1940 Olympic Games. And what they see with it, even at the present long range of time, encourages the belief that the festival at Helsingfors, Finland, next Summer is going to be a show that all participants (not to mention all spectators) are going to enjoy very much indeed. For the Finns are setting the scene with all the care and thoroughness that have characterized the preparation of their own successful teams for former meetings in the series.

This does not mean to say that the 1940 Olympics are going to be a super spectacle of pageantry. On the contrary, they are going to be more or less an unpretentious affair, compared with, say, the terrific display that took our breath away in Berlin three years ago. This, from the British point of view at any rate, is all to the good.

EFFICIENT SIMPLICITY

A country which organizes the Olympics is bound to stamp some of its national characteristics upon them, and the imprint of Finland will be one of efficient simplicity. A quality calculated to restore to the Games a sense of values which tended to become lost, along with the ideal of "sport for sport's sake," as the Olympics grew bigger and bigger, brighter and brighter, louder and louder, and more and more blended up with considerations of national advertisement that threatened to make amateur international sport a contradiction in terms.

Many people, while thoroughly enjoying the lavish presentation at Berlin, felt that the Games showed signs there of losing in character something of what they gained in aggrandizement. And here in Britain you could almost hear a sigh of relief go up when it was learned of the transference of the 1940 festival from Tokyo, Japan, to Helsingfors. It was not a question of being anti-Japanese. And it was certainly not a question of wanting to pass up what promised to be a delightful trip to the beautiful and hospital land of Japan. It was just a genuine feeling that the Games had been getting rather above themselves and that circumstances in the political and economic field had provided the opportunity for them to be put back into proper perspective.

LONDON IN 1944

The Japanese, you see, had made known their intention of going one better even than the Germans did in the putting on of a stupendous manifestation of the type which the British and the Americans, at all events, had come to regard with certain misgivings. But the Finns were known to have neither the facilities, nor the desire, for such a thing. Under their management, it was felt, the trend would be back to simplicity, toward the restoration of the Games as just a sports meeting that could properly be said to lie within the scope of private and voluntary organization. Such as will be applied to them here, in London, in 1944.

Well, the Finns are now well advanced with their plans for setting the 1940 Olympic scene. And a very pleasant scene, indeed, does it promise to be. The center-piece being, of course, the Helsingfors Stadium, which is the pride and joy of sporting Finland. This arena was formally declared open on June 12 last year, and the designers of it had the prophetic foresight to leave, opposite the Tribune of Honor, what you might term an "Olympic gap," ready to be turned into accommodation for spectators in the event of Finland having to organize a festival in the modern Olympic cycle. Such an opportunity came soon afterward, and by the time the Olympic track and field events are staged—in fact, by August this year—the Helsingfors Stadium will be able to hold 63,000 spectators. Architecturally, the Stadium furnishes one Olympic record already, the Marathon Tower, 73 meters high, beating the corresponding edifice at Berlin by precisely one meter.

Pitcher, Called to Colors, Aids Senators to Win Over Eagles by 1-0 Score

Pitching his last game, Yutaka Kaneko of the Senators, who had been called to the colors earlier in the day, checked the Eagles to four hits and aided his team to a 1-0 victory in Tueseday's tripleheader at the Korakuen stadium. He was given a rousing send-off after the game.

Nakagawa of the Eagles also chucked a good game and held the Senators to four hits.

A hit and run play with Noguchi at bat and Omoda on the bases brought in the Senators' winning run in the fifth stanza.

The Giants held on to their lead in the standings by downing Nankai 6 to 1. The Tigers, one and a half games behind, nosed out the Lions, 6 to 4, in the other game.

The standing follow:

Miss Alice Marble of the United States (left) who with Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan on Monday won the American national women's doubles tennis championships at Brookline, Mass. by defeating Miss Katherine Stammers (right) and Miss Hammersley of England, 7-5 and 8-6. Miss Marble won the Wimbledon title this year by downing Miss Stammers in the final, 6-2 and 6-0.

TENNIS BEGINNERS TOLD TO PLAY NET IN BULLETIN ISSUED BY U.S.L.T.A.

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 31—Schoolboys who wish to become proficient in tennis should remember that the dominating position in singles, as in doubles, is the net, according to the second of a series of brief articles on strokes and tactics for the scholastic player and his coach which appeared recently in the Service Bulletin of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

"While it is undoubtedly good tactics occasionally to play your man from backcourt or even to draw him up to the net, if you can pass him, your object in most matches should be to keep the ball in play from backcourt only until you can force an opening to gain the net and win the point from that position of vantage," stated the bulletin.

"When your opponent is in backcourt, every stroke, in fact, should be planned with the net as your objective and you should be constantly on your toes to take advantage of the first opportunity to go in. When in doubt what to do, go to the net."

The baseline in tennis has been compared to the goal line in football, according to the article.

"If your team has the ball on its own five-yard line," it continues, "your object is to get the ball out of your danger zone and into your opponents' territory; so your quarterback calls for a punt. In tennis when your opponent is in backcourt you cannot punt from your baseline, but you can go up to the net and thereby carry the play into your opponent's territory and turn your position from one of defense into one of attack; and if your opponent 'fumbles' your drive, you can win the point by a volley or smash.

CLOSER TO 'GOAL LINE'

"The reason why the net is the dominating position is that when you are volleying at the net you are about thirty feet nearer to your opponent's 'goal line' than when you are driving from your own baseline—thirty feet nearer out of a total of seventy-eight feet from baseline to baseline. The ball which your opponent drives, therefore, reaches you sooner when you are at the net and your opponent has less time to recover from his stroke and get set for his next stroke.

"Moreover, since the ball which you volley from a position near the net has a much shorter distance to travel than the ball which you drive from your base line, it reaches its destination sooner and, therefore, gives your opponent less time in which to reach it.

"By moving in some thirty feet closer to the net you have, therefore, reduced the time of the flight of the ball from your opponent's racket until it returns to him for his next stroke; in thus reducing the time element you have gained the equivalent of the speed of a Vines swift drive without increasing the speed of your volley, an advantage which is worth some risk.

"Your volley will force your opponent to hurry his stroke and your position at the net will force him to drive the ball close to the top of the net and within a foot or two of either sideline. Unless he is accurate, he risks losing the point. This is a serious mental hazard for the average player and not many have the consistent accuracy to drive their return within the small space required. As a result, you opponent is led to make errors or to give you a 'set-up'."

NOTED PLAYERS QUOTED

To support its advice to schoolboys to go to the net, the U. S. L. T. A. through its bulletins quotes several of the most noted players in the world on this point.

Donald Budge has this to say: "The net player enjoys a tremendous advantage if he has attained the proper position behind a good forcing return. There is a certain amount of risk in going to the net; but if you are a good volleyer and have the proper ground strokes to provide reasonably safe approach there is even more risk for your opponent."

Rikkyo, Hosei Rout Kwansei Gakuin, Kansai 'U' Nines

Kwansei Gakuin and Kansai University ball teams proved no match for Rikkyo and Hosei of the Tokyo Six University league in pre-season games Tuesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Registering twenty hits, Rikkyo registered as many runs to win the first game from Kwansei Gakuin at the same time yielding but one run, while Hosei took the nightcap from Kansai University by an 11-2 score.

TORONTO COPS CANADIAN REGATTA HONORS

N.Y. Times

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 29—The Toronto Argonauts dethroned the Buffalo West Sides as team champions in the fifty-second Royal Canadian Henley Regatta today when Jack Flavelle and Ken Thorburn won the senior 140-pound doubles after the Buffalo club had been dethroned as senior eight-oared champion.

Flavelle and Thorburn beat off a determined bid by Bill and Lou Tank of Ecorse, Mich., to win the deciding points. Frank Van Der Kar and Bill Reutter of Detroit were third. The winner's time was 7:52.6.

Joe Burk of the Philadelphia A.C., winner of the Diamond Sculls on the Thames, took the Canadian singles sculls title for the third straight year.

Burk rowed the mile and five-sixteenths in 8:00.8 to beat Theo Dubois of Winnipeg, winner of the association singles yesterday, and W. Carroll of the Buffalo West Sides.

DUBOIS PLACES SECOND

Burk, who also holds the United States title, had little trouble winning. Dubois gave the New Jersey apple grower the most contention but at the finish he was six lengths back. Another five lengths separated Dubois and Carroll, with Hugh Miller of the Toronto Argos trailing in the four-man field.

The Hamilton Leanders won the senior 150-pound eights from the Wyandotte, Mich., in one of the best finishes of the regatta. The two raced on virtually even terms to near the finish line, where the Hamilton eight jumped ahead to win by only six feet in 7:09.6. The Buffalo West Sides trailed in third place.

St. Catharines won the senior 150-pounds fours with coxswain with a half-length margin over the Ecorse, Mich., crew. Wyandotte was third, ten lengths back.

Taking the lead at the half-mile mark, Flavelle retained his 140-pound singles title in 8:28.6. At the finish he was six open lengths in front of Frank Van Der Kar of Detroit.

BUFFALO 140-POUNDERS FIRST

The Buffalo West Sides' senior 140-pound eight rowed to victory at the opening of the final day's program, covering the mile and five-sixteenths in 7:13 to finish one-third of a length in front of Detroit, the only other starter.

Dubois and A. F. Riley of Winnipeg sculled their way to victory in the senior doubles final in 7:30.6. They easily defeated the Toronto Argonauts pair, Gordon Bradshaw and Herb Miller, with third place going to Chuck Kane and Jack Keefer of the Fairmount Rowing Association, Philadelphia.

Buffalo's hopes of retaining its team title received an early setback when the Hamilton Leanders led its senior eight home and its senior 140-pound four bowed to Detroit by a half-length in a two-boat race.

The Leanders were clocked in 6:44.6, with the West Sides second, Ottawa third and Detroit fourth. The Detroit four rowed the distance in 7:50.8 to win by half a length.

PARKER BEATS MCNEILL AT SEABRIGHT

By ALLISON DANZIG

N.Y. Times

SEABRIGHT, N.J., July 30—The brilliant volleying offense that carried Donald McNeill of Oklahoma City to the French hard court tennis championship beat in vain today against the pitiless efficiency of a calculated defense worthy of a Rene Lacoste, and Frank Parker found himself in possession of the Seabright Bowl for the first time.

An hour and ten minutes after Umpire Benjamin H. Dwight had started the final-round match at the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, the stalwart, cleancut young Oklahoman was at the end of his physical resources, with nothing to show for the energy he had burned up on his stormy passages to the net in two desperately fought sets.

The minutes later, the cool, vigilant Parker had reaped the reward of his inflexible control and magnificent counter-attack from a baffling straight backhand, the stroke that did everything but break the heart of his opponent.

Crushed by his failure to win the second set, after three times averting its loss by a stroke in the tenth game, and with his legs almost wobbling beneath him, McNeill bowed to his fate and won only three points in the last set, in which he probably was conserving what strength he had left for the final of the doubles. The score was 6—3, 8—6, 6—0.

CAPACITY CROWD LOOKS ON

Despite the threat of rain in the overcast skies, a crowd of 1,500 spectators filled the stands for this meeting between two of the leading candidates for berths on the United States Davis Cup team.

The greater part of the gallery apparently came in the hope of seeing a McNeill victory, from the enthusiasm with which the Oklahoman's winning strokes were applauded, but at the end Parker's masterful performance had won a capitulation from the spectators as well as from his opponent.

Following upon his long string of conquests on clay, interrupted only once by a five-set defeat at the hands of Bryan M. Grant Jr., the clay court champion's triumph today, in his first turf court tournament of the season, gives a strong boost to his stock in the Davis Cup market. At the same time, it is only fair to McNeill to point out that, like Robert Riggs and Elwood Cooke, beaten here in earlier rounds, he has hardly had time to adapt himself and his game to American conditions since returning from Europe.

These players, along with Joe Hunt, Grant, Gene Mako, Wayne Sabin, Sidney Wood and Gilbert Hunt, will have additional opportunities to advance their candidacy for the team at Southampton, Rye and Longwood.

TRIUMPH FOR THE EAST

Miss Helen Bernhard, 17-year-old national girls' champion, won the women's bowl, marking the first time since 1933 that an Eastern player has gained this distinction. In the final round the New York girl circumvented the efforts of Miss Dorothy Workman of Los Angeles to unsettle her powerful driving attack with drop shots and lobs, and stood off the Californian's volleying attack to win at 6—3, 7—5.

Miss Bernhard, who also won the Longwood Bowl, lost only one set in the tournament, that one going to Miss Virginia Wolfenden of San Francisco, who came dangerously close to victory. In addition to Miss Workman and Miss Wolfenden, both members of the first ten, the girls' champion also defeated Miss Dorothy Bundy, third in the ranking, and seems assured of a place in the top ten for 1939.

The New York girl did not play as well today as she did in her other matches here. That was partly because of the tactics used by Miss Workman, who realized it would be fatal to hit with her and tried to run up and down the court.

This policy, along with her strong service and her volleys, enabled Miss Workman to break through for a 4-3 lead in the second set, in which Miss Bernhard came frequently to the net herself and showed that she has not yet mastered the volley. From that point the girls' champion stayed back, and the superiority of her ground strokes gave her the upper hand.

Parker and McNeill returned to the court later in the afternoon to gain an unexpectedly decisive victory over Mako and Sabin in the final of the doubles, which amounted to a Davis Cup test match. With Parker leading the attack, they won, 6—1, 6—1, 4—6, 6—3. Holcomb Ward, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, presented the trophies to the winners and runners-up.

In the final of the mixed doubles, Miss Alice Marble and Adrian Quist defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Cooke, 6—1, 3—6, 6—3.

SELKIRK HITS 2 HOMERS AS YANKS WIN

By JOHN DREBINGER

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, July 31—Perseverance being a commodity with which the White Sox appeared to be quite liberally endowed, Jimmy Dykes's doughty Chicagoans finally managed to win their first game of the year at the Stadium yesterday.

They achieved his lofty end in the presence of 35,256 onlookers, including a rather astonished Marse Joe McCarthy, by walloping the Yankees in the second game of a double-header, 5 to 1, after having lost a photo finish in the first engagement, 4 to 3.

Two home-run clouts by George Selkirk, the sixteenth and seventeenth of the year for Twinkletoes, toppled the veteran Ted Lyons in the opener, although the Sox gave Marse Joe some uncomfortable moments before being counted out by routing Lefty Gomez in the ninth and rushing three runs across the plate before Johnny Murphy finally was able to bring them under restraint.

Sorely nettled, the Sox tore into Bump Hadley for three runs in the first inning of the nightcap. On the wings of this margin they went on to win behind a well-pitched game by the left-handed Thornton Lee, who thus bagged his ninth victory against eight defeats.

ERROR LEADS TO TALLY

Hadley, whose lot in the first inning was not made any easier by two misplays, went out under a shower of three singles in the second, and after that it became a hopeless pursuit for the Yanks. In fact, the McCarthy forces did not escape a shut-out until the eighth, when an error and singles by Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio propelled their tally across.

With Gomez in excellent form as well as rare good humor, the opener looked to be safely tucked away by the time Selkirk salmmed his second homer into the lower right-field stand.

The first one came with two aboard in the second, DiMaggio having opened this round with a single, and the second smack came in the fourth with the bases empty. So Lyons was trailing, 4—0, as early as the fourth and matters were still that way with the close of the eighth, for Gomez did some brilliant pitching in the interval, blanking the Sox on three scattered hits.

It therefore came as a great shock and surprise to the Senor when Rip Radcliff opened the ninth with a single to right and Frankie Crosetti dropped Joe Gordon's toss to second on Harry Steinbacher's grounder. Twice before, the Yanks, playing dazzing ball in the field, had eased the pressure for Gomez with dazzling double plays, but this time they gummed one up and Lefty looked pained.

PASS FILLS THE BASES

He walked Luke Appling, filling the bases, and when Eric McNair outgalloped an infield hit to Red Rolfe, one run came in and the shut-out was gone. So, too, was Gomez, as Murphy, the distinguished Fordham relief specialist, came rushing to the scene.

But Johnny apparently had not sufficiently tuned up, for he walked Pinch-hitter Johnny Marcum to force in another run and the Yankee lead was down to two, with still nobody out.

Mike Kreevich, batting for Lyons, smacked a grounder at Crosetti, who fumbled long enough to prevent anonther double play, although he did get a force play at second, with the Sox protesting very vigorously that he had missed even this. However, Appling scored on the play, the Chicagoans had runners on first and third and nothing more than a long fly was needed at this point to tie the score.

Here the Sox got a little overenthusiastic and wrecked their prospects with almost incredible speed. With Jackie Hayes at the plate and McNair on third, they tried a squeeze play which missed connections chiefly because a sweeping curve by Murphy almost went into the dirt. McNair therefore merely dashed headlong into the second out and Hayes quickly supplied the third out to end the rally.

THIRD DEFEAT FOR LYONS

The defeat was only the third of the year for Lyons, who was gunning for his eleventh victory. Gomez, saved by Murphy, annexed his eighth triumph against four setbacks, while the nightcap gave Hadley his fourth defeat against his nine winning games.

What Selkirk did in the second inning Steinbacher might have done in the first of the opener when he hit one toward the Yankee bullpen with two on, but Henrich made a sparkling catch. Selkirk, with seventeen round-trippers, now leads Gordon by one and Bill Dickey by two in the Yankees' private home-run race.

Although held to a single in each contest, DiMaggio managed to extend his current hitting streak to eleven consecutive games.

Ambers Beats Armstrong For Lightweight Title

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—Lou Ambers regained the world lightweight boxing title today, outpointing the champion, Henry Armstrong. The triple titleholder, in a 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium.

The colored fighter was penalized in the fifth round for low-punching.

GERMANS BEAT ITALIANS ON TRACK

Waseda Nines Beat Kansai College Teams

Waseda University's first and second teams defeated the Kansai and Kwansei Gakuin university nines respectively Wednesday afternoon at the Totsuka grounds by scores of 4 to 1 and 3 to 1.

With the exception of first baseman Matsui, Waseda had a listless day at bat and had a tough time with Pitcher Miki of the Kansai University squad. Pitchers Ishiguro, Kondo and Kawamura worked three innings each for Waseda.

Draw Made for Australian-Yugoslav Davis Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 23—As the result of the draw for the interzone Davis Cup finals, Drage Mitic, of Yugoslavia, will play against Adrian Quist, of Australia, and Ferenc Puncec against John Bromwich on Thursday. The contestants will switch partners for the singles on Saturday.

The Yugoslav doubles team has not yet been nominated but most probably Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic will battle against the combination of Quist and Bromwich.

CARDS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM DODGERS

By ROSCOE McGOWEN

N.Y. Times

ST. LOUIS, July 30—Sunday double-headers and the yellow ball are a bad combination for the Dodgers. Today the Cardinals staged a repetition of last Sunday's performance in Ebbets Field by beating the Durochers in both ends of a twin bill, each time by 5—2.

Manager Ray Blades even used the same starting pitchers, Tom Sunkel and Bob Bowman, who were the winning hurlers. Last week Sunkel was knocked out but today he went the route, allowing nine hits, while Bowan gave ten in nine frames.

A crowd of 12,233 cheered the Cardinals and booed the Dodgers, especially Manager Lippy Leo Durocher, throughout the afternoon. A couple of Dodger arguments with Umpire Larry Goetz added to the enjoyment of the fans.

BOWMAN ASSISTS AT PLATE

Don Padgett's home run off Red Evans in the fifth inning with two on won the first game, while errors by Johnny Hudson and Cookie Lavagetto, coupled with the hitting of Johnny Mize, Joe Medwick, Enos Slaughter, Don Gutteridge and Bowman, took care of the nightcap.

The twin triumph rocketed St. Louis from fourth to second place, while the Dodgers miraculously held on to fifth.

It was a bad break for Hugh Casey when the Cards counted three unearned runs in the third inning of the nightcap. Bowman started it with a sizzling double down the first base line, and when Hudson took Pepper Martin's grounder and threw wild to Lavagetto, Bowman scored and Martin took second on the error.

Jimmy Brown bunted into what should have been a perfect play at third, but Lavagetto let Casey's good throw get away and Pepper scored, Brown going to second. Jimmy came home on Mize's solid single to center.

PITCHER SLIPS IN SIXTH

Bowman, who last week beat the Dodgers with three hits, allowed only two today, a double by Durocher in the third and Babe Phelps's infield single in the fifth, until the sixth.

Then successive singles by Hudson, Lavagetto and Dixie Walker brought one run. Dolf Camilli popped out but Art Parks whacked a line double to right center, scoring Lavagetto with another. Walker, none too speedy because of a bad leg, was cut down with the tying run at the plate on Stu Martin's accurate relay of Slaughter's throw. Dixie failed to slide, or he might have made it.

Slaughter, Mize, Medwick and Gutteridge singled in the seventh and the Cards harvested two more runs. With two out in the same frame, Casey purposely passed Mickey Owen to fill the bases, then apparently threw a "duster" at Bowman. Bob later bounced out to Casey and there was a hot exchange of words between them as Bowman started for the mound.

TWO HITS WASTED

Bowman's immediate retaliation was to throw his first pitches at both Hudson and Lavagetto. Both singled, but no run resulted because Hudson was caught off second by Slaughter's throw.

Only a double by Phelps and a pass to Durocher troubled Bowman in the ninth, Koy fouling out to Owen to end the game.

In the third inning of the first game Evans started the Dodgers toward their only lead with a lopping single to left with one out. Hudson promptly rifled a pitch to left center, sending Red to third, whence he scored as Brown threw out Lavagetto.

The Cards tied the score with an unearned run in the third. Lynn Myers beat out a hit to deep short and Hudson booted Sunkel's bounder. Brown slapped a single to center for the score.

With Hudson on third and Lavagetto on first in the fifth, a delayed double steal was attempted and seemed successful, but Umpire Goetz called Hudson out and a storm of protest came from all the Dodgers.

LOSES GAME IN FIFTH

In the fifth Evans lost the ball game. Pepper Martin dropped a pop fly single in front of Koy, Brown slammed another to center and Padgett, after fouling off two attempted bunts, walloped the ball atop the right-field pavilion for his fourth homer of the year.

Ira Hutchinson gave up the other St. Louis run in the seventh on a pass to Brown, Owen's sacrifice and Medwick's single to center.

The Dodgers got their second run in the eighth on singles by Camilli and George Stainback and a force play. They had the bases filled with two out in the sixth, but Al Todd, called upon to hit for Ray Hayworth, lifted a pop fy to Pepper Martin.

MYERS SPIKED IN LEG

Myers was spiked in the left leg by Pete Coscarart while pivoting on a double play in the seventh. He remained in the game, but was out of the second contest.

FUJIKO KATSUTANI, 14, OF HAWAII WINS U.S. BREASTSTROKE TITLE

N.Y. Herald Tribune

DES MOINES, Iowa, July 29—Miss Edith Motridge, of Los Angeles, a veteran of the 1936 Olympics, tonight captured the 100-meter National A. A. U. women's backstroke title in the near-record time of 1 minute 18.9 seconds.

The twenty-four-year-old star, her arms churning the water in furious, paddlewheel fashion, nosed out Miss Gloria Marie Callen, of New York, by a little over a yard.

Miss Betty Bemis, Nashwauk (Minn.) High School swimmer, was third. The winning time was seven-tenths of a second slower than the 1:18.2 record established in 1932 by Miss Eleanor Holm.

Miss Fujiko Katsutani, fourteen-year-old Hawaiian globe trotter, staved off a determined challenge by Miss Iris Cummings, of Redondo Beach, Calif., and triumphed in the 200-meter breast-stroke finals.

The 106-pound Wailuku girl swam the four lengths in 3:16.1. Her margin over Miss Cummings, who won the A.A.U. 220-yard breast-stroke title last year, was four-tenths of a second. The American record is 3:12.6, set by Miss Margaret Hoffman in 1932. Miss Helene Rains, of New York, was third, and Miss Edith Pemberton, of Los Angeles, fourth.

Carl Ahlgren, of Des Moines, a University of Iowa sophomore, ran away with the annual Y.M.C.A. mile swim for men in the recordbreaking time of 23 minutes 57.3 seconds. Art Vanhavern of Moline Ill., placed second.

Miss Agnes Jean Larson, Nashwauk (Minn.) High School lass captured the Iowa open 50-meter breast-stroke event for junior girls in 0:46.

Miss Nancy Merki, of the Multnomah Club of Portland, Ore., who was a victim of infantile paralysis five years ago, showed the way in the 400-meter free-style final, winning in 5:29.6. The thirteen-year-old Miss Merki began taking water treatments when she was nine years of age.

Three clubs dominated the 400-meter event. The six qualifiers included two each from the Multomah squad, the Lakeside Civic Club of Louisville, and the Olneyville Boys Club auxiliary of Providence. In addition to Miss Merki, they included Miss Mary Ryan, of Louisville, winner of the first heat in 5:35.9; Miss Ann Hardin, Louisville; Miss Brenda Helser, Portland, Ore.; Miss Edna Soltyslak, Providence, and Miss Doris Brennan, Providence.

The Misses Patty Aspinall, of Indianapolis; Helen E. Rains, of New York; Edith Pemberton, of Los Angeles, and Ruth Howarth, of Hopedale, Mass., qualified with the Misses Katsutani and Cummings in the 200-yard breast-stroke event. Miss Rains won the second heat in 3:18.1, while Miss Aspinall captured the third heat in 3:21.6.

The summaries:

Final—Won by Miss Merki; second, Miss Helser; third, Miss Hardin; fourth, Miss Soltysiak; fifth, Miss Ryan; sixth, Miss Brennan. Time, 5:29.6.

100-Meter Back-stroke

Final—Won by Miss Edith Motridge, Los Angeles A. C.; Miss Gloria Marie Callen, Women's Swimming Association, New York, second; Miss Betty Bemis, Nashwauk High School, Nashwauk, Minn., third; Miss Helen Perry, Ohio Women's Swimming Association, Cleveland, fourth; Miss Anne Cooney, Multnomah A. C., Portland, Ore., fifth. Time, 1:18.9.

Special Y. M. C. A. Annual Mile

Final—Won by Carl Ahlgren, unattached, Des Moines; Art Vanhavern, Moline, Ill., Second; Tom McNeil, Des Moines, third; Clarence Moore, Clinton, Iowa, fourth; Bill Freeman, Des Moines, fifth. Time, 23:57.3 (new record; old record, 25:11.7, set by Pete Kelley, Des Moines, in 1936).

PACIFIC COAST SWIMMERS

N.Y. Times

DES MOINES, July 30—Pacific Coast swimmers left the rest of the nation's hopefuls wallowing in their works tonight as they ended the women's national A.A.U. four-day championship meet by smashing two American records.

Miss Nancy Merki, 13-year-old former infantile paralysis patient swimming for the Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, Ore., rubbed out one of the marks in covincing fashion when she won the 800-meter free-style in 11:19.9. The old mark, 11:33.3, established by Mrs. Katherine Rawls Thompson in 1938, was 13.4 seconds slower than the Portland flash's performance.

W.S.A. RECORD BROKEN

Earlier a Los Angeles Athletic Club trio had hung up a 3:52.8 record in the 300-meter medley relay, 8.8 seconds better than the 4:01.6 mark set by the Women's Swimming Association of New York in 1936. The team composed of the Misses Edith Motridge, Esther Williams and Virginia Hopkins also broke the old mark with 3:58 in a preliminary heat.

Swimming back-stroke, Miss Motridge gained a commanding lead with a 1:18.9 performance. Next was Miss Williams's 1:24.6 for the breast-stroke and finally Miss Hopkins's 1:09.3 free-style. The title in 1938 also had gone to the Los Angeles A.C.

The unofficial 1:24.6 by Miss Williams was 2.5 seconds under the American 100-meter breast-stroke record set by Miss Anne Govednik in 1933.

Most of the statistics reflected West Coast domination of the championship tests, which are viewed as an important prevue of American feminine swimming strength for the 1940 Olympics.

LOS ANGELES TEAM VICTOR

The Los Angeles A.C. captured the team title with 36 points, followed by the Multinomah A.C., with 28. The Lakeside Civic Club of Louisville scored 18, the Women's Swimming Association 16 and the Olneyville Boys' Club Auxiliary of Providence 9.

Miss Merki gained individual meet honors with 13 points. Besides her 800-meter record-breaking triumph tonight, she also captured the 400-meter free-style title and second pace in the mile.

The Misses Doris Brennan of Olneyville, Mary Ryan of Lakeside and Marjorie Gestring, unattached, of Los Angeles, tied for second with 8 points each. Miss Gestring Olympic three-meter board-diving champion, dethroned Miss Ruth Jump of the Los Angeles A.C. in the ten-meter board event tonight.

PITTSBURGH PLAYER WINS U.S. GOLF PLAY

N.Y. Times

BALTIMORE, July 29—Andy Szwedko, Pittsburgh powerhouse, won the national public links golf championship today by a 1-up margin after a driving stretch battle with Phil Gordon, slim Oakland (Calif.) insurance clerk.

They finished the week-long tournament on the final green when the Pittsburgh steel worker came through like a champion to stave off the closing rush of the plucky little Westerner.

Gordon shot his bolt on the thirty-second and thirty-third, taking both holes with masterful seconds to the green.

Szwedko, his advantage cut to 1 up, tightened up and slammed the door in the fighting Oakland youngster's face on the remaining three holes, halving each one to preserve his winning margin to the end.

VICTOR 3-UP AT 27TH

Szwedko forged into a 3-up lead at the end of twenty-seven holes of the thirty-hole final. He was out in 35, one under par, on the afternoon round. Gordon took 39 strokes.

Szwedko made just one error on the out nine, three-putting the twenty-second. He offset this lapse by collecting birdies on the nineteenth and twenty-third. Gordon, meanwhile, was struggling along with six pars and three bogeys.

They halved the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth holes but at the thirtieth Gordon played a billiard shot to win and cut the Pittsburgher's lead to 2 up. Twenty feet from the cup, and with Szwedko's ball only seven inches from it, Gordon caromed off his opponent's pellet for his winning birdie 3.

Szwedko regained his 3 up advantage at the 395-yard thirty-first, with a birdie 3. Gordon made a remarkable recovery shot on the thirty-second to within seven feet of the pin and sank his putt for a birdie 4 to win against Szwedko's par.

ALL EVEN AT EIGHTEENTH

The match was all square at the end of the first eighteen holes. Both turned in medal cards of 93, one over par for the hilly course. Gordon made the turn 1 up, and increased his lead to 2 up on the eleventh, only to have Swedko draw even with a birdie on the thirteenth and an eagle on the fourteenth.

Szwedko's wayward putter told a vivid story of the morning round. He was hot and cold by turns, three-putting no fewer than five greens, but offsetting that difficulty by sinking sizeable putts on three holes and dropping a forty-yard chip shot for an eagle on another.

The rugged Pittsburgher was consistently ahead of his slim rival off the tee, sometimes outdriving him fifty yards. Szwedko also reached the greens nicely on most attempts, but the huge expanses of the putting surfaces time and again baffled him.

GORDON MUCH STEADIER

Gordon, meanwhile, shot much the steadier golf. He had only one birdie for the round in comparison with the three birdies and an eagle registered by Szwedko. However, the Californian was over par on only two holes as Szwedko went over perfect figures on six.

They halved the 535-yard tenth hole in par 5s, Szwedko being over the green on his second shot. The Pittsburgher then three-putted the eleventh from 18 feet to go 2 down, but got that one back on the thirteenth by sinking a 15-foot curling putt for a birdie 3. He squared it on the fourteenth by matching an eagle 3 against a birdie 4. Szwedko's chip shot from 4 yards rolled into the cup. Gordon chipped his third dead for an easy 4.

Gordon again went 1 up on the fifteenth as Szwedko three-putted from 60 feet, but his rival squared it again on the seventeenth, getting his par as Gordon missed the green with his tee shot and took a bogey 4. They halved the eighteenth in par.

Australian, Philippine Wrestling Teams Coming Here in Oct. for Meets

Amateur wrestlers from the Philippines and Australia will compete in Japan early in October, according to arrangements completed by the Japan Amateur Wrestling Association.

Tentative plans call for a tri-nation meet in Tokyo at the Hibiya Park amphitheater on the night of October 8 and another at Osaka on October 5.

Four wrestlers and a manager will come from each country. The Australian team is scheduled to leave Sydney on the Yusen liner Kitano Maru on September 2 and will arrive at Yokohama on October 2, accompanied by the Philippine contingent.

The All-Japan team will be selected after the national championships in September.

Keio Routs Kansai 'U', 12-3, But Latter Downs Meiji, 5-4

Behind the effective pitching of Southpaw Takatsuka who yielded but two hits in seven innings, Keio University's ball tossers swamped the Kansai University nine by 12 to 3 Thursday afternoon at the Totsuka grounds.

The Kansai collegians scored all three runs in the eighth on the wildness of Righthander Shiraki who had relieved Takatsuka.

Shortstop Odate, Keio's most reliable hitter, led in the sticking with four hits out of five trips to the plate, including two doubles.

In the other game at the same diamond, Kansai University bumped off Meiji by a 5 to 4 score, staging a two-run rally in the last half of the ninth.

The summaries were:

Kansai	000 000 030—	3	3	6
Keio	210 320 04a—	12	13	2

Batteries: Yamane, Hirata and Yamasaki, Miyakawa.

Horiguchi to Fight Tanaka Over 10 Rounds

Tsuneo (Piston) Horiguchi, who is Japan's best known fighter despite his defeat late in Spring this year at the hands of Umio Gen, Chosenese fighter shortly after his return from America, will take on Yukito Tanaka in a 10-round bout next Monday night at the Hibiya Park amphitheater in a smoker sponsored by the Fuji Boxing Club.

It is a return scrap between the two. In their first meeting at the Nishinomiya stadium, near Osaka, on August 5, Tanaka put up a much better fight than expected, and lost by a slim margin on points.

There will be five six-rounders and two four-round preliminaries on the card.

COMISKEY ORDERS FAMILY TO KEEP CLUB

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, July 25—The name of Comiskey—which for two generations helped build the sport—will continue in baseball.

Filing of the will of J. Louis Comiskey, who died a week ago at his Eagle River (Wis.) Summer estate, disclosed that the Chicago White Sox Baseball Club was left to the widow and three children, with its affairs to be controlled and directed by the First National Bank of Chicago.

All the shares in the ball club, except fifty, were owned by Comiskey, whose father, Charles A. Comiskey, founded the team almost forty years ago after a brilliant playing-managing career. These shares numbered 7,450, at par value of $100 each. The remaining fifty shares are held by Harry Grabiner, vice-president and secretary.

HALF OF SHARES TO WIDOW

Comiskey bequeathed half of his shares to his widow, Mrs. Grace Comiskey, to be held in trust, with the other half to be held in three separate trust estates for the equal benefit of the three children, Charles A. Comiskey 2d, now 13-year old; Grace Lou, 18, and Dorothy, 22.

The will directed that the First National Bank, as trustee, direct the running of the club and Paul Godehn, member of the law firm representing the Comiskey family, said the bank likely would elect a board of directors soon to handle the American League team but that no change in policy or management was contemplated.

In his will Comiskey directed that Grabiner and Joseph Barry, traveling secretary, be retained in their present positions.

Comiskey, who took control of the White Sox when his father, "The Old Roman," died in 1931, stipulated it was his wish that no shares of the stock in the team be sold until his son Charles attain the age of 35 years, unless sale of said shares should be deemed prudent and desirable by the trustee.

WILL EXECUTED IN 1932

The will, executed on Jan. 23, 1932, bequeathed to Mrs. Comiskey household furnishings and personal effects. The petition for admission of the will to probate said the personal estate was valued at $2,250,000, with the real estate having a value of approximately $75,000.

Connected with the club for thirty-six years, Grabiner has been its guiding head through several years in which Comiskey was periodically ill. The team has played and drawn well under the management of Jimmy Dykes, signed as manager by Comiskey in 1934. No mention of the club's active manager on the field was contained in the will.

360 M.P.H. GOAL OF LONDON SPEED DRIVER

N.Y. Herald Tribune

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah, July 29—This is a story of men and machines and rubber and salt and of a similar quest for speed that knows no end.

It is the story of Big John Cobb, the crown prince of speed who would be king of his Railton, in which he hopes to drive 360 miles an hour, faster than man ever has driven on land before.

Cobb, the 200-pound London fur broker, will seek, in mid-August, to write another chapter in the long history of speed that started on a day in 1898 when Chasseloup Laubut climbed into his Jentaud car on the sands of sunny France and set the first record for the mile—a dizzy 39.24 miles an hour.

His efforts long since have been eclipsed by a trio of daring, wealthy Britons—Campbell, Eyston and Cobb. Sir Malcolm Campbell set the racing world on fire in September, 1935, when he wheeled his twin-motored Bluebird onto the Bonneville speedway—nature's contribution in hard rock salt to the mad quest for speed near the Utah-Nevada border. On that day Campbell attained an ambition to be the first man to drive five miles a minute. His record was 301.1292 miles an hour.

Had Campbell raced alongside Chasseloup Laubut he would have won by some 4,500 feet in a mile (5,280 feet) contest.

EYSTON NEXT TO SET MARK

Campbell never returned to the course he made famous, but others of his countrymen did. Capt. George E. T. Eyston, big, sandy-haired, mustached London sportman, followed two years later and on Nov. 19, 1937, drove his Thunderbolt 311.42 m.p.h. Eyston boosted the mark still higher, to 345.49 m.p.h. in 1938.

With Eyston standing by, the Jovial Cobb took his new, untried Railton and roared down the thirteen-mile stretch of salt. He gunned it as he neared the halfway mark and flashed through the measured mile.

At the end he quickly changed tires, checked his motor and retraced his course. A run each way is required so that no racer may take advantage of a wind at his back. When timers checked his speed each way, averaged it, they hailed Cobb as the new king of speed. His time: 350.2 m.p.h.

For twenty-four hours Cobb was king—then Eyston took up the duel. This time he pushed the record to 357.7 m.p.h., and Cobb went home. So did Eyston after a later attempt in which his car broke down.

Thus only three men know the sensation of driving on land at five miles a minute or more.

Eyston described it this way:

"When I first topped 300 miles an hour I had a number of mingled sensations. One moment I felt the salt was curving down in front of me. The next I felt as if we were speeding through a body of water in a high-powered speedboat instead of riding on wheels. Another time it was quite a casual ride. The last time it was a hell of a ride and I don't mean that profanely."

'FINE RIDE; NO DISCOMFORT'

To Cobb: "It is a real thrill. You just go faster and faster until your vision becomes blurred and your only guide is the black line. It feels good when you can slow down. There is a great roar from the motor and you can hear a terrific whine from the wind as the air rushes by. The ride is fine; there is no discomfort."

He made no mention of the fact he risked his life on the theories and blueprints of Reid Railton. It was Railton who theorized a car did not need to weigh six or seven tons to hold the ground at 300 miles an hour. Cobb risked his life to prove it.

Eyebrows of the Bonneville wiseacres lifted high when Cobb shipped his Railton to the flat and announced it weighed but three and a half tons, or 2.8 pounds per horsepower. No light car before had been driven faster than 200 miles an hour that did not lift and kill its driver.

All who inspected the big racer agreed its shape was something never before seen. They described it as a turtle, a button or a derby hat. Built of aluminum alloy, it was completely streamlined. To present the least possible resistance, the body inclosed the entire mechanism, wheels and tires included. To avoid the necessity for detachable panels for access to the machinery, the body was mounted so it could be detached and lifted bodily from the chassis.

FOUR TIRES CARRY RAILTON

Railton built the car so that it could be carried on four tires. Eyston used eight and this was an important financial factor when tires cost in the neighborhood of $500 each and had to be changed at the end of the first half of the race.

In order to use but four tires it was necessary to hold the weight of the car dry—without fuel or ice to cool the motor—to 7,000 pounds.

A single steel girder in the center of the car formed the frame. The engines were slung one on either side of the girder. Each engine was a 12-cylinder, 5½-inch bore, 5⅛-inch stroke and 1,250 h.p. Each engine with its transmission was independent of its fellow. One engine drove the bevels for the front axle, the other the rear axle. The wheels were crab-tracked.

All this planning was done with the sole idea of scorching the salt at 350 miles an hour.

How fast is that? It is speed so great it challenges the speed of sound. Sound travels 1,087 feet a second. Cobb, when he raced 350.2 m.p.h. for a record, drove the mile one way in 10.19 seconds, which is approximately 519 feet a second, or nearly half the speed of sound.

The speed was so great it confused the spectators, who could see the car as it blurred past them but were unable to explain why the roar of its motors trailed it by some 200 yards.

FIVE HUNDRED FEET A SECOND

A University of Utah scientist explained that, since sound travels 1,087 feet a second and the crowd was 1,500 feet from the track, the sound required about one second to reach the spectators. In that time, however, the car had traveled approximately 500 feet.

At 350 miles an hour a car is traveling almost as fast as a projectile from a cannon, which has a muzzle velocity of 550 feet a second. An Army .45-caliber pistol projects a bullet at 800 feet a second, muzzle velocity.

Cobb and Railton feel sure their car is capable of challenging the mark set by Eyston's Thunderbolt. They feel sure the Railton will exceed 360 miles an hour. So they will come to the saline course midday in August for a month's try at the record.

In their quest this year they will be unopposed. No driver outside of England has a machine capable of challenging them. Eyston has not asked permission to use the track, and Campbell long since gave up his five-mile-a-minute racing, apparently content to stand by as long as an Englishman held the record.

AMERICANS, FINNS REIGN SUPREME IN TRACK MEET AT GLASGOW

The Times, London

GLASGOW, Aug. 7—The Americans were the first to agree that for sheer hustle the Rangers Sports, which were held at Ibrox Park, Glasgow, on Saturday, before the usual crowd of more than 60,000 persons, took a lot of beating.

The crack of the pistol starting innumerable heats was compared not too unreasonably with machine-gun fire. Pistols also went off periodically to announce the half-times, full times, and extra-times of five-a-side football matches, in which, alas, for Ibroxian enthusiasm, the Rangers went down to Celtic, deadly rivals who not long ago had attracted more than 100,000 to the same monster arena. Small-side football for experts only, athletic in which master Finns and American champions mingled in a medley of handicaps with the humblest of locals, bicycle races, serio-comic relief in the form of obstacle races, and, last but not least, the arrival of a host of marathon runners from Gourock, away down the Clyde, all went to make up the fun of the fair.

It was thus easy to exaggerate the meaning of some of the running, for handicaps can produce some queer results. Maeki, for example, was "beaten" by 50 yards in the three miles, although he set up a new British record in the matter of time. C. Beetham and Blaine Rideout, the Americans, were second and sixth respectively in a 1,000-yard affair, yet the former also achieved a record. Erwin Miller, another American, was second in the quarter, and so on. But all of these great runners and their fellows entered into the spirit of the thing and took the rough with the smooth, even the overcrowding when occasionally it occurred. Nor did such magnificent jumpers as L. Steers and G. Varoff appear to mind very much to find themselves declared beaten. The former easily cleared 6ft. 4in. before failing at 6ft. 5in., but this still left him second to an Edinburgh policeman who had been given 5½in. start. As for Varoff, he was unplaced in the pole vault, although he did well over 13ft. and can, of course, do over 14ft. There was no opponent for W. Watson, the American weight-puter, who, however, obliged with a demonstration and reached 51ft. 7¼in. without difficulty.

A SPATE OF RECORDS

Much more important, then, than most of the results were the times off scratch, and here naturally America and Finland reigned supreme. To describe the sprints first, Joe Batiste, who had no hurdling to do, took the place of Clyde Jeffrey in the 100 yards handicap, and, though he just failed to give start yards to F. C. Watson, of Gala, he was timed from scratch at 9.8sec. This was 1-10sec. short of E. H. Liddell's British record, but equaled the Scottish All-Comers' record set up by W. R. Applegarth. This was not so bad for a failure. Over 120 yards, a great burst of speed at the finish enabled Jeffrey just to beat a fellow-American, Roy Cochran—a hurdler—to whom he was giving four yards, and J. M. Bone, of Ballyhouston, who started from the 6½-yard mark. The time here was 11.8sec., which equaled the Scottish native record, but was 2-10sec. behind the British record, held by A. W. Sweeney, among several others.

The 220 yards event did not lend itself to serious running, for even Jeffrey and J. R. Cumberbatch, of Trinidad, could not bore their way through or outflank the crowds in front of them. Runners off the 21-yard, 18-yard, and 14-yard marks occupied the first three places in the final. Nor in a 440 yards handicap could Erwin Miller quite give away 32 yards, and more than that as the race was run, to R. McGregor, of Maryhill. It was enough to note Miller's time of 48.3sec. under difficulties. The half-mile, in which there were 170 entries, and the mile, in which there were 109 in one race and 110 in the other, were left to the British runners, which, perhaps, was as well. In a heat in the former event R. T. H. Littlejohn, starting from scratch, ran his best half up to date by winning in 1min. 55.4sec. in a large and unwieldy field. Unfortunately, he was not well enough to proceed any farther and men off the forward marks had the final to themselves. It was the same in the mile, in which G. M. Carstairs, the Scottish champion, did not go.

In the 1,000 yards invitation race, which was regarded as one of the events of the day, for reasons which were not clear, C. Beetham, the American half-miler, Blaine Rideout, their much-discussed miler, and A. J. Collyer, the British half-mile champion turned miler, all started from scratch. Almost unnoticed and unappreciated at first was E. A. Sears, of Essex Beagles, on the 16-yard mark. When the time came for a spurt Beetham left both Collyer and Rideout, but failed by a foot to overtake Sears. The last-named had stolen a march early in the race, and he hung on remarkably well in the last 100 yards. Beetham's time of 2min. 11sec., none the less, was 2-10sec. faster than the British record held by C. Ellis, and more than 3sec. faster than J. C. Stothard's best in Scotland. Beetham's running created an excellent impression. Rideout was not suited by the distance, and in any case probably was saving himself for today at the White City.

THE FINNS AS USUAL

The crowd cheered the Americans generously, but they were even more impressed by the two Finns—Maeki and Iso-Hollo—the one the greatest long-distance runner in the world and the latter now equally outstanding as a steeplechaser. Both were set stupendous tasks in the matter of handicap, but, with a mechanical case which still seems the secret of Finland, they reeled off the laps as a man might tear days off the calendar. Iso-Hollo did not altogether approve of the Ibrox water jump, but he made light of it and the hurdles when the time came. He won the eight-lap race by 60 yards from W. C. Wylie, of Darlington, who had had 160 yards start.

In the three miles race Maeki overcame every one but M. Bingham, of Finchley, who had 190 yards start and really ran remarkably well. Bingham was still about 50 yards in front at the finish, though it was Maeki's wonderful stride, superb physique, and mastery of the clock and schedule which most gripped the attention. Without the slightest indication that he intended to do more than show his paces, Maeki covered the first mile in 4 min. 37.6sec., the second mile in 9min. 26.2sec., and the third in 14min. 3.4sec. This apparently unhurried masterpiece was easily a British record—6sec. inside the great Lehtinen's British record, which recently was beaten by 8-10sec. by C. A. J. Emery, though the latter's time has yet to be passed officially.

The marathon race settled down into a duel between the veteran Scotsman, D. McNab Robertson, the A.A.A. Champion, and that great trier, T. F. Lalande, of South Africa. These two were more or less together and far ahead of the rest of a field of 41 when 20 miles had been covered. Then Robertson went ahead and won by over 6min. in moderate time.

One ought, perhaps, to add that Celtic not only beat—outmaneuvered, perhaps, is the right word—the Rangers in the semi-final of the five-a-side football tourament, but scored two goals to none against Partick Thistle in the final.

RESULTS

100 Yard Open Handicap—Frank C. Watson (Gala H.) (10 yards), 1; J. Batiste (America) (scratch), 2; R. B. Paul (Garscube H.) (11½ yards), 3. Won by a yard; a foot. Time, 9.8 sec.

High Jump Open Handicap—H. T. L. Wilson (Edinburgh City Police A.A.C.) (5½ in.), 6 ft. 4½ in., 1; Les Steers (America (scratch), 6ft. 4 in., 2; Duncan Stalker (Field Events Club) (5 in.), 6 ft. 4 in., 3.

Half Mile Cycle Open Handicap—Douglas R. Drew (Lothians C.C.) (76 yards), 1; George Wilson (Manchester Wheelers) (65 yards), 2; Jack Proctor (Zenith C.C.) (84 yards), 3. Won by 2 lengths. Time, 1 min. 4 sec.

Half Mile Open Handicap—Francis Sinclair (Wellpark H.) (49 yards), 1; Charles McGarrity (Garscube H.) (58 yards), 2; Wm. J. Carvill (Royal Air Force) (44 yards), 3. Won by 2 yards; a yard. Time, 1 min. 56.5 sec.

Eight Laps Steeplechase—V. Iso Hollo (Finland) (scratch), 1; Wm. Wylie (Carlington H.) (150 yards), 2; J. S. D. Nisbet (Gala H.) (230 yards), 3. Won easily. Time, 10 min. 22.2 sec.

1,000 Yards Invitation Handicap—E. A. Sears (Essex Beagles) (16 yards), 1; Charles Beetham (America) (scratch), 2; J. Gifford (Bellahouston H.) (20 yards), 3. Won by a foot; 4 yards. Time, 2 min. 10.9 sec. Beetham's time announced as 2 min. 11 sec., beat British and Scottish All-Comers' Records. Collyer, with 2 min. 13.1 sec., was also inside Scottish All-Comers' Record.

One Mile Cycle Open Handicap—W. W. Tagg (Glasgow Wheelers C.C.) (30 yards), 1; T. McNulty (Glasgow Wheelers C.C.) (78 yards), 2; D. R. Drew (Lothians C.C.) (152 yards), 3. Won by 2 lengths. Time, 2 min. 14.4 sec.

120 Yards Open Handicap—Clyde Jeffrey (America) (scratch), 1; R. Cochran (America) (2½ yards), 2; J. W. Bone (Ballahouston H.) (6½ yards), 3. Won by a yard. Time, 11.8 sec.

Pole Vault—Hugh Hood (Edinburgh City Police A.A.C) (2 ft. 8 in.), 14 ft. 1 in., 1; A. Gibson (Atalanta) (2 ft. 7 in.), 13ft. 6 in., 2.

Quarter Mile Invitation Handicap—R. McGregor (Maryhill H.) (32 yards), 1; Erwin Miller (America) (scratch), 2; J. A. M. Robertson (Glasgow University A.C.) (9 yards), 3. Won by a yard; 3 yards. Time, 48 sec.

Three Miles—M. Bingham (Finchley H.) (190 yards), 1; Taisto Maeki (Finland) (scratch), 2; W. Nelson (Maryhill H.) (360 yards), 3. Won by 50 yards; 20 yards. Time, 13 min. 56.6 sec. Maeki's time was 14 min. 3.4 sec., a British record.

220 Yards Open Handicap—Angus Maitland (Victoria Park A.A.C) (21 yards), 1; A. W. Ison (West of Scotland H.) (18 yards), 2; J. P. N. Cumberbatch (Trinidad) (4 yards), 3. Won by a foot; yard. Time, 21.5 sec.

One Mile Open Handicap (First Race)—Alex. McGregor (Plebian H.) (70 yards), 1; A. R. Forbes (Victoria Park A.A.C.) (120 yards), 2; H. W. McGrath (Plebian H.) (155 yards), 3. Won by 10 yards; 15 yards. Time, 4 min. 15.2 sec.

One Mile Open Handicap (Second Race)—George Hunter (Bellahouston H.) (125 yards), 1; W. Connor (Shettleston H.) (140 yards), 2; J. Martin (Clydesdale H.) (150 yards), 3. Won by 5 yards; 20 yards. Time, 4 min. 15.2 sec.

Marathon (26 miles 386 yards)—D. McN. Robertson (Maryhill H.); 2 hr. 42 min. 2 sec., 1; T. F. Lalande (South Africa and Poly. H.), 2hr. 48 min. 40 sec., 2; T. H. J. Richards (Mitcham A.C.), 2 hr. 52 min. 48 sec., 3; A. H. Blair (Maryhill H.), 4; J. Craig (Maryhill H.), 5.

Five a Side Football Tournament—Celtic, 2 goals, beat Partick Thistle, no goals.

LOCKE DEFEATS ENGLISH OPEN GOLF CHAMP

The Times, London

LONDON, Aug. 7—A. D. Locke, the South African professional, and R. Burton, the Open champion, who met in a 72 holes match at the Mere Country Club recently, with disastrous results for Burton, were again opposed yesterday, over 36 holes on the Selsdon Park club's course. Locke was six up at the end of the afternoon round, having gone round in 69 to Burton's 75, and won by five and four.

Burton was not too fit. He had had several teeth extracted a few days ago, and his condition was not improved by a long motor drive from the North of London yesterday morning. The match began with three halves, but then Burton took three putts at the fourth, and from that time his short game weakened. In addition, his long game became wild. Burton was fortunate not to be more than a hole behind at the turn. He lost the first five inward holes, taking three putts on the 10th and 11th greens, and hooking at each of the next three.

Burton reduced his arrears at the 15th, a short hole where Locke made his first mistake by missing the green, but the South African resumed his lead of six holes at the 17th, where Burton again hooked his drive, and then bunkered his second shot. The figures for the round were:

A. D. LOCKE

Out: 5, 3, 4, 3, 3, 5, 4, 4, 4=35.
In: 4, 4, 3, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4=34.
Total ..... 69.

R. BURTON

Out: 5, 3, 4, 4, 4, 3, 4, 4, 4=35.
In: 5, 5, 4, 5, 5, 3, 4, 5, 4=46.
Total ..... 75.

Burton made a partial recovery in the evening but Locke always held a commanding lead. Burton, with any luck, would have won the first four holes in the evening for a putt of several yards hung on the lip at the first and one of 5ft. pulled up an inch short at the third. He did hole from four yards for a win at the second, and further reduced his arrears at the fourth, where Locke was bunkered. Halves to the turn left Locke four up with nine to play. Burton had been half stymied at the ninth, where he hit a terrific drive of 300 yards, and another partial stymie robbed him of a possible half at the 10th, where Locke became five up. Then halves for the next four holes brought the match to an end.

LOCKE

Out: 5, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5, 3, 4=36.
In: 4, 4, 3, 4, 5=20.

BURTON

Out: 5, 2, 4, 3, 4, 4, 5, 3, 4=34.
In: 5, 4, 3, 4, 5=21.

SOCCER PLAYERS IN ENGLAND TO BE NUMBERED

By J. T. BOLTON

Observer

LONDON, Aug. 6—In connection with all competitive team games to which spectators are invited, and which rely on such support for their continuance, the question of whether the entertainment of the people should be regarded as important arises repeatedly. So far as first-class football is concerned, the problem has to be faced by individual players, teams, and legislators.

Recent events certainly suggest that additional consideration is being given to the entertainment side of the sport. As the players, now back at their football homes, prepare for a new season they are being reminded of changes the basic idea of which is to provide increased value for money entertainment. The new season starts in Scotland next Saturday. There all is ready for the kick-off. The League start in England is a fortnight later. Will the new season provide a notable advance in the amount of football played for the spectators.

The prospective onlookers have been given consideration by the legislators. In all the big grounds during the coming season the players by the competing sides—save the goalkeeper, who carries a color distinction—will wear identification numbers on their backs. This is a change, obviously in the interests of the spectators, which has been freely advocated for years past. It has not met with unanimous approval. The argument against is that there is no reason to treat professional footballers like prize cattle. Such argument is unsound. So is the special pleading that spectators know well enough the players of the home team, and don't care whether it is Smith, Jones, or Brown who is playing well for the visiting team.

HELPING CASUAL WATCHERS

Selfish concern about the home side has been encouraged by the absence of numbers on the backs of the players. The numbers should enable and encourage the spectators to follow the games with greater intelligence and interest. Especially will it help the casual watchers to whom even the stars are unfamiliar, and may consequently turn some of the casuals into regulars.

To suggest that the players will act differently, in any direction, because they are identifiable. The numbers have become more essential, in recent times, because of the increasing tendency to make positional changes during the course of the matches. Confusion has often arisen in the past when the centre-forward and the outside-right, for example, have interchanged positions. The confusion is increased when several changes are made in the original constitution of the side owing to injury. The last Cup Final provided the highest standard of final tie football seen for many years. The players in that game were numbered. The numbers didn't create the real football. But the numbers did not detract from the playing merits, and they did add interest from the spectator stand-point.

The one big rule change made during the close season should most definitely have the effect of producing football more pleasing to watch. This change refers to the occasions when a legal charge may be made by opposing players. Here is the new wording: "Charging is permissible so long as, in the opinion of the referee, it is fair and is made when the ball is within playing distance of the players concerned, and they are definitely attempting to play it."

Lacking practical experience it is not easy to visualize completely the possible effects of this rule change. So much depends on the interpretation placed upon it by referees. If they interpret the new rule literally—and there is no excuse for treating it otherwise—the effects will be farreaching, making for more scientific football. No longer shall we see a defender charging a player who is many yards from the ball while a colleague makes an easy clearance. No longer shall we see a defender deliberately allowing the ball to run out of play over the goal-line by holding off an opponent with his shoulders while this happens. Such offenses, with the new rule strictly enforced will, result in dread penalty kick awards. Thus in this new season the spectators should get more positive and less negative football.

THE CRAZE FOR SPEED

The day has gone when there is any point in denouncing the craze for speed in football, much as many people would prefer to see science encouraged. The haste associated with modern play in general has to be accepted as a fact. Those in authority over the game are evidently prepared to accept it. The faster the game is played, the greater the need for quick-moving referees. Hence official justification for the deletion from the referees' list of those men who are over forty-five years of age. While fleetness of foot is not the chief credential to refereeing ability, the need for quick movement is emphasized by the spread of the diagonal method of control. The referee who is up with the play has a better chance of being correct in his decisions. When it is agreed that the referee is in a position to see, the spectators have greater confidence in the correctness of such decision.

Following on the mention of legislative changes which have as the guiding principle the interests of the spectators, there comes the vital question: Are the players now so busy preparing for the new campaign, and those responsible for the actions of the players on the field, also deciding upon playing methods which will make for more interesting football? The question has special reference to what are known as third-back tactics—the employment of the center-half purely as a stopper, playing level with the full-backs, or even behind them, thus of necessity ignoring the constructive aspect of the center-half's play. The stopper center-half is the unexpected legacy of the change in the off-side rule made some fourteen years ago.

Fourteen years of the stopper center-half is far too long. There was evidence last season that certain clubs were prepared to throw this tactical idea to the winds, and that other clubs were introducing tactics to turn this plan for defensive strength into weakness. The big hope of that vast majority of football followers who prefer constructive football, is that in the coming season a greater proportion of clubs will realise that "dead-end" methods are against the widest interests of the sport.

The Scottish clubs, starting on another League campaign next Saturday, have retained their star players to a greater extent than usual. That should lead to a gradual raising of the general standard of play, the need for which in this home of scientific football has recently been demonstrated. Scottish clubs—no more than English ones—cannot expect to maintain the desired standard by the transfer of their best players. Last season Glasgow Rangers left their competitors too far behind for full interest to be maintained in the competition. Something approaching equality is the essence of a real competition. Queen's Park, relegated at the end of last season, will restart in the Second Division, which means at least the temporary passing from the highest class of the only all-amateur side.

German-Soviet Pact May Keep Japan From Olympic Games

A dark shadow has been cast over Japan's chances of participation in the 1940 Olympic Games by the conclusion of the German-Soviet non-aggression pact.

For a time, it seemed certain that Japan would compete in the 5th Olympic Winter Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen in Germany next year by virtue of an invitation received from the German Ski Federation to dispatch a Japanese team to participate in the German international meet, immediately preceding the Olympic Games.

Another invitation is at hand from the German Amateur Athletic Federation to send a track and field team to Germany next Summer, enabling the same group to compete in the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki.

Whether both trips will go through now (all expenses were guaranteed) with the new relations between Japan and Germany is a matter of considerable conjecture in local sports circles.

PETER KANE BEATS FRENCH BANTAMWEIGHT

MONTE CARLO, Aug. 5—Peter Kane, of Golborne, the former world flyweight champion, quickly disposed of Pierre Louis, the French bantamweight champion, whom he beat in the third round of a contest scheduled for 10 rounds in the open air tonight.

After some fairly even exchanges Kane caught Louis on the jaw with a terrific left at the beginning of the third round. The Frenchman went down for a count of eight and was so groggy when he rose that he was unable to counter Kane's attack. The Frenchman's seconds thereupon threw the towel in midway through the round.

Kane thus repeated his victory of two years ago, when he beat Louis, then French flyweight champion, in the seventh round, the referee stopping the contest after Louis had been badly battered. Both Kane and Louis weighed 8 st. 6 lb. for tonight's contest.

Johnny Cusick, of Manchester, the British featherweight champion, gained another victory for England by outpointing Bernard Leroux, a former French bantamweight champion, over 10 rounds. Leroux's holding tactics, which saved him from a lot of punishment, bothered Cusick at the beginning, and the crowd also objected to the Frenchman's frequent clinching and hanging on.

George Markwick, of Cuckfield (Sussex), a former British Army champion, was knocked out by Francis Rutz, French Army champion, in the third round of a contest scheduled for eight rounds. After a cautious opening both men got down to business and there were some fierce exchanges. Rutz, a heavy puncher, had Markwick down for a count of three in this round, but Markwick rose and weathered a difficult period.

Both men continued to slam away at a terrific pace without any great skill in the third round, and Markwick again crashed to the canvas. He was still groggy when he rose, and Rutz, after landing several blows, put Markwick down for the full count with a powerful right.

FOORD BEATS EVERITT

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 6—Ben Foord, the former British and Empire heavyweight champion, beat the American, Buck Everitt, on points in a 10-round contest here last night. This was Foord's first appearance in the ring since he was beaten by the young Welsh champion, George James, last September. Foord scored with beautiful lefts to the body and right crosses to the face and he showed clever footwork against an opponent who was inclined to swing wildly.

Tanaka of Hawaii Qualifies in U.S. Outdoor Mile Swim

Domei Tsushin

DETROIT, Aug. 24—Joseph Tanaka, Hawaiian-born Japanese swimmer of Honolulu, today captured the first heat of the one-mile freestyle event of the National A.A.U. outdoor swimming championships being staged here. He was clocked at 21 minutes 50.4 seconds.

Adolf Kiefer, stellar American backstroke champion, did not participate in the event this afternoon due to illness.

HAWAIIAN-JAPANESE SWIMMERS STAR IN U.S. NATIONAL MEET, NAKAMA WINS 220-YD. CROWN

Domei Tsushin

DETROIT, Aug. 26—A trio of youthful Hawaiian-born Japanese swimming stars, James Tanaka, Hiyoshi Nakama and Kiyoshi Hirose, and a comparatively unknown American swimmer Skinner, captured the spotlight of the National A.A.U. outdoor swimfest, as the four-day competitions were brought to a close here today.

Nakama, up and coming swimmer representing the Maui club, won the 220-yd. freestyle event, by defeating his teammate Hirose and Robert Pirie, of Toronto, in the time of 2 minutes 16.3 seconds.

In the one-mile freestyle event, James Tanaka, of Honolulu, took second place after giving Ralph Flanagan, the winner, a heated race. Flanagan was clocked at 20 minutes 7 seconds.

A new American mark for the 220-yard breaststroke event over a 50 yard pool was established when an 18-year old American swimmer Skinner negotiated the distance in 2 minutes 46.6 seconds.

Final results are as follows:

880-yards medley relay: Won by Alexander Community House of Maui, Hawaii, second, Medinah A.C., third, Detroit A.C. Time: 9 minutes 21 seconds.

100-meter backstroke: Won by Adolf Kiefer, second, Neunzig (Maui, Hawaii), third, Drysdale (Detroit A.C.). Time: 1 minute 6.6 seconds.

220-yards Breast stroke: Won by Skinner (Detroit A.C.), second, Werson (Olympic Club), third, Hayes (Fremont, Ohio). Time: 2 minutes 46.6 seconds.

440-yards Freestyle: Won by Ralph Flanagan, second, Hiyoshi Nakama (Maui, H.), third, James Tanaka (Honolulu), fourth, Takashi Hirose (Maui H.). Time: 4 minutes 50.2 seconds.

330-meter medley relay: Won by Detroit A. C., second Medinah Club, third, Maui, Hawaii. Time: 3 minutes 22.2 seconds.

Mile freestyle: Won by Ralph Flanagan, second, James Tanaka, third, Carreos Riveas (Honolulu). Time: 21 minutes 0.7 seconds.

220-yard freestyle: Won by Kiyoshi Nakama, second, Hirose, third, Robert Pirie. Time: 2 minutes 16.3 seconds.

3-meter springboard diving: Won by Patnik, second, Clark, third, Greene, of Chicago.

Australians Lead Yugoslavs, 2 to 1 In Interzone Finals

Domei Tsushin

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 26—The Australian Davis Cup team today gained a two to one lead over Yugoslavia in the interzone finals of the Davis Cup championships today, when its stellar combination of John Bromwich and Adrian Quist whipped Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, and 6-3.

Playing an airtight game, the Australians won by capitalizing on their opponents' frequent errors.

KIPHUTH NAMED COACH OF U.S. OLYMPIC TEAM

Robert H. Kiphuth, famed swimming coach of Yale University, who is very popular in Japan having brought two American teams here, has been appointed head coach of the American Olympic swimming team for the second straight Olympiad, according to a Domei dispatch from Detroit.

Mr. Kiphuth's selection was made by the American Olympic swimming Committee immediately after the close of the national outdoor championships at Detroit.

With Mr. Kiphuth in charge of the team, there is no doubt the American team will be a strong candidate for the topnotch honors at the scheduled 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki next year.

The indications are that at least four American citizens of Japanese parentage from Hawaii will be picked on the American team. They are: Kiyoshi Nakama, who won the American national 220-yard freestyle championship; Takashi Hirose, who placed second to Nakama in the 220-yard freestyle; James Tanaka, who placed second to Ralph Flanagan in the one-mile championship; and Miss Fujiko Katsutani, who won the women's national 200-meter breaststroke championship.

American Leads 2-1 In Wightman Cup Play

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 26—By winning two of the scheduled three matches today, America gained a commanding lead over Britain as the women's Wightman Cup competitions got under way here before thousands of enthusiastic tennis fans.

In the opening match of the day, Miss Alice Marble, America's foremost woman player, convincingly trounced Miss Ruth Mary Hardwick, of England, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, while Miss Katherine Stammers, of England, upset Miss Helen Jacobs, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3, in the remaining singles match.

Miss Dorothy Bundy and Miss Arnold, of America, downed Miss Betty Nuthall and Miss Nina Brown, of England, 6-3, 6-1, to take the day's lone doubles match.

REDS DOWN PHILLIES IN DOUBLEHEADER

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, July 30—Billy Myers, the boy they razzed from here to Halifax last year, lived a baseball player's dream today when he caught a one-and-one pitch on the end of his bat in the ninth inning with two out, the score tied at 1 to 1, the bases loaded and 30,298 howling fans filling almost every square foot of the ball park.

The stocky Cincinnati shortstop sent that ball far and straight over the left-field wall to give the Reds their second straight double triumph over the Phillies and their tenth consecutive victory. The score was 5 to 1 and, with Bucky Walters's handy 9-to-2 decision over his former team-mates in the openers, whose margin rose to twelve games.

It was the Reds' fourth consecutive double victory, tying the National League mark set by the Dodgers in 1926 and equaled by the Giants in 1928. The Yankees hold the major league record of six, established in 1908.

The second-largest crowd of the year here saw Johnny Vander Meer wabble through his first complete game in a long time, giving eight walks but only one run. Walter Beck of the Phils was steadier, walking only three.

When the Reds' ninth came, Lee Gamble went out. Frank McCormick walked and the crowd woke up. Willard Hershberger, the spunky second-string catcher, beat out a perfect bunt along the third base line. The roars started. Harry Craft fouled out, but the noise became deafening as Ernie Lombardi came out to bat for Nino Bongiovanni. He walked on a three-and-two ball.

Then Billy picked up his bat. One ball was good, one was bad. The third is now somebody's souvenir, and the park attendants had to pick up thousands of hats, pillows, scorecards and everything else that wasn't nailed down.

While Walters breezed along easily in the opener to his eighteenth victory and eighth straight, the crippled Phils got so desperate for a pitcher that Joe Marty, an outfielder, hurled the last four innings.

WORLD RECORD MADE AT NEW POOL OPENING

WORLD RECORD REGISTERED AT KAWANA POOL

A new world's mark in the 300-meter medley relay was hung up in the opening of the new 25-meter pool of the Kawana Hotel in Izu Peninsula on Saturday afternoon.

Yasuhiko Kojima of Keio University, Tetsuo Hamuro of Nihon University, and Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University registered a time of 3 minutes 16.8 seconds, shattering the record established by Taylor Drysdale, Jack Kasley and Peter Fick of America at the Meiji Shrine pool in Tokyo on August 17, 1935 of 3 minutes 20.2 seconds.

Kojima swam the first 100 meters of the backstroke in 1 minute 7.8 seconds, Hamuro, the Olympic 200-meter breaststroke champion, negotiated the next 100 meters of the breaststroke in 1 minute 11.6 seconds and Arai, national 100 and 200 meters freestyle champion, splashed through the last 100 meters in 57.4 seconds.

The time was also a new short course record for Japan.

The new pool was opened at 11:30 a.m. with formal Shinto rites. The opening remarks were made by President Kawazoye of the Kawana Hotel. First to plunge into the pool were students from the Ito, Usami, Shibuura and Kawana grammar schools at 1 p.m., after which exhibitions were given by a number of Olympic swimmers and divers.

Approximately 400 wounded and sick soldiers convalescing at the Ito Hot-spring sanitarium were special guests of the occasion.

WORLD AMATEUR OUTBOARD RECORD SHATTERED AT BOSTON BY MULLEN

By CLARENCE E. LOVEJOY

N. Y. Times

BOSTON, July 30—A Princeton honor graduate, James W. Mullen 2nd of Richmond, Va., who can hang the gold keys of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi on his watch chain, stole the show on the Charles River Basin in the mist and drizzle today by registering a brand new world record for Class B outboard amateurs.

One of the best fields of daredevil racing pilots ever assembled at any regatta pushed the bespectacled Virginian in the first heat of this thrilling event to a time of 5 minutes 57 3-5 seconds for the five miles, and when the slide-rule handlers finished their computing this was translated into a speed of 50.336 miles an hour.

A year ago at Red Bank, when another collegian, Paul Henckels of Fort Worth, Texas, was clocked at 49.669 the American Power Boat Association moguls raised eyebrows in amazement. But today Mullen, while his father, a Richmond lawyer, and his mother beamed with understandable pride from the judges' stand, declined to be deterred by the tradition that a Class B boat cannot better fifty miles an hour.

WINS BY WIDE MARGIN

He was more than a hundred yards of open water ahead of Clinton Ferguson, the Hobart College man who once won three national championships, and had a still greater advantage over Gar Wood Jr. and the field that included Lew Carlisle, Frank Desmond and Lew Franco.

In the second Class B heat Mullen could safely guard his point-scoring advantage and he finished a close second behind Wood, giving him 700 tallies to the Michigan youth's 625.

JACOBY FINISHES THIRD

The Tulsa mechanic, Frank Vincent, who hoisted a new Class A professional record here yesterday, made the Class B event look simple today by taking three straight heats, each time ahead of Paul Wearly of Muncie, Ind., the Indiana University star. The best Freddy Jacoby Jr. of North Bergen, N.J., the national professional champion, could do was clinch third place.

Carlisle, the wealthy young Long Islander who now lives up-State at Geneva, N. Y., and is an aviation enthusiast, came within an eyewinker of hanging up a new Class F amateur mark, but his 56.962 miles an hour was a fraction of a second under his own 56.998 made last month. He seems on his way to dizzier speed heights, and another regatta may see it. In the second heat of today's event, however, Carlisle found his field of rivals slowing down, and a speed of 53.989 was good enough to win.

A starting field of seven took the gun for the sole inboard event on the two-day program, that for the 225s and this was just a breeze for the 938 national class champion, George Schrafft of Newton, Mass., a junior at Harvard. He won all three heats.

WAKABAYASHI AIDS TIGERS TO WIN TITLE

Henry (Bozo) Wakabayashi, Hawaiian-born Japanese who pitched Hosei University to three championships in the Tokyo Six University League a few years back, proved a bit too smart for the Tokyo Giants Sunday afternoon before a bumper crowd at the Korakuen stadium and the consequence was that the Osaka Tigers won the title of the Summer season of the professional baseball league. The final score was 3 to 1.

With his effective change of pace, Wakabayashi, who staged a gallant comeback from late in the season, checked the usually hard hitting Giants to six hits. Especially significant was that he held Nakajima and Kawakami, the two leading hitters of the Giants, hitless throughout the game.

The Giants sent their ace pitcher, White Russian Stalphin, to the mound in this battle for the championship. He did chuck a good game, yielding but seven hits, but his team-mates failed to hit when hits mean runs.

The Tigers scored one run in the last half of the first inning when Kageura walked and Monzen doubled to center.

The Tigers bunched three hits in the fifth to garner another run. Wakabayashi singled to center and Minakawa followed with a hit to right after he had two strikes called on him. Matsuki flied out to left but a beautifully executed hit and run play with Hondo at bat brought in Wakabayashi. Hondo had come through with a double to center.

A long fly to right by Horio brought in Minakawa, who had singled to get on, for the Giants' third run.

A single to right by Rivera, Filipino star from Manila, accounted for the Giants' lone run which came in the ninth.

The final standings were:

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Tigers	32	24	8	0	.750
Giants	32	23	8	1	.742
Hankyu	32	20	11	1	.645
Senators	32	17	13	2	.567
Dolfins	32	16	14	2	.533
Nagoya	32	14	18	0	.438
Nankai	32	12	19	1	.387
Lions	32	2	28	1	.258
Eagles	32	6	26	0	.188

Tetsuji Kawakami, pitcher and infielder of the Giants, won the individual batting honors for the season with a .368 mark, the result of 43 hits out of 117 times at bat in 32 games.

Ko Yamashita, outfielder of the Osaka Hankyu team, placed second with a .319 mark, lashing out 33 hits out of 119 times at bat in 32 games.

Third was Kikuji Hirayama, outfielder of the Giants, with a .312 average, the result of 34 hits out of 109 times at bat in 32 games.

Others batting over the .300 mark were: Mizuhara (Giants) .310; Osawa (Nagoya) .307; Rivera (Giants) .304; Hondo (Tigers) .303; and Nakagawa (Eagles) .302.

YANKEES AND REDS INCREASE THEIR LEADS IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—The league-leading New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds increased their margin of victories over the Boston Bees and the St. Louis Cardinals to 13 and seven games, respectively, as their nearest challengers slumped badly during the past weeks play.

The only changes in major league standings occurred when the Cleveland Indians, of the American loop, rang up eight wins and one loss to oust the Chicago White Sox from third spot, and the Brooklyn aggregation, of the Nationals, dislodged the New York Giants from fourth place, by winning seven and losing two.

Playing at the peak of their form, the McCarthy men gave a superb exhibition of ball last week, handily winning eight of their scheduled games. Although the Bees could do no better than win two of their eight games, they continued to lead the Indians at a safe distance.

The National loop leader, the Cincinnati Reds, won four and lost two games, as the Cardinals won three and lost five of their games during the past week.

Team standings, including games played today, are as follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	86	34	.717
Boston	72	46	.610

DODGERS CRUSH REDS

By ROSCOE McGOWEN

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5—Cincinnati fans today returned to the business of "viewing with alarm" as their potential pennant-winning Reds collapsed under the weight of seventeen Dodger hits and were crushed beneath a 10-4 score.

The result, coupled with the Cardinals' victory over the Phils, cut the Red lead by a full game, while the Durochers were able to cling to their fifth-place tie with the Giants. Cincinnati is now eight and a half games ahead of the runner-up Cards.

TEMPER AT FEVER HEAT

Durocher's temper flared to fever heat when the arbiter ruled that Dolf Camilli, who apparently had scored easily from third on Leo's fly to Nino Bongiovanni, had departed from his station too soon. What Leo said to Bill is not a matter of public record, but Stewart's violent gesture of banishment was quite clear to everybody in the park.

It marked the third time this year that Durocher had been chased and the second time in a game against the Reds. His other expulsion came at the Polo Grounds after his fisticuffs with Zeke Bonura.

Whitey Moore and Ira Hutchinson, the latter making his first start for Brooklyn, were the opening hurlers, but Whitey didn't survive the first frame and Hutchinson had to be lifted for a pinch hitter in the fourth.

Moore was charged with his seventh setback after retiring only one man and allowing four runs, while Toto Tamulis, who carried on for the last six innings, received credit for the victory, his fifth.

Cookie Lavagetto led the big assault on Moore, as well as Lee Grissom, Henry Johnson and Peaches Davis, who followed Whitey. Cookie collected four hits in five times up, including a double. Johnny Hudson had three safeties, drove in two runs and was a factor in every scoring inning.

SCORES ON WILD PITCH

Johnny and Cookie put singles together off Moore in the first inning and both came home on Dixie Walker's long double to left center. Art Parks grounded to Frank McCormick, but singles by Camilli and Blimp Phelps, both on the first pitch, added another run and sent Moore out.

Grissom let loose a wild pitch to allow Camilli to come home with the fourth run. Then the Dodgers quieted down until the fourth, when they scored four more runs and sent Grissom to the showers on four straight hits—singles by Ernie Koy, Durocher and Hudson and an intervening pinch double by Pete Coscarart. Johnson was greeted by another two-bagger from Lavagetto, sending Johnny to third, whence he scored on Walker's sacrifice fly.

Davis gave up the other two runs in the eighth on infield hits by Koy and Hudson, Lyn Lary's sacrifice and Lavagetto's solid single to left.

Hutchinson, aided by brilliant support, eased through the first two innings and then yielded three quick runs in the third on Billy Myers' 430-foot homer over the center-field wall, Bill Werber's single, Lonnie Frey's triple—the latter a single that took a bad hop past Walker—and another single by Lee Gamble.

Werber accounted for the other run, and the only one off Tamulis, when he bounced his fifth homer of the year off the top of the leftfield wall and on to a laundry roof across the street in the fifth inning.

Tamulis was in a bit of trouble twice thereafter, but a couple of double plays helped ease the strain.

McKECHNIE'S IRE AROUSED

Uncle Charley Moran stirred the ire of Deacon McKechnie and other Reds in the first when he called Phelps safe when Ernie Lombardi's throw seemed to have picked the Blimp off first.

Hudson's backhand stop and throw of Bongy's grounder near second in the third was what the athletes call a "dilly." And Mr. Chips made several other plays not to be sneezed at . . . . Parks' great momentum as he snared Stan Bordagaray's fly near the night-field foul line in the eighth carried him hard against the low fence.

Lary's first two chances after replacing Durocher turned into errors, but his next six were nicely handled . . . . Two of them on double plays. . . . Walker's batting average in nine games since he went into the starting line-up is .363, with nine runs batted in. He's failed to drive home at least one tally in only three games . . . Hudson has hit at a .442 clip since replacing Coscarart on July 27.

Mrs. Hyodo Places 3rd in 100-m. Breaststroke Race

Mrs. Hideko Hyodo, nee Maehata, 1936 Olympic 200-meter breaststroke champion, finished third in a 100-meter breaststroke exhibition race in the second annual girls' aquatic meet sponsored by the Asahi Shimbun Tuesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine pool in which some 800 girls participated.

Mrs. Hyodo, long out of competition, was especially invited to appear in the meet. Placing first in the 100-meter breaststroke was Miss Kinuko Nakayama, national titleholder, in 1 minute 32 seconds. Second was Miss Nonaka of the Prefectural Fourth Higher Girls School.

U.S. Team Captures Wightman Cup For 9th in Row

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 27—By virtue of winning three of the four scheduled matches, the American Wightman Cup team today scored an overwhelming 5-2 victory over England to capture the coveted Wightman Cup for the ninth consecutive year.

Miss Helen Jacobs, powerful American woman player, downed Miss Mary Hardwick, of England, 6-2, 6-2, while Miss Valerie Scott, of England, upset Miss Sarah Palfrey, of America, 6-3, 6-4.

In the remaining singles match, Miss Alice Marble, Wimbledon champion, managed to defeat Miss Katherine Stammers, of England, after a hard-fought match which went into three sets. She won by scores of 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The day's lone doubles engagement went to the United States, when the strong combination of Miss Alice Marble and Miss Palfrey eliminated Miss Stammers and Miss Hammersley, winning by scores of 7-5, 6-2.

RELIEF HURLERS WIN MANY A BALL GAME

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, July 30—A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in Clevelands half of the ninth inning. The bases were full, there were none out and the New York Yankees' 3-to-2 lead seemed in grave danger from this last-minute surge by the Indians.

But out from the shadows that lay at the foot of the right-field stands came a sturdy young man, alternately tugging at the peak of his cap and hitching his trousers. Up to the pitcher's box he strode and the troubled Yankee infield gathered about him as he took a few warm-up tosses.

Finally, he waved them back to their positions and, firing his pitches low and swift, he made the first batter bounce into a force play at home, fanned the second, and forced the third to lift a short fly to the center-fielder to end the rally, the inning, and the game without a run's being scored.

MURPHY SAVES GAME

And thus Johnny Murphy, ever-ready relief pitcher of the Yankees, had saved another game for the world champions and had once again demonstrated the vital importance of the Minute Men of the Mound. Seldom mentioned by the fans and press when the Yankees' praises are sung, Murphy nevertheless is as necessary to the perennial pennant parades of this wonder as Joe DiMaggio or Red Ruffing or Bill Dickey, because no league championship has been won without the presence of a great relief pitcher. The pennant-winning Detroit Tigers of '34 and '35 had Elon Hogsett; the champion Washington Senators of 1933 had Jack Russell; the 1933 New York Giants had Adolfo Luque, and so on.

The casual observer may overlook the relief pitcher because he hardly ever stands out in the pitching percentages, but your major-league clubowners, who willingly pay thousands of dollars for good relief, and the managers, who watch the bull pen as anxiously as the box, and the weary outfielders and shell-shocked infielders who gratefully welcome the reliever, realize the value of the men on relief.

They all appreciate the fact that the relief pitcher works under the most trying conditions. The bases are usually crowded with enemy runners when he comes into the game. The opposing team, too, is usually "hot"—that is, its hitters are on a rampage and when the dikes are broken it is a heart-breaking job to stop the flood.

Nor does the relief pitcher come into the game as physically fresh as you might suppose. As a rule he has been working all afternoon out in the bull pen. You see, when his team took the field at the start of the game, he warmed up so that he would be ready in case the starting hurler ran into trouble right off the bat. When there was no need for his services at the start, he sat down and waited for trouble to brew. Every time a couple of runners got on base, he had to leap up, peel off his sweater, and throw furiously to the bullpen catcher. Thus, when he was finally had pitched practically as many balls as the man he relieved.

Even the relief pitcher himself underestimates the importance of his job. There's not a one who doesn't yearn for the chance to be a starting hurler. Murphy, for one, is forever asking Manager Joe McCarthy for what he calls a "regular assignment." Fred Marberry, highly paid and highly acclaimed as a relief man, constantly wrangled with his big-league bosses for a job as a regular pitcher, and when he finally got what he was after he never enjoyed the same success and fame.

MARBERRY WAS GREAT

Marberry was, perhaps, the greatest of all relief pitchers. He was big and strong and untiring. He threw a low, fast ball that was most effective in the late innings when the shadows from the stands lay across the diamond. The ball, when it spun from his hand, would sparkle in the sunlight for about 30 feet and then roar into the dimness of the shadows at home plate to the intense discomfort of the jittery hitters. Marberry was ideally fitted both physically and mentally for his career as a rescuer. His powerful build enabled him to endure without undue strain the backbreaking daily labor of the bull penner, and his courage and coolness in the most distressing situations made him almost contemptuous of trouble.

Because of the peculiar physical and mental requirements demanded of a good reliever, every hurler isn't suited for the work. Many a regular hurler who easily and coolly pitches himself out of a menacing enemy rally in a game which he himself has started, simply cannot finish up another pitcher's game. Lefty Gomez, Bob Feller and Earl Whitehill are a few who are failures when it comes to rushing in from the bull pen. On the other hand, men like Lefty Grove, Walter Johnson, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dizzy Dean have won as much honor in relief pitching as they have as starting hurlers.

Indeed, it was as relief pitchers that Johnson and Alexander enjoyed their sweetest tastes of fame. Alexander, for instance, holds a half-dozen mound records—he pitched in more games than any other National League on record, led his loop six times in pitching the most complete games, topped his fellow flingers five times in the least number of earned runs yielded, and executed four one-hit games in one season. Yet he is best remembered by baseball fans for the day that he shuffled into the pitcher's box in the sixth inning of the seventh game of the 1926 World Series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Yankees and struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases full. A hit might have given the Yankees the lead in the deciding game, but Old Pete chocked off the rally, held the Bronx Bombers at bay the rest of the way, and the Cardinals won.

JOHNSON WON FAME

A World Series' relief trick also brought Johnson his most glorious victory. After having toiled in vain for almost two decades with a losing term, Johnson finally saw his club break into the World Series in 1924. However, the chance to work in the Fall classic seemed to have come too late to the Big Train, because he was soundly beaten in his first two starts in the Series. But in the seventh and deciding game, with his team backed to the wall, Walter went in as a relief pitcher to hold the New York Giants runless through the ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth innings—and the Senators eventually pushed across the winning run.

A relief job, however, also cost Johnson additional fame. Back in 1912 he had run up a streak of sixteen consecutive victories when he was summoned from the bull pen one day with the score tied, the bases full, none out. Walter retired the side one-two-three, but in doing so he allowed one of the runners to score and this run won the ball game. Under present-day scoring this tally would not be charged against the relief pitcher, but in those days it was and Johnson was debited with the defeat.

Perhaps the happiest bit of relief pitching was performed by Ernie Shore, a rather capable righthander with the Boston Red Sox. Shore was rushed frantically into a ball game one afternoon and emerged with a no-hit, no-run game—indeed, with a perfect game, a term applied reverently by the trade to those games in which no man reaches first by hit, walk, or error. It happened on June 23, 1917, in a game between the Red Sox and Washington. Babe Buth, then more noted for his southpaw pitching than for his slugging, started for the Sox that day and walked Morgan, the first Senator batter. Babe objected strenuously to the fourth ball and Umpire Brick Owens was constrained to ask Mr. Ruth to leave the premises. Eventually, and resentfully, Babe did so, and out from the Boston dugout came Ernie Shore, very much unprepared. Erine flopped his finger plateward a few times to loosen it up, and then motioned that he was ready to begin. On the first pitch Morgan tried to steal second and was thrown out. Shore then proceeded to retire the next 26 hitters in order. He didn't give up a hit or a walk, and his Boston teammates fielded faultlessy behind him. Thus, nary a Senator got to first base. The feat was so noteworthy that Ban Johnson, then president of the American League, made a special ruling to give Shore credit for a "perfect game."

NOT ALWAYS HEROIC

Not always, though, is your relief hurler so heroic. For instance, there's the story they like to tell about Henry Johnson, the right-hander who spent most of his big-league days in the bull pen of the New York Yankees. On this particular day the Yanks were playing the then world-champion Philadelphia Athletics in Shibe Park and, as usual, Henry had been assigned to bull-pen duty. Late in the game, he got hungry and bought a hot dog. While he was nibbling on it the Athletics suddenly filled the bases and Henry was sent for. Our hero growled in disgust at the thought of his snack's being interrupted and asked the bull-pen catcher: "What's the setup?"

"There's none out," said the catcher, "the bases are full and Cochrane, Simmons and Foxx are coming up!"

Johnson gulped and reluctantly handed the hot dog to the catcher.

"Hold this," said Henry, "I'll be right back."

Singles, Doubles Finals Of Students Play Slated At Denyen Courts Today

The finals of the singles and doubles championships of the 11th annual inter-collegiate play will be held this afternoon at the Denyen courts in Tokyo.

Shigeru Kusumoto and Yasuo Tsuruta of Keio University were to take on Goro Fujikura and Yamakawa, also of Keio University, for the doubles title at 1 p.m. They eliminated Yasu Kimura and So Taneda of Waseda University, 8-6, 4-6, 6-3 and 7-5 and Ikujima and Yamagata of Kwansei Gakuin, 6-4, 6-4, 5-7 and 15-13 respectively in the semi-finals Tuesday.

Fumiteru Nakano of Hosei University and So Taneda of Waseda were scheduled to meet at 2:30 p.m. for the singles title.

NATIONAL LOOP OUT LOOKING FOR PITCHERS

By GARRY SCHUMACHER

CHICAGO—Out scouting for pitchers, Will Terry, Manager of the New York Giants, has put his finger on what has become a problem for the whole National League. What to do about the Cincinnati Reds.

Pitchers, more and better ones, is what the situation demands, throughout the entire league. Only they can restore the balance of power that was for so long the National League's proud boast, and which in every year for the past decade carried the pennant battle right up to the October deadline.

That the Reds are well in front is a tribute to the general merit and consistency of their play but it would take a very close inspection to find where they are vastly superior to the team that couldn't finish higher than fourth a year ago. Lombardi, Goodman, McCormick and Craft all played brilliantly last year, too; yet that team couldn't make the riffle.

The fact is the Reds, if better and more experienced, haven't improved so much. The other clubs merely gone back—because an acute shortage of pitchers has developed. This year there are only two really first class flippers in the league, and Cincinnati has them both—Walters and Derringer. And that's why the Reds are cakewalking.

Some of the pitching troubles besetting the other clubs are only temporarily significant, of course. The chances are that pitchers like Bill Lee and Clay Bryant of the Cubs, Lon Warneke of the Cards, Cy Blanton of the Pirates, and possibly Cliff Melton of the Giants will recover their effectiveness with another year.

But even if they do the general league standard won't be greatly higher. Too many of the good ones, the top-fighters, have gone or are going at the same time. Just check the list. Carl Hubbell, "Dizzy" Dean, Van Mungo, Hal Schumacher, Jim Turner, Bob Weiland, Larry French! They were the reasons why the National League's pennant races were so excitingly close. The pennant winner had tough competition all the way down the line.

The acute pitching shortage explains too why the whole league, excepting Cincinnati and Philadelphia, is grouped around the .500 mark. Mediocre pitchers pitch that kind of baseball, are consistent only in their inconsistency. To cite a case, the Giants' Bill Lohrman. He's better than most, but even in his case it isn't possible to forecast what he'll do tomorrow on what he did today. He and the vast majority of the National League flippers aren't good enough pitchers to string three and four winning games together.

Another slant is provided by a check of the league's box scores. We're not having those 2 to 1 games this year. Much more often the score is 9 to 2. And over a season big league clubs will divide games of that character. They'll all score against mediocre pitching.

At Cincinnati, Bill McKechnie must find this general situation a great personal comfort. "Bucky" Walters is just in his prime now, and with young Gene Thompson coming along to take up whatever slack the years cause Paul Derringer, the Reds should enjoy a pitching advantage for some years to come. And until the rest of the league relieves its present pitching shortage, that advantage will win pennants—possibly two or three after this one.

MAY RIVAL HUBBELL

Incidentally, the ball players say "Bucky" Walters is a truly great pitcher, possibly to be compared in a year or two with Carl Hubbell. He's the same type, quiet, earnest, conscientious, a student of his work. And like Hubbell he has a pitch ball players refer to as "that thing." It's a "sinker" ball that breaks into the handle of the bat. Bucky rarely throws a home run ball, and that's why: it's only seldom the hitter gets the fat of the bat against the ball. Hubbell's best record reveals twenty-six victories. With eighteen in the bank already, Walters might climb beyond that this year.

AMERICAN TENNIS STYLE UNDERGOING GREAT CHANGE

Christian Science Monitor

RYE, N.Y., Aug. 8—The way of playing tennis in this country appears to be in the act of undergoing a great change—from the slambang, all-out style that originated here and has been the hallmark of American tennis, to a softer, more subtle variety.

The proof lies in the fact that Bobby Riggs and Frankie Parker are the twin stars and gallery attractions of the Eastern grass court championship going on at the Westchester Country Club. This is due partly to the knowledge that Bobby and Frankie will represent us in singles against Australia in the Davis Cup challenge round next month, and so are surrounded with a certain glamor at the moment.

BECOMING TACTICAL

But the folks like to watch them play, too, and then again more and more of the youngsters have quit trying to knock the cover off the ball, and are becoming tactical as the mischief. The rallies are longer, as a rule, and it is interesting tennis.

Riggs and Parker, the best players Uncle Sam can summon to defend the Davis Cup, are a different breed entirely from Johnston, Tilden, Vines and Budge. Neither has a "cannon-ball" service or blasting ground strokes like those of their great predecessors Both depend upon finesse, an ability to retrieve any ball they can reach, and dogged perseverance.

They are not as great tennis players as Budge and Vines and the others were. But there might not be any more extra-specials like that for a while, and in the meantime Riggs and Parker are an example to the average player of what can be done with limited equipment. If they should lick the Australians at Merion, as they well might, there will be many a youngster modeling his game after theirs.

Parker's new forehand, upon close inspection, is about the most peculiar stroke that has come along. It is easy to believe that Frankie thought it out by himself. It is a sort of shove, delivered with a bent elbow and with absolutely no follow-through. Yet it is effective, and at least an improvement upon his former sliced forehand. It is as good a forehand, in fact, as Budge boasted when he first won at Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

Riggs is his same lazy, careless self, yet Alice Marble, who is here to play in the women's department, predicted yesterday that he would win two singles matches again Australia and that Parker would win one. Bobby dropped a sloppy first set yesterday to Leonard Hartman, a fair-to-middling local player, but then sailed into the net to win the next two with little difficulty. He is much slicker in the forecourt than he was last Summer. The score: 4—6, 6—3, 6—3.

DOUBLES BIG PROBLEM

This is the last big singles tournament upon which Capt. Walter Pate can base his selection of the American side, and it would take a great upset to deprive Riggs and Parker of their places. The doubles team is Pate's big problem. He is not entirely satisfied with Parker and Don McNeill, even though they have just won two important doubles titles, and will not decide finally until after the National doubles championships at Longwood next week. Unless absolutely necessary, he does not wish to saddle Parker with both singles and doubles play.

Nothing is being seen of the Australians, possibly because it is well known that they do not like to play against Parker. They consider him too "grim and methodical." He'll still be that way when they see him at Merion.

Others who gained the second round yesterday were Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami; Henry Prusoff, of Seattle; Ladislav Hecht, Hal Surface, of Kansas City; and John Hope Doeg, of Rumson, N.J.

WOMEN'S PLAY

The women began the process of catching up with Alice Marble, defending champion, who yesterday marched into the third round. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan defeated Charlotte McNeill, of Bound Brook, N. J., 6—1, 6—0.

Kay Stammers, of England, top-seeded foreigner, made her debut and with the aid of a first-round bye and a 6—1, 6—1 triumph over Baba Madden, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., joined Miss Marble in the third round.

Charles E. Hare, of England, first-seeded foreigner, who arrived from London yesterday morning, was upset by young Dave Freeman, of Pasadena, 6—1, 6—3, Freeman, former National junior champion and National Badminton champion, had too much speed for the Englishman.

Browns Are Playing Harder Than Ever

ST. LOUIS—In the closing days of the 1939 American League pennant race, the St. Louis Browns are playing harder than ever before.

The players know they haven't got a chance of threatening to dethrone the New York Yankees, but they do know that if they improve their position in the race it will be worth their while.

While the club was in the midst of a losing streak several weeks ago, Donald L. Barnes, president of the Browns, made an unexpected appearance in the clubhouse.

Barnes didn't reprimand the players. Instead he outlined a plan by which he hopes the team will "find" itself and enjoy winning streaks instead of losing streaks.

The plan, as outlined by Barnes, was:

If the team finished as high as sixth place, the players would share in a $10,000 pool; if it finished in fifth position the pool would be increased to $15,000, and if it wound up in fourth place, the pool would total $20,000.

The money would be put up by the management.

The author of the "bonus" plan was Fred Haney, serving his first year as manager of the Browns. He was recently re-appointed for 1940.

Despite the fact the Browns immediately went into a losing streak that reached 10 straight games, Haney declared:

"The bonus system was my plan and I still think it was a good one."

Whether the same kind of pool will be offered to the players in 1940 is not known at this time.

QUAKER CITY EAGLES TO HAVE GOOD ELEVEN

By BUCK MARRYAT

PHILADELPHIA—With the "Slingshot" arm of diminutive Davey O'Brien and the educated toe of Franny Murray in the backfield of the Philadelphia Eagles, it looks today as though the Quaker City aggregation may go places this season in the National Pro Football League.

For Davey, who "pitched" himself onto more all-American football teams in 1938 than you could shake a stick at, is 155 pounds of prancing, dancing football player who shoots forward passes with deadly accuracy.

VETERAN BLOCKER

On the other hand, Murray is a veteran blocker and kicker, who graduated in 1937 from Penn, where he was a member of the "Destiny Backfield" for three years.

Together, the duo ought to help the Eagles toward the championship his year, a hope expressed by President and Head Coach Bert Bell. During pre-season training now in progress at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, the Birds will be schooled in plays used by O'Brien at Texas Christian University in 1938, the year in which he was rated the outstanding gridman of the nation.

"I'm hoping to make good with the Eagles," was Davey's only comment when he arrived in Philadelphia. Although he would not elaborate on his chances of success in professional football, the former Horned Frog gridder gave the impression he would rather prove he'll make good before making any predictions.

Standing 5 feet 7 inches and weighing fully 50 pounds less than most professional football players, Davey doesn't seem to be worried about the 200-pounders that will come charging in on him in action.

"I have it all figured out," he said. "Pro gridders run bigger than college players, and that gives me bigger men on my side. They run larger all down the line, but they are no bigger than the men on the Eagles."

Davey, who saw a couple of professional teams in action in Texas, said he though they played a more wide open game and that they were a lot smarter in some maneuvers.

He admitted that he was looking forward to meeting the Washington Redskins, whose forward passing sensation, "Slinging" Sammy Baugh, played his last game for Texas Christian in 1935 when O'Brien was a sophomore at the same school.

Following his graduation, Baugh was replaced by Davey, and it was pointed out that a "pitching" duel will probably develop when the two meet.

MURRAY'S FIRST SEASON

As for Murray, this will be his first season as a professional player. Originally signed as a coach by Bell, it was announced suddenly that he would be in the Eagles' line-up for the next two years.

An accomplished backfield man, Murray spent last season assisting the late Leroy Mills in demonstrations on controlled punting. Mills, considered the outstanding exponent of placement kicking, had a ready pupil in Murray, rated one of the best kickers in the country in 1936.

Together with Bill Kurlish, Ed Warwick and Lew Elverson, Franny completed the "Destiny Backfield" at Penn which saw action side by side all through their college days.

Bell has come through with a prediction that presages trouble for the eastern division of the League. He said:

"Give us an even split in our two games with the New York Giants and we'll be right up on top."

Defeats Don't Worry Haney of Browns

PHILADELPHIA—The St. Louis Browns, with the permission of their manager, Fred Haney, can lose as many games as they please this year—within reason.

Hancy, who took over the pilot post of the Browns from Gabby Street this Spring, says he likes to see his boys lose—preferably in sequence—because he can judge whether the young players can stand up under fire.

"We are trying to build a team for next year, or the year after," Haney said, "and it doesn't matter much how many games we lose this year—that is, within reason. I can't afford to let defeats upset either my players or myself.

"When we start to click it will be worth watching. All my club needs is experience, and it is going to get it. Meanwhile, I'm not worried about how many games we lose."

INTER-COLLEGIATE NET CHAMPS

Left to right, Yasuo Tsuruta and Shigeru Kusumoto of Keio University, who won the doubles, and Fumiteru Nakano of Hosei University, winner of the singles, in the 11th annual national inter-collegiate tennis championships which ended Wednesday afternoon at the Denyen courts.

NAKANO WINS STUDENTS' SINGLES TITLE; DOUBLES GO TO TSURUTA AND KUSUMOTO

Fumiteru Nakano, of Davis Cup experience, of Hosei University, won his first inter-collegiate singles championship Wednesday at the Denyen courts by trouncing So Taneda of Waseda University with ease in the final, 6-2, 6-3 and 6-4.

Nakano was content to devote his play to the baseline and with powerful forehand drives as well as an effective backhand had his opponent running from one side of the court to the other. It was his day and he was most accurate in his placements. Taneda had a chance to take one set, the third when Nakano, leading 5-2, threw caution to the winds, and resorted to an all-attack game. He dropped two games in a row, but he steadied down to run through the set and match, 6-4.

Yasuo Tsuruta and Shigeru Kusumoto of Keio University won the doubles crown by defeating Goro Fujikura and Yamakawa, also of Keio University. The score was: 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 and 6-4. It was the third straight year in which Tsuruta has been a co-holder of the doubles championship. In 1937, he did so with Reizo Murakami and in 1938, with Kokichi Kagitomi.

Play being between teammates, there was clearly a lack of fighting spirit to make the match a listless affair.

NEW YORK MAY HAVE TENNIS CHAMP

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—California's domination of women's tennis apparently is about to get a setback from a sweet little lady who comes from nowhere else but Greenwich Village, New York City. Ever since 1923, Helen Wills (later Mrs. Helen Wills Moody), Helen Jacobs and Alice Marble have virtually monopolized the tennis queening business, and countless other Californians have been clustered around them to help beat off the contention from other sectors. But all that may be changed as early as next year. In fact, the Californians already have had a sample of the game played by Miss Helen Bernhard, Greenwich Village's budding star.

After winning the Bermuda cup and the Longwood Bowl, Miss Bernhard became the first easterner in years and the first New Yorker in history to take the women's title at Sea Bright, N.J., and it was here that the California delegation got a real good look at her, for her victims, in order, included Miss Virginia Wolfenden, ranked No. 9 nationally; Miss Dorothy Bundy, No. 3; and Miss Dorothy Workman, No. 6. They all are from the far west, whose representatives she has smacked down before now but in less impressive numbers.

Although she currently is ranked 17th on the national list she's a certainly to make the first 10 this time and may even make the first five. Actually there are just about three players in this country who would be figured to take her consistently —Miss Marble, Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston.

Inasmuch as she probably will not be seeded in the forthcoming nationals, Miss Bernhard may get knocked off in the early going, for she may run into any one of the above trio at any time, and, of course, she might even be beaten by some one else. But she will be worth watching.

Some point has been made of her defeat in an early round at East Hampton, N. Y., in the annual tournament there, but qualified observers agree that she was overtennised going into the event and moreover, scarcely had time for a deep breath between winning at Sea Bright and starting at East Hampton. Some also have mentioned that she couldn't have won at Sea Bright if Misses Jacobs and Marble and Mrs. Fabyan had been entered there and that's admitted. But she would have whipped everything else in the field, and, given another year, she might win in any company.

Right now Miss Bernhard is qualified to furnish some major upsets if by chance she gets a few breaks. She has the all-around game, needing only a little polish and experience, and, among other things, is a good slugger. Standing 5 feet 5 inches and weighing 138 pounds, she puts all of that into her shots when necessary, and some of the critics are raving about her by this time.

CAN COOK

And she can cook. Not only that, but she bakes bread and can keep house and is a personable, pretty blonde of German descent who wears her hair in braided pigtails fastened around her head. Most of her tennis education has come from her father, Dr. Eric Bernhard, a Ph. D., who in his youth doubled as tennis champion of Finland.

So there you are Californians. You've met Miss Helen Bernhard. You'll probably see a lot of her.

MARQUETTE'S TRACK GREAT FOR RECORDS

MILWAUKEE—Not many arenas in the world, no more than four at the most, can boast a series of brilliant track and field records to compare with those credited to the Marquette University stadium here and pointed to recently by Conrad M. Jennings, Marquette Athletic director, in a recapitulation.

World's, American, national and collegiate records have tumbled at Marquette under the pressure of athletes gathered in A.A.U., pre-Olympic and Central collegiate meets. The list of local track record-holders reads like an athletic Hall of Fame.

Winners on the Hilltop cinders have included Ralph Metcalfe and Sam Stoller, 100 meters, 10.4 seconds; Archie Williams, 400 meters, 46.7 seconds; Johnny Woodruff, 800 meters, 1 minute, 50 seconds; Charles Fenske, 1,000 meters, 2:09.3; Bill Bonthron, 1,500 meters, 3:48.8; Joe McCluskey, 5,000 meters, 10:040.1; Harold Manning, 3,000 meter steeplechase, 9:13.1; Sammy Allen, 110 meter high hurdles, 14.4; Alan Tolmich. 200 meter low hurdles. 23.3, and Glenn Hardin, 400 meter hurdles, 51.8.

Stars, at yardage measurements, have included Ralph Metcalfe, 100 yard, 9.5 seconds, and 220 yards on a turn, 21.2 seconds; Johnny Woodruff, 880 yards, 1:52; Charles Fenske, one mile, 4:10.6; Don Lash, two-mile, 9:13.3, and Freddy Wolcott, high hurdles, 14.2, and low hurdles, 28.3.

Records created at the Marquette stadium in the various field events have been just as impressive, both as to the figures and the performers. Not many who saw it will forget the occasion in 1937 when four men—William Sefton and Earl Meadows, Southern California, and Cornelius Warmerdam and Earl Varoff, San Francisco—tied in the pole vault with the sensational height of 14 feet, 7⅝ inches.

Other field events marks include: Ken Carpenter, discus throw 170 feet, 3⅜ inches; Larry Bell, javelin throw, 231 feet, 7¼ inches; Jack Torrance, shotput, 55 feet, 5 inches; Cornelius Johnson, Walter Marty and David Albritton, high jump, 6 feet, 8⅝ inches; Robert Clark, broad jump, 25 feet, 10½ inches, and Billie Brown, hop-step-jump, 49 feet, 7¼ inches.

In 1936, Glenn (Tarzan) Morris established what was then a world's decathlon record of 7,880 points.

BALL PLAYERS TODAY SEEN AS CRY BABIES

By BILL COLLINS

CHICAGO—For the first time in 28 years baseball, Ray "Cracker" Schalk is "at leisure."

And frankly, the "Cracker" doesn't like it.

"Managing a ball club drives you nuts," he observed.

"But it's more fun than anything I know."

Schalk resigned as manager of the Indianapolis club of the American Association but in reality he was "fired." He said:

"The club and I just had a couple of different ideas. But President Lee Miller and I are still the best of friends."

WELL PRESERVED

Despite 28 years of going to the baseball wars, the 47-year-old Schalk is trim and well preserved and anxious to get back into the game.

Schalk was too little to be a big league catcher, but the critics underestimated the wiry frame, tough as steel, and the courageous heart and the shrewd baseball brain behind the little pepperbox' sparkling eyes. And "The Cracker" caught 1,721 games for the Chicago White Sox from 1912 to 1926, and during that time donned the mask and the big mitt for 100 or more games for 12 seasons.

Never one to pull his punches, Schalk spoke frankly concerning the national pastime as played in the big leagues today.

"There's a shortage of good young players in the minor leagues, particularly catchers.

"And that goes for the majors too. Why, Gabby Hartnett, who is forgetting his birthdays, is the only top catcher in the National. And the American only has Bill Dickey.

"Say, when I was with the White Sox," Schalk recalled as he began ticking names off on his gnarled and lumpy fingers, "there was Cy Perkins, and Muddy Ruel, and Steve O'Neill, and Wally Schang, and Basslor, and Carrigan. And now there's only Dickey."

CRY BABIES

And that isn't all that's wrong with the only game that's right. The players today are a bunch of powder puff cry babies. They don't know and never will know what hard, fast baseball played for keeps is, Schalk observed.

Schalk is also very definite concerning an old teammate.

"Eddie Collins," he said, "was the smartest player who ever stepped on a diamond."

The outlawed spitball, Schalk believes, should be brought back to give the pitcher a break.

"The pitcher without a curve hasn't got a chance today," he said.

And finally, and very definitely:

"Baseball's a screwy game. And when you get into it it drives you screwy, and you don't ever want to get out ot it.

"Yes sir, I want to get back into baseball just as soon as I can."

Suggests Ramp for Finish of Sprints

PHILADELPHIA—Ben Ogden, Temple University track coach, who several years ago suggested a landing net for pole vaulters in order to eliminate injuries and shock to the nervous system every time an athlete lands, has another idea which he says will cut down on leg injuries to sprinters during the indoor campaign.

Ogden believes that sprinters who engage in the short dashes—50, 60 and 70 yards could eliminate pulled muscles, etc., if an inclined ramp would be built at the finish line, the plane being gradual enough to cut down the speed of the sprinters so they could finish without pulling up short or running full tilt into mats or other protective devices.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

Earl Mack Moans Over A's Tough Luck

PHILADELPHIA—With the past year, Connie Mack has spent $200,000 for young ball players for the Athletics—and all he has received in the way of results was the moving of the 1938 last-place club to sixth and seventh place in this year's race, with virtually no chance of climbing higher.

This was the moan of Earl Mack, acting manager of the A's during his father's illness, as he reviewed an admittedly disappointing harvest from the Winter and Spring sowing of dollars that Connie invested in new material.

Whereas for instance, the Cleveland Indians picked up young Bob Feller for train fare, and the Yankees got the sensational rookie pitcher, Atley Donald, when he reported at training camp on his own hook. The A's complain of hard luck with their new men.

"The only guys who ever look up are either crackpots or cracked up," Earl declared. "We pay money for what we think are players and get second-stringers and the other teams stumble over world beaters. Where's all this stuff they call justice?"

Young Mack began his recital of futile expenditures by pointing out how the A's spent $35,000 for Bill Lillard, infielder from San Francisco; $20,000 to Baltimore for Jim Reninger, reputed ace pitcher; $12,000 to Oklahoma City for Stan Sperry and another $20,000 for a lad named Bud Thomas. That makes $87,000.

"Think of it," he continued. "And not one of them is good enough to make the grade with a sixth-place club.

"There was $7,500 for Bud Parmelee; $5,000 for Nick Etten; $6,000 for Irving Bartling; $6,000 for Leon Kyle, and $25,000 for Dee Miles. Henry Pippen cost $7,500, Bill Nagel and Joe Gantenbein cost $7,500 each—and we're still in sixth place."

Earl's accounting now had reached $159.000.

"Now add the expense of bringing those guys from all over the country, taking them to training camp, feeding and housing them and paying their salaries, and we're past the $200,000 mark. All for what? To stay in the class with the St. Louis Browns and the Washington Senators!"

Long Island U. Cagers Turn in Great Record

NEW YORK—Known primarily as a high-scoring basketball machine, the Long Island University quintets in the past six years have turned in a remarkable defense record. In 158 games, only 10 of which were lost in six years, the Blackbirds held their opponents to an average of 28 7/79 points per game while scoring 99/158 points in each contest.

In the six year span in which Coach Clair F. Bee's teams twice turned in undefeated records, the Blackbirds scored 7,999 points while holding the opposition to 4,438. In each campaign the Long Islanders have tallied far more than 1,000 points but the opposition has never gone above that mark.

Back in the 1933-34 campaign the Blackbirds made their best defensive record, holding the opposing teams to 578 points in 27 games for an average of 21 11/27 points per game. Undefeated in the past season, the Long Islanders allowed the most points per game, the opposition running up 706 in 21 contests for a mark better than 33 points per game. However, a new offensive mark per game was also set in the past season for the Blackbirds tallied 1,188 points for an average of over 56 points a game.

BIG 6 BASEBALL SEASON STARTS ON SATURDAY

For the first time since the organization of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league more than two decades ago, Tokyo fans will have an opportunity of seeing all six member teams in competition on one day when the Fall season gets under way at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Meiji Shrine Stadium.

The reason is that the league, influenced by a demand in official quarters—the Education Ministry which has jurisdiction over all sports in schools—for a reform, has shortened the season considerably by scheduling a number of triple-headers.

OPENING CEREMONIES

Promptly at 8:40 a.m., the six teams with Waseda, champions of the Spring season, leading will march into the field for opening ceremonies. After the national emblem is hoisted by the captains of the six teams, the players and spectators will pray in the direction of the Imperial Palace and the Meiji Shrine. A minute's silent prayer will follow out of respect to those who sacrificed their lives on the battlefields in China. The championship pennant will be returned to the league by Waseda. Executive Director of the League Dr. Yamamoto will give an address to the players, after which Captain Yasuo Murase of Waseda will take the players' oath for good sportsmanship. After cheers of banzai, the first game between Hosei and Waseda will commence at 10 a.m.

Keio and Tokyo Imperial University are scheduled to meet in the second game, and Meiji and Rikkyo in the nightcap.

STARTING TIMES

The first game when tripleheaders are scheduled will start at 10 a.m. And only the nightcap, provided there is time, will be played overtime if necessary. When doubleheaders are scheduled, the first game will be started at 1 p.m. on Saturdays and noon on Sundays. When only one game is scheduled, play will be called at 1:30 p.m.

With the same teams meeting on Sunday in their second games, and tripleheaders scheduled on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week before the Fall term begins, pitching is expected to play a vital part in the outcome of the games.

VITT APPARENTLY ON WAY OUT AS INDIAN PILOT

By SID MERCER

NEW YORK—A permanently sore spot in the American League is Cleveland, where Oscar Vitt, apparently, is on his way out to join Roger Peckinpaugh, Walter H. Johnson and Steve O'Neill, his predecessors, as Indian managers under the Bradley regime.

Vitt has failed to stay in the pennant fight this year, and this is a major crime in Cleveland, where they always expect the best and never seem to realize that other teams may be superior to the Indians. Along this line of reasoning, the fault must be the manager's, if the Indians are not contenders.

NOT UNKIND TO VITT

Cleveland critics have not been unkind to Vitt, but neither have they hailed him as a genius. The undercurrent of feeling is that Oscar will naturally become a sacrifice on the altar of front-office incompetence. The front office digs up the players, and Vitt does the best he can with them. They may not be the best talent, but Cleveland assumes they are, and when teams like the Yankee and Red Sox outclass the Indians, the fault-finders are legion.

The Cleveland ball club is a Northern Ohio institution. It draws heavy patronage from the hinterlands. Baseball is played all through that country. When the Yankees are engaged in their favorite pastime of scalping the Indians, the thousand and one grandstand managers loudly pan Vitt's judgment. These second degree guessers also accuse Cleveland players of everything from loafing to quitting cold, from buck fever to insubordination.

When the Indians bully the weaker teams, they look good by comparison, and the Cleveland fan becomes most enthusiastic. He expects them to accomplish the same deeds against teams that outclass them.

The rise of the Yankees—and the consequent fall of the Indians—last season was a bitter diappointment in Cleveland. This year Vitt has been unable to lift his team into the stratosphere exclusively occupied by the Yankees and Red Sox. Until recently the Indians had frequently tenanted third place, and now even that solace has been denied the Ohio faithful, because the White Sox are digging into that position.

Vitt's predecessors were victims of Cleveland's perpetual unrest, and there is no reason to believe Oscar will escape the wolves. The fault lies in divided authority and lack of system that can produce and develop young ball players. Cleveland hasn't been a progressive club since Billy Evans was fired as business manager. Cy Slapnicka and Owner Bradley are more to blame than Vitt for the lack of a pair of capable fielders around second base. They fiddled away chances to get them last Winter.

Trades made since Evans quit have not benefitted the Cleveland club. All Vitt got was a collection of malcontents and cliques to contend with.

PLAYERS DISPOSED

Here are some of the players the Cleveland club has disposed of in the last few season: Person, Knickerbocker, Hildebrand and Sundra, now with the Yankees; Averill, Lary, Thornton Lee, Clint Brown, Wyatt, Vosmik, Shoffner, Sullivan, Galehouse and Heving. All are doing well with other clubs. Tommy Henrich was lost because of front-office inefficiency. Feller should have had some minor league schooling.

There is a strong belief in Cleveland that Luke Sewell will be Vitt's successor. Sewell was returned here last Spring as a free agent. He began his career in Cleveland, and is now a coach. His managerial ability has never been tested. One caustic critic puts it this way:

"Sewell cost nothing and won't ask for a big salary, and will be nothing more than a field manager."

MISS RAINS RETAINS HER SWIM TITLES

By LEWIS B. FUNKE
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—Miss Helene Rains of the Women's Swimming Association turned back challengers for her senior metropolitan championships in the 220-yard breaststroke and 440-yard free-style tests yesterday and her clubmate, Miss Lorraine Fischer, became the holder of the senior metropolitan crown in the 100-meter free-style event in the A. A. U. meet sponsored by the W. S. A. at Manhattan Beach.

In defense of her quarter-mile laurels, Miss Rains staved off a determined bid by Miss Gloria Callen, another W. S. A. star, who has been her sternest rival throughout the season. Third place went to Miss Kay Lawson, also of the W. S. A. The winner's time was 5:43.2.

The field got away to a fine start, and three-quarters of the way down the first lap Miss Rains managed to gain the lead. It was slight, but she never relinquished it. She was a half-body-length ahead at the turn, with Miss Callen in pursuit.

QUICK TURN AIDS WINNER

Together they held the attention of the crowd as they stroked their way up and down the pool. Miss Callen, swimming strongly, was never more than two strokes behind. Usually able to make up distance in the stretches, she was unable to cope with the fine turn and push-off that Miss Rains had at her command.

Coming home on the eighth lap both swimmers spurted. Miss Rains, off her course slightly, kept brushing the rope all the way and for a time it seemed as if Miss Callen might overtake her. Apparently afraid to swerve into more open water because she might lose distance Miss Rains continued "riding" the lane line and was a body length ahead of her rival at the finish.

Miss Rains had a much easier time of it in the breast-stroke event, where she was pitted against a team-mate, Miss Harriet Taylor, and Miss Evelyn Spamer of the St. George Dragon Club. Neither of her rivals could match the champion's ability. Miss Rains touched the finish wall in 3:19.1, good time for the test, considering that she wasn't extended. Her time, incidentally, was only two seconds slower than that made in the national championship at Des Moines last week.

SECOND-PLACE FIGHT KEEN

The race for second place was keen and Miss Taylor's runner-up finish was commendable. She took up this stroke only recently and her performance delighted her teammates.

Miss Fischer succeeded Miss Elizabeth Ryan of the W.S.A. as champion. Miss Ryan was unable to compete because of illness. Another withdrawal from this event was that of Miss Mildred O'Donnell of the W. S. A., who wrenched her arm recently.

The free style is a comparatively new event for Miss Fischer, who has specialized in the past in the breast-stroke. This victory was the first she ever achieved in an individual senior free-style championship. Making her conquest all the more satisfactory was the fact that she had gotten off to a poor start.

In second place, a yard or so behind, came Miss Gloria Weeks of the W. S. A. Miss Ruth Stevenson of the Bayville Aquatic Club finished third. The time was 1:13.

THE SUMMARIES

220-Yard Breaststroke (senior metropolitan championship)—Won by Miss Helene Rains, W. S. A.; Miss Harriet Taylor, W. S. A., second; Miss Evelyn Spamer, St. George Dragons, third. Time—3:19.1.

100-Meter Free Style (senior metropolitan championship)—Won by Miss Lorraine Fischer, W. S. A.; Miss Gloria Weeks, W. S. A., second; Miss Ruth Stevenson, Bayville A. C., third. Time—1:13.

440-Yard Freestyle (senior metropolitan championship)—Won by Miss Helene Rains, W. S. A.; Miss Gloria Callen, W. S. A., second; Miss Kay Lawson, W. S. A., third. Time—5:43.2.

100-Meter Freestyle (Handicap)—Won by Miss Blanche Pinnell (10 seconds), W. S. A.; Miss Eileen Safarak (8 seconds), W. S. A., second; Miss Margaret Perl (6 seconds), German S. C., third. Time—1:26.1.

100-Meter Backstroke (Handicap)—Won by Miss Joan Sterling (8 seconds), Bayville A. C.; Miss Jean Wesolowski (2 seconds), St. George Dragons, second; Miss Erna Stueve (scratch), W. S. A., third. Time—1:32.7.

3 Tokyo Wrestling Referees Approved by International Body

Three local referees have been approved as official referees by the International Amateur Wrestling Federation, according to word just received by the Japan Amateur Wrestling Association.

They are Ichiro Hatta, Kojiro Tanba and Eiichi Kazama. The first mentioned has been the leading figure to push the development of the sport in Japan while Tanba and Kazama have been brilliant performers for Waseda University.

Germans Hope To Replace U.S. As Track Champs

BERLIN—The results of the German Track and Field championships just decided in the Olympic Stadium here have encouraged German hopes to end the United States' track and field leadership during the Olympic Games at Helsinki next year.

While no further progress was achieved in technical disciplines like the hammer throw, shot put or javelin in which Germany proved superior during the 1936 Games, quite a number of new stars were brought out in the national events this year which resulted in a couple of new national and European records.

The new German record for the half mile established by Rudolph Harbig in 1:49.4 is by two tenths of a second better than the official world's record held by Robinson (USA) and the fastest time made over this distance during the 1939 season all over the world, while Wooderson's new world's record time of 1:48.4 is still awaiting recognition by the International Amateur Athletic Union.

"We are extremely satisfied with the championships results," explained Ritter von Halt, the chief of the Track and Field Section of the German Sports organization. "The work we have been doing for years to put sports on a basis as broad as possible in order to discover and develop all young talents is now crowned with success.

"The results of the 1939 championships prove that also in the running-events we will have a word to say during the forthcoming Olympics where the elite of the world will meet. The hundred meters in 10.3, the half mile under 1:50, the 5,000 meters under 14:30, four hundred meter hurdles in 51.0—these are speeds not accomplished by many runners on the world's tracks."

MASTERS GIVE POINTS TO BETTER GOLF GAME

By LESTER RICE

NEW YORK—How's your game? Has it turned sour since those optimistic days of early Spring when there was an occasional patter of rain to quench Earth's thirst? What has gone amiss? Driving? Ironing? Putting? Pivoting?

Perhaps we can provide a remedy by presenting some bits of lore gathered from the locker rooms of Pomonok, Spring Mill, Augusta National Fresh Meadow and other conversational corners where the clans have recently congregated. Stop and listen to the sages.

WALTER HAGEN: "It's amazing how many golfers have the idea putting is set to a grooved pattern which demands that the body be stiff as a slat and that nothing moves but the wrists. To be comfortable is the primary need of good putting. If you aren't at ease you will tighten hands and wrists and probably jab the ball. Mental balance is a necessity. This means coolness, freedom from anxiety and a feeling of confidence. Make a decision on the line and speed of the greens and then—right or wrong—play it that way."

LEO DIEGEL: "Golf's commonest fault is weight shifting or rather its lack. Most of us keep too much weight on the left foot through the back swing. The weight should shift smoothly to the right leg and then flow back to the left. Swaying if indulged too freely makes timing difficult, but a certain amount of swaying, or hip shifting, is necessary in the untensed golf swnig."

AL (RED) BROSCH: "If distance is your worry straighten the left arm. I don't mean stiffen it but stretch it out like a rubber band and then let it go. My left is straighter than most but it became that way by constant reaching for width. When I was a bag-toter at Old Lenox Hills, which is now part of Bethpage Park, I realized that length and accuracy were the benefits of a wide swing.

DICK METZ: "Golf isn't all hands and arms, it's mostly feet. The lower part of the body, from the hips to the tips of the toes, is the foundation of a sound golf swing. The greatest foot-worker in the business is Harry Cooper. He uses his feet so beautifully that he can play golf all day without getting tired. If you adopt Harry's dance step you will surely play rhythmically and without tension."

BILLY BURKE: "The weather itself is bad enough without watching people get into a sweat over golf. Why does most everybody insist on making the game difficult? One of the hardest things to learn, apparently, is to take things calmly and easily. Struggling players use many times as much force as the average good golfer. Why don't they realize that force is of secondary importance and that timing and smoothness is everything?

JIMMY THOMSON: "It's a curious thing but few people know how to balance themselves—I mean when they're playing golf. They don't have any trouble walking or running, riding a bike or throwing a baseball but when it comes to whirling a golf stick they contort themselves into all sorts of amazing shapes. My dad told me when I was a youngster that if I wanted to play well and hit the ball far I had to first learn the secret of being balanced throughout the swnig. The reason I can hit hard from the top of the swing now is because I know I won't throw myself out of gear."

NEW LIMITING PLAN FOR GAMES SCORED IN U.S.

By BUCK MARRYAT

PHILADELPHIA—New minima requirements set down by the International Amateur Federation for qualification in the 1940 Olympic Games in Finland "endanger the democratic spirit of the games," according to Lawson Robertson, veteran University of Pennsylvania and Olympic track and field coach.

"'International amity' may sound idealistic," said Robertson, "but it has been the spirit of the games, where every effort has been made to embrace all nations in the contests.

BENEFIT LARGE NATIONS

"Arbitrary requirements benefit large nations and squeeze out smaller ones. These small-nation athletes are proud to have their colors represented in the Olympics although their flag might never be raised in victory.

"Small countries know their athletes have little hope of winning, but we gave them all help possible in the past. Often we outlined our coaching systems. Americans trained foreign-nation athletes and many countries adapted our methods to their use.

"As a result there has been a gratifying extension of representation. Now, with the stiffest requirements ever laid down, many small nations will not be able to send representatives.

"Instead of continuing the productive program, we are turning the clock back. I will concede a classier, more compact meet could well result, but world peace, not world records, is the objective."

"Win gracefully and lose without rancor," Robertson said, has been the motto at the games, but now a number of small nations cannot even lose for they won't be present.

Robertson pointed out that during the past 30 years he has been connected with the Olympics both as an athlete and coach and that many lasting impressions were made by small nation athletes on him although they were not victorious.

"Of course," Robertson added, "the new minima will have little effect on the United States delegation.

INDIVIDUAL CHAMPIONS

"The public may be impressed by the unofficial system whereby we 'win' team honors, but individual victory is the only real championship. Let a small country produce one champion and the sport receives a lasting lift there.

"It is a mistake to assume nothing is gained by nations which send nothing but also-rans."

Any athletic meet which attracts the world's athletes in friendly competition should be extended, not curtailed, he advised.

Here are some of the marks qualifiers will have to meet during the preliminaries next Spring:

High jump—6 ft. 1 4-5 in.; broad jump—23 ft. 6½ in.; pole vault—13 ft. 9½ in.; discus—147 ft. 7½ in.; javelin—213 ft. 3 in., and hammer throw—160 ft. 9 in.

Lights Are Seen As Big Boost for Baseball Gates

CLEVELAND—The 55,000 gate at the Cleveland Indians first night game here recently, which set a new record for major league night game attendance, is but a forerunner of the larger gates at major league night games of the future.

This is the belief of Robert J. Swackhammer, a man who has grown up with night baseball and designer of a hundred or more baseball lighting systems, including those at the major league parks in Cincinnati, Brooklyn, and at the Cleveland Municipal Stadium where the Indians play night ball.

"Night games have already boomed baseball attendance in the major cities were lighting systems have been installed for night ball," Swackhammer points out. "Night game attendance has been from four to seven times average day attendance. I believe club owners in the majors will eventually build bigger and better stadiums to accommodate from 100,000 to 150,000 fans for night games," the General Electric expert explains.

"Since 1930, when we were called in to light the first minor league park at Des Moines, Iowa, more than half the teams in the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues have installed floodlighting systems for night games. It's an open secret that night baseball has been the saviour of many minor league teams, and has bolstered dwindling attendance."

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

OTT OF GIANTS IS UNDERRATED BALL PLAYER

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK—Almost all ball players would like to play on a New York Club—Yanks, Giants or Dodgers.

New York, they tell you, is where they get most publicity and most money. According to them, one goes hand in hand with the other, provided a player delivers the goods.

Normally, that's true. Even an ordinary player, if he has any color at all, will get more publicity than he deserves in New York. A colorful, extraordinary player like Babe Ruth will get more publicity than is good for him and a great, but colorless individual like Lou Gehrig will certainly get as much as he needs.

But there is one great exception to this rule. His name is Mel Ott.

Now here is a great player. One of the greatest the game ever saw. A man who comes close to being the ideal ball player in every respect.

He is a wonderful outfielder. He can throw with the best. He is a home run hitter and the powerhouse of his club. He does everything asked of him quietly and efficiently, and he never squawks.

He is playing his 14th year with the Giants and for the most of that time he has been the main cog in the Giants' machine. He is popular with fans, players and scribes.

And with all that he is probably the best publicized great star who ever played the game.

The reason for this lack of printed recognition, of course, is to be found in the character of the man.

If he were a screwball or a drunk or a rowdy he probably would have had as much publicity as anybody. But he is none of those things and his play is so flawless that everybody takes anything he does—no matter how wonderful—as a matter of course.

If when he first joined the club he had a few fist fights with the visiting ball players, or been "kidnapped" while on a drunk, or carried a bird in his hat, the papers would be writing reams about him today even when he sneezed.

But he did none of these things and so, in a way, he is the forgotten man of the Giants. Apparently, mere perfection is no news in a ball player. He must also be a nut of some sort if he wants to be called colorful.

I recently attended a game in which Mel made some marvelous plays in the outfield and won with his hitting. As we left the park we overheard two fans talking it over. "Nice game Ott played," said one. "Yeh, he's all right," said the other without much enthusiasm. Then he added: "But, say, didja see that Bonura get his feet all tangled up that time? Thought I'd die laughing. Great guy that Bonura."

Fortunately for Mel, the Giants' management has a better understanding of his value, and he is accordingly, one of the best paid players in baseball.

Boxing Gloves Supplant Guns

NEW YORK—Boxing instead of bullets may become the method of settling personal differences in isolated sections of the Southern mountains, where boxing gloves have just been introduced by the Save the Children Federation in its program of supplying entertainment for boys and young men, in addition to its welfare and educational service. If the manly art of self-defense is not "education," what is it?

The mountain youngsters have seen pictures of the miniature pillows worn by Joe Louis, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Max Baer, and Tony Galento, but meeting boxing gloves in the calfskin had been denied them.

Recently two sets of boxing gloves were contributed to the Save the Children Federation at its headquarters in the Metropolitan Tower, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, and were sent to one of the mountain stations to be at the command of boys who desired to use them.

The youngsters took to them as the average lad takes to mischief. The boys discovered that a bust in the nose with leather-covered hands is just as efficacious as is a blow with bared fists, and not so marring to the facial structure. There is only one fly in the saucer of honey: the gloves perforce must wear out, and the problem is to locate a shoemaker who can repair them. This may be something like a bridle-maker fashioning horse-shoes, but extremes will meet now and then.

The Save the Children Federation worker who received the gloves has made a laconic report on the gift and reception. The gloves were with clothing sent for ragged children, and the worker wrote:

"Thanks for the clothing sent me. I could not evaluate the boxing gloves, but do know already that they are precious. They had only been unpacked two hours when a horde of big boys came to see them and try them on. A younger brother who was here when I unpacked them spread the news quickly. One big fellow said: 'That's the one good game you really got since you've been here.' Whoever sent them will have to receive very special thanks. I hope a shoemaker can repair them for us."

The Save the Children Federation in a statement expressed the hope that sporting clubs, colleges and institutions where athletics are carried on will contribute boxing gloves to be sent to the hill country. "Those boys need equipment for games, and are eager to learn to be sportsmen. They are of fine American stock and are as brghit as the average. The Federation has been given a considerable amount of recreational equipment at various times to be distributed among small mountain schools. The children's health and their deportment have shown most gratifying improvement as a result of these stimulants to play," the statement said.

PERRY COACHING AUSTRALIANS FOR DAVIS CUP CHALLENGE ROUND

Domei Tsushin

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31—In view of the inclement weather, the Australian Davis Cup team practised for the second successive day indoors, while the American team took its initial workout outdoors at the Merion Cricket Club braving intermittent showers, in readiness for the challenge round of the Davis Cup Matches which will get under way here on Saturday.

Fred Perry, former British Wimbledon champion, who now rates as a topnotch professional star, arrived here last night to coach the Australian players.

Commenting on the forthcoming series, sports experts generally agreed that the brunt of the American team's offensive must be borne by Robert Riggs, about whom the United States team has laid it plans.

Aussies Expect To Play in Japan, If There Is No War

Domei Tsushin

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31—Harry Hopman, non-playing captain of the Australian Davis Cup team, today informed Harry Pitt, acting president of the Australian Lawn Tennis Association, by transpacific phone that the Australian squad hopes to tour Japan unless there is sudden outbreak of war.

"If war breaks out," Hopman declared, "our program will be changed for Adrian Quist and myself who are members of the sixth battalion of the British Army would probably be called home immediately."

Following the American-Australian challenge round series, the Australian squad is tentatively scheduled to enter the United States Championships at Forest Hills beginning September 9. It will then go to the Pacific Coast to participate in the Pacific Southwest Tournament which will be held in Los Angeles on September 22 and the Pacific Coast Tournament at Berkeley a week later. The team may go to Yokohama directly without entering the Berkeley competitions.

By GORDON W. WALKER

How is a top-flight tennis champion made? That's the puzzler that's stumping the experts this year. Amateur tennis has, in the past, produced Tildens, Vineses, and Budges, but now that these rulers of the clay and grass have graduated to the professional sphere, there is no longer an invincible court giant to dominate the amateur field, and give assurance that the United States will regain possession of the Davis Cup next month.

Such is the obvious plight of amateur tennis this season—how to manufacture a Babe Ruth of the tennis courts out of the galaxy of promising recruits. The machinery is all oiled, and ready, the need is apparent, and the galleries are anxiously awaiting the rrival of another Bill Tilden to lend a splash of color to a seemingly drab scene.

But what is this so-called machine, capable of turning out a master of rackets, a top-notch performer who can, say, equal or better the remarkable feat of Don Budge in winning five of the world's greater championships within the narrow enclosure of a single year?

Actually the machine, as it might be called, is the field of players itself. The many tournaments staged annually throughout the United States, the French clay court tourney, the City of London championship, the famous Wimbledon championship—these are the integral parts of the contraption that has in the past turned out such masterful players as Richard Sears, Maurice McLoughlin, William Larned, Rene Lacoste, Henri Cochet, and hundreds of others.

But perhaps most important of the tournaments which serve to produce stars is the Davis Cup matches. More than one "dark horse" has been elevated to that lofty plane of famous names because of success in a Davis Cup challenge round. During the 39 years in which nations of the world have competed for the famous trophy, more than one champion has been born during the course of play.

NOT A SURE THING

This year the historic Germantown Cricket Club may witness the making of another candidate for tennis fame, as a new crop of players prepares to carry on the battle to defend the cup donated by Dwight F. Davis in 1900. It won't be a "sure thing" for the United States this year, however, as it was last season.

Those bearded gentry who sit on the side-lines and comment on how they would have done it avowed that if Bobby Riggs, then National Clay Court champion of the United States, could win but one of the three points necessary to clinch the series, Don Budge would handle the rest of the series. And that was just the way it turned out.

But this year there is no Don Budge to dazzle the eyes of the invaders with his cannon-ball service and matchless drives, and to marshal the forces of America's Davis Cup team. The lanky Californian has moved on to take up a professional role, and the international title which climaxed his amateur career has been left in the hands of his understudies.

His deflection left a big hole in the amateur ranks—one that will require a real champion to fill. But the very fact that Budge has bequeathed his amateur standing to some newcomer has opened up new possibilities for the amateur players. During the time that Budge's brilliant court successes commanded the spotlight of world sports attention, his fellow players were virtually left in the shadows.

But with his diversion to paid playing, the shadow was lifted, and the legion of youthful aspirants, and some experienced players, find the way open for some one of them to capture a similar measure of world acclaim.

This freedom has brought a new fervor into the amateur ranks, and although no new Titan has risen to assume unquestioned leadership, there is a refreshing wave of competition that promises to carry on its crest another Tilden, Perry, or Budge.

Turnovers of this sort have often stimulated playing in the amateur circles, for at various times during the past decade the top berth has been suddenly vacated, precipitating just such a race as is now on. The first deflection to professional play of any consequence was some 10 or 12 years ago, instigated by one Pyle, known as "Cash and Carry Pyle." His leading performers were Suzanne Lenglen and Vincent Richards. Thereafter, from time to time, Big Bill Tilden, Henri Cochet, George Lott, Lester Stoefen, Ellsworth Vines, Fred Perry, and some lesser lights have accepted a professional role.

PLACES TAKEN

Loss of these players was immediately felt, but in a short time their places were taken by new, and sometimes more capable, champions, as when Don Budge filled the gap left by Fred Perry in 1937. Predictions that the amateur game would suffer turned out to be untrue. The Forest Hills Stadium, traditional home of champions in the United States, held just as many spectators, and in some instances more, the first year following each defection.

The 1939 crop of masculine racket virtuosos is strong and overflowing with talent. It is just beginning to feel the freedom of a field recently thrown wide open, and the race is just getting under way.

At present Bobby Riggs of Chicago, whose shelves are already piled high with trophies, is leading the pack, but he is only a few steps ahead of Elwood Cooke, Don McNeill, C. Gene Mako, Joe Hunt, Wayne Sabin, Bryan Grant, Frank Parker, and a score of other capable players who have been touring the country, and even the world, winning tournaments, and searching for the formula that will make them into a Tilden or a Vincent Richards.

The youthful Riggs, apparently not ready to grasp the scepter, allowed Don McNeill, ranked thirteenth, to creep up and capture the French Hard Court championship from him this Spring. He took over the famous Wimbledon championship this year by defeating Elwood Cooke by only a narrow margin.

Some of these players will carry the American flag into the arena to defend the Davis Cup title. And should the United States successfully defend the cup, because of the outstanding performance of some one player, a tennis star will have been made. The machine will have produced a champion. In the eyes of the world his name will be in capital letters, and provided he continues in the pace which he has set up, his name will surely find a niche in the tennis hall of fame.

The uncertainty attached to the outcome of this year's international play makes the possibility of the series producing a champion even greater. For almost anything can happen in a Davis Cup challenge round, as the history of the cup series testifies.

The most highly regarded team, setting forth with hopes of taking the entire five possible points, may return with no score at all. That happened to the United States in 1905, and in 1906, in scoreless matches with Great Britain. These two countries, and Australia, have won and lost ties by five to naught scores, as have Belgium, Japan, and France.

The sort of performance a player will turn in for a Davis Cup series is also difficult to predict. Players who have won all of their matches in a Davis Cup challenge round are scarce. Last year Don Budge defeated both Australian players matched against him, Bromwich and Quist, but lost, with Mako, in the doubles match he played in the Davis Cup series, yet he was more than once carried to the fifth set by William A. Larned.

Tennis stars of the caliber of Doherty, however, reach the top only by consistent winning. Big Tilden won fame by steadily defeating all comers. In the now famous series between Tilden and Johnston for the United States national championship, Tilden lost only once in 1919. In 1923 and 1924, when he was at the top of his form, Johnston failed to win a single set either year.

But Tilden is lost to amateur tennis, and such stars as Ellsworth Vines, Fred Perry, and Don Budge have in turn stepped up to take over the top berth. Tennis champions flow brilliantly in the amateur ranks for a period of time, and then either fade, or else move on to another bracket of the game, making room for new lights.

The Davis Cup games have reached such a state of international acclaim that a brilliant performance by any one player during the series is instantly recognized throughout the world.

Such was the case in the Davis Cup match between Borotra and Allison, during the 1932 challenge round. Borotra, a well-known but hardly peerless French veteran, was defending the cup for France against the youthful American in the decisive match of the series. Allison had taken the first two sets, and then the Basque came up behind to capture the next two, tying the score at the beginning of the final set. Allison's strong playing again came to the fore and he drove the Frenchman to match point. But Borotra rallied and saved himself. Again Allison reached match point, and again Borotra saved himself with a shot that skimmed over the top of the net.

By this time the 10,000 spectators that crowded famous Stade Roland Garros in Paris—France's Forest Hills—were far beyond the efforts of the umpire to preserve quiet and order.

The third match point came up on Borotra's serve. His first shot was a fault, and his second was also called a fault. Double fault, and the match was given to the American.

But just as looks of despair began to creep into the circle of French faces surrounding the court, the umpire's decision was reversed, and the second service was called good. The demonstrative French gallery went wild as Allison, the zest gone from his game, fell eazy victim to the Frenchman's finishing shots. France had kept the Davis Cup. Borotra had done it. A top-flight, never-to-be-forgotten champion had been made.

RIGGS WINS U.S. EASTERN TENNIS TITLE

By ALLISON DANZIG

N.Y. Times

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 13—Robert L. Riggs Jr. of Chicago and Miss Alice Marble of Beverly Hills, Calif. champions of Wimbledon, successfully defended their Eastern turf court tennis titles today at the Westchester Country Club.

In the men's singles final, before another capacity crowd of nearly 2,500, Riggs volleyed his way to victory over Frank Parker of Pasadena, Calif., 1—6, 6—4, 6—4, 7—5. This was Riggs's third straight title at Rye and gave him permanent possession of the challenge trophy a week after he had retired the Seabright Bowl.

Miss Marble carried off the women's crown for the second successive year, defeating Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Brookline, Mass. Mrs. Fabyan was hardly to be recognized as the player who had attacked so invincibly against Miss Kay Stammers in the semi-finals, and Miss Marble, although not at her best, did all the volleying and hit much the harder to win at 6—4, 6—4.

In the men's doubles final, Riggs and Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., Wimbledon champions, suffered their third defeat in three weeks, losing to Gene Mako of Los Angeles and Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., 7—5, 6—8, 6—3 6—1.

MAKO STANDS APART

Mako was so outstanding as to remove any doubt that he belongs on the doubles team to represent the United States in the Davis Cup challenge round. Mulloy also played exceptionally well with his whiplash service and raking, low forehand drives across court from the left alley, but Mako was so full of subtle devices to dislodge the opponents at the net and set up the down shot and so lightning quick in poaching across the net that he stood apart.

The men's final, between the two players who appear slated for the Davis Cup singles assignments, lacked robust hitting, though Parker had the touch of a master in the first set. Later he had the crowd roaring with his redemptions and passing shots in fighting to stave off defeat, while Riggs reached brilliant heights with his volleys.

It was a contest of restrained hitting and artful fencing for position in which the drop shot and the lob were often brought into play and in which the volley supplied the exclamatory punctuation. In the last two sets the volleying was so brilliant as to make up for the deficiency in pace and length of the approach shot, particularly the approach of Riggs, who at times advanced behind an innocuous short ball down the middle.

Riggs was going in on anything in the first set. Parker, much the stronger from the backhand, was passing him, and when he did not pass Riggs obliged by putting his volley into the net.

PARKER ON HIS TOES

The Wimbledon champion, slow on his feet, was fooled by Parker's changes of length on his mild service. Parked, on his toes and vigilant to every opening, took five games in a row on drop shots, volleys and sweeping backhands.

In the second set Parker's control unaccountably deserted him from both backhand and forehand, which was unreliable throughout in returning service. Riggs, adding force to his strokes and going to the net, went to 4—1, and then wavered, but squared the match.

The third set was uninteresting to 3—all, but from then on the match was fought at a brilliant pace, with spectacular volleys and recoveries of drop shots. Riggs went to 5—3 and Parker made a heroic stand in the tenth game with his daring shot making, staving off five set points. Riggs's service came to life to help him win the 22-point final game.

In the fourth set Riggs would threaten to end matters forthwith and then lapse badly. Each broke through service twice and Riggs let 0—40 slip away for another break.

The Wimbledon champion was plainly concerned at 3—4 against him. From then on he went to the net behind stronger approach shots and brought matters to an end after Parker had three times thwarted him at match point with returns of service and passing shots in the tenth.

Tri-Nation Athletic Meet At Hsinking Opened

Domei Tsushin

HSINKING, Sept. 1—Symbolizing the spirit of New Asia, the sacred flame was lighted at the local Nanling Athletic stadium at the opening ceremony of the Japan-Manchoukuo-China athletic meet at 2:30 p.m. today.

More than 400 athletes from three Asiatic nations gathered at the newly constructed huge stadium, while 50,000 spectators virtually packed the stands.

The Japanese athletes carried the rising sun flag, which was granted by H. I. H. Prince Chichibu for the Japanese delegation and entered the stadium with the roars of ovation.

The flags of Manchoukuo and the North China regime followed. In the meantime, the flags of the three nations were thrown over the stadium by a plane adding to the distinguished occasion.

Japan defeated China, 89 to 43, in today's basketball encounter. The score at half-time was 42 to 21 in the former's favor.

Japan took the measure of Manchoukuo in the volleyball competition, 26-24, 21-13 and 21-10.

In the soccer competition which opened, China vanquished Manchoukuo, three goals to two, the score at the end of the first half being 3 to 1.

GRID MENTOR LITTLE SEES OFFENSE TOPS

NEW YORK—Football faces probably the biggest offensive season in its history.

That's the prediction of Lou Little, Columbia University coach, who is in New York for a few days to teach the intricacies of the spin and the reverse play to young coaches from all over the country in the Summer session of Columbia's Teachers' College. Little has been spending the Summer on Cape Cod, whence he has returned to await the opening of varsity practice at Baker Field. The Columbian gridiron candidates have been notified that practice will begin on Monday, September 11.

"A year or two ago, when the country broke out in a rash of shifting defenses, five-men lines, six-man lines, seven-man lines, even four-man lines, there was fear that the defense might over-balance the attack in college football," recalled Little, who is president of the American Football Coaches' Association. "I admit I thought that might happen, at least for a couple of seasons.

DEFENSIVE GAME FLAT

"That would have been a bad thing. There is nothing duller and flatter than even the best played defensive football game. That's true for the spectator, for the player and for the coach. The game essentially is an offensive sport, and should be.

"But our fears were ungrounded. We discovered, without too much delay, that the defensive tactics which had been employed through the years were best. Coaches went back to them and again started to devote most of their ingenuity to attack. The result last fall was offensive football as thrilling and as well conceived and executed as the game had ever seen.

"From contacts with coaches all over the country, I gather that the trend this season will be the same. The coaches aren't worrying now about defense. They'll take that up game by game as the season advances, adapting their own sound, proven methods week by week to meet special situations.

"But they are putting in plenty of thought on new forms of attack. The result will be a country full of attack-minded football teams, with more two-team scoring games than ever before. And that's as it should be. Aggressiveness, progress, going forward, the spirit of advance should rule. That's true in business, science, art, any phase of life. Merely attempting to hold your own is not enough. Offensive football is more fun for the players and more for the spectators."

PREDICTS TOP TEAMS

Fordham, Carnegie Tech and Army in the East; Northwestern in the Middle West; Tulane and Tennessee in the South; Southern California in the Far West are among the teams expected by Little to be at or near the top when the returns are all in on December 1. Incidentally, Army and Tulane are two of the outfits which invade Columbia's Baker Field, Army as early as October 14. That's why large Mr. Little is making plenty of plans and drawing plenty of diagrams these days. And with a fellow named Sid Luckman sporting a brand new sheepskin these days, the Lions must offset the loss of one of the greatest forward-passers the game has ever seen. Reserves from last year reinforced by sophomores must carry the load for the Lions.

Tulane, which looms as one of the South's top-ranking machines, will be a mid-November invader at Baker Field. Yale, at New Haven; Army and Princeton at Baker of the new season give the Lions one of the most rigorous early campaigns in their football history.

WOOD EASILY 'ROTTEN LUCK' LINKS CHAMP

NEW YORK—Craig Wood is really entitled to be credited as the "hard luck" golfer. He was the victim of one of the very few miracles of modern big time golf. Strokes which were equivalent to holes-in-one beat Wood out of a chance to win the Open championship in 1939 and the Masters tournament at Augusta in 1935.

When Byron Nelson holed a full iron stroke for a two at the fourth hole in the second replay for the national title in Philadelphia, this year, it gave him a winning lead.

At Augusta in 1935, Wood had the Masters' tournament won until Gene Sarazen holed a full wooden club stroke for a double eagle two on the 15th hole, which made it possible for the Connecticut farmer to catch Wood. Sarazen won the playoff.

LOST AT BUFFALO

At the 1934 P.G.A. championship in Buffalo, Wood appeared to have the title won, when Paul Runyan ran into difficulty on the long first hole at the Park club course. All square at 36 holes after each player had dropped a long putt on the final green, Wood was home and within twenty feet of the pin at the par five first extra hole.

Runyan, outdriven by seventy yards, pushed his second into the rough to the right and was about 80 yards short of the green in two. Runyan's third left him a 15-foot putt which he holed for a four. Wood missed his three and the hole was halved in fours. Runyan won on the 37th.

Once, however, Wood had good fortune.

Historians do not recall a stroke made by Wood, which made it possible for him to finish the 1935 Masters' event in 282, which stood up until Sarazen's double eagle gave him a tie at the end of the regular 72 holes of play.

DRIVES INTO TREES

Craig's stroke came at the first hole in his final round. This hole is now the tenth, and a new green has been constructed in the hillside which formerly served as background for the original putting surface. In 1935 the hole was just a drive and pitch, but thick woods guarded the right side of the fairway, and Wood drove his tee shot deep into the trees.

From this location Craig played straight for the green and by a miracle as great as a hole-in-one, the ball found an opening through 100 yards of branches and foliage and came down on the green.

In the 1933 British Open, Wood and Denny Shute tied and Shute won the replay 149 to 154. There were no miracles in this match. This was the last time an American won the British Open.

'GABBY' FINDING CUB PILOT JOB A BIG HEADACHE

By MORTON MOSS

NEW YORK—Managing the Chicago Cubs is a Grimmtask as Charley of beloved memory discovered last season and as Gabby Hartnett is now in process of finding out.

The melodious Charley was finally put on the shute marked exit after being overwhelmed by the factional disputes fomenting civil war in the camp of the Bruins.

WAS POPULAR CHOICE

Gabby, as native to Chicago as the gangster in the Capone era, was a popular choice to become new strategist. His ruddy countenance and boisterous mannerisms delighted the Windy City ballgame-goers and, in fact, they still do. But although the Wrigley dynasty pleased the populace when they installed Gabby, it did not eradicate the personal antagonisms and jealousies which can spell disintegration for even a brilliant club, much less a mediocre assemblage like the current Cubs.

The workings of the Wrigley mentality in hiring old Anthony Lazzeri are still a cause for mystery. It was murmured then that Lazzeri was being readied for the pilot post. Anthony undoubtedly thought he might inherit the portfolio and upped and left when he didn't. Well, Hartnett got the job. Still, Lazzeri who is now managing Toronto in the International League probably will again be a manager next season whereas mayhap Gabby will return to the rank of a private.

Earlier in the year, there was practically open warfare between Gabby and second baseman Billy Herman who was touched to the quick when Hartnett and not Mr. Herman was named as the successor to Grimm. Though the difference has been smoothed over outwardly, it continues to smolder and since a house divided against itself cannot stand, the Cubs are naturally sitting down.

Additional trouble for Hartnett and demoralization for the team has come from the astonishing liberties accorded the expensive paste pearl known to the world as Dizzy Dean. If the snap and snarl has gone out of his right arms, the same can't be said for the great man's tongue which remains the rapidest-firing pea-shooter in the country.

It was big of Dizzy to speechify about how a third of his teammates were loafing. We can understand Jerome's attitude. No doubt he reasoned that even if he couldn't offer his maties physical help, he might at last lend them spiritual encouragement and needle them into striving for higher things.

Diz ran for cover when his words were carried to all corners of the nation. He denied all, but his Cub comrades knew better and learned to love him even less. They feel that here is a big, highly salaried bluff on vacation while the poor Bruin proletarians must attend to the daily drudgery on the field.

Dean's latest escapade, when he hit the front pages with a mysteriously bloodied arm, contributed nothing whatever to his popularity among his mates. Besides, with typical perfection, he blamed it all on Hartnett, saying in so many syllables that Gabby's goofy way of acting had made the slice appear important.

It's getting to a point where they should re-tag 'em Gabby Dean and Dizzy Hartnett.

AUSSIES WIN DOUBLES BUT TRAILS U.S., 2-1

Domei Tsushin

HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 3—The stellar Australian combination of John Bromwich and Adrian Quist today defeated Joseph Hunt and Jack Kramer, of America, 5-7, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2, in the challenge round of the Davis Cup competitions being held here. Australia now trails America 2-1.

The Australian pair, who will shortly leave here to serve in the army showed splendid courage throughout their match, and won as their American opponents succumbed before their steady offensive.

U.S. LEAD 2-0

HAVERFORD, Pennsylvania, Sept. 2—America today gained a 2-0 lead over Australia in the challenge round of the Davis Cup competitions, when Robert Riggs and Frank Parker captured both of the day's singles matches.

Riggs, No. 1 man of the American team, overpowered John Bromwich, powerful Australian ace, with a fierce serve and a spectacular net game to win in straight sets, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

Parker downed Adrian Quist, veteran Australian Davis Cup star, by playing a game which eventually wore out his opponent. He won by scores of 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 1-6 and 7-5.

CHICAGO FIELD TO HAVE VAST LIGHT SYSTEM

CHICAGO—Chicago baseball fans learned recently that more than 144,000,000 candle power in night lighting will shine down on the playing field of Comesky Park, home of the American League White Sox when its new lighting system is installed for night baseball.

J. Louis Comesky, late president of the White Sox, shortly before his death on July 18, contracted for the new night lighting system. It will have an installed electrical capacity of 1,336,000 watts which is enough current to supply electricity for 4,315 average homes.

Engineers compute that the outfield will be lighted to an intensity of 105 foot candles and the infield will be lighted to an intensity of 175 foot candles. At that intensity the surface of the infield will be 11 times brighter than the well-lighted business office. Visibility will be 700 times better than by the brightest moonlight.

INCLUDES 768 FLOODLIGHTS

The lighting system for Comiskey Park's night games includes 768 floodlights carried on eight towers. Two of the towers will be located back of home plate each tower holding a lightstand of 650 reflectors with 1,500 watt lamps; the remaining six towers will each have 108 similar units. There six towers will be located as follows: one behind third base; one behind first base, and two each located in right and left field. All of the towers will rise from grandstand roof girders.

The bottom rows of the lightstands on the eight towers will be 121 feet off the ground. The tops of the two lightstands behind home plate will be 133 feet in the air while the tops of the other six will be 145 feet high.

In the lightstands of 60 reflectors, the lamps will be arranged in five rows with 12 lamps in each row. Lightstands with 108 reflectors will have nine rows with 12 lamps in each row.

18-INCH REFLECTORS

The reflectors which throw the light from 1500 watt lamps in the direction desired by the engineers for the multitudinous lighting requirements of night baseball are 18 inches in diameter. With the exception of one row of diffused reflectors in each stand, all are highly polished to direct the most powerful beams possible to all parts of the playing field. The row of diffusing reflectors is important to night baseball visibility as they, unlike the narrow beam polished reflectors, throw a wide beam. This wide beam is used to fill in whatever low in intensity developing in the area above the playing field after its surface has evenly flooded with light.

The floodlights are arranged so that light will be reflected from the ball in play to all parts of the park. Certain lamps, for example, in the outfield towers are set so that light is reflected from high flies back to the players and spectators. By properly arranging the individual lamp units, so light is reflected from the ball no matter where it goes, it will not be lost sight of, when in play, by either spectators or player.

Engineers state that the floodlights will be operated at 10 per cent overvoltage. This is a measure of economy. To operate 105 volt lamps at 115 volts, as in the White Sox system, means that it is possible to increase light output by 33 per cent while raising the wattage only 15 per cent. A somewhat shorter life to the lamps results but the lamps are not in operation long enough at a time to make this a serious factor.

All the reflectors containing the powerful lamps will be enclosed in heat resisting glass. Transformers to provide the correct current to the lighting system will be installed on each of the towers.

Westinghouse engineers have completed shipment of the material from the Cleveland Lighting Headquarters of the company. The work in the park is being rushed so that the installation will soon be finished.

The date on which the first night game will be played at Comiskey Park will be announced later by club officials.

A CLOSE PLAY IN 'BIG 6' BASEBALL CIRCUIT

Third Baseman Uno of Keio nabbed at the plate by Backstop Kitano of Tokyo Imperial University in the second inning when he romped all the way from first on the shortstop's wild peg after scooping up Kusumoto's grounder. Watching the play is Chief Umpire Fujita. Keio won 3 to 1.

MEIJI BEATS RIKKYO, 1-0 TO EVEN SERIES

Behind the effective pitching of Righthander Fujimoto, Meiji University scored revenge over Rikkyo by a 1-0 score Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium in the Tokyo Six University Baseball league's second tripleheader of the Fall season. He yielded but five hits. Hideo Ishida worked on the mound for the second straight day and almost set back Meiji again. He was touched for six hits.

Two veterans, who weren't started on Saturday, virtually won the game for Meiji. They were Second Baseman Kameda and Centerfielder Yano. Their singles brought in the winning run in the third inning.

Keio made it two straight over Tokyo Imperial University by scoring three runs in the third inning. The final count was 3 to 1.

Lefty Kondo's double and a timely hit by First Baseman Matsui brought in Waseda's winning run in the last half of the eleventh over Hosei, the final score being 8 to 7. Kondo replaced Ishiguro on the mound in the ninth when Hosei greeted him with two runs, which plus the one already scored off Ishiguro in the same frame, plunged the game into extra innings with the count at 7 all.

Leftfielder Miyoshi's great running catch of Matsushita's drive with two aboard in the first half of the eleventh was another factor in Waseda's victory.

The summaries were:

U.S. TRACKSTERS WIN AT ZURICH

N. Y. Times

ZURICH, Switzerland, Aug. 13—America's touring track and field team gained twelve first places and shared another out of a possible sixteen in an international meet against some of Europe's best runners and jumpers before 6,000 fans today. England took two first places, Switzerland one, and one was tied between England and the United States.

The outstanding performance was by Dennis Pell of England, who won the 1,500 meters. He easily outpaced Blaine Rideout of Texas, who finished third—a repetition of the result last Monday at White City Stadium, London.

THE SUMMARIES

100 Meters—Tie for first between Holmes, England, and Jeffrey, U.S.A.; third, Hanni, Switzerland. Time—0:10.5.

200 Meters—Won by Jeffrey. U.S.A.; second, Holmes, England; third, Hanni, Switzerland. Time—0:21.2.

400 Meters—Won by Pennington, England; second, Miller, U.S.A.; third, Jud, Switzerland. Time—0:47.9.

800 Meters—Won by Beetham, U.S.A.; second, Brown, England; third, Merkt, Switzerland. Time—1:53.7.

1,500 Meters—Won by Pell, England; second, Normand, France; third, Rideout, U.S.A. Time—3:54.1.

5,000 Meters—Won by Schwartzkopf, U.S.A.; second, Thommen, Switzerland; third, Muller, Switzerland. Time—15:28.2.

110-Meter High Hurdles—Won by Batiste, U.S.A.; second, Anet, Switzerland; third, Kunz, Switzerland. Time—0:14.5.

400-Meter Low Hurdles—Won by Cochran, U.S.A.; second, Christen, Switzerland; third, Franzen, Switzerland. Time—10.52.7.

400-Meter Relay—Won by United States; second, Switzerland; no third. Time—0:48.3.

Shot-Put—Won by Watson, U.S.A.; second, Hadener, Switzerland; third, Maier, Switzerland. Distance—15.09 meters.

Discus—Won by Watson, U.S.A.; second, Metzger, Switzerland; third, Ospelt, Switzerland. Distance—48.79 meters.

Pole Vault—Won by Varoff, U.S.A.; second, Geisinger, Switzerland; third, Anet, Switzerland. Height—4.27 meters.

High Jump—Won by Steers, U.S.A.; second, Batiste, U.S.A.; third, Nydegger, Switzerland. Height—1.97 meters.

Broad Jump—Won by Watson, U.S.A.; second, Studder, Switzerland; third, Anet, Switzerland. Distance—7.35 meters.

Javelin—Won by Steers, U.S.A.; second, Hadener, Switzerland; third, Ospelt, Switzerland. Distance—58.42 meters.

Hammer—Won by Nido, Switzerland; second, Vogler, Switzerland; third, Taddia, Italy. Distance—47.82 meters.

Japan Wins All Events In Tri-Nation Meet

Scoring 131 points, Japan's delegation won the track and field competition Sunday in the Japan-Manchoukuo-China athletic meet which closed that day at Hsinking. Manchoukuo was second with 99 points and China third with 51 points.

By virtue of this victory, Japan cleaned up in all competitions, which also included basketball, soccer and volleyball.

In the soccer final Sunday, Japan defeated Manchoukuo, 6 goals to nil, the score at half-time being 2 to 0.

1940 WILL SEE THREE DI MAG'S IN BIG LEAGUES

By MORTON MOSS

NEW YORK—According to the shape of things to come, 1940 in the major leagues looms as the year of the DiMaggios.

First, of course, there is the one and only Joseph who outfields and bombards mightily for the New York Yankees. Joe is likely to have a family reunion with brother Vincent, now toiling for the Yankee agricultural development at Kansas City and possibly with baby brother Dominic, a sensational slammer for San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League.

MAY JOIN YANKEES

Vince had one previous whirl in the majors and, although he impressed as a brilliant outfielder, his tendency to roll up records for strikeouts caused his dismissal to the bushes. Dominic, ballyhooed as another Joseph with a stick, may wind up as a member of the New York Giants. The Giants, among numerous other clubs, have shown deep interest in the youth. Horace Stoneham, anxious to bring the Giants back into flag competition, is making particularly strong passes in the direction of Dominic.

The probability is that the baby DiMaggio will wear a New York uniform in 1940 and from present atmospheric conditions it looks as though the Giants have the inside track. However, the Yankee bankroll is all-powerful and the Barrow Bombers may have three of a kind next season—Joe, Vince and Dom.

This invasion of the majors by the DiMaggios brings to mind other brother combines that have made a niche for themselves in baseball.

Back in the 1920's, the Giants' pitching burden was carried to a large extent upon the capable shoulder of the two Barnes boys, Virgil and Jess. Around the same period, Emil Meusel outfielded for the Giants while brother Bob did same for the Yankees.

Johnny Cooney, Boston Bees' vet, had a brother Jimmy who was quite elegant as a major league in fielder. Lynn Myers is with the St. Louis Cardinals and Billy gives his all for the Cincinnati Reds. And Bud Hafey cavorts for Cincinnati, while Tom aids the Giants to the best of his ability. The Mancusos are split with Frank a Giant and Gus a Chicago Cub.

CASE OF DEANS

Lest we forget, there are the Deans—Paul and Jerome, Daffy and Dizzy—once together on the Cardinals in their heyday, but now shared since Dizzy was shipped off to plague the Cubs. Most successful of all were the five Delehanty brothers who scintillated under the Big Top when the world was younger, ah, me!

There have been many father-and-son horsehide combinations, but somehow the really great never seem to hand down their full talent.

Walter Johnson's offspring Edward remains an obscure slave somewhere in the Yankee chain gang as does a son of George Sisler in the Cards' farm system. Gene Thompson, Myril Hoag, Oscar Grimes and Dixie Walker are progeny of ball-playing papas. Jim Bagby of the Red Sox harks back to Jim Sr. and Eddie Collins Jr., now an Athletic, revivifies another golden name.

U.S. COLLEGES DISLIKE SIGNING MAJOR LEAGUES

Christian Science Monitor

SEATTLE—When Howard Hobson, University of Oregon baseball coach, admitted in a newspaper interview that he was a scout for the New York Yankees, new evidence was given to the breach between colleges and professional baseball.

Although Hobson resigned his Yankee scouting job soon after the University of Washington Daily released the interview, his action did not end discussion. Rather it served as a concrete example to substantiate the rumors that had been passing around the Conference.

During the past few years many Northwest college coaches have been perturbed by the loss of star baseball players, as big league scouts have signed them to contracts early in their college careers.

DISAPPROVE SIGNING

Not only has it affected the baseball coaches, who lose the players they had helped along, but the faculty, and coaches of other sports disapprove of the signing of ball players while still in college. The faculty like to see all students graduate, but when a player signs a contract, he usually leaves school for good. Also the signing of a professional contract makes an athlete ineligible for any other sport, and we might refer to Coaches Babe Hollingbery of Washington State and Jim Phelan of Washington, as football coaches that have felt the results of this "buying of players."

Hollingbery built a freshman football team around fullback Ted Zydowsky in 1937, and had big plans for him in the 1938 season. But Ted also happened to excel in the sport of baseball. Came the 1938 season and the expected grid star Mr. Zydowsky was not on hand—he had been signed by the Chicago Cubs—while still a freshman.

KICKING ARTIST LOST

At the University of Washington, coach Phelan had dreams of a sure-fire kick-off man and place-kick artist in Edo Vanni. One night in practice session with the freshmen, Vanni made 97 successful try-for-point conversions out of 100 attempts, and kicked-off over the goal line 10 times in succession from his own 40-yard line. But Vanni was not available for varsity use, for he, too, signed a professional baseball contract while still a freshman.

There are, of course, two sides to the question. There is little opportunity for a baseball player in the college leagues. College baseball is considered no better than class "D" baseball. Many of the boys with baseball ability need the money, and succumb to the lure of a bonus for signing.

FEW MAKE GRADE

But few of these make the grade in big league baseball. After a few years, they are kicking around on some bush league team, with no college education behind them to help in looking for employment, after their baseball days are over.

Hobson said he did not try to sign players on his own team while they were in school, asking only that senior members of his squad allow the Yankees to meet the best offer they have received prior to graduation.

Hobson did make a suggestion—one that received much publicity when forwarded previously in a magazine article by Sam Barry, baseball coach at University of Southern California. This suggestion is for Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis to arrange an agreement among baseball teams, similar to the one in the National Professional Football league, that no players be signed until after they have graduated or completed their years of college eligibility.

REVIEW OF SWIMMING IN BRITAIN

By R. MAILLARD STEAD
Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—When the story of 1939 competitive swimming in Britain comes to be written—and that fairly soon—it will be like a typical Wodehouse tale in one respect. Namely, that several of the main characters will be people of whose adventures we have read in earlier narratives of the same line.

Take Norman Wainwright, for example. Again we find him the hero, so far as men's freestyle swimming is concerned. Two national championships he has acquired this season—the thing is quite a longstanding habit with him, as you know—and he came as near as a toucher to winning a third.

"Near as a toucher" may be slang in ordinary conversation, but it is just plain reporting as applied to a swimming episode such as occurred in the English championships at Minehead where Wainwright, winner of both the 220 and 440 yards races in record time, would have taken the 100 yards as well if his arm, and not Michael Taylor's, had happened to lunge forward in the very final phase of their dramatic duel in the deciding race for the championship.

SPRINT CHAMPION

Young Taylor is usually identified with backstroke swimming. But recently he has put his reputation into reverse, so to speak, and now we find him installed as an English sprint champion.

However, the palm must be awarded—he certainly deserves a big hand!—to Mr. Wainwright, who last season was happy to be out of the picture, nice and quiet, following his strenuous efforts in the Empire games at Sydney, Australia, during the previous Winter. This year he came back in all senses of the phrase and had the satisfaction of swimming the furlong and the quarter-mile faster than they had ever been covered before in the English championships. His time for the shorter distance was 2m. 14.4s. and for the longer 4m. 52.6s.

Incidentally, the former time is a new English record. Representing an improvement by 1.8s. upon the previous best, returned by Wainwright himself at Wallasey in 1937.

HARD PRESSED

Now a great deal of the responsibility for Wainwright's speedy swimming this year lies with a gentleman from a land some 12,000 miles away. W. E. Kendall, of Australia. He pressed Wainwright relentlessly in all three of the short distance freestyle campionships. He was second in the 220 and 440 yards contests and was leading until half way through the final of the 100 yards.

Another Empire product seen conspicuously as one throws this brief backward glance at the 1939 championships is the South African, Ian Tirrell, now swimming for the Upper Clapton Club. He succeeds Mike Taylor as the 100 yards backstroke champion, and, by way of celebrating his accession, he changed the championship record for this event to 1m. 42.2s.

This effort of Taylor's swings the spotlight abruptly away from the record that M. Y. ffrench-Williams established earlier in one of the heats—1m. 44.6s.—ffrench-Williams, star of the famous Penguin Club and a former captain of the Oxford University S. C., continues to have difficulty in the matter of winning national championships. He just cannot manage to obtain one. Although he has represented Great Britain in the Olympic Games on two occasions, has twice figured in the Empire Games, and has competed twice in the European championship.

On way and another, records were treated rather cavalierly in the championships. Not the least noteworthy cause being J. G. Davies, who won the 200 yards breaststroke title for the third year in succession and, with a time of 2m. 37.8s., eclipsed all previous performances in the event.

CLASS OF HIS OWN

Another man who, having found a good thing, seems disposed to stay with it, is young Freddie Hodges, 18-year-old son of the secretary of the Highgate Diving Club. He won the springboard competition for the fourth year in succession. He is so much in a class of his own for spring-board diving that it is quite difficult for his to get keen competition in Britain.

Another diver well ahead of the rest here for springboard work is Betty Slade, 18-year-old Ilford girl who holds the championship of Europe for this specialty. This year, she also won the English championship for high-board diving as well. Here, for your consideration, is the list of new English national champions for swimming.

Men's Events

100 yards freestyle—M. H. Taylor, Sheffield Bath Club, 54.s.

150 yards, backstroke—I. H. Tirrell, Upper Clapton S. C., 1m. 42s. (Championship record).

200 yards, breaststroke—J. G. Davies, Otter S. C., 2m. 37.8s (championship record).

220 yards freestyle—Norman Wainwright, Hanley S. C., 2m. 14.4s(championship record).

440 yards freestyle—Norman Wainwright, Hanley S. C., 4m. 52.6s (English and championship record).

Plunging—F. W. Parrington, Liverpool Police S. C., 76ft. 2¼in.

Highboard Diving—C. D. Tomalin, Highgate D. C., 96.90 pts.

Springboard Diving—F. G. Hedges, Highgate D. C., 126.30 pts.

Inter-Counties relay (4 x 200 yards)—Middlesex, 8m. 42.8s.

Women's Events

100 yards, freestyle, Joyce Harrowby, Leicester Knighton Fields S. C., 1m. 2.8s.

150 yards, backstroke—O. V. Bassett-Lowke, Northampton S. C., 1m. 54.4s.

200 yards, breaststroke—Doris Storey, Montague Burton S. C., 2m. 43.3s.

220 yards, freestyle—H. M. Yate, Ford of Plymouth S. C., 2m. 41.6s.

440 yards, freestyle—Doris Hutton, Border City S. C., 4m. 49.8s.

Highboard Diving—Betty Slade, London Diving Club, 37.93 pts.

Springboard Diving—Betty Slade, London Diving Club, 101.63 pts.

Inter-Clubs, medley relay, Armley S. C., 4m. 54.7s.

BUFFOONS OF 100 YEARS OF U.S. BASEBALL RECALLED BY SCRIBE

By LOREN DISNEY

N.Y. Times

Edward GG. (Ned) Hanlon, manager of the old Baltimore Orioles, once concluded his men were going for too many bad balls. He ordered every batter to wait out the pitcher; if necessary, to take a strike or two. Walter (Steve) Brodie, centerfielder, found it difficult to obey the instructions. He couldn't help taking his cut when the ball came up to the plate. Hanlon ranted, hinted darkly at a fine. One afternoon in the late Nineties, Hanlon believed the rebel at last had been brought to heel. Brodie stood at the plate and let two perfect strikes cut the middle.

"That a boy!" Hanlon cried. "Now bust the big one."

The pitcher came with another perfect strike. Brodie didn't take his bat from his shoulder. He walked back to the bench with a broad grin.

"Ha," he snorted, "I thought you said I couldn't take 'em."

Brodie, according to the late John McGraw, was one of baseball's pioneer eccentrics, but he was by no means the only eccentric in the 100-year history of the game. This is the centennial year of baseball—certainly a good time to recall the prodigious nonsensities of our national game's buffoons.

Baseball's humor—and its roll of humorists—is typically American. It stems from the backwoods and the drawling Bowery of the nineteenth century. A game still creates the same mood as that inspired by reading Mark Twain, Petroleum V. Nasby, Will Rogers and Ring Lardner.

The humor is provided by players and fans alike. The efforts of the latter frequently are not inspired. The best the leather-lunged heckler may manage is the ancient advice to the umpire that "Jesse James rode a horse." Or perhaps an aging player is called "Old Folks' Home." But it sounds good in the setting. Americans were reared not on subtleties but on slapstick, and at a ball park there is always a butt. A ball game makes you feel at home.

When it is recalled that during the past thirty-five years or so baseball has been written by Ring Lardner and other such lively fellows, it is apparent that separating fact from fancy would be quite a job. We shall never know, in truth, how many rookies have been persuaded that the little hammock in an upper berth is actually an arm-rest or that snipes will jump into a bag held open in a dark field. In any event, if the stories are not true, they should be: they are as American as a hogcalling contest.

Not all the evidence of the game's superb buffoonery, by any means, relies upon the word of baseball writers. McGraw told at length of his troubles with Bugs Raymond, while Connie Mack is the authority for most of the stories relative to Waddell and his battery mate, Ossie Schreckengost.

McGraw apparently loved Bugs Raymond. The hurler stood for everything that the little disciplinarian found repugnant. He was completely irresponsible, he drank vast quantities of beer, his pledges were worthless. But McGraw always recalled him with tolerance and affection. It may be that the manager was won by Raymond's mastery on the mound.

The hard-boiled Muggsy was forever giving Raymond another chance. McGraw loved to tell of Raymond's defense to charges once leveled against him. The manager had the pitcher shadowed on one of his many evenings out. The operatives submitted a report detailing an incredible consumption of beer, pretzels and Bermuda onions. Confronted with the evidence, the bleary-eyed Raymond was speechless for a moment. Then he said:

"It's a lie, Mac. I ain't et an onion in months."

The feats of Waddell were legion; many have taken their place in the folklore of the nation. What baseball fan has not heard of the time the Rube pitched for a sandlot team the day before he was scheduled to work an important game for the Athletics, or how before a game he was tricked into wearing his arm out by pegging the ball in from the outfield, or how he once disappeared and joined a fire department? It is perhaps not so well known that Schreckengost, who was Waddell's roomie, once refused to sign a contract until a clause was inserted forbidding the pitcher to eat crackers in bed.

The two most recent of the innumerable clowns, it need hardly be stated, have been Dizzy Dean and Floyd Cave (Babe) Herman, the Royal Nonesuch of Brooklyn. Dizzy has always been a little suspect. His antics have carried an overtone of opportunism. When he is going well on the mound his jaw is always working. But in the face of adversity his boasting is reduced.

The Brooklyn Babe was real. (Herman is still in baseball. He has been playing this season with the Hollywood Club of the Pacific Coast League.) He could and did stretch a three-base hit into a double play.

His career, however, was epitomized by a story hung on him during his latter days with the Dodgers. The Babe met a sports writer in a hotel lobby. After a little talk, Herman fished a cigar but from his pocket, stuck it in his mouth.

"Got a match?" he inquired.

While the writer searched, Babe took a few tentative puffs. He tried a few more, then said:

"Never mind, it's lit."

Scholars seeking a touchstone to the American character could do worse than spend a good deal of their time at the ball parks. Homo Americanus is certainly there in a relaxed and uninhibited mood. The fancy hyperbole, the abuse heaped on the players and umpire, the sudden transition from gloom to joy and vice versa—like it or not, that's us.

Most ball players accept the vocal efforts of the fans part of the chore. Ty Cobb was a celebrated exception. The Peach was known to go into the stands after his tormentors. Cobb related gleefully in his memoirs the classic revenge obtained by an outfielder for the Browns. This worthy was ridden all one Summer by a St. Louis fan, who had a season box near the right-field foul line.

Trotting in between innings, the outfielder always was loudly informed his position should be occupied by some one more adept. Toward the end of the season, the outfielder had his chance. A high, looping foul was hit by the batter. The outfielder ran over to cover, but it was soon evident that the ball was headed for the heckler's box. The latter frantically sought escape. An instant before the ball landed, the outfielder bellowed:

"Take off your hat!"

The man snatched off his straw hat in time to receive the blow on a shining bald pate. Cobb recorded that the outfielder never again was bothered by this fellow.

Some people no doubt go to ball games simply for the release they find in telling the players and umpires where they rate in the scheme of things; countless thousands go for the sense they get of helping to manage the team and still others for the sake of being always right. The game affords an opportunity to be right a whole afternoon for 75 cents.

"Monday morning quarter-backs," it cannot be denied, are superbly endowed with hindsight. But for sheer catch-as-catch-can ex post facto correctness the "grandstand manager" stands alone. The manager who gets paid for doing the job can't win. If he makes an unsuccessful move he is scornfully accused of "master-minding"; if he seeks to muddle through a ticklish situation he is charged with neglecting his work. Let a stratagem succeed and his colleagues without portfolio in the stands are unanimous in the opinion that he has done only the obvious.

Impelled by whatever reason, people do go to the game, though it is difficult to say just where baseball ranks as a major industry, for the several groups concerned are coy about giving out dollars and cents information. The number of admissions last year provides a fair line on the business. The sixteen major league clubs, it is estimated, had an attendance of 10,000,0000, while another 15,500,000 persons viewed the show put on by the thirty-eight minor leagues. In addition, 4,000 to 8,000 semi-pro teams played before paying guests.

The baseball groups, it seems, have always more or less deplored the clownish, broad slapstick features which have been such an integral part of the game. John McGraw, who led as rough a crowd as ever ran onto a ball field, longed for the day when there would be more college men like Christy Mathewson to add to the tone of the game. The day is here. A recent survey showed that 40 per cent of the current big leaguers spent some time in college. Whether increased gentlemanliness makes for added popularity is a question. The rapid growth of hockey, a rough, brawling game, would indicate that it does not.

Baseball has changed little since the turn of the century. Today, however, there is a movement afoot to give it more showmanship. Larry McPhail, who introduced night baseball to the majors in 1933, is the principal agitator. He is now striving to make glamor boys of the stumbling Dodgers.

McPhail and other moderns at the last annual meeting of the big leagues pushed through a rule authorizing each club to stage a few night games each season. The Old Guard opposition was headed by Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators. He contended that artificial lighting would make for a slower game. He could have advanced another argument, perhaps more persuasive. A ball game, with its jocosities and buffoonery, has always offered an escape from responsibility. Few men can really afford to go to a ball game on a work day at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Yet millions do so each year, and it doesn't seem to have hurt the country.

Skiing Team Cancels 1940 Visit to Germany

The All-Japan Ski Federation has decided not to send a team to compete in the Garmisch-Partenkirchen ski festival next February, invitation for which had been received from Germany, it was announced late Monday.

Cancellation of the ski festival is a foregone conclusion with Germany now engaged in hostilities that are looming larger daily with Poland, Britain and France.

Before Germany's conclusion of a non-aggression pact with the Soviet Union, it was believed locally that the Reich invitation would enable the Japanese skiers to compete in the Fifth Olympic Winter Games scheduled for next year.

Considerable concern is felt over the 12th Olympic Games scheduled for next year at Helsinki. It will be remembered that the 6th Olympic Games had been allotted to Berlin in 1916 but were cancelled because of the World War. Helsinki authorities are said to be determined to stage the Games, even on a small scale.

YANKS BEAT ATHLETICS BY 21-0 SCORE

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13—The largest crowd of the season at Shibe Park, 34,570, saw the strangest thing imaginable today. The Athletics beat the Yankees in the first game of a twin bill, to snap a losing streak of eight straight. The count was 12 to 9.

Frankie Hayes poled a homer into the left-field bleachers in the ninth inning with two out and two aboard to break a deadlock brought on by infield misplays of the Mackmen.

But from this thrilling height the fans dropped to the depths of disappointment as the Yankees smothered the Mackmen in the eight-inning nightcap by a count of 21 to 0 to tie a thirty-eight-year-old modern record for lop-sided playing. Not since 1901, when the Tigers beat Cleveland in seven innings, has a game in the major leagues been won by this score.

SHORT OF 1939 RECORD

Charlie Ruffing in the afterpiece gained his seventeenth victory under wraps. He held the Mackmen to three hits while the Yanks hammered Henry Pippen and Nelson Potter for twenty-three, four short of the champions' record total for the year.

Joe DiMaggio hit two homers in this game. So did Babe Dahlgren. Ruffing smacked four hits, tying Bill Dickey and DiMaggio in number if not in distance.

There was nothing to the game. The Yanks were racing against time in a batting workout, for they had to get in five innings before the 7 o'clock deadline to make it a legal game.

In the first game Hayes's four-master threw the fans into a frenzy.

The Yanks had scored six unearned runs. Lamar Newsome and Dario Lodigiani had collaborated in a couple of gorgeous errors which gave the Yanks five unearned runs in the fourth. Hayes's single and Dick Siebert's double had propelled the Mackmen into the lead in the eighth, but in the ninth more errors had presented the tying run to the Yanks.

HADLEY RUSHED IN

The Athletics started their half of the ninth harmlessly enough. With Marius Russo, fourth Yankee hurler, on the mound, Lynn Nelson was an easy out. But Wally Moses beat out a hunt and Newsome sacrificed. Russo was removed and Bump Hadley sent to the rescue.

His first toss was a hurried one to second in an attempt to nip Moses. But the throw got away from Joe Gordon and Moses reached third. This made it expedient to pass Bob Johnson. Then, with the count two balls and a strike, Hayes drove his homer.

Yankee strategy went by the boards with that Hayes homer. Likewise a four-bagger by Frank Crosetti, in the fourth.

Atley Donald started on the mound, making his third bid for his thirteenth major league victory. He moved out of the picture in the fourth as Johnson's eighteenth homer with one aboard put Philadelphia within a run of the champions. Monte Pearson, who succeeded Donald, did all right until the eighth, when he gave the Athletics three runs and the lead. Spud Chandler ended the eighth with the bases full.

MANEUVERING AT PLATE

In the ninth inning of the opener Marse Joe McCarthy yanked Chandler for a pinch hitter. Ruffing was nominated to bat for him and Earle Mack promptly withdrew his starting pitcher, Lee Ross, and called on Chubby Dean. With the southpaw ready, Ruffing was removed. Dickey batted for Ruff and popped out.

Auditing the home run books: The Yankee total for the year was brought to 111. Crosetti exploded his fifth and Charlie Keller his fourth in the first game. DiMaggio hit his fifteenth and sixteenth and Dahlgren Nos. 12 and 13 in the nightcap.

DiMaggio outgalloped the first of his homers of the day, which did not leave the park, and drove his second over the left-field roof.

Keller stretched to twelve the number of consecutive games in which he has hit safely.

Gorgeous catches by DiMaggio robbed Johnson and Moses of hits in the opener.

What with the heat and everything, Umpire Bill Grieve had a trying day of it calling close plays at first in the opener and being harangued by Pippen on the matter of ball and strikes in the night-cap.

AUSTRALIA BEATS U.S. IN CHALLENGE ROUND

Domei Tsushin

HAVERSFORD, Pa., Sept. 4—The powerful Australian Davis Cup team today captured the coveted Davis Cup Championship when it swept both of the remaining singles matches to score a 3-2 victory over the United States as the finals were brought to a conclusion here.

Adrian Quist, veteran Australian Davis Cup star, defeated Robert Riggs, No. 1 man on the American squad, in a stirring five set match. Quist overwhelmed Riggs in the first two sets, 6-1, 6-4, lost the next two 3-6, 3-6, and came back to take the deciding set 6-4.

With the score tied at 2-2, John Bromwich, ambidexterous Australian player, convincingly trounced Frank Parker, of America, 6-0, 6-3, 6-0, to give the 1939 Davis Cup title definitely to the Australians.

Members of the Australian team, meanwhile, received a cable advising them to return to Australia without participating in other tourneys.

The victory of the Australians will go down in tennis history as displaying one of the greatest comebacks by the victorious team in any challenge round of the Davis Cup competition. For America started with a commanding 2-0 lead on the first day, last Friday, when Riggs bumped off Bromwich, 6-4, 6-0 and 7-5, and Parker vanquished Quist, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 1-6 and 7-5.

The Australians, however, rallied on Saturday to win the doubles, Bromwich and Quist defeating Joseph Hunt and Jack Kramer, 5-7, 6-2, 7-5 and 6-2. No doubt, with the victories by Bromwich and Quist in the last two remaining singles over Parker and Riggs respectively, there will be plenty of criticism by the American sports writers for some time now of Captain Walter Pape's selection of the American doubles team. It must be admitted that Hunt and Kramer are considerably unknowns. But it seems that Captain Pape was apparently confident that either Riggs or Parker would win one of the remaining singles and believed there was no particular danger in losing the doubles. Henceforth, it is likely that he decided on saving Parker and Riggs for the singles.

Some experts very likely might say that Captain Pape made a mistake in not selecting Riggs and Elwood Cooke, winners of the Wimbledon doubles title this year, but it is to be remembered that they were defeated by Bromwich and Quist in the subsequent American national doubles championships. The Australians did not compete at Wimbledon.

There will be criticism too of the failure to select Gene Mako as a member of the American Davis Cup team. He was J. Donald Budge's partner which won the Davis Cup from Britain in 1937 and retained it against Australia in 1938.

It is Australia's victory for the first time since 1919 when it defeated England in the challenge round, and its eighth championship. Davis Cup matches between Australia and the United States follow:

1905—America won, 5-0.
1906—America won, 3-2.
1907—Australia won, 3-2.
1908—Australia won, 3-2, challenge round.
1909—Australia won, 5-0, challenge round.
1911—Australia won, 5-0, challenge round.
1913—America won, 4-1.
1914—Australia won, 3-2, challenge round.
1920—America won, 5-0, challenge round.
1922—America won, 4-1, challenge round.
1924—America won, 5-0, challenge round.
1932—America won, 5-0.
1934—America won, 3-2.
1936—Australia won, 3-2.
1937—America won, 5-0.
1938—America won, 3-2, challenge round.
1939—Australia won, 3-2, challenge round.

Japan Wins Contests In Meet at Mukden

Japan won all contests on the opening day Tuesday of the Japan-China-Manchoukuo athletic meet at Mukden.

Playing in the indoor court of the Takachiho Elementary School, Japan's basketball team ran away from Manchoukuo, composed entirely of players of Manchou blood, by an 88 to 58 score. The score at halftime was 46 to 37 in favor of Japan. Forward Oyeiho of Manchoukuo was hight point scorer with 36 points, followed by Forward Mitsuta of Japan with 35 points.

Japan defeated the Manchurian Medical University team in the volleyball competition in two straight sets, 21-11 and 21-17.

In the soccer competition, Japan defeated the South Manchurian Railway combine, six goals to nil.

REICH PREPARED FOR OLYMPIC WINTER GAMES

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—"In the name of all German sportsmen and of the entire German Nation, I heartily welcome all sporting colleagues and friends from abroad to the Vth Winter Olympic Games, to be held at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Feb. 2-11, 1940." (Undoubtedly, the Games will now be canceled because of the outbreak of a war in Europe—Editor.)

Thus says the German State Secretary and Sport Leader, Hans von Tschammer und Osten. And he goes on: "The Winter Games furnish us with the welcome opportunity to express our appreciation and thanks for the hospitality accorded to German sportsmen wherever they have gone in foreign countries. They are also a happy occasion for strengthening the feeling of community and the bonds of comradeship and sports with all the nations of the world."

"As was the case four years ago," he went on, "the German Olympic Committee has formed a special Organizing Committee, at whose head has been placed Dr. Karl Ritter von Halt, who proved himself in this same capacity in 1936. We are looking forward with the keenest anticipation to seeing our guests of 1936 with us once again in 1940, and we hope to greet also many new friends who have become 'converted' to the Olympic ideal in the meanwhile."

SURPRISE

The allotting of the Games to Garmisch-Partenkirchen, during the meeting of the International Olympic Committee held in London this Summer was a surprise to the Germans, and it involves them in a close race with time, as all preparations for the big snow and ice sport festival must be completed within seven months.

On this matter, Dr. von Halt says: "Everyone in Germany is cooperating toward attaining this great objective. Upon the news of the decision of the International Olympic Committee, all sports and governmental organizations concerned began directly with preparations, so that when the Organizing Committee was formally founded on July 1, work in preparation for the Vth Winter Olympics was already in full swing.

"Germany was asked to take charges of the Games, he continued, "because we still have the organization routine in hand from 1936 as well as the facilities for Winter sports afforded by Garmisch-Partenkirchen. But it soon became clear to us in Germany that what was sufficient in 1936 would not be so for 1940. The Olympic idea has grown since then, and we must take this development into account. We, therefore, asked that the Olympic grounds and buildings be enlarged and improved, and the Government with the personal approval of the Fuehrer, agreed at once to granting the necessary appropriations."

MUCH WORK

Dr. von Halt goes on: "The Vth Olympic Winter Games are to provide the occasion for the construction of a 'Reich Sport Field' for Winter sports that will be a worthy companion for the stadium built for the XIth Olympiad held in Berlin during the Summer of 1936. Much of the construction work must be completed, and pipes laid, within the next four months in order to beat the frosts. Among the more elaborate undertakings to be completed within this time are the building of a second ice hockey stadium, a skating rink (with special freezing plant) for racing, the enlargement of the grandstands at the ski stadium, clearing of the down-hill ski runs, building a Winter Swimming pool with Finnish Sauna (steam bath). In addition there are new roads and highways to be constructed, the railway yards must be enlarged, and new telephone cables must be laid. Since all departments began their work immediately, we believe everything will be in readiness quite punctually. Many gangs of workmen are already domiciled in special barracks at Garmisch, and office buildings for the construction firms have been quickly set up.

SKIING

"At the same time," Dr. von Halt continues, "the General Secretariat, under the direction of Dr. Diem, is busily engaged on the sporting and organization end of arrangements. The skating program is to be enlarged through the addition of races for women; the bob-sled scheduled remains unaltered; and in skiing we are making ready for the slalom and jumping demonstrations stipulated by the International Olympic Committee, as well as organizing an army patrol race.

"We realize that all difficulties in connection with the Winter Games are not just on our side," Dr. von Halt concludes. "The various National Olympic Committees are faced with no easy task to complete their preparations for participation in such a short time. We believe that it is our duty to help them as much as it is in our power to do so. We have, therefore, decided to have an Olympic Village. The Army has already placed barracks at our disposal."

KEIO AND MEIJI NINES IN DRAW, 1-1; HOSEI ROUTS RIKKYO, 5-0; WASEDA WINS

Keio and Meiji universities, contenders for the championship of the Fall season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league, engaged in a hard fought battle that was called a draw, 1-1, after nine innings to make way for the remaining two games of a triple-header Tuesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Righthanders Takagi and Fujimoto of Keio and Meiji hooked up a pitching duel throughout the game, each yielding seven hits.

Keio scored its lone run in the first inning. Miyazaki, first up, went to first on a Texas Leaguer to center. Kawase fanned and Odate grounded out to first. Iijima walked. Third Baseman Uno came through with another Texas Leaguer to center to bat in Miyazaki. Inouye grounded out to short to retire the side.

MEIJI HAS CHANCE

Meiji had a chance to score in the last half of the seventh when Kodama singled to center after two outs and Ase followed suit but Fujimoto popped out to second.

Captain Kusumoto of Keio singled through short after one away in the first half of the ninth but Takagi rolled a hopper to third and Meiji executed a snappy doubleplay to get out of danger.

Hideo Shimizu, Meiji's ace pitcher, was sent in to pinchhit for Yano as the last half of the ninth opened and he came through with a neat little single to center field. Tobita was sent in to run for him. Yasui, batting for Matsui, laid down a sacrifice bunt and Tobita advanced to second. Kato grounded out to third but First Baseman Kodama rose to the occasion with a single through third and Tobita romped home to deadlock the count at 1-all. Kasai was assigned to run for Kodama. Ase grounded to third and went all the way to second on Uno's poor peg to first. Kamibayashi was named to bat for Fujimoto but all he could do was grounding to short to be thrown out at first.

Behind the effective pitching by Morishita, who allowed but four hits, Hosei turned the tables over Rikkyo by 5-0 in the second game of the day. Rikkyo started with its veteran twirler, Saigo, but he ran into plenty of trouble in the second when Hosei scored three runs before Ishida was sent in to relieve him on the mound. Yoshida led the fireworks for Hosei with a hit to center. He was forced at second on Tashiro's poor bunt. Takino walked and Morishita singled to center to bring in Tashiro. Karazawa struck out but Tagawa lifted a Texas Leaguer to center and Takino tallied. Murakami rifled a hit through third and Morishita scored. Saigo was promptly sent to the showers and Ishida took over the pitching burden. Suzuki grounded to third to force Tanagawa at third and retire the side.

WASEDA WINS

Waseda registered its third straight victory for the season with a 7-3 victory over Tokyo Imperial University. Pitcher Utani, the latter's best bet, was sent to the firing line but he was bumped hard by Waseda for 10 hits. A five-run rally in the fifth clinched victory for Waseda. Left hander Kondo worked on the mound for Waseda and checked the Teidai batsmen to five hits.

All six teams were scheduled to play the second game of their respective series today, beginning with the Waseda versus Teidai game a 10 a.m., with the Meiji-Keio clash as the nightcap.

KEIO NINE DEFEATS MEIJI, 2-0; TEIDAI DRAWS WITH WASEDA, 1-1

Meiji University baseball team's bench used a bit too much strategy in the game against Keio Wednesday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium and the consequence was that it suffered a 2 to 0 setback for its second defeat in four starts.

Because of Southpaw Hideo Shimizu's ineffectiveness against Keio in past seasons, Righthander Riichi Kodama, who usually plays at first base because of his good batting though he is the league's best relief hurler, was assigned to start the game on the mound. He lacked speed and control and was in trouble from the first inning and was finally sent to the showers in the third after Keio had nicked him for the two runs that proved to be the winning tallies.

Hideo Fujimoto, a righthander, who took Kodama's place, held Keio completely at bay during the rest of the game, yielding nary a hit, but the damage had already been done.

TAKAGI STARS

The bespectacled Righthander, Masao Takagi, had a good day. With his nice change of pace and effective curves, he checked Meiji to five hits, and was seldom in danger.

Keio loaded the bases in the first inning without a man away but failed to tally. Miyazaki walked and Nakada singled through third. Odate bunted safely down the third baseline. Nakada was caught off second by Pitcher Kodama. Iijima walked to fill the bases again. Uno flied out to short right and Mizuno forced Iijima at second to retire the side.

Keio finally scored in the second inning after filling the bases. Kusumoto walked. Takagi bunted safely to first. Inouye singled through third to fill the bases. Miyazaki was out on a fly to center but Kusumoto scored after the catch. There was no more scoring, however, with Takagi caught off second and Nakada fanning.

Keio just about clinched victory with another run in the third inning. Iijima tripled to right center after one out and came in on Uno's hit through short. Pitcher Kodama was shifted to first and Fujimoto replaced him on the mound. Mizuno grounded to short into a double-play.

Hosei made it two straight victories over Rikkyo by taking the long end of a 1-0 score. The winning run was registered in the third inning after two outs. Murakami singled through the pitcher's box to send Karasawa to second and the latter came in on Suzuki's bingle the short.

Pitcher Morishita had a good day and checked Rikkyo to three hits.

YUTANI HOLDS WASEDA

Keikichi Yutani, ace pitcher of Tokyo Imperial University (Teidai), was in brilliant form and checked the usually hard hitting Waseda players to four hits. But failure of his team-mates to hit in the pinches was responsible for a 1-1 draw, the game being called at the end of the ninth inning.

Teidai broke the ice first in the fourth inning. Hibino walked after one out. Hits by Yutani and Tajima filled the bags. Kitani squeezed Hibino home.

This run looked like a million dollars as the game progressed but Waseda managed to deadlock the count in the last half of the seventh inning. Asai doubled to center after one out and went to third on Matsui's fly to right. Ono singled through second and Asai tallied.

The summaries follow:

PRO FOOTBALL MAKES CHANGE IN SCHEDULE

N. Y. Times

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Three changes appear in revised official National Football League schedule for 1939, which was announced yesterday from Dayton, Ohio, by Carl L. Storck, president of the professional gridiron circuit. The campaign, which will get under way on Sunday, Sept. 10, includes a total of fifty-five games.

The Pittsburgh meeting of the Chicago Bears and the Pittsburgh Pirates, originally set for Sunday, Oct. 1, has been moved back to Monday, Oct. 2 and will be played at night. This increases the number of National League night games to five, Brooklyn listing two and the Chicago Bears and Cardinals one apiece.

Two games involving the Green Bay Packers have been reassigned to Milwaukee—the Oct. 8 contest with the Chicago Cardinals, earlier scheduled to take place in Chicago, and the Oct. 29 engagement with the Washington Redskins, originally arranged for Green Bay. These are the only games that will be played on non-league fields this Fall.

ELEVEN GAMES FOR EACH

Following the plan which has been in effect since 1933, the schedule calls for each of the ten league clubs to play eleven games, meeting rivals from the same division twice on a home-and-home basis and playing single games against three teams from the other division.

The campaign will open simultaneously in Philadelphia and Detroit on Sept. 10, with the Pirates going against the Eagles in the former city and the Cardinals opposing the Lions in the latter.

Before that week has ended three more teams will have had their first taste of championship competition. Brooklyn will open at home against the Pirates in a night game at Ebbets Field on Thursday, Sept. 14, and the following night the Cleveland Rams will usher in the season at Chicago, meeting the Bears at Soldier Field.

The Washington Redskins will get under way against the Eagles at Philadelphia on Sunday, Sept. 17, which date also will mark the entrance into the lists of the Green Bay Packers, who will entertain the Cardinals at Green Bay.

SEASON TO CLOSE DEC. 3

The champion New York Giants, the last team to get away from the barrier, will get into action Sunday, Sept. 24, when they will visit Philadelphia and will not be seen at the Polo Grounds until Sunday, Oct. 15, when the Eagles will be met again.

The regular season will end on Sunday, Dec. 3, when the Redskins come from Washington for their annual late-season battle with the Giants in New York. The championship play-off between the East and West divisional victors will take place the following Sunday, Dec. 10, and this year will be contested on the home field of the Western title-holder.

Sept. 10—Pittsburgh at Philadelphia; Chicago Cardinals at Detroit.
Sept. 14—Pittsburgh at Brooklyn (night).
Sept. 15—Cleveland at Chicago Bears (night).
Sept. 17—Chicago Cardinals at Green Bay; Washington at Philadelphia.
Sept. 20—Cleveland at Brooklyn (night).
Sept. 24—New York at Philadelphia; Brooklyn at Detroit; Chicago Bears at Green Bay; Chicago Cardinals at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 1—New York at Washington; Brooklyn at Philadelphia; Cleveland at Green Bay; Detroit at Chicago Cardinals (night).
Oct. 2—Chicago Bears at Pittsburgh (night).
Oct. 8—New York at Pittsburgh; Brooklyn at Washington; Chicago Bears at Cleveland; Green Bay vs. Chicago Cardinals at Milwaukee.
Oct. 15—Philadelphia at New York; Pittsburgh at Washington; Green Bay at Chicago Cardinals; Cleveland at Detroit.
Oct. 22—Chicago Bears at New York; Philadelphia at Brooklyn; Washington at Pittsburgh; Detroit at Green Bay; Cleveland at Chicago Cardinals.
Oct. 29—New York at Brooklyn; Washington vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee; Pittsburgh at Cleveland; Detroit at Chicago Bears.
Nov. 5—New York at Detroit; Brooklyn at Pittsburgh; Chicago Cardinals at Cleveland; Philadelphia at Washington; Green Bay at Chicago Bears.
Nov. 12—Chicago Cardinals at New York; Washington at Brooklyn; Chicago Bears at Detroit; Green Bay at Philadelphia.
Nov. 19—Pittsburgh at New York; Green Bay at Brooklyn; Chicago Cardinals at Washington; Philadelphia at Chicago Bears; Detroit at Cleveland.
Nov. 26—Brooklyn at New York; Philadelphia at Pittsburgh; Detroit at Washington; Chicago Bears at Chicago Cards; Green Bay at Cleveland.
Nov. 30—Green Bay at Detroit; Philadelphia at Cleveland.
Dec. 3—Washington at New York.
Dec. 10—Championship play-off on field of Western winner.

FORMER KANSAS CAGE STARS ON THE ALL-AMERICA

Christian Science Monitor

LAWRENCE, Kan.—Two former University of Kansas basketball stars were selected on the all-America cage team named following the National A. A. U. tournament at Denver and another ex-Jayhawk made the second all-America team.

The first team all-Americas, who received their college training under Dr. F. C. "Phog" Allen of Kansas, were Ray Ebling, 6ft. 3in., forward, and Dick Wells, husky guard. On the second team was Fred Pralle, a high-class guard.

Ebling was an all-America college selection during all three years that he wore the crimson and blue of Kansas. Previously he had been a star at Lindsborg High School. At K. U. Ebling led the Big Six in scoring for three years.

Ebling tied the conference scoring record his sophomore year and then smashed it as a senior. His first year saw the accurate Jayhawk piling up points with an accurate left-hand shot. As a junior and senior, however, he brought into vogue the under hand "scoop" shot.

Following his graduation from the University in 1936, Ebling joined the Bartlesville (Okla.) Phillips "66" team and he has been a member of that quintet since. The Oilers finished second at Denver.

The National A.A.U. championship was won by the Denver Nuggets, a team of which Dick Wells was a member. Wells did not enjoy quite as sensational a college career as did Ebling and Pralle, but he has been a standout in A. A. U. ranks with his great rebound work and his exceptional defensive ability.

Wells came to K.U. from Hutchinson and won a starting berth on the Kansas team as a sophomore. He retained his status as a regular throughout his three years of competition.

Pralle was a teammate of Ebling's on the Phillips team this year and like Ebling had been an all-America college selection. After three sensational years at Kansas, Pralle joined the Healey Motors team of Kansas City, Kan. last Spring to play in the A. A. U. tournament. He paced Healey's to the championship and was named the "most valuable player in the tournament to his team."

JENKINS ENDS SPEED TRIALS FOR YEAR 1939

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah, Aug. 12—Ab Jenkins rolled his Mormon Meteor 3rd off this gleaming, white salt speedway for the last time in 1939 today, after hanging up seven new automobile endurance records before the twin dangers of monoxide gas and a rutted course forced him to halt his projected twenty-four-hour run at 16 hours 33 minutes.

The dash for further speed marks ended at 10:08 o'clock (M. S. T.) last night at the suggestion of Art Pillisbury, Western representative of the American Automobile Association contest board.

Jenkins and his relief driver, Rex Mays of Los Angeles, both were groggy from the monoxide fumes, which first swirled into the cockpit of the Utah speed-seeker's racer at 6:55 p.m. when a hood fastening loosened to allow the gas to enter from a leak in the left exhaust manifold.

SMASHES TWO HEADLAMPS

In the laps immediately preceding the 2,713th mile, Jenkins lost control of his machine in salt chewed into ruts by the long pounding. He smashed a row of course boundary stakes and two of the racer's four headlamps.

He rolled into the pit. Pillsbury urged him to quit.

"Ab, I don't think it's worth it," he said. "I think we'd better call it off."

"I think you're right," Jenkins answered. "I got what I wanted. This is all for 1939. After all, we just wanted those records of Eyston's" (Four endurance marks formerly held by Captain G. E. T. Eyston of England.)

When the fumes first poured into the cockpit Jenkins, then at the wheel, managed to get to the pit, where he was pulled from the machine. Mays immediately took over, but pulled in after one lap when the gas affected him.

GAS SEEPS IN AGAIN

Mechanisc repaired the defects hastily, but the gas began seeping in again.

Jenkins and Mays said they "just couldn't see" after first experiencing the fumes.

The quiet-spoken Utahan now holds all records from fifty kilometers to forty-eight hours, having in previous runs established marks in all brackets between those distances except for the four held by Eyston until yesterday.

The seven marks he now has boosted to new levels are: Twelve hours, from 163.68 (Eyston) to 169.99; 2,000 miles, 163.75 (Eyston) to 168.94; 2,000 kilometers, 163.00 (Eyston) to 169.9; 3,000 kilometers, 163.49 (Eyston) to 168.7; six hours, 168.15 to 170.85; 1,000 miles, 168.11 to 170.767; 4,000 kilometers, 159.13 to 165.7.

GOOD PITCHING CAN STOP THE YANKEES

By RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, Aug. 10—It must be comforting to the National League, particularly out Cincinnati way, to discover that the Yankees can be stopped with first class pitching. Five times since the turn of the month, the American League has seen the famed New York powerhouse throttled down to a whisper by hurlers who can put something on the ball.

Dizzy Trout, young Detroiter, was the first to halt the champs in August. With late-inning aid from Lefty Archie McKain, Diz took the great eastern hopes by a 5-to-2 margin. In the same series, Schoolboy Rowe beat them on seven hits, 7-2. Then Cleveland moved into the stadium on the banks of the Harlem, and Bobby Feller and Mel Harder gained decisions on the same afternoon. By way of keeping the ball rolling, Washington's Joe Krakauskas and Pete Appleton combined on Tuesday to score over Joe McCarthy's gang.

SLACK IN OFFENSE

Since July 1, the Yankees have not been the invincible outfit that marched through all types of opposition three seasons running, nor the same one which piled up a lead of 13½ games in the first half of the current campaign. There is a noticeable slack in the offense. Those big innings on which McCarthy once had a monopoly, are not coming so often. The champs have their old fashioned afternoons, but not two or three times a week like in the past.

A sharp decline in the home run output has hurt the Yankee scoring power. Lou Gehrig no longer is pulling for the bleachers. Babe Dahlgren, who replaced the Iron Horse at first base, is running far below the .300 pace. Tommy Henrich and Frank Crosetti are also well under the coveted level. Three regulars in the low 200's is an unusual procedure for the club managed by Joe McCarthy.

CINCINNATI PITCHING

If the Cincinnati Reds are able to overcome a rough schedule through August and September and take their first National League flag since 1919, Bill McKechnie has two hurlers who may duplicate the recent success of Rowe, Feller, and Harder. Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer are not going to give those American League titleholders any fat pitches. And although nobody ever mentions their names when speculating on the approaching October classic, Johnny Vander Meer and Lee Grissom should not be forgotten. This pair of fast-ball lefthanders, despite mediocre regular season records, could be bad news to McCarthy's hitters. Watch for them when the series rolls around.

If the flag races turn out as everyone expects, the first two games of the October classic will be played in Yankee Stadium, probably on Oct. 4 and 5. Leaving Oct. 6 open for travel, the series will continue at Cincinnati on the 7th, 8th and 9th, if necessary. In the event that sixth and seventh contests are necessary, the clubs will return to Yankee Stadium.

The Red Sox are serious about shortening right field at Fenway Park next year. The 402-foot marker behind the right fielder, and the 420-foot label in right-center, will probably disappear with the 1939 diamond wars. It is Tom Yawkey's desire to produce more home runs in that direction at Boston.

Such a change under existing circumstances might be fatal to the Red Sox. Joe Cronin has only one man who can hit a ball a long way to right field. He is Teddy Williams, the rookie who has not yet reached the voting age. Doerr, Foxx, Cronin, Vosmik and Tabor are right-handers. Cramer and Finney swing left, but neither is a home run hitter. A short barrier in right this year would be an open invitation to the opposition. Clubs over-burdened with left-handers would have their fun while Cronin paraded pitchers in from the bull pen, a spot which is active enough at the moment.

However, with their park more favorable for the left-hander, the Red Sox can go into the trading market open minded. No longer will the Yawkey-Collins-Cronin group be forced to concentrate on hitters who can pull for the high wall in left field. An offense which already is the most consistent in the majors, could be balanced to even greater proportions. But what about the pitchers? Yawkey might be at the head of the American League standing now with fair support on the mound. And with the right field bleachers and pavilion closer to home plate, Cronin may have to pitch Foxx every other day.

GULDAHL WINS $2,500 PRIZE

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 14—Displaying steady nerves, big Ralph Guldahl came back today with a sparkling par 70 to win the $2,500 first prize in the $10,000 Dapper Dan golf tournament in an eighteen-hole play-off with Denny Shute of Huntington, W. Va., and Gene Sarazen of East Brookfield, Conn.

The husky Texan, who now is a pro in Madison, N. J., finished four strokes ahead of Shute, who took the $1,250 second prize, and five better than Sarazen, the gentleman farmer, who won $1,000.

EARLIER LAPSE OVERCOME

A sensational recovery from the sand near the 291-yard eighth green provided the winning break and more than made up for the six-foot putt Guldahl missed yesterday on the eighteenth green to cause the three-way tie at 287 for the seventy-two holes.

The trio split one-half the receipts today from a crowd estimated by officials at 7,000 in addition to the prize money.

Going to the eighth, Guldahl, with 28, was one stroke lower than Shute and tied with Sarazen, but his tee shot plunked into the sand. He dug in firmly, then blasted into the cup for an eagle 2.

That shot was the clincher. At the turn Guldahl's 34 was 2 below Shute, 3 below Sarazen.

SHUTE GETS BIRDIE 2

Shute lost another stroke on the tenth with a bogey 5 but picked up two strokes on the eleventh with a birdie two and tied with Guldahl on the twelfth with a bogey 5.

The winner took one of his two three-putt greens on the twelfth, then equaled par at No. 13, 14 and 15 and ran down a thirty-footer on the sixteenth for a birdie 3.

Shute lost another stroke with his 5 on the thirteenth, while Sarazen, who had gained a stroke on the twelfth with a 4, dropped one on each of the next three holes to Guldahl.

Guldahl and Sarazen finished with 3, 3, 5, while Shute faltered with 4, 4, 5.

Kitamura to Swim For Teidai Team

Kusuo Kitamura, who won the 1,500 meter swimming title at the 10th Olympic Games at Los Angeles in 1932 when only 15 years old, will be seen in action at the Meiji Shrine pool for the first time in several years when he will compete for Tokyo Imperial University in the Kanto inter-collegiate championships scheduled for this afternoon and Saturday.

Kitamura is favored to win the 400-meter freestyle race.

Members of the big four teams, Waseda, Keio, Nihon and Rikkyo universities will not compete, having already qualified for the forthcoming national inter-collegiate championships this month.

NIGHT GAME WELCOMED AT CHICAGO

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, Aug. 14—The White Sox made their home debut under lights tonight an artistic as well as a financial success with a 5-to-2 victory over the Browns and moved back into third place behind the three-hit pitching of Johnny Rigney.

An estimated 30,000 saw the game, first night contest in the history of major league baseball in Chicago.

Young Rigney was the hero, yielding not a single hit until the sixth inning and striking out ten batters, while his mates were slugging three hurlers for thirteen hits.

Chicago broke the ice with a single run in the second, added one in the fourth and another in the fifth and then sewed up the decision in the seventh with two tallies.

Rigney, in registering his tenth victory of the season, would have had a shutout had it not been for one of Luke Appling's two errors in the sixth on a double-play ball that should have retired the side. After this miscue the St. Louis scored twice.

In a pre-game ceremony the newly installed lighting system was turned on by Charles A. Comiskey 2d, son of the late J. Louis Comiskey and grandson of Charles A., the "Old Roman," who founded the White Sox.

Commissioner K. M. Landis and William Harridge, president of the American League, were among those who witnessed the inaugural contest, which put the Chicagoans a half game ahead of the Indians.

REDS TROUNCE PIRATES, 9-8 IN 9TH STANZA

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, Aug. 14—The Pirates pounded six pitchers tonight, but the Reds came back with a smashing four-run rally in the ninth inning to win the ball game, 9 to 8. Lew Riggs pinch-singled the winning run across with the bases full and two out.

Little Lew's hit was only his second of the year in fifteen tries, but it was more than a battery of other pinch-hitters could produce and it was all the 23,044 fans needed for a wild dance across the field.

The inning opened with the Reds trailing, 8 to 5, largely because their starting pitcher, Paul Derringer, was off form. Bill Werber popped up and the fans started for the exits. Lonnie Frey walked and so did Ival Goodman and the exit march stopped.

BROWN REPLACES SEWELL

Frank McCormick singled, scoring Frey. Mace Brown relieved Sewell, who had relieved Russ Bauers, and threw Bill Hershberger's bouncer into centerfield while trying to retire McCormick on a fielder's choice. Goodman scored.

Wally Berger fanned but Dick West, recently recalled from Baltimore, singled, scoring McCormick. Billy Myers, who put the Reds back in the ball game in the seventh with a base-clearing double, walked this time to fill the bases.

Riggs came up for Gene Thompson, the last Red pitcher, took two strikes and three balls, then smacked the pitch into right field for the ball game.

PITCHERS' BATTLE AT FIRST

Up to then the game was alternately a pitchers' battle (the first three innings), a runaway (the next two) and an uphill struggle (the rest of the way).

Thompson received credit for the victory, his eighth, which restored the Reds' lead to seven and one-half games, and Brown was charged with the loss.

Manager Bill McKechnie and Catcher Ernie Lombardi of the Reds were ejected from the game for arguing with Umpire Lary Goetz too strenuously about a topped ball that had been ruled foul in the fifth. Had it been fair, a double play would have cut the Pirate score. At one time Pittsburgh held a 7-to-0 lead.

Keio Meets Hosei; Rikkyo to Play Teidai

Baseball fans of Tokyo are in for a rare treat Saturday at the Meiji Shrine stadium with Keio and Hosei clashing in the curtain-raiser of the double-header scheduled at 1 p.m.

Keio is slightly favored to win but Morishita of Hosei has been pitching great ball, as witnessed by his two straight victories over Rikkyo this week, and it will be no surprise if he turns the tables over Keio.

Rikkyo and Tokyo Imperial University will meet in the other game. Both are evenly matched and it may be a 1-1 affair between them, including the game on Sunday.

82 MILLION TARGETS BITE DUST A YEAR IN SKEET SEASON IN U.S.

By MILTON BRACKER

N.Y. Times

Alert as a killer, though he may be as averse to killing a quail as an A.S.P.C.A. founder, the man in the well-worn sportsman's jacket readies his shotgun and steps to Station No. 1. To his right curves the boardwalk rimming the skeet field, an approximate half-circle forty yards across with shooting posts at even intervals around it.

His moment has come; sharply, he calls "Pull!" From an armored trap house behind him skims a dark, saucer-like "bird" powered not by the muscles of beating wings but by the freed tension of a steel spring. He snaps the gun to his shoulder, follows the target as it soars almost directly over his head and away from him, and fires. The gun bellows; the objective, spinning like a stone made to skip on water, flies apart as if spontaneously exploded. The shooter resumes his informal stance and calls, "Mark!" Now from the lower trap house at the other end of the arc another bird leaps, this one nearly straight at him. Again the gun barks; and the target splinters, or sails imperviously to the meted end of its trajectory.

WILL TRY AGAIN

After his first miss, the gunner will try the same shot again; subsequently, he will simply move on to the next station. He will wind up his round by shooting four sets of "doubles"—one target from each house flung simultaneously. Soon there will be another man—or woman, or youngster—at the first station. And all the while the spectators in the safety zone will strive to keep silent at the breathless trigger moments. At other times they will relax in eager chatter about patterns, loads, breaks and dusted birds.

Skeet fans—some 90,000 in all—clutter New York, Massachusetts and California. Trapshooters are thickest in the Middle West, notably Ohio, and some of them get mad at the mere mention of skeet. Both sports, like those of rifle and pistol, attract all kinds of people from all over the country.

The appeal of all target shooting undoubtedly goes back to the hunter's instinct, but there are other factors to make it popular. It is outdoor exercise. It is competitive. It is democratic—banker, baker and builder may stand shoulder to shoulder at the firing line. It helps develop steady hands and nerves. And it gets a grip on some persons which no accident can loosen.

Skeet is an outgrowth of trapshooting, a much older sport in which live birds were used until early in the twentieth century. Public opinion led to the substitution of inanimate targets. It took several decades to produce the now standard clay pigeon, which is neither strictly clay nor at all like a pigeon. Instead, it is simply a shell-like disk about four inches across, weighing just over three ounces and serviceable when upside down as an ashtray an inch deep. The "bird" flies truer than a bird and much faster at the start. The companion device is the trap, which flings the target from fifty to sixty yards.

Trapshooting can be as informal as the "walk-up." A marksman stalks slowly across open ground studded with traps set for all angles. A boy behind calls "Mark!" each time he kicks a lever that sends a target unpredictably soaring. But most trapshooting finds the gunner sixteen yards behind a trap encased in a green house half buried out in the shooting area. With his gun poised and his eye at the farther rim of the traphouse, the gunner calls "Pull!" The target slants skyward, at any angle within a range of forty-five degrees, to either side of a straight line between gunner and trap.

Trap enthusiasts find all the variety they want in their game. Skeet came into being because a group of New England sportsmen, discussing the day's misses, decided to practice with targets from many more angles, particularly with "incoming" as well as "outgoing" birds.

The result was that in 1926 "clock-shooting" was offered to the publishers of National Sportsman and Hunting and Fishing magazines, who ran a contest for a better name. Mrs. Gertrude Hurlbutt of Dayton, Mont., won $100 for "skeet"—derived from a Scandinavian form of "shoot"—and it caught on at once. The influx of women and children into the sport has been explained by its greater variety and the fact that smaller, lighter guns may be used than for trap.

But skeet shooting requires an elaborate layout. From the two trap-houses, all targets fly toward a point at the center of the near semi-circle with a radius of twenty-one yards. The gunner starts near the high trap, at the first of seven stations twenty-six and one-half feet apart. He calls "Pull!" and from a height of twelve feet that trap discharges an "outgoing" bird. He then calls Mark!" and the low trap opposite, from a height of three feet, sends out an "incomer." The process is repeated with two shots at each of the seven stations, and at No. 8, midway on the straight line between the traps.

82,000,000 TARGETS

The 82,000,000 targets used by trap and skeet shooters last year were not reclaimed after crumbling to black and yellow fragments at the impact of shot or turf. But when the shoot is over the pellet hunt begins. At Vandalia last year a contractor got twenty-seven tons of lead from the famous quarter-mile strip with 110 shooting positions. Yet few of the pellets were wasted, from the viewpoint of the gunners. From the sixteen-yard line competitors hit 290,574 out of 312,500 targets for a percentage of 92.98. And Joe Hiestand, Hillsboro (Ohio) farmer, picked 1938 to set an incredible record of 1,179 straight breaks.

Stationary target shooting like that at Camp Perry is less of a novelty to he ousider, who has probably at one time or another invested two bits at a shooting gallery. But the "squaw camp," where entrants' families live, and the trench-like target pits will surely fascinate him. To 175,000 civilian rifle fans and 20,000 who prefer pistol, not including 100,000 youngsters, the sport is in a class by itself. Last year's matches brought out the greatest crowd in American marksmanship history. Twenty-three-year-old William B. Woodring of Alton, Ill., a descendant of the mighty hunter, Daniel Boone, won the national small-bore title with 1,593 out of 1,600.

Harada Beats Ogawa In Students Golf Play

Moriji Harada of Tokyo Imperial University won the national inter-collegiate golf championship in its fifth annual play Friday at the Fujigaya course of the Musashino Country Club by defeating Hiromasa Ogawa of Waseda University 3 and 2 in the final over 36 holes.

Ogawa, who had registered the biggest surprise of the tournament by upsetting the titleholder, Mizuho Kubota of Meiji University, 1 up over 21 holes on Thursday, was off to a good start and was 1 up after the morning round. Harada had the tendency of slicing his shots but he recovered in the afternoon to win 3 and 2.

CONN KAYOES PHILADELPHIAN

N.Y. Times

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14—Young Billy Conn, the light-heavyweight champion, charged into the heavyweight division tonight to stop Gus Dorazio, rugged Philadelphia campaigner, in the eighth round of a ten-round bout before a crowd of 12,000 fans in Shibe Park. Conn weighed 173½ pounds and Dorazio 186¼.

Referee Leo Hauck stopped the one-sided contest after 1 minute 52 seconds of the eight. Dorazio, half blind from a badly cut left eye, was all but hanging on at the finish.

The verdict was greeted by jeers from a portion of the crowd. Dorazio and his handlers protested the decision, insisting Gus was not badly damaged and was able to continue.

Promoters estimated the crowd paid slightly more than $21,000 to see Conn in his first start since he won the light-heavyweight crown from Melio Bettina in New York a month ago.

FAR AHEAD ON POINTS

The Pittsburgher, who is being touted as a possible contender for heavyweight honors a year or two hence, was far ahead on points when Hauck halted the proceedings.

The Associated Press score card gave Conn six rounds, including the abbreviated eighth, Dorazio one and called one even.

Dorazio's eye was bleeding so profusely in the seventh that a physician notified the Phildelphian's seconds he would order the fight stopped unless the bleeding was halted. A couple of left-hand smacks early in the eighth started the bleeding anew and Hauck intervened.

Conn outboxed and outjabbed Dorazio throughout. In the second Gus charged in with a series of lusty right to win the round and again in the fifth he held Conn on even terms, but in the others the Pittsburgh youngster was clearly the superior.

The stout-hearted Dorazio seemed able to take everything Conn had to offer, and had it not been for his injured eye he probably would have stayed the distance.

Conn's clever footwork prevented the harder-hitting Dorazio from getting set to throw his best punches.

JABS FACE AT WILL

In the sixth and seventh Dorazio, his face covered with blood, tired badly and Conn jabbed his features at will with his left and pounded his body with a right.

The fight was Conn's last before he makes his first defense of the light-heavyweight crown against Bettina in Pittsburgh late next month. He will return home immediately to begin training.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

HOLT WINS U.S. EASTERN GOLF TITLE

N.Y. Times

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 13—Bill Holt, powerfully built home-town boy, who is hailed everywhere as "Trailer Bill" because he used to provide his own bed and board at championships, today gained his first major success in golf when he won the Eastern amateur title at the expense of the national champion, little Willie Turnesa of New York.

Aided by two important "breaks," one on the eighth and the other on the ninth hole of the Syracuse Yacht Club course in the afternoon half of the match, Holt, who was a semi-finalist in this year's British amateur championship, went on to beat his illustrious opponent on the No. 15 hole, the margin being 4 and 3.

Through his victory Holt succeeds Don Schumacher as champion. The Texan won here a year ago defeating Frankie Strafaci of Brooklyn in a match that far excelled today's in brilliance. Schumacher was not on hand this year to defend his laurels.

The turning point in the match came on the 498-yard No. 8 hole where Turnesa, one of the best putters in the game, missed a putt not more than eighteen inches long. Upset by that mishap, Turnesa then committed one of golf's cardinal sins—on the ninth—laying himself a stymie.

TRAILS IN THE STRETCH

Willie lost both holes, giving back what he had wrested from the Syracusan by dint of sheer brilliance earlier in the afternoon, and so trailed Trailer Bill by two going into the final stretch. Plainly discouraged by the trend of events, Turnesa played haphazardly from there on.

The misbehavior of his putter plus a certain amount of ill-luck on the greens sent Turnesa off the home green 2 down after the first eighteen—2 down to a par 71 that Holt carded with only thirty putts, as against thirty-four for the dapper youngster who last year won both the New York State and national titles.

Willie proceeded to make up one of these holes when he rolled a twelve-foot putt past a partial stymie on the first hole after luncheon. He planted an iron shot ten feet from the hole at the next green, while Trailer Bill was a good fifteen yards away.

But once again Willie's blade "done him wrong." This time his ball slid past the side of the cup and Holt got a hard half by dropping a five-footer. Turnesa kept on the pressure by almost holing a fifty-footer from the back edge of the green on the next hole.

MISSES CHANCE FOR DEUCE

Holt had a chance for a deuce on the short No. 4 the twenty-second hole in the match, leaving his ball short of the cup on a fifteen-foot putt—always a sign of impending disaster. Turnesa could have squared the match on the next green if he hadn't missed a putt of not much over a yard. He succeeded in drawing level when Holt's putter failed him for the first and practically the only time in the match on the short No. 6.

Despite the fact that the gallery of close to 3,000 that braved the rain was pulling hard for the home town boy to make good, few would have hazarded much on Holt at that particular moment, for it appeared that Turnesa had at last found his stride.

They halved the No. 7 in par 4s, leaving the match all even with eleven holes to play. And after the second shots to the No. 8, a par-5 affair, Turnesa's ball was hole high, just off the right-hand edge of the green, while Holt's was short. Willie played a grand chip up to within a foot and a half for what looked like at least a half. But he missed the putt after Trailer Bill had dropped one three times as long.

Turnesa was one down again and the pressure he had been putting on Holt was relieved considerably. The "pay-off" ball was played on the next hole when Turnesa, after an elegant recovery out of a ditch and onto the green stymied himself. That was the shot that finished little Willie.

The cards.

HOSEI UPSETS KEIO NINE, 5-1; RIKKYO AND TEIDAI DRAW, 1-1

Unleashing an eleven-hit attack, Hosei University's ball tossers bumped off Keio, 5 to 1, Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium to score revenge of its 6-4 setback on Saturday. Tokyo Imperial (Teidai) held Rikkyo to a 1-all draw that was called off at the end of the ninth inning to make way for the Hosei versus Keio tilt. Due to rain in the morning, the starting time of the first game was delayed an hour, play being called at 1 p.m.

As the consequence of the games over the week-end, Waseda remains the only undefeated team in the Tokyo Six University league. The standings follow:

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Waseda	4	3	0	1	.875
Keio	6	4	1	1	.750
Hosei	6	3	3	0	.500
Rikkyo	6	2	3	1	.417
Meiji	4	1	2	1	.375
Teidai	6	0	4	2	.167

It was the bespectacled right-hander, Masao Takagi, that pitched Keio to vicory over Hosei on Saturday, and he was Coach Morita's choice again on Sunday. He got by the first inning but Hosei took advantage of his ball that lacked speed and nicked him for a run in the second inning. Matsushita, Takino and Ikeda pounced on him for three singles and a run.

KEIO TIES SCORE

Takagi was back on even terms when his team-mates deadlocked the count in their portion of the second inning. Shortstop Uno singled through third and romped all the way home on a hit and run play with Backstop Inouye coming through with a two bagger to right center. Keio lost a chance to score another, which might have proved to be the turning point in the game, when Inouye attempted to stretch his hit into a triple. He was run down between second and third. As luck would have it against Keio, Captain Kusumoto smashed a fat one by Morishita for a double. Had Inouye stopped at second, he would have scored easily and Keio would have forged into a 2-1 lead.

Takagi got by the third and fourth innings without trouble but he was sent to the showers in the fifth when Ikeda lifted a Texas Leaguer to right and Morishita singled sharply over third. Giichiro Shiraki, another righthander, was sent to the rescue but he lacked control and walked Karasawa to load the bases without a man away. Tagawa and Murakami both nicked him for hits to right field to bring in two runs.

Hosei clinched victory in the eighth with two more runs. Matsushita gained life at first on a fluke infield hit after one out. Yoshida walked and Takino was safe on Shortstop Odate's error. Ikeda's bunt rolled down the first base line for a hit, Matsushita scoring in the meantime. Morishita worked Shiraki for a walk and Yoshida was forced home.

Victory was sweet for Morishita, who had been knocked out in Saturday's game. He had a good day and checked Keio to six scattered hits.

Backstop Inouye of Keio, who is scarcely over 5 ft. in height but packs a wallop in his bat, knocked a triple to left, the ball taking a one-bound hop into the stands, in the fourth but he was stranded there when Kusumoto flied out to left.

LISTLESS HITTING

Listless hitting on both sides was responsible for the 1-all draw between Teidai and Rikkyo. Pitchers Yutani and Ishida worked for the second straight day on the mound respectively for the two teams.

Rikkyo got off to an auspicious start by scoring one run in the last half of the first inning. Before Yutani could get settled down, Kitahara, Tabe and Kiyohara nicked him for hits to fill the bases after two outs. Sakurai worked Yutani for a walk and Kitahara tallied.

Stopped cold by Ishida in the first four innings, Teidai finally tied the count in the fifth. Tamaki walked to start the fireworks. Hibino and Yutani both singled and Kitano's long fly to center brought in Tamaki.

The summaries follow:

FELLER WINS 17TH GAME FOR INDIANS

N.Y. Times

CLEVELAND, Aug. 13—The Indians held third place by one percentage point by trading shut-outs in their double-header with the White Sox today. The Chicagoans were fourth.

The Indians won the first game, 2 to 0, and the Sox the second, 3 to 0. This gave Cleveland a record of 55 games won and 48 lost for a mark of .534. Chicago's figures are 57, 50 and .533.

Bob Feller scored his seventeenth victory of the season, allowing only three hits and striking out eleven batters in the opener.

Ted Lyons, veteran Sox hurler, had to retire from the game in the fifth inning when he twisted his ankle while covering home plate on a passed ball. Edgar Smith finished and pitched hitless ball.

Thornton Lee scattered five hits to win the second game. The Sox scored their three runs in the first inning. While the Indians argued with the umpires a run came across the unguarded plate. Then pitcher Al Milnar of Cleveland was chased for arguing on a balk.

DOUBLE KILLING ON FLY TO LEFT FIELD

Second Baseman Miyazaki (left) of Keio was off much too far toward second base on Nakada's fly to left field in the eighth inning of Sunday's ball game between Keio and Hosei and was doubled off first. First Baseman Murakami took a spill after the catch but he is showing Umpire Tsuboi he has the ball secure in his glove.

MCSPADEN WINS CANADIAN OPEN WITH A 282

N. Y. Times

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Aug. 19—Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., won the Canadian open golf championship and $1,000 today with a 72-hole total of 282. McSpaden finished five strokes ahead of his closest pursuer, Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N. J.

McSpaden won easily, not because of his own golf on the last two rounds today, when he took two three-over-par 73's, but because the contenders faltered with him. Unnoticed by the galleries Little Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond, Va., fired the last rounds in 71—69—140 to wind up with 289 and in fourth place behind Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N. J.

Ghezzi, who lost the $10,000 Dapper Dan tournament at Pittsburgh by one stroke last week, lost $600 second money to Guldahl by one stroke. Big Ralph finished with a 75, five over par, for 287, while Chezzi had 71 on the last eighteen for 288 and $400.

SETS PACE FROM START

McSpaden succeeded Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who did not compete because of a recent illness. He held the lead from the opening round, in which he shot a 67, and never lost ground in today's two rounds, although his game was erratic and he was scrambling all the time.

The Canadians, bidding for their first victory since 1914, were led by one of the country's outstanding amateurs, Sandy Somerville of London, Ont., and Stan Horne, young Montreal pro, who won $200 for fifth place and $200 more as top Canadian professional.

If the slight Horne could have continued his first-half pace in today's heat and pressure he would have tied for first. But he showed signs of the strain in the morning round of 72 and he blew to 78 as he traveled the last round with Guldahl before a gallery of 1,000.

GULDAHL FINISHED WITH 75

When McSpaden took 73 in the morning it appeared as if the field might overtake him. But one by one the few who had a chance blew their hopes. Guldahl, who started the day three strokes behind, also had a 73. The 489-yard fourth was Guldahl's nemesis, costing him seven strokes in each of the last two rounds.

McSpaden had a second 73 and Guldahl obligingly took 75.

Arthur Hulbert, Toronto pro who was tied with Horne for third after 36 holes, blew sky-high on the last rounds. He took 73 in the morning and an 83 on the final eighteen, winding up with 297, far back in the pack.

Back of Somerville and Horne at 292 came Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., with 70-77 on the last rounds; Bobby Burns and Lex Robson of Toronto, the former with 147—74—71, and Robson with 149—70-73, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., who lost his chance for a top place with a 78 on the final round.

The course proved itself the master of the field, yielding par to no one. McSpaden's 282 was two strokes over for four rounds, although he started the day four under.

Meiji Mermen Win Kanto Collegiate Meet

Scoring 94 points, Meiji University won the 18th annual Kanto Inter-collegiate 3-day Swimming championships (excluding the "big four" or Waseda, Keio, Rikkyo and Nihon Universities) Sunday at the Meiji Shrine pool. Tokyo Imperial University finished second with 54 points and Bunrika University third with 35 points.

Kusuo Kitamura of Tokyo Imperial University, who won the 1,500-meter championship at the 10th Olympic Games at Los Angeles in 1932 as a middle school student, was a favorite in the 400-meter freestyle but he finished third in 5 minutes 22 seconds. First was Minoru Adachi of Meiji University in 5 minute 11 seconds. Kono, also of Meiji, was second in 5 minutes 18 seconds.

Tsutomu Noda of Meiji was the star of the meet, hanging up two new meet records with victories in the 100 and 200 meter breaststroke in 1 minute 18 seconds and 2 minutes 48.6 seconds.

SHODAI WINS KANTO STUDENTS 8-OARED TITLE

Shodai (Tokyo University of Commerce) won the eight oared title in the 19th annual Kanto Inter-collegiate Rowing championships Sunday afternoon over a straight 2,000 meter course at Ogu by defeating Keio University's eight in the final by six feet. The time was 6 minutes 35 seconds. It was Shodai's second straight championship and its sixth victory.

Resorting to a 42.8 stroke as against a 41 by Keio at the bark of the gun, Shodai forged into the lead at the 500-meter distance by half a boat length. Keio spurted and the two shells were on even terms at the 1,200 meter mark but Shodai's smoother and greater pulling stroke carried it to victory by six feet. Both crews were employing a fast 42.8 beat at the finish.

The crews were:

Shodai: Shindo, stroke; Fujii No. 7; Ishihara, No. 6; Kishi No. 5; Saka No. 4; Hagio No. 3; Asaoka No. 2; Kadokita No. 1; Okamura, coxswain.

Keio: Kinui, stroke; Takeuchi No. 7; Iwatani No. 6; Koyama No. 5; Kyo No. 4; Iijima, No. 3; Hamatake No. 2; Yamada No. 1; Shibata, coxswain.

Shodai entered the finals by eliminating Tokyo Imperial by a boat length in 6 minutes 45 seconds. Keio defeated Waseda by six feet in 7 minutes 13 seconds.

Nihon Medical University won the four-oared title, vanquishing Meiji by three and a half boat lengths in the finals in 7 minute 26 seconds.

Keio won the pair-rowing title by a victory over Shodai by a foot in 8 minute 43 seconds.

JOE DIMAGGIO LEADS HITTING IN AMERICAN WITH HIGH MARK

Joe DiMaggio, sensational outfielder of the New York Yankees, seems almost a sure bet to win the individual batting honors of the American League in American major league baseball: As of averages up to and including August 18, he had a .395 mark, the result of 117 hits out of 298 times at bat in 78 games.

Backstop Padgett of the St. Louis Cardinals led the race in the National League with a .437 mark, the result of 55 hits out of 126 times at bat in 59 games.

The averages of the leaders follow:

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

INFIELDERS SOMETIMES ARE PITCHERS

NEW YORK—The success that has rewarded the pitching efforts of Bucky Walters, who started out in life to be an infielder, will probably induce several other big leaguers to give the experiment a whirl.

To the infielder or outfielder who finds the grade rather steep, and the drawbacks to success many, the experiment is apt to hold enticing possibilities. The pitching field is never crowded. There's always room for a fellow who can pitch—and the good ones earn the top salaries.

Two National Leaguers have already given serious thought to the idea, and have in fact made a bid for consideration.

A couple of weeks ago, when Boss Terry was so pressed for pitchers, infielder Johnny McCarthy, who has been a bench warmer and doesn't like it, pitched a couple of innings gainst the Pittsburgh Pirates, and at Cincinnati recently, the Phillies' Joe Marty tried his hand against the Reds.

PHILS NEED PITCHERS

Neither attempt permitted a definite decision, though both were closely watched. Marty, of course, will be encouraged by his manager "Doc" Prothro. The Phillies' need pitching assistance above all else, and as an outfielding hitter Marty has been a keen disappointment.

Yet the odds are all against both of the hopefuls, even though both possess exceptionally strong throwing arms. Apparently more than throwing strength is needed. Through the years the experiment has been tried from time to time, but Walters is the first to identify himself as a pitching star.

Only two others ever attracted real attention. Oddly enough both made the switch while members of the Boston Bees—Red Lucas and Bob Smith. They came into the league as second basemen, but both had had some minor league pitching experience, and so weren't in entirely strange surroundings on the mound.

LUCAS MADE GRADE

Lucas was a fairly good pitcher at Cincinnati for years, but is probably better remembered for his pinch-hitting ability than for his pitching prowess. Smith had an exceptional curve ball, and was an excellent relief pitcher with the Cubs and Bees for several years.

Walters' success of course is one of the sensational developments of recent seasons, and he's generally regarded now as the National League's top pitcher. As a third baseman with the Red Sox and Phillies he was only fair and it is doubtful whether he would have remained in the big league.

Jimmy Wilson, then the manager of the Phils and now a coach with Cincinnati, was the man who first visualized Walters' pitching possibilities. What other infielders condemned as a "heavy" ball, Wilson recognized as a natural pitching "sinker," and it was that delivery that gave him a start. Experience and study have allowed Bucky to develop a curve to go with it, but the "sinker," a fast, breaking pitch is still his best bet.

FORMER PITCHERS

The experiment in reverse, from the pitcher's box to the infield or outfield, has produced more generally satisfying results.

The name of Babe Ruth naturally comes first to mind. He was one of the best left-handed pitchers in baseball when Ed Barrow decided his home run bat would make him even more valuable as an everyday outfield player. The Babe was a natural ball player, who could do anything on the diamond, and do it well.

Smokey Joe Wood, a great fast ball pitcher and rival of Walter Johnson's, was another who made the switch to the outfield successfully. He was a good hitter, and when his arm failed him he found a niche for himself in the Cleveland outfield. Roger Bresnahan, one of the greatest catchers of all time, was also a pitcher before he found his proper place in the diamond scheme of things.

National Collegiate Swim Starts Friday

The national inter-collegiate swimming championships for 1939 will be held at the Meiji Shrine pool on the evenings of Friday, Saturday and Sunday next. Seen in action will be Japan's best mermen.

Shigeo Arai of Rikkyo University, national short distance freestyle champion, Tetsuo Hamuro of Nihon University, 1936 Olympic 200-meter breast-stroke champion, and Tomikatsu Amano also of Nihon University, world record holder in the 1,500 meter distance, are rarin' to go, and their performance will be watched with great interest.

YANKEES LEAD BY 18 GAMES BUT CARDS ARE 3 BEHIND REDS

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—While the Cincinnati Reds continued to maintain their lead in the National League, the New York Yankees by winning all of their seven games extended their margin of wins over the Boston Red Sox in the American Loop to 18 games, during the past week of play.

The St. Louis Cardinals in the American League won six and lost two of their scheduled games to hold down second spot, as the Chicago Cubs slumped badly winning only two and losing five, of their games.

In the National League, the Reds broke even last week when they won four and lost four of their scheduled games. They continued, however, to boast a three game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals who captured six of their eight games.

Team standings, including games played today, are as follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	96	38	.716
Boston	78	55	.586
Chicago	76	58	.567
Cleveland	72	61	.541
Detroit	70	63	.526
Washington	59	77	.434
Philadelphia	47	86	.353
St. Louis	36	96	.273

NATIONAL LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Cincinnati	78	50	.609
St. Louis	76	54	.585
Chicago	72	62	.537
Brooklyn	69	60	.535
New York	65	62	.512
Pittsburgh	59	71	.454
Boston	57	71	.445
Philadelphia	41	87	.320

GEHRIG'S LOSS BEING FELT

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—Forgetting the current American League pennant race for the moment and looking ahead into next year, the prediction can be made now as well as later that the domination of the New York Yankees over the rest of the circuit seems about to be broken and the Boston Red Sox, after all these years of frustration, look like the team to do it. Only now is the loss of Lou Gehrig being felt at its fullest by the Yankees, and one of the major problems confronting Manager Joe McCarthy centers around how he is going to fill the void left by Gehrig, not at first base, but at the plate.

While it is true that he hit only .295 last season and therefore was something less than a ball of fire as first basemen go, the fact remains that his .295 was many points higher than his successor, Babe Dahlgren, has been able to produce, and, moreover, Gehrig drove in 114 runs. Dahlgren would outfield Gehrig the best day the latter ever saw, but Gehrig wasn't exactly a slouch around the bag and at the plate was worth two Dahlgrens.

NO LONGER INVINCIBLE

Thus as the last of the holdover Yankees from the great teams of the Ruthian era is bade adieu, the club loses its aura of invincibility. The Yanks may win their fourth straight pennant this year, as everybody expects, and must be figured as the team to beat next year, but there will be no such unanimity of opinion in their behalf as there has been in the past. The Boston Red Sox have come uncomfortably close this season even without a pitching staff and the Chicago White Sox have made a surprisingly good showing after a slow start, with the result that they too could figure next year with addition of a little strengh.

With their great farm system, the Yankees undoubtedly will come up with a good first baseman next year. Not a Gehrig at the plate, perhaps, nor a Dahlgren around the sack, but a combination of the two will be able to plug up the team's one big gap. They could use another good pitcher, but will find him with less difficulty than they will experience in their quest of some one to pick up where Gehrig left off.

STURM A COMER

The front office is eying Johnny Sturm, of Kansas City, said to be the best first sacker in the minors, and will give him a tryout at St. Petersburg next Spring. Ed Levy at Oakland and Fred Collins at Birmingham also are frequently mentioned in the Yanks' plans for the future, and there also is some talk of their forgetting the minor leaguers entirely and going after a trade for an established player such as George McQuinn of the St. Louis Browns or Hal Trosky of the Cleveland Indians.

Anyhow, whatever they may do ultimately, they undoubtedly will get a race from the Red Sox next season. I've a sneaking notion that Owner Tom Yawkey of the Sox is going to unlimber that bankroll again this Winter, and come up with some reinforcements. He doesn't need much more than pitching strength, considering the kind of race the Sox have put on this season and this would be as good a time as any for him to make another elaborate stab at getting a pennant-winner.

The point is, he may do it.

FINNS FIRM ON STAGING 1940 GAMES

Domei Tsushin

ROME, Sept. 12—According to reports from Helsinki, the International Olympic Committee and the Olympic Organizing Committee have jointly issued a communique stating that they are determined not to renounce the 1940 Games, despite the European situation.

The communique is understood to state that the games will take place under any circumstances even if inevitably on a limited scale.

Editor's note: Reports are to the effect that a decision will be reached in the near future by the Finnish Olympic Organizing Committee whether or not to cancel the 1940 Games because of the new European war.

FINS 'DOLL UP' CAPITAL

By MERRILL MUELLER

HELSINKI, Finland—Helsinki, or Helsingfors, capital of one of Europe's youngest republics, is having its face lifted as all Finland prepares to welcome record thousands of tourists to the 1940 Olympics at the new stadia here July 20 to August 4.

From Helsinki outwards the waves of reconstruction sweep over the countryside to the sea and land boundaries as honorable Finland, only country to meet all American war debt payment, strives to improve her appearance and facilities for the critical hordes which will descend upon her next Summer.

FAST WORK

With the giant new track and field stadium as the central theme of the Olympic background to this "dolling up," the Finns have so advanced their work that even now, a year before the Olympics are to be held, many finished accomplishments were seen by this correspondent.

The giant theme stadium, its sports tower lordly lifting itself over Helsinki's skyline, is nearly completed. Together with the smaller stadia around it for the other events on the Summer program, such as boxing, swimming, etc., the theme center will have accommodations for about 100,000 spectators. But the city and countryside is preparing for many thousands more visitors than that and all sorts of hotel, camping and pension arrangements are being planned.

Chief problem on which Finland is working is the transportation facilities. Inconvenient from Western Europe, the connections with the New World, the fastest and best method of transportation to and from the scene of the 1940 Olympics will be the airlines.

Under the leadership of the Finnish Air Lines, Aero, all airline companies are rearranging and increasing scheduled service into Helsinki for next Summer so that its new and completely modern airport will service 120 landings and take-offs of giant airliners each day. Aero also will increase its European service with giant new four-engined liners now being purchased, using the older equipment for tourist flights within Finland and over the Olympics.

Railroad equipment will be entirely reconditioned with fast, new modern trains in frequent service to various ports of Sweden or the western part of the continent. Helsinki itself will be utilized by cruise steamers from America and other ports.

CITY REDESIGNED

In the capital city, with a population of 3,667,000 ten per cent of which are Swedish (hence the Swedish name, Helsingfors) work of reconstruction goes on around the sports center. It includes an entire redesigning of the modern section of the city which slightly over 25 years ago was a Russian city, and more than a century ago a Swedish city.

American tourists visiting the Olympics will like Finland since it is both lovely and cheap. The Finnish mark, valued at about two American cents, buys between five and ten cents worth of goods.

NEW EXERCISES INTRODUCED TO PUBLIC

At the outdoor music auditorium of Hibiya Park was demonstrated on Tuesday evening three sets of exercises established by the Welfare Ministry for the promotion of the nation's health. They are for the general public, for young men and for young women.

Keio Favored to Top Waseda in Tennis Play

The 32nd Keio versus Waseda dual tennis tournament will be held at the Waseda courts on Saturday and Sunday.

In compliance with the stand of the Education Ministry frowning upon week-day sports contests, in case of rain, the matches will be postponed to the next week-end.

Keio is a slight favorite to win.

Henry Cotton Looking Forward To Trip to U.S.

NEW YORK,—Henry Cotton, Captain of the British Ryder Cup Team, is awaiting with interest his trip to the United States for the forthcoming International Matches scheduled at Ponte Vedra Country Club, Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, November 18 and 19.

In a recent letter, Cotton said that the British Team would be selected about September first and that he anticipated that it would be the strongest group of British professionals to invade this country in the history of this competition.

The 1937 United States Ryder Cup Team was the first to win on foreign soil and the British will make a strong bid to win here next November. The United States is leading with four victories in the six matches played to date.

WILL DICKEY REGARDED AS MOST DANGEROUS HITTER OF YANKEES

By MORTON MOSS

NEW YORK—There are certain sterling citizens who suffer the comparative neglect of the populace because they do not possess the mystical quality of glamor. And among that melancholy community is Willowy Will Dickey, now scintillating through his 11th major league season behind the plate for the New York Yankees.

Although Willowy Will of the cherubic pan has been cast into the shadows by the stirring sagas of the DiMaggios, etc., to a good percentage of the Yankees' opposition he is regarded as the most dangerous belter on the Barrow Bombers. American League pitchers have shuddered when Dickey, armed with a club, strode plateward with sacks populated.

Al Simmons, who earned a reputation as a fearsome whacker before moving his belongings from A. L. to N. L. in his career's twilight, believes that Dickey has been the Yankees' most perilous paster for the last several years.

A quiet, subdued soul, Bill got into 10 games with the Yanks of 1928, but his job as regular catcher commenced the following year when the man-in-the-iron-masked through 130 games and bashed .324. His batting numbers since then have been .339 in 1930, .327 in 1931, .310 in 1931, .318 in 1933, .322 in 1934, .279 in 1935, .362 in 1936, .332 in 1937, .313 in 1938.

Dickey drove in 107 runs in 1936, 133 in 1937, 115 in 1938, and had pushed across 75 going into the second week of August of '39, along with 17 home runs and a knocking number comfortably over .300.

It is certain that Willowy Will, when he steps down into the dugout for the last out, will have solidified a rating alongside the five or six most ecstatic receivers in the history of baseball—the Klings, Bresnahans, Cochranes and Hartnetts.

A silent man who confines himself strictly to the business of William B. Dickey, the beanpole backstop has none of the headline-grabbing flair of most of his teammates. When they write about Dickey, they write about Dickey's accomplishments on the battlefield and not about his temperamental displays.

Well, almost always, anyway. For Bill moved out of his rut of routine perfection on July 4, 1932 when he suddenly went berserk and broke the jaw of Carl Reynolds, then with the Washington Senators. What was it that caused Willowy Will to bid farewell to calm and swing that savage righthander?

Reynolds charged into the plate and sent Bill sprawling in a manner that Bill considered unnecessarily rowdy. At the time, the Senators and Yanks were feuding and the beanpole backstop had been receiving a good going-over whenever a Senator lit out for the plate.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis banned Bill for a month and ticketed him with a $1,000 fine for his pugilistic endeavor.

But the incident was merely a spectacular freak of the Dickey nature. He has been plodding and pretty near perfect ever since.

German and Hungarian Teams Will Play Football Match

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, Sept. 13—The Government revealed today that at least 11 husky Nazis of military capacity will be spared from Germany's war on two fronts for the time being in order to participate in a battle of far more pacific intentions.

The 11 athletes, comprising a representative German football team, it was announced, will visit Budapest on Sunday, September 24, to play a game against a similar Hungarian aggregation there.

An invitation to sponsor the match had been sent by Hungary. Reich officials said Germany decided to accept it, despite the international situation, after "carefully studying the proposal."

COACH WOULD STREAMLINE TRACK MEETS

PHILADELPHIA — Present methods of conducting track and field events need overhauling to stimulate crowd appeal, in the opinion of Ben Ogden, track coach at Temple University.

Ogden points out that the scattered activity incident to a track meet is in contrast with the coordinated action of football and other athletic sports. So he has four suggestions by which, he thinks, track can become a greater drawing card. His plan:

1—Gain the undivided attention of spectators by making the track smaller. Ogden would shorten the standard 440-yard oval to 220 yards, provide a width of 40 feet and bank the turns sharply.

2—Limit the entries so that only the best man from each school would compete in a single race. Then, to give more boys a chance to compete, Ogden would follow the main event immediately with a four-man relay race over the same distance. The two men who ran in the dual meet would be barred from relay competition.

3—Cut down the number of tries in weight and field events to eliminate the boredom of watching countless pole vault or shot put attempts.

4—Change scoring by taking an average of distances made in track and field events. Allow high jumpers and pole vaulters nine tries and let the highest mark stand, but let the contestant put the bar where he wishes.

5—Restrict contestants to one event, thus eliminating delay necessary where one man is called to enter a second event while finishing another.

CARDINALS TOP PIRATES, 4-2

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 17—The red-hot Red Birds of St. Louis handed the Pirates their ninth consecutive defeat today, 4 to 2, as the Cardinals fought their way to their fourth straight victory and the sixteenth in their last eighteen starts.

Curt Davis was given sensational support by his center fielder, Terry Moore, and second baseman, Jimmy Brown, in winning his seventeenth victory of the year. In the last eight innings only twenty-seven Buccos faced him, Elbie Fletcher, the twenty-sixth, looping a homer into the right-field stands in the ninth, too late to do any farm.

TWO SCORE IN FIRST

The Cards virtually won the game before Mace Brown had warmed up in the first inning. Jimmy Brown got the first of his three singles with one out. Johnny Mize walked, and when Paul Waner fumbled Don Padgett's single the two runners scored.

Don Gutteridge's double and Davis' single gave the Cards the deciding run in the second and Jim Brown added their final one in the eighth, beating out an infield hit, moving to second on a sacrifice and counting on Mize's one-base blow.

Fern Bell scored the first Pittsburgh run in the first. He singled, moved up on an infield out and was sent home by Arky Vaughan's single.

SENSATIONAL CATCH BY MOORE

Thereafter Moore and Brown, who plays his position deeper than any second baseman since the days of the Old Rajah, Rogers Hornsby, scotched all attempts of the Pirates to get rolling. Once Moore caught a screaming liner off Rookie John Juelich's bat while sliding on the grass with his glove on the ground.

Modern Dogs Better Looking Than Ancestors

NEW YORK—The development of practically all pure-bred dogs during the past half century has been so marked that some of the modern specimens would not be recognized as of the same breed if they could step into the show ring with their ancestors. This may be seen in the illustrations found in the collection of old books and periodicals gathered in the library of the American Kennel Club, governing body of the sport in the United States.

Greater beauty is apparent in the majority of breeds, and there has been an intensification of distinctive characteristics. Gracefully proportioned heads and bodies found in so many of the modern breeds replace the squat, blocky lines of the past.

It is not surprising that dogs have improved in appearance in the past fifty years, for that is the period in which the whole world has turned its attention to scientific breeding. Before that, opinion as to what constituted quality had not been organized. Individuals bred dogs only to suit themselves.

A few years ago it was contended by a few critics of the purebred show specimen that increasing the beauty of the modern dog had impaired his intelligence. Fortunately, their claims have been ably refuted since obedience tests became popular. It is now acknowledged that the modern dog is just as intelligent as he is good looking.

Inter-American Olympics Proposed

Domei Tsushin

PORTLAND, Sept. 12—The Oregon Amateur Athletic Union today proposed that the 1940 Olympics be supplanted in the Western Hemisphere by an inter-American Olympics. They will submit their resolution to the headquarters of the N.A.A.U.

CAMPBELL'S 141.74 MILES AN HOUR CLIPS WORLD MOTORBOAT RECORD

N.Y. Herald Tribune

CONISTON, England, Aug. 19—Sir Malcolm Campbell slammed Bluebird II's blunt snout over the placid waters of Lake Coniston to a world motorboat record today, an achievement which brought man to the threshold of a new era in water speed.

The huge silver sled averaged 141.74 miles an hour on two trips over the measured mile, shattering Sir Malcolm's own record by 10.81 miles an hour. The engine was a seven-year-old Rolls Royce product, a fact that makes the wholesale pounding of miles into minutes even more remarkable.

She covered the southward run over the mile in 25.2 seconds and hit a top speed of 142.85 m. p. h., or 124.06 knots. Campbell swung her through a smooth semicircle, and back she came, this time in 25.6 seconds and 140.62 m. p. h., or 122.12 knots.

It was a businesslike performance.

POSITION OF INTAKE CHANGED

Mechanics, who had worked all night changing the position of the intake for the water cooler, had led her out to the start just after 7 a.m. An hour later Campbell swaggered through a crowd of wide-eyed yokels and was rowed out. He got in, a tiny white figure against the dull silver of the boat, and a moment later the motor thundered to life.

Far down the lake on the press boat you could hear Bluebird before you could see her. Then, as her song smashed the stillness of the lake John Ruskin loved, she came out of the mist and hugged the water: her nose catching the watery sunlight, a white fan of foam spreading out behind.

She went by in a moment, roared past the buoy that marked the end of the mile, circled and started homeward. Again she sliced past. Campbell's arms sawing the wheel as her hull took the slap of her own weight.

Five minutes later Sir Malcolm's son Donald came down the course in a motor boat, shouting "Dad's done it. He's broken the record," to waiting newspaper men.

CAMPBELL COMES ABOARD

Campbell, very tired came aboard later. He had, he thought, proven the adaptability of the three sled-hull design to high speed boats and stood "on the edge of greater speed than man had ever imagined."

"I could have had a devil of a lot more speed out of her, I'm sure," said Sir Malcolm, "but the engine was heating rapidly and I didn't like the idea of an explosion. Messy, You know."

Capt. Peter Du Cane, the British Admiralty designer, added that he thought the hull design applicable to flying boats and seaplanes and said the test had "proven without a doubt the greater safety of the design."

Bluebird II will be taken to Dagenham Monday and Campbell and Du Cane will record the results of their trial.

"Next year we may try her again with the other motor which is capable of 200 horsepower more," said Sir Malcolm " for the time we have enough to assimilate what we've learned this week."

LIKE INVERTED TORTOISE

Bluebird is like nothing so much as a big inverted tortoise. She is 28 feet long and 10 feet 6 inches wide. Her long hood, cockpit and wind screen resemble those of a racing car.

The engine is mounted in the tail immediately behind the driver. Her small propeller will reach 9,000 revolutions a minute when the engine is hitting top speed. She is a thirsty craft, too, drinking two gallons of gas a minute at top speed.

One of the most interesting features of the boat is her three-float system. Floats project from each side when she is riding at top speed, the bottom of the floats and the stern barely touching the water, she will skim the surface of the water.

For the safe of lightness, Sir Malcolm has dispensed with a clutch. Consequently the moment the engine is started the boat shoots off the mark. The gear, though it transmits terrific power, weights only 150 pounds. The whole craft weighs only 4,500 pounds.

U.S. TEAM SETS WORLD'S RECORD IN PARIS RELAY

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PARIS, Aug. 19—Uncle Sam's touring track and field stars added a world record to their string today as they cleaned up in an international meet at Jean Bouin Stadium.

A quartet composed of Roy Cochran, University of Indiana; Ralph Schwartzkopf, University of Michigan; Blaine Rideout, former North Texas State Teachers' College star, and Charlie Beetham, former Ohio State speedster, clipped six-tenths of a second off the world 3,200-meter relay mark as the invaders won every event in which they entered.

They went the distance in 7 minutes 35.2 seconds, compared to the former mark of 7:35.8 set by another touring American team on Aug. 15, 1936 in London after the Berlin Olympic games. That team was composed of Charles Hornbostel, Robert Young, Harry Williamson and Johnny Woodruff.

Joe Batiste, of Tuscon, Ariz., and Bill Watson, of the University of Michigan, each scored "doubles." Batiste won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 5 9-16 inches, and the 110-meter hurdles in 14.6 seconds. Watson won the hammer throw with a toss of 49 feet 5 22-32 inches, and the 100-meter dash in eleven seconds. He was entered in the broad jump but withdrew because he had spent himself in the two other events.

An American team of Batiste, Cochran, Erwin Miller, University of Southern California, and Clyde Jeffrey, San Francisco Olympic Club, captured the 400-meter relay in 41.2 seconds.

Jeffrey also won the main event—the Prix Dustade, a race of 183 meters. His time was 19.6 seconds.

George Varoff, San Francisco Olympic Club, injured his ankle slightly as he soared 13 feet 5 31-64 inches in winning the pole vault.

'40 OLYMPIC GAMES DROPPED BY FINLAND

Officials Say Nation Hopes to Stage International Sports Carnival Next Year

Domei Tsushin

HELSINGFORS, Sept. 14—The Finnish Olympic Committee, after spending months in active preparation, today decided to cancel definitely the 1940 Olympic Games in view of the far-reaching hostilities in Europe.

In informing the International Olympic Committee of its decision, the Committee, however, reserved its right to open the 12th Olympiad should a sudden improvement in the international situation make it possible.

Officials, commenting on their decision, indicated that Finland hopes to inaugurate an international sports carnival in 1940 which will be open to all nations.

SPORTS MINISTER

LONDON, Aug. 1—There is much talk in sporting circles about the possibility of the appointment, in the near future, of a British Government Minister of Sport. Such an innovation would bring Britain into line with the other leading European nations.

Those who support the idea regard the step as the logical outcome of Britain's poor showing in the Berlin Olympic Games—and the proximity of the Heisinki Olympics. Whether we like it or not, International sport has now become a powerful method of national propaganda. A nation's supremacy at sport is considered to be the best possible advertisement. To win has become a matter of national honor and prestige—to lose, an occasion for recrimination and shame. All of which, of course, is at variance with the spirit in which the Games were founded.

While no names for the post have as yet been mentioned, one man stands out among the possibles. I refer to Stanley Rous, Secretary of the F.A., who has performed such great work, not only for soccer but also on behalf of the National Fitness campaign. If he is appointed, he will have to coordinate all the chief sporting organizations in the country, so that, although their control would not be interfered with, they would have a Government official behind them to offer advice, give support, and to help with difficulties.

SUTCLIFFE'S 50,000 RUNS

When Herbert Sutcliffe registered his fifty thousandth run recently, he was the sixth batsman to accomplish the feat, and the only one still playing. The other five players were W. G. Grace, Hobbs, Woolley, Hendren, and Mead. Oddly enough, Sutcliffe reached this mammoth score in his thousandth innings in England. Of this total 4,555 runs have been scored abroad, and this is also the figure for all Tests.

In his twenty years of first class cricket, Sutcliffe has scored 3,420 in 53 innings in Australia, including twelve centuries, with an average of 65.76; 1,030 in South Africa in 23 innings, with two centuries and an average of 51.50; 24 in two innings in New Zealand; and 81 in four innings in Jamaica. His average in England is 51.60, and this season he is heading for his 2,000.

Meanwhile Wally Hammond is well on the way to a cricket record that may stand for many years to come. With Sutcliffe and Hendren he is one of three people who have scored 3,000 runs in a season three times; two of these scores were registered in 1937 and 1938. If, as seems highly probable, he scores 3,000 this season he will complete an amazing hat trick and also accomplish the feat more times than anyone else. Only thirteen people have reached three thousand runs in a season and it has been done 24 times. K. S. Ranjitsinhji was the first man to register the total, in 1899, when he scored 3,159 in 53 innings. He passed the 3,000 mark again the following season.

Sabin Defeats Quist In the U.S. Singles

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Sept.13—Wayne Sabin, of America, today defeated Adrian Quist, veteran Australian player, 11-9, 4-6, 8-6, 6-1, in the fourth round of the National Singles Championships being played here. Quarterfinal matches are scheduled to get underway tomorrow.

Although the Australian players were previously ordered to return home at once, it is understood that they have now been permitted to participate in tournaments in the United States until October 8, for their brilliant showing in winning the Davis Cup Championships.

Holland Captures Midget Auto Title

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK Aug. 16—Bill Holland of New Rochelle annexed the Atlantic State championship last night when he won the seventy-five lap event that featured the midget auto races at the Castle Hill Speedway, the Bronx. A gathering of more than 10,000 saw the racing.

The Westchester driver, who was clocked in 20:14.11 for the distance, beat Bill Holmes of Yonkers and Henry Banks of Detroit across the finish line. Sixteen cars started in the championship event, which was waged at a thrilling pace throughout.

For the most part the race was among Holland, Holmes and Banks, who took turns setting the pace. The finish was extremely close, with Holland just managing to defeat Holmes. Four times during the race Banks swung wide to go in front, but Holland regained the pace-setter's post on each occasion.

A mishap occurred during the fourteenth lap when the machine driven by Frank Bailey of New Brunswick became entangled with two other cars and turned over. Bailey suffered only slight track burns.

The entanglement was brought about when the car of Babe Bower of Philadelphia spun and slid across the track and Bailey attempted to avoid crashing with Bower. The latter won the national midget championship at the Roosevelt Raceway last Saturday.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST TENNIS PLAYERS CLIMBING UPWARDS

Christian Science Monitor

SEATTLE—For the first time in history, the Pacific Northwest is due to make a good showing in the "First Ten" of tennis. This fact becomes apparent as three Northwest netsters, Elwood Cooke and Wayne Sabin of Portland, and Henry Prusoff of Seattle, roll-up victories over the leading players in the game.

In the past years, for the Northwest to have even one representative among the big names of tennis, was considered great local pride. In 1935, when Prusoff defeated Bitsy Grant and some other ranking stars to gain the No. 13 rating in the National standings, Seattle folks thought it was something worthwhile.

Then in 1937 Sabin put the Rose City in the headlines as he gained No. 6 ranking. Last year, it was Elwood Cooke who retained the meager Northwest showing with a No. 7 rating. But now in 1939, with only the Newport and National Singles remaining of the grass court loop it appears that all three of these players have excellent opportunity to crash the Big Ten of tennis.

The biggest surprise is Prusoff, making a comeback after three years' absence from Eastern play. The rangy, powerful Seattle player has shown remarkable improvement, and in his last two tournaments toppled two of the Davis Cup squad, Grant and Don McNeill. Other important victories accredited to Prusoff this year have been scored over Bob Kamrath, Marvin Wachman, Bill Murphy, and Roland Lubin.

NOT A STYLIST

Prusoff is not a stylist, but he has a well-adapted game that he knows how to use. His powerful first service is one of the most accurate in tennis today. Although his ground strokes are not forcing, he has a deceptive chop which he mixes with a top-spin forehand for effective baseline play. In his match against McNeill, he showed a good net game and a tricky drop shot. His style of play works especially well against some of the boys who are accustomed to playing against hard-driving from the baseline.

Cooke and Sabin have yet to earn their positions in the first ten, but both seem capable of doing so. Cooke's best play of the year was in England, where he included Bunny Austin and Henner Henkel in his upset list before bowing to Bobby Riggs in a five-set final at Wimbledon.

Since returning from England Cooke has not fared so well in the Seabright, Southampton and Rye tournaments, but his play has been good enough for him to be selected on Walter Pate's seven-man Davis Cup squad.

Cooke is an example of a youth who was not bestowed with the necessities of a top-ranking tennis player, but is getting there through a willingness to work. With no outstanding strokes, he has practiced until his steadiness becomes a winning factor. The best players, Riggs, Parker, etc., must be playing their best game to defeat Cooke, who is always reliable. Should he develop more variety to his game, he may go much further.

ENVIABLE RECORD

Sabin compiled an enviable record during the past Winter, when he won some 14 out of 17 tournaments. Rated as one of the leading doubles players in the country, Sabin's cat-like agility and sound stroking have carried him to the top. He has all the strokes necessary to a champion, but so far has not produced the mental perspective that accompanies a champion's physical equipment.

Sabin and Cooke learned their tennis on the public courts of Portland, but it was not until they had left Portland for the year-round play of California and Florida that they became big names in tennis.

Prusoff, however, learned all his tennis at home, where he represents the Seattle Tennis Club.

While the favored sons battle in the East, the local boys have not fared so well in their own tournaments. Once again, the touring Californians have monopolized the Northwest circuit.

The Northwest loop started off in good order when Seattle's veteran Mel Dranga defeated California's 19-year-old Phil Harmon to win the Oregon State men's singles title. But from then until the Western Canadian tournament at Vancouver when Australian Davis Cuppers John Bromwich and Harry Hopman were finalists, the Californians took over the tournament after the semifinals.

One bright spot occurred in boys' play, when James Brink of Seattle won the Oregon State, Pacific Northwest, and Washington State boys' tournaments. Brink, a 14-year-old six-footer, is a lefthander with a well-developed game. Seattle cannot lay full claim to Brink, though, for he gained his early tennis experience in Southern California.

COBB PREDICTS RECORD OF 400 MILES AN HOUR

N.Y. Herald Tribune

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah, Aug. 19—A coming speed of 400 miles per hour in an automobile was predicted today by John Cobb, of England.

The jovial Englishman expressed belief it could be accomplished with the ultra-streamlined machine he brought here for assaults on the world's record, or one of similar design.

However, the London fur broker emphasized his main purpose at present is to crack the existing record of 357.5 miles per hour, set on the thirteen-mile salt-bed track last September by Capt. George E. T. Eyston, a fellow countryman.

"Of course in a couple of years time with the more powerful motors and refinements Mr. Railton (Reid Railton, English designer of Cobb's car) will probably be able to perfect, and improved tires it will be perfectly feasible to make a car go 400 miles and hour," Cobb added.

"My car is perfectly capable of being improved up to the requirements and there is no fundamental reason why it should not be made to travel that fast.

"It is the best streamlined shape that can be constructed under existing conditions."

His "Railton Red Lion" speedster is only 4 feet 6 inches high, inclosing all mechanism as well as the wheels beneath its turtle-shaped cover.

"It is half the horsepower (2,600) and half the weight (approximately 7,000 pounds) of Eyston's machine," observed Cobb.

Its sliptream construction forces the air to flow up and over the car, exerting a downward pressure to hold it on the track at terrific speeds.

Whereas Eyston's ponderous "Thunderbolt" depended upon weight to keep it on the ground, thus necessitating more powerful motors, the Railton has demonstrated this is not needed, contends Cobb.

REDS SMASH CUBS, 7-6 IN TENTH

N.Y. Times

CINCINNATI, Aug. 17—For the second time this week the Reds smashed from behind to win a ball game in the old Merriwell manner, dowing the Cubs, 7 to 6, in the tenth inning after spotting the Chicagoans four runs at the start. Rookie Dick West pinch-singled Eddie Joost in with the winning run.

The hair-raising victory protected the Reds' six-game lead over the Cards, who downed Pittsburgh today, and set off another mad dance of 26,669 fans after the last night game of the year here.

As in their uphill struggle Monday night against the Pirates, the Reds used pitchers and pinch-hitters freely and young West, the last of them, came through with the bases full and none out in the tenth.

Joost, substitute for the injured Lonnie Frey, hit hard all night and opened the tenth with a triple. Jack Russell and the Cubs' high command elected to pass Ival Goodman and Frank McCormick to fill the bases and West came up for Whitey Moore, the winning pitcher, who turned up high in the batting order as a result of the many fill-ins.

Ernie Lombardi started old Charlie Root to the showers in the ninth. Charlie had been pitching crafty ball since relieving Vance Page in the fifth and the Reds wasted many hits. But with the Cubs leading, 6 to 5, Ernie lined a double to center. Lew Riggs ran for him and came in with the tying run on Wally Berger's single. The Reds then filled the bases but a force play ended the inning.

Hank Leiber's twelfth homer of the year was the climax of the Cubs early explosion.

The attendance brought the total for the seven Cincinnati night games to 184,854, an average of 26,422 a game.

FOR SHRINE GAME PARTICIPANTS

Participants in the Tenth Meiji Shrine Athletic Meet, to be held this Fall under the auspices of the Welfare Ministry, will each receive a medal as photographed above. Designed by Jitsuzo Hinako, veteran sculptor, it represents an ancient Japanese warrior, a watch-fire and the sun just leaving the horizon which symbolizes the Dawn of New Asia. Metal used is alnite.

FOXX LIKELY TO ECLIPSE GEHRIG'S MARK

BOSTON—Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees, his active career short-circuited by illness, now faces the added disappointment of losing his lofty seat on the baseball sock exchange.

While Babe Ruth's major league collection of 714 home runs is conceded to be as safe as a bomb shelter, Gehrig's accumulation of 494 circuit clouts no longer seems ample enough to insure him place position.

Jimmy Foxx, leading cannoneer of the Boston Red Sox, seems destined to drape himself in the regal raiment of the crown prince of paste.

Foxx now needs fewer than 40 homers to amble past Gehrig. He expects to pluck the necessary pokes before the end of next season. As a matter of mathematical diversion it could even be argued that he may yet better Ruth's mark, a contingency which is as remote as a demoted cop's beat.

Foxx, still in his budding 30's, despite 13 seasons in major league livery, expects to enjoy five or six more good years before he needs a change of oil and a new paint job. Jimmy, although suffering from seasonal sieges of sinus and occasional fractures of minor fibula, is still going strongly. But it would still require an average of more than 40 homers a season for the next six years to bring him up to the skyscraping Ruthian level.

Strong supporter of Foxx' claim to baseball eminence is Luke Sewell, veteran catcher of the Chicago White Sox.

Comparing Foxx and Gehrig Sewell, now serving his 19th season in the American League, said:

"Gehrig has certainly been an exceptional player but I think he has been over rated. I think you have a fellow on the Red Sox—Jimmy Foxx—who is ahead of Gehrig as a first baseman. The short fence in Yankee stadium made Gehrig a home run hitter. He didn't have such terrific power even though he was a fine hitter. It is harder to hit a home run over the left field wall at Fenway than it is to put one into the bleachers at Yankee Stadium."

Japan A.A.A. Ends Plans for 1940 Olympic Games

Receiving the reports that the Helsinki Olympics Organizing Committee has suspended all preparations for the 1940 Olympic games, the Amateur Athletic Association of Japan at the meeting of its directors on Friday decided to abandon also the preparations for Japan's participation in the next Olympics and the Winter Olympic Games scheduled for next year.

The Association will report its official decision regarding the matter to the Welfare Ministry on a proper occasion in the near future.

The directors also discussed the measures to keep the Japanese athletes on an international level in view of the fact that the current European conflict temporarily suspends all international athletic activities.

GEORGIA LOOKS FOR IMPROVED FOOTBALL TEAM

Christian Science Monitor

ATHENS, Ga.—Georgia grid fans can look for an improved team this year but whether it will be good enough to master a tough 11-game schedule is a matter of grave concern.

"We'll be improved, certainly," Head Coach Wallace Butts declared here today, "but our record may not be as good as that of last year when Georgia won five, lost four and tied one."

Coach Butts has already sent orders to approximately 50 boys to be on hand by Sept. 1, when practice gets under way. They are due in Athens on Aug. 30 so that physical examinations can be completed before regular "two-a-day" workouts start.

SERVING EITHER WAY

"It's possible," said the former Mercer star serving his first year as head coach here, "that we can have a very good year but on the other hand its possible for the season to be disastrous.

"In Holy Cross, Kentucky, New York University, Florida, South Carolina, Auburn, Georgia Tech and Miami we have eight of the strongest teams in their respective sections, and if the Citadel and Mercer are as tough as they were last year both will have good chances to win. We play Furman in Greenville, and it has always been tough sledding for Georgia in the Purple Hurricane's backyard."

FOUR SOPHOMORES

Turning to his own grid candidates, Coach Butts disclosed that he is counting heavily on at least four sophomores, Green Keltner, an end; Tom Green, tackle; Tommy Witt and Steve Hughes, centers; and Steve Hughes, centers; and Cliff Kimsey, a halfback. All will be regulars unless injuries hold them back.

"We are counting on Keltner, Alex McCaskill and Tommy Malone as our left ends, but it might be that we will have to shift Malone to right end to bolster that position, where, right now, James Skipworth, John Stegeman and Knox Eldredge are the leading candidates.

TACKLE POSTS

"Lee Mckinney, Charley Williams and James Posey are the left tackles and Albert DeCharleroy, Tommy Green and Herbert Burgess loom as the only right tackles who will do us any good.

"At left guard we have Winston Hodgson, who may not be able to play due to a bad knee, and two sophomores, Winfred Goodman and M. F. Carter, both transferred from other positions.

GOOD BACKS

"Lack of experience is our biggest worry at center, where Tommy Witt, Steve Hughes and Charley Selby are the leading candidates. Witt is awfully small, Hughes was shifted from tackle last Spring and Selby is a converted fulback who has never fully caught on to center play.

"We are pretty well fixed in the backfield, with Jim Fordham at fullback; Kimsey at left half and Capt. Vassa Cate at right half.

"But who's going to play blocking back, I don't know. Paul Kluk, a sophomore, has the size and speed. If he makes up his mind, he'll just about win the post. Bob Salisbury was a regular last year at the position, but he missed all of Spring practice due to classwork and he's much too slow to play the position. Other prospects are Woodrow Brown, an in and outer, and Bob Nowell, whose lack of speed will keep him from being a fine football player."

'KEY PLAYERS'

Coach Butts declared Georgia's success hinges on a few "key players."

There is no capable substitute for Kimsey at the tailback post, nor for Jimmy Fordham at fullback. Earl Hise has been shifted to wingback to help Captain Cate and if he should fail to be eligible—there's a chance he won't be—or get hurt, there's no one to relieve Vassa.

"If we get the break we can make it interesting for the boys on our schedule," Coach Butts murmured, "but if we don't, it's liable to be bad for Georgia."

AUSTRALIANS STOP YOUNG COAST STARS

By ALLISON DANZIG

N.Y. Times

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 15—A pair of 18-year-old stalwart Californians went on the stadium courts to face the recognized No. 1 team of the world today in the national tennis doubles championships at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Jack Kramer and Welby Van Horn were the names of the stripplings, and it is a pretty good guess that Adrian Quist and John Bromwich have set them down in their future book among the players they will have to reckon with in the competition for the Davis Cup.

The Australians won the match at 6—1, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4 and in so doing furnished additional evidence of the formidable challenge they are prepared to offer for the cup this year, but the youthful Californians showed enough, after a shaky start, to warrant the hope that a year or two hence the United States will have another Vines and another Budge to stand together.

Quist, the best man on the court, and the ambidextrous Bromwich were in no mood to trifle. They went out with the idea of getting the most out of the match in preparation for their meeting here with Yugoslavia, and for the first set they played the youngsters off their feet, attacking so fiercely as to give them no chance to collect their riddled forces.

Quist, who looks right now as the most dangerous of the Australians, was hitting with cunning and speed from the back of the court and closing in to outvolley the opposition, while Bromwich was doing deadly execution with his two-handed strokes both off the ground and at the net. Their teamwork was so smooth, their tactics so smart and their control so unshakeable that the Californians were pretty much at sea and could not get their power under control.

With the second set, Kramer and Van Horn settled down and the Australians found themselves in a fight that had the gallery roaring. The great hitting power of the Californians asserted itself in their serving, smashing and driving, and they showed that they had the lobs and the fast-dropping strokes to dislodge their opponents at the net.

Bromwich wavered under the pressure, becoming irritated over his mistakes, and Quist fell off a bit, too, particularly in his return of Van Horn's twisting service from the alley. Gaining in confidence and smashing with gusto, the Californians broke through Bromwich in the fifth game, refused to give up their advantage and shook hands with each other as Kramer served a love game for the set.

CROWD CHEERS YOUNG STARS

The enthusiasm of the crowd mounted as the youngsters broke through Bromwich for a 2—1 lead and again through Quist with their returns of service for 3—2 after Kramer had lost his game. At this stage it looked like an even match, with Van Horn excelling in his clever short shots into the alleys and Kramer murdering lobs. But at this point Quist and Bromwich regained control of the situation and the youngsters, pressing a little too hard, began to miss their volleys and to lose length on their loss.

Quist and Bromwich took four games in a row for the set and after the rest period they effected a break immediately through Van Horn to start the fourth, the only one of the final set. The Californians came within a point of reaching 4—all on Bromwich's service and when they missed this chance the end was at hand.

Another pair of youthful Californians gave a brilliant account of themselves when Robert Peacock and Douglas Imhoff defeated Jacques Brugnon and Bernard Destremeau of France, 6—4, 6—2, 6—3.

For one set the French put up a strong fight, with Brugnon hitting smartly from the forehand and Destremeau giving him able support. After that they began to wilt under the jolting power of the hardhitting Californians.

CRAWFORD-HOPMAN WIN

Robert Riggs and Elwood Cooke, Wimbledon champions, played two rounds to reach the quarter-finals without the loss of a set. The other teams to gain this round were Frank Parker and Donald McNeill, Gene Mako and Jack Tidball, Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman of Australia, Charles Hare of Great Britain and Ladislav Hecht of Prague and Russell Bobbitt and Frank Guernsey.

Mako and Tidball now are bracketed with Quist and Bromwich. The meeting between these teams on Thursday will be of particular interest to the United States Davis Cup Committee.

Riggs Defeats Hopman In National Singles

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Sept. 14—Robert Riggs, top-ranking American tennis star, today advanced into the semifinal rounds of the National Singles Championships today, when he defeated Harry Hopman, of Australia, in straight sets, 6-1, 10-8, 6-3.

In the women's division, Miss Alice Marble, leading American woman player, won a strongly-contested match from Miss Mary Hardwick, of of Australia, in straight sets, England, 6-3, 6-8, 6-2, while Miss Wolfenden, of England, downed Miss Dorothy Bundy, of the United States, 2-6, 6-1, 6-1.

NEW JAPAN RECORDS SET AT SWIM MEET

2 Best World Times for This Year Made at Meiji Jingu Pool Sunday

Two new Japan records and two best world times for 1939 were established at the final day of the 18th Japan Inter-College Swimming Meet held at the Meiji Jingu Pool Sunday afternoon.

In the three-day meeting which opened Friday afternoon with diving contests, six new Japan records, three best world times for 1939, seven new and one tie in the marks of the Japan Inter-College Swimming meet were established proving that such mermen as Arai, Miyamoto, Hamuro, Kojima, Takahashi and Yoshida who were active in the 1936 Olympiad in Berlin are still as good as they have ever been.

At the Sunday meeting, Shigeo Arai, of St. Paul's University, established the best world time for 1939 in the 100 meter event covering the distance in 57.8 seconds, while Tomikatsu Amano, of Nippon University, also succeeded in making the best world time registered this year in the 800-meter event which he covered in 10 minutes and one second.

Tetsuo Hamuro, winner of the 200-meter breast stroke event at the Berlin Olympic Games and captain of the Nippon University squad, established a new Japanese record in the 100-meter breast stroke and a new record of the Inter-College Meet in the 200-meter breast stroke events.

A new record in the 50-meter back stroke event was made by Yasuhiko Kojima, of the Keio University, who succeeded in covering the distance in 30.6 seconds. Koji Miyazaki of the same university who astonished the world at the Los Angeles Olympic Games covered 50 meters in 26.6 seconds in the free style event. The winners and their times in various events which took place Sunday are as follow:

50-meter free style: Koji Miyazaki, Keio, (26.6 seconds).

100-meter free style: Shigeo Arai, St. Paul's, (57.8 seconds), the best 1939 world time.

200-meter free style: Shigeo Arai, St. Paul's, (2 minutes and 10.6 seconds).

400-meter free style: Tomikatsu Amano, Nippon, (4 minutes and 48 seconds).

800-meter free style: Tomikatsu Amano, Nippon, (10 minutes and 01.6 seconds), the best 1939 world time.

50-meter back stroke: Yasuhiko Kojima, Keio, (30.6 seconds), new Japan record.

100-meter back stroke: Yasuhiko Kojima, Keio, (one minutes and 08.2 seconds).

100-meter breast stroke: Tetsuo Kojima, Keio, (one minute and 12.8 seconds), new Japan record.

200-meter breast stroke: Tetsuo Hamuro, Nippon, (one minute and 42.6 seconds).

200-meter relay: St. Paul's University team, comprising Arai, Osaki, Sakamoto and Honda, (one minute and 48 seconds).

The championship of the 18th meet was won by Nippon University, followed by Waseda, Keio, St. Paul's, Meiji and Kwansei Gakuin Universities in the order named.

Yankees Clinch Pennant; World Series Oct. 4

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—The World Champion New York Yankees today clinched for the fourth successive time the American League Pennant by whipping the Boston Red Sox in today's game.

The Yankees who have led the junior loop throughout the season, piled up to date a total of 98 wins against 41 losses. Their nearest rivals, the Red Sox, have won 81 and lost 58. Each club has fifteen more games left to play. Even should the Red Sox win all their games and the Yankees lose theirs, the latter still would be ahead.

It was announced that the World Series will begin at the Yankee Stadium on October 4.

In the senior loop, the Cincinnati Reds still continued to lead by three and a half games. The Reds have won to date 84 games and have lost 51. The St. Louis Cardinals have won 81 and dropped 55.

VAN HORN, RIGGS TO PLAY FOREST HILLS FINALS

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Sept. 18—Nineteen-year old Webly Van Horn, Los Angeles sensation, and the veteran Robert L. Riggs, America's premier player since the retirement of Donald J. Budge from amateur ranks, will meet in the men's finals of the National Singles Championships being played here.

Providing an all-American finish to the United States' No. 1 tennis classic, Miss Alice Marble, Wimbledon champion, will meet the veteran Helen Jacobs in the singles finals of the women's division.

Van Horn, whose continued successes have been the talk of the tennis world, repeated the trick he turned on Wayne Sabin yesterday by taking three sets in a row after dropping the first two from John Bromwich, Australian star who is considered one of the most powerful players in the world.

The American youngster, whom critics had completely overlooked, sailed into the limelight yesterday when he beat Sabin. Even then, the critics predicted that he would be easily beaten by the more seasoned Bromwich.

The prediction of the critics seemed likely to come true as Bromwich had little difficulty in taking the first two sets, 2-6, 4-6.

Van Horn struck his stride and by superior stroking and better court strategy, evened the count at two sets all. Bromwich tried desperately to score the necessary winning point, but the youthful American beat him to it. The final scores were 2-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 8-6.

Riggs, on the other hand, had little difficulty in defeating Joe Hunt in four sets, 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

In the women's division, Miss Marble dropped only one game in whipping Miss Wolfenden of England, 6-0, 6-1. Miss Jacobs swept through Miss Katherine Stammers of England, 7-5, 6-0.

Yasuhiko Kojima is about to set a new record in the 50-meter backstroke event at the Meiji Jingu Pool Sunday. On the same day (lower photo), a glider meet was held at Tamagawa when Kikuji Awa, 22, died when his craft suddenly crashed.

Young Student Pilot Loses Life in Crash At Glider Exhibition

Grim tragedy marred the exhibition glider flights held Sunday by students of eight middle schools in Tokyo at the Tamagawa Glider Field in Kami Maruko.

Kikuji Awa, 22, a first class glider pilot, was almost instantly killed when a strong gust of wind struck his craft just as he was maneuvering for a landing, causing the glider to crash to the ground before the eyes of hundreds of horrified spectators.

The exhibition which was under the auspices of the Imperial Aviation Association, this year emphasized the importance of glider training as the first step toward development of reserve airplane pilots. It was hoped that the exhibit given by students would create a greater public interest in the sport that is now highly popular in America and Europe.

KEIO WINS NOD OVER RIKKYO

Unleashing an eight-hit attack, including a triple and a double, Keio University downed Rikkyo (St. Paul's), 2 to 1, in a close wind-up at the Meiji Shrine stadium on Sunday afternoon.

In the second game of the day, Meiji University seemed assured of sweet revenge over Waseda for the defeat of the day before when they registered four runs in the third inning by virtue of one triple and four singles, but Waseda, concentrating on a fierce attack in the seventh inning blighted their hopes by coming out on the long end of the score, 5-4.

The Tokyo Imperial (Teidai) opened the day with Hosei locked horns for nine innings with neither side able to better the 2-2 deadlock and the game was called a draw at the end of the ninth to make way for the second tilt.

As the results of the games which took place over the week-end, Waseda remains the only undefeated team in the Tokyo Six University League. Standings follow:

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Waseda	6	5	0	1	.916
Keio	7	5	1	1	.786
Hosei	8	4	3	1	.563
Rikkyo	7	2	4	1	.357
Meiji	6	1	4	1	.250
Teidai	8	4	5	3	.188

LOUIS-PASTOR BOUT AWAITED

DETROIT—Anything can happen in a horse race—or in boxing—and it may be that the customers who put out from $2 to $27.50 to watch Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis fight young Bob Pastor September 20 will get more action for their money than any ring crowd in 25 years.

The championship fight, Detroit's first by the way, is scheduled for 20 rounds, the first title go of this length to be arranged since Jack Dempsey won the title from big Jess Williard at Toledo in 1919. That fight ended at the close of the third round so the 20 round feature was no bargain.

The last heavyweight championship to last more than 15 rounds was the bout at Havana on April 5, 1915, in which Willard lifted the title from Jack Johnson by a knockout in the 26th.

THEY AREN'T WORRIED

Both Louis and Pastor are unimpressed by the 20-round phase.

"I don't care if its 20 rounds or 50 because I'll set my own limit this time," says Joe, who is still peeved because Pastor stayed the full 10 rounds with him on January 27, 1937.

"I'm in shape all the time and although I've never gone 20 rounds I know that I can," says Pastor, who isn't visibly afraid of the champion.

Pastor may be like the proverbial gent who whistled in the graveyard but he talks a great fight and his reasoning does not sound illogical.

First, Pastor points to the fact that when he met Louis the first time he had engaged in only 23 fights and was appearing in only his third 10 round engagement.

"I have fought many 10 rounders since that fight," says Pastor.

Bob also points to his inexperience in 1937 and claims to have improved "100 per cent."

Also, Pastor will carry more weight into the ring this time. In his first bout with Louis the ex-New York University footballer weighed 179 pounds. His fighting weight now is around 190, which means he will be outweighed by not more than 10 or 11 pounds.

"In that first fight Joe hit me solidly four times and I took the punches in good shape," Pastor says. "That's more than most of Louis' opponents have been able to do and a majority of them were groggy after one punch."

Pastor has gone to Saratoga, N.Y., to do his preliminary training. He will appear at a Michigan camp around August 20. Louis is following custom and is at his camp near Detroit.

Meanwhile, plans for converting Briggs Stadium, the home of the Detroit Tigers, into a boxing arena have been completed by Lionel Levy, architect for Promotor Michael Strauss Jacobs. The park will seat 80,000 for the fight.

PIMLICO'S MEETING OPENS NOVEMBER 1

BALTIMORE, Maryland—Pimlico's Autumn Meeting this year opens on November 1, and as has been the case in the past two years, a stake event will be provided on the program every day. Thirteen stake events, including the Pimlico Special, or a revival of the Pimlico Cup, will be decided at the meeting.

Topping the list of added money features is the Pimlico Futurity, grossing approximately $40,000. This year's race will be the 17th running of the two-year-old classic which started Challedon on his way as a thoroughbred. Equipoise was said to have run his best race in winning the Futurity of 1930 at Pimlico. Nedayr was the victor in 1937.

The Bowie Handicap for 3-year-old, and over a distance of a mile and five-eighths, heads the list of remaining attractions and will carry $10,000 in added money. The Riggs Handicap for the same horses, but decided at a mile and three-sixteenths, will have $10,000 added.

No dates have yet been set for the stakes events.

1940 Canadian Amateur Goes to Edmonton

MONTREAL—The Royal Canadian Golf Association has decided that the 1940 Canadian Amateur Championship will be played at the Mayfair Golf and Country Club, Edmonton, Alberta.

It was also decided that the 1940 Canadian Open Tournament will be held at a club in the Toronto district.

RIGGS TAKES U.S. NATIONAL SINGLES TITLE

Domei Tsushin

FOREST HILLS, Sept. 17—Robert L. Riggs, America's top-ranking amateur player and No. 1 man of the United States Davis Cup team, today convincingly trounced Wesley Van Horn, 19-year-old Los Angeles sensation, to win the 1939 National Singles crown.

Playing clever game Riggs, outmaneuvered and outplayed his younger opponent, capitalizing on the latter's inexperience. He won by scores of 6-4, 6-2 and 6-4.

Miss Alice Marble, outstanding woman star, meanwhile captured the National Singles title in the women's division this afternoon, when she defeated Miss Helen Jacobs in the finals, winning 6-0, 18-10, 6-4.

CHICAGO STAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—The California monopoly in the National public parks tennis championships is broken.

The mid-west holds the men's singles title and the south, the women's crown, for the first time in the tournament's 17-year history.

Seymour Greenberg, 19-year-old Chicago netman, is the new men's champion and Marta Barnett of Miami, Fla., the women's "queen." Greenberg outlasted Leonard Hartman of New York 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 and Miss Barnett swept through Mrs. Marjorie Blair of Santa Ana, Calif., 6-2, 6-1, yesterday in the finals.

Miss Barnett, the tourney's "big surprise," teamed with another Miamian, Mrs. Catharine Sample, to take the doubles championship. The mixed doubles went to Helen Germaine and Jesse Greenberg of New York, who downed Walter and Marjorie Blair of Santa Ana, Calif., 6-0, 7-5.

In fact, California managed to salvage just one title. Willis Anderson, the unsuccessful singles champion and Julius Heldman, who had been slated to succeed him, trounced Irving Gurman and Max Bloomfield of Detroit, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, to take the men's doubles crown to Los Angeles.

MEIJI SHRINE MEET PLANNED

The Tenth Summer Meiji Shrine National Athletic Meet will be opened with a ceremony at the Meiji Shrine Pool at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, September 21, to continue through Sunday, September 24. The annual event is sponsored by the Welfare Ministry.

The program will be as follows:

(1) SWIMMING

Sept. 21, 2 p.m. Preliminaries for young men's associations and for primary school teachers.

Sept. 22, 1 p.m. Finals for young men's associations and primary school teachers. Preliminaries for girls' high schools.

Sept. 23, 10 a.m. Finals for girls' high schools. Preliminaries for business associations and middle schools. Japanese swimming demonstrations.

Sept. 24, 10 a.m. Finals for business associations, middle schools and naval bases. Relay races for colleges, water polo. Diving contest for colleges. Closing ceremony at 5:15 p.m.

(2) YACHT RACES (at the temporary yacht-harbor at Kominato, Yokohama).

Start at 9 a.m. on Sept. 23 and 24.

THE FORM OF A CHAMPION

DETROIT, Michigan—Beautiful form is displayed by Earl Patnick, of Ohio State, who is shown at the national swim meet in Detroit as he retained his 10-foot diving championship.

MINNEAPOLIS GIRL MEDALIST WINS WITH RECORD-BREAKING 74

DARIEN, Conn., Aug. 22—Beatrice Barrett, a good-looking brunette from Minneapolis, played 18 holes of brilliant golf over the long and hazardous Wee Burn Club course yesterday to win the qualifying medal in the 43rd Women's national golf championship with a record-breaking score of 74.

One under women's par and only two over men's par for a course that has been stretched to the limit, the 22-year-old Mid-Westerner was two shots better than any other medalist in the tournament's history. Enid Wilson came over from England to lead the field at Exmoor in 1933 with a 76, and that was the best until Miss Barrett walloped her way around yesterday.

NEXT TO PATTY BERG

Miss Barrett has been a fine golfer for several years. She was a semi-finalist her first time out, in 1934; a quarter-finalist the next year, and won the western women's open title last year, but generally she has had to play second fiddle to her Minneapolis neighbor, Patty Berg.

Freckle-faced Patty, though, isn't defending the championship. From her home she sent a wire to wish the girls well. Miss Barrett made good use both of the opportunity and her neighbor's advice.

While she set the fastest pace ever, she still was the medalist by a margin of only one stroke. Right behind her at 75 came Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, the plump, jovial Greensboro (N. C.) star who had taken the medal outright twice and tied for it once in the three previous championships.

This was by far the lowest-scoring qualifying day the ladies ever have had. Not only did nine of them come in with scores of 80 or better, but the highest score that won one of the 64 places in the first round of match play was 89, and the 89 shooters had to compete in a play-off.

ONLY THREE MISTAKES

Miss Barrett made only three mistakes all day, and made up for two of them by blasting out of traps and sinking long putts to save her parts. Her lone bogey came on the eighth hole, where she was trapped, came out handsomely but missed a 4-foot putt. A chip that hit the pin and stopped inches from the cup gave her a birdie 4 on the first, and an 8-foot putt on the tenth was good for another. On No. 13 she caught a trap but saved her par by knocking in a 40-footer, and on the 18th she again hauled one out of the sand and banged in a 10-foot putt to stick to standard figures. The 13 other holes were played in perfect pars, or in regulation and down in two putts each time.

Mrs. Page was only slightly less consistent. Two bad lies, forcing her to use irons instead of woods and thus loss distance cost her a six on the 566-yard sixth, and she three-putted the 16th. But the 1937 champion knocked in good putts for birdies at the first and fourth, and otherwise shot par golf all the way.

MISS BARTON'S RECOVERY

Two strokes behind her at 77 came Marion Miley, the Lexington (Ky.) contender, who is one of the best putters in the business. Pam Barton, British champion who won both her own and the U. S. titles in 1936, made a handsome back-nine recovery to get a 78 after going out in 42, and Mary K. Browne, national tennis champion in 1912, 1913 and 1914, and golf runner-up in 1924; Fay Crocker, the 24-year-old slugger from Uruguay, and Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Texas, finished in a tie at 79.

Dorothy Traung of San Francisco and Virgina Guilfoil, pretty (N. Y.) blonde, shared the 80 bracket, followed at 81 by Sheila Stroyan English girl's champion, Charlotte Glutting, consistent contender from West Orange, N. J.; little Elizabeth Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., and Phyllis Buchanan of Denver. All of the higher-rated contenders performed about as expected, with Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, six-time winner, and Maureen Orcutt among those at 82, and Dorothy Kirby, Mrs. Dan Chandler and Jean Bauer at 85.

Hawaii-Born Japanese Swimmer Wins Event In Pan-American Meet

Domei Tsushin

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Sept. 18—Kiyoshi Nakama, youthful Hawaiian-born Japanese swimmer, won the 200-meter freestyle event of the Pan-American swimming championships last Sunday night, when he negotiated the distance in 2 minutes 13.3 seconds. He was followed by Takashi Hirose and James Tanaka, also from Hawaii, who placed second and third respectively.

Adolf Kiefer, stellar American swimmer, won the 100-yard backstroke in 1 minute 6 seconds.

The United States team easily won the 200 yard relay event in 1 minute 48 seconds.

ESCOBAR MAY GIVE UP HIS WORLD TITLE

NEW YORK—Lou Brix, manager of Sixto Escobar, bantamweight champion of the world, announced that the little Puerto Rican may voluntarily vacate the title if "various boxing bodies" insist on him meeting George Pace, of Cleveland, for the title.

Somewhat annoyed over Pace's recent demands for a title fight, Brix termed the Clevelander a "practically unknown battler" and told him to go and "get a reputation."

Pace undefeated in his three-year professional career, recently announced that he was going to take his campaign for a title bout to the National Boxing Association. A year ago he posted a $1,000 challenge cheque with the New York State Athletic Commission, which ordered Escobar to go through with the fight, but which has not yet pressed that demand.

DEFENDED 10 TIMES

Brix, in a statement, pointed out that Escobar had defended the title nearly ten times since he won it from Harry Jeffra in February, 1938, and had "never ducked an opponent."

"Sixto is not ducking Pace," Brix said, "but I suggest Pace meet such worthy bantams as Lou Salica, Tony Olivera, Kayo Morgan, Baby Yack or Little Dado, and if he beats any of them, Escobar will accommodate Pace with a championship bout. Right now Pace is hardly known outside Cleveland.'

UNITED STATES MAY BE HOST TO OLYMPICS

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—Avery Brundage, Chairman of the American Olympic Committee, today declared that the A.O.C. might be willing to stage the 1940 Olympic Games in the United States if they cannot be held in Finland.

He emphasized, however, that serious obstacles such as the lack of time for suitable preparation would make the organization of the Games exceedingly difficult.

"I am very happy to have the Olympics in the United States under these circumstances. We could handle them if there's enough time to prepare," he said.

BASEBALL STARS MUCH IN DEMAND

SEATTLE—When Howard Hobson, University of Oregon baseball coach, admitted in a newspaper interview—that he was a scout for the New York Yankees, new evidence was given to the breach between colleges and professional baseball.

Although Hobson resigned his Yankee scouting job soon after the University of Washington Daily released the interview, his action did not end discussion. Rather it served as a concrete example to substantiate the rumors that had been passing around the Conference.

During the past few years many Northwest college coaches have been perturbed by the loss of star baseball players, as big league scouts have signed them to contracts early in their college careers.

DISAPPROVE SIGNING

Not only has it affected the baseball coaches, who lose the players they had helped along, but the faculty, and coaches of other sports disapprove of the signing of ball players while still in college. The faculty like to see all students graduate, but when a player signs a contract, he usually leaves school for good. Also the signing of a professional contract makes an athlete ineligible for any other sport, and we might refer to Coaches Babe Hollingbery of Washington State and Jim Phelan of Washington, as football coaches that have felt the results of this "buying of players."

Hollingbery built a freshman football team around fullback Ted Zydowsky in 1937, and had big plans for him in the 1938 season. But Ted also happened to excel in the sport of baseball. Came the 1938 season and the expected grid star Mr. Zydowsky was not on hand—he had been signed by the Chicago Cubs—while still a freshman.

KICKING ARTIST LOST

At the University of Washington, coach Phelan had dreams of a surefire kick-off man and placekick artist in Edo Vanni. One night in practice session with the freshmen, Vanni made 97 successful try-for-point conversions out of 100 attempts, and kicked-off over the goal line 10 times in succession from his own 40-yard line. But Vanni was not available for varsity use, for he, too, signed a professional baseball contract while still a freshman.

There are, of couse, two sides to the question. There is little opportunity for a baseball player in the college leagues. College baseball is considered no better than class "D" baseball. Many of the boys with baseball ability need the money, and succumb to the lure of a bonus for signing.

FEW MAKE GRADE

But few of these make the grade in big league baseball. After a few years, they are kicking around on some bush league team, with no college education behind them to help in looking for employment, after their baseball days are over.

Hobson said he did not try to sign players on his own team while they were in school, asking only that senior members of his squad allow the Yankees to meet the best offer they have received prior to graduation.

Hobson did make a suggestion—one that received much publicity when forwarded previously in a magazine article by Sam Barry, baseball coach at University of Southern California. This suggestion is for Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis to arrange an agreement among baseball teams, similar to the one in the National Professional Football league, that no players be signed until after they have graduated or completed their years of college eligibility.

New Softball Record Set

EDWARDSVILLE, Illinois—Two softball baseball teams here claimed a new marathon record of 1,601 innings in 21 hours and 5 minutes, after ending a game with the score tied at nine all.

The previous record was held by two New Philadelphia, Ohio, teams which playd 1,459 innings in 24 hours.

Furuno to Head Japan Sports Writers

Inosuke Furuno, President of the Domei News Agency, Tuesday formally assumed presidency of the Japan Sports Writers' Association, in succession to the late Yukichi Iwanaga, his predecessor.

The Japan Sports Writers Association at its executive committee meeting held at the Kojunsha Club selected Mr. Furuno as its President in order to fill the vacancy made by the death of Mr. Iwanaga.

Representatives of the association, in accordance with the selection taken at the executive committee meeting, Tuesday afternoon made an offer formally to Mr. Furuno who accepted it.

ADAMS YACHT WINS IN 12-METER CLASS

By JAMES ROBBINS

N.Y. Times

MATTAPOISETT, Mass., Aug. 15—Buzzards Bay lived up to its reputation for breezes today at the eighty-eighth annual regatta of the New York Yacht Club. There was no gale, or even half of one in flight, but there was a fine sailing air, skittish to the extent of making the sailors work when it swung this way and that, but steady in volume over ruffled waters.

With it the winners in the various classes were the sloop Nyala, which Charles Francis Adams has under charter; Rowe B. Metcalf's Sachem, Miss Nancy Leiter's Venture, H. E. Noyes's Tioga II, and J. B. Shethar's Valencia.

Nyala defeated Van S. Merle-Smith's 12-meter yacht Seven Seas 2 minutes 56 seconds, with Clinton H. Crane's Gleam far astern. Sachem, racing against R. B. Lanier's larger Istalena, beat her boat for boat, and by more than 14 minutes corrected time. Miss Leiter sailed her new eight-meter against Walter H. Wheeler Jr.'s Class Q sloop Cotton Blossom II, and led her by more than 2 minutes, with an even greater margin when the allowance was added.

FOLLY IS FAR ASTERN

Tioga II, in the cruising sloop and yawl division, could not be shaken off by her larger competitors, and Shethar's Valencia spread-eagled six other 32-footers, beating the second one, Junius S. Morgan's Folly, more than 43 minutes, which was over two minutes a mile. That was in a breeze that did not exceed 10 knots.

There were twenty-two starters in all. None of the schooners raced. De Coursey Fales's Nina went out for a sail. All covered a twenty-one-mile triangle.

With a good southeast breeze to begin with, a beat, reach and run were planned. The first leg, from the Buzzards Bay lighted bell buoy, marking the outer entrance to the Cape Cod Canal, to a marker off Quamquisset Harbor, near Woods Hole, was a five-mile beat.

Half of the second leg, eight miles to Negro bell buoy off New Bedford, was a run. Then the breeze hauled south-southwest. That turned the rest of the run into a close reach, and made a run to start the final leg of eight miles back to the starting point. On that the breeze backed and became southeast again, changing the sailing to another close reach for the first few finishers. Before the others reached home the air was around southerly again, and they had spinnakers on for the third time.

GOOD HOPE LOSES TIME

Seven Seas was away first again, Nyala going after her and leaving Gleam alone. Good Hope, in the cruising sloop and yawl group, went over the starting line too soon, and had to recross it.

Nyala ate into the wind much faster than the other twelves, and rounded the weather mark 2 minutes before Seven Sas, which had about the same margin over Gleam. The yawl Wakiva was next around, and then Tioga II, which has done so well on the cruise.

Starting the second leg the parachute display began. When the breeze change came the kites were taken off in a hurry. As each yacht was headed in turn she took in her spinnaker and trimmed in other canvas. Those ahead for a time were close hauled while the others in their wake still were running free. Nyala kept her lead to the second turn; Gleam dropped farther back.

In the breeze variations, sail handling counted for much in the final positions and the reckoning of the winners.

Tomorrow the fleet will run from here back to Newport. Seven Seas went on there after the regatta today, as she broke a winch. She will be in the Kings Cup race Thursday.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

PEZZILLO SCORES ENOUGH POINTS TO TAKE TROPHY

RED BANK, New Jersey, Aug. 21—Wiry, 63-year-old Jack Cooper of Kansas City, Mo., the oldest racing man in the world, didn't win a trophy, but he knew his new 225-cubic-inch hydroplane, Tops III, was the fastest boat on the North Shrewsbury River yesterday.

"Pop" Cooper muffed the King of England trophy, sub-feature of the National Power Boat Sweepstakes Ragatta, when his boat developed motor trouble as it neared the starting line for the first heat. He had to be towed back to the pits. That was bad break No. 1.

Tops showed its heels to the field in the next two heats. Those heels were kicking up spray at least 200 yards in front in each heat. Tony Pezzillo of Atlantic City, mechanic for S. Mortimer Auerbach, finished second in the three heats to score enough points for the trophy.

WON FIRST TWO EASILY

Cooper came back to win the first two heats of the Sweepstakes with such ease it looked like he'd repeat his 1937 victory. His closest rival again was Pezzillo. Swinging up river to the start of the final heat, Cooper went over the line a split second before the flag was dropped. That was bad break No. 2. Jules Manger of Pelham, N.Y., went over with him. Both were disqualified.

That left the race to Pezzillo, who had a substantial start over Chauncey Hamlin Jr., of Buffalo, the only other racer in the heat. Pezzillo's seconds in the first two heats, combined with his victory in the final, gave him the Sweepstakes Trophy.

Hamlin, practically a newcomer to power boat racing, shot his Voodoo around the course in the King Trophy first heat at 66.176 m. p. h for a new world record. The old one, 64.332 m. p. h., was set by Manger last month.

Five other records, besides Hamlin's, were set during the day. Arno Apel of Ventnor, N. J., won the national 91-cubic inch title at a world record speed of 48.361 m. p. h. John L. Hyde Jr., of Washington, D. C., set a world mark of 52.173 m. p. h. in the first heat of the national 135-cubic-inch championship, but the crown went to Edison Hedges of Atlantic City, who scored two heat victories after placing second to Hyde in the first trial.

RECORD FOR WARD

George Ward Jr., of Wilmington, Del., traveled at 53.254 m. p. h. for a record in winning the Class E inboard runabouts open event. In the same race Frederick Casanave of Philadelphia went 38.135 m. p. h. to set a new world mark for Class E service boats.

Joe Monigle of Wilmington, Del., who did not place in the inboard runabouts class for all except Class E boats, traveled at 40.632 m. p. h. for a world record for Class C racing runabouts.

Other winners:

Open class for all runabouts, but Class E—John Kraemer, Port Washington, N. Y.

Class B. Amateur outboards—James Mullen, 2nd, Richmond, Va.

Class B. Professional outboards—Lester Buchman, Baldwin, L. I. N. Y.

Service outboard runabouts—Jimmy Kastner, Akron, O.

Racing outboard runabouts—Charles Mack, New Milford, N. J.

Class F. Outboards—Kenneth MacKenzie, New Haven, Conn.

Connie Mack Is Reported Back in Good Shape Again

PHILADELPHIA,—Connie Mack said today that here-after he was going to attend strictly to the business of running the Athletics—and not go about attending luncheons, dinners and making speeches.

Meeting visitors at his home today, the 76-year-old Philadelphia leader, who was confined to his home by illness since last June, said he had been careless. He was supposed to have been on a diet.

"But I ate too much," he said.

Homeward bound from the training camp last Spring, there was hardly a day that Mack did not attend a luncheon or dinner in his honor, eating heartily, giving talks and meeting hundreds of persons. Now that is all out.

He said: "I'll only be able to stay around the team. The docor will positively not let me do any more than that. I'll be out at the park soon."

The veteran manager recalled that his doctor told him he "had no hope for my recovery when he saw me that Sunday morning in June when I was taken off the train from Boston." Mack said he remembered little of the trip from Boston, and added:

"The only thing that sticks in my mind is a conversation between a couple of Pullman porters and the ambulance driver. I heard one say: 'Shall we take him out the window or the door.'"

CONNIE MACK'S SON TO FOLLOW HIS DAD SOON!

PHILADELPHIA—Critics contend that when Connie Mack eventually steps down from the managerial bench of the Athletics—a post he has held since the formation of the American League in 1901—his son Earle will take over. Those who have known the tall leader down through the years however, are honing that Earle's arrival in the driver's seat will be delayed a while longer.

The A's without Connie waving his score card and baseball without bats—One seems just as sensible as the other. The able chief has been at tie post so long, scribes rarely mention the club in preseason managerial discussions. Who else could pilot the A's like Connie? You could write a book about him and still leave much unsaid.

ONLY ONE CONNIE

Some day a book will be written and it should be well worth the purchase price. The story of a small-town boy who fought his way to the top through the school of hard knocks, who developed more great players than any man baseball has known and who was a father to all who played under him. Ask Foxx, Cramer, Grove, or any big leaguer with a Philadelphia background. They all will tell you the same thing: "There's only one Connie and there'll never be another like him."

Fellows like Foxx, Cramer Grove, Higgins and McNair are hardened campaigners. They know what it means to fight for their bread and butter in the majors. They know what it means to be pushed around in this strenuous pastime which has brought them a comfortable living. But sit down with any one of them and mention Connie's name, and immediately their eyes soften and the hardened appearance disappears. They talk of him as they would of their own dad, or brother. To them, playing under Connie, was like going through a great institution, and they could never forget.

EARLE IS EQUIPPED

The man who succeeds Connie Mack will have a job on his hands. Nobody could ever replace the tall statistician, but Earle could be an able substitute. For better than 15 years he has been in close touch with the strategy of his famous father and should be better equipped to carry on than anyone currently active in the Philadelphia organization.

Running a ball club is not a novel experience for Earle. Of course, he has directed the operations of the Athletics in the American League numerous times when Connie was incapacitated. But also, he piloted the Raleigh club for three years and spent a season with Charlotte before the World War. Later he ran teams at Moline, Ill., and Martinsburg, W. Va. Most of his professional experience, however, has come while acting as one of his father's assistants—or coaches. The Earle of Mack played first base and caught in the minors, but never attracted the eyes of big league scouts.

U.S. TOURISTS WIN 11 OF 13 FIRST PLACES

PARIS, Aug. 21—The touring American track team took 11 of 13 first places to wind up a two-day international meet with France before 12,000 spectators yesterday.

The Americans were outclassed in both distance events. Blaine Rideout of North Texas Teachers dropped the 1,500 meters to Normand and Ralph Schwarzkkopf of the University of Michigan lost the two-mile run to Rochard, who bettered his own French record in finishing in 9:03. The old mark was 9:21.8. Schwarzkopf's time was 9:8.2.

Rideout, who has been running into misfortune throughout the European tour, hugged Normand closely to the turn, but was unable to follow the final spurt with which the Frenchman broke the tape at 3:57.6.

In the other track and the field events, the Americans, who Saturday ran the 3,200 meter relay in 7:35.2, six-tenths of the second faster than the world mark, had no trouble with their French opponents. Schwarzkopf, Rideout, Roy Cochran of Indiana and Charlie Beetham, ex-Ohio State star, made up the relay quartet in Saturday's world record run.

Yesterday's victors included:

100-meter dash—Clyde Jeffrey of Stanford 10.6, with Joe Batiste of Tucson, Ariz., second.
200-meter—Jeffrey 21.4.
400-meter—Erwin Miller of Southern California, 48.6.
800-meter (Prix du President de la Republique)—Beetham in 1.55.
400-meter hurdles—Roy Cochran of Indiana, 52.8.
1,600-meter relay—Batiste, Cochran, B. H. Watson, of Michigan, and Jeffrey, 3:15.6.
High jump—Leslie Steers of Stanford.
Pole Vault—George Varoff of Oregon 3.95 meters. (12ft., 11 17-32in.)
Shot put—Watson 15.95 meters (52ft., 3 31-32in.)
Discuss—Watson 39.84 meters. (163ft., 6¼ in.)
Javelin—Steers 61.78 meters. (202ft., 8 21-64in.)

KEIO-HOSEI ELEVENS TO OPEN FALL SEASON

Thanksgiving Day Game on Novmber 23; Keio Team to Play in Hawaii This Year

The Tokyo intercollegiate American football season will get under way Tuesday afternoon, October 3 at Korakuen, the big baseball stadium in Koishikawa. Keio will meet Hosei university team in the opening game. This game will usher in the sixth annual season of American football in Japan and will in a sense begin Japan's part in commemorating the 70th anniversary of the original intercollegiate game played by Rutgers and Princeton in 1869.

On that clear November day in 1869, the spectators saw 50 players on the field, 25 on each team. Football was played with 20, then 15, before 11-man teams came in. The great Walter Camp, the father of modern football that has swept the entire United States and made it America's greatest Autumn sport, many years ago urged that smaller-sized teams play football. But not until 1934 when six-man teams began was his advice put into practice in a systematic way.

Today across America there are more than 2,000 of those six-man school and college teams making it poossible, from student body size and from an economic standpoint, for the thousands of smaller schools to play football.

ON SAME YEAR

As this new angle started in America in 1934, a handful of students at Waseda, Meiji and St. Paul's universities here sought out Paul Rusch, George Marshall, and some of the American Embassy language officers who had played the game on their service school teams. A general desire was expressed to try out the game in Japan. Soon a composite university team was being coached by George Marshall and the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club agreed to line up a team.

The game was introduced at the Meiji Jingu Stadium on Thanksgiving Day, 1934, played by the two teams, before a crowded stadium that was beyond the hopes of the sponsors. H.I.H. Prince Chichibu honored the first game with his presence and seemed to enjoy the plays as explained by Joseph C. Grew, American Ambassador and an old football man of Harvard.

Newspaper interest plus the big turn out of fans gave impetus to the immediate start of a Tokyo intercollegiate League with the first season's games played off during December, 1934. Paul Rusch of St. Paul's university has headed the league since its start and by interesting foreigners with football experience and college sportsmen here successfully engineered the game through five complete seasons.

Keio and Hosei universities organized teams in 1935 and a complete Tokyo league of five of the major universities pioneered the game along with the group formed at the Y.C. and A.C. to back and develop the sport in Japan.

U.S. TEAM INVITED

Through the interest of the Asahi and Nichi Nichi newspapers further growth has come. The Asahi sponsored a visit here in 1935 of an All Star Pacific Coast team which demonstrated the game in the principal cities of Japan. The Nichi Nichi paper sponsored the first game in Kansai. Kansai university near Kobe formed a team and then a similar foreigners' team as the Y.C. and A.C. came into being at the K.R.A.C. in Kobe. J. Earl Fowler of St. Paul's university has been faithfully building up an Officials' Association, training in regular Autumn classes a growing group of Japanese college graduates in the art of officiating at games.

By 1936 the official rules of the American collegiate game was finally translated into the Japanese language after eight months' effort by a small committe composed of Tadao Kaneko, Katsuke Kano and Haruo Kawashima. Many new words had to be coined to fit the American football rules. Faithfully since the inception of the game here the governing Tokyo intercollegiate league has followed the American rules, each year adapting the changes to the Japanese game. In 1937, Ryozo Asano, well-known Japanese industrial leader and sportsman, a graduate of Harvard where he had great interest in the game, was elected the first President of the Tokyo league and a newly formed Japan Football Association to govern the development of the game throughout Japan.

The now regular Autumn football season here sees 10 college games and five games between the five member universities and the Y. C. and A. C. Usually each of the Tokyo teams travel to the Kansai for games with Kansai university. For the past two years selected team of Kansai and Kanto districts have been playing an East-West game. This has now become an annual feature of the game's development in Japan, lately referred to as Japan's Rice Bowl Game.

THANKSGIVING DAY

The annual American Thanksgiving Day game has been played for five years on the last Thursday of November between the Y. C. and A.C. and one of the college teams. This year, since President Roosevelt has decreed Thanksgiving Day on November 23, the League's proposed schedule has been thrown out of gear. November 23 however has double significance this year being both a Japanese and an American Thanksgiving Day and at the official League meeting held Tuesday night at the American Club, Waseda and Meiji were chosen to play their regular game on that day at 2:30 p.m. at Korakuen with a limited hour game as a curtain raiser to be played by the Y.C. and A.C. against a team of graduate players of the Tokyo schools. The America-Japan Society and the American Associations of Tokyo and Yokohama are being asked to cooperate to make the day a great America-Japan Football day, possibly followed by a function to be given by the America-Japan Society following the game.

Keio university was voted permission to be absent from the Autumn schedule during the month of November to enable the Keio squad to accept a guaranteed invitation to visit Honolulu and play a game under the auspices of the Athletic department of the University of Hawaii. Keio's proposal is to sail November 2 after completing three of its Tokyo league games and play the Waseda vs. Keio game after its return on December 10.

The official schedule as decided at Tuesday night's meeting calls for all 10 of the Tokyo League games to be played at Korakuen at 3 p.m. The game schedule follows:

Tuesday, October 3, Keio vs. Hosei; Tuesday, October 10, Meiji vs. Rikkyo; Thursday, October 19, Keio vs. Rikkyo; Thursday, October 26, Meiji vs. Keio; Tuesday, October 31, Waseda vs. Hosei; Tuesday, November 14, Waseda vs. Rikkyo; Thursday, November 23, Waseda vs. Meiji; Sunday, November 26, Rikkyo vs. Hosei; Saturday, December 9, Meiji vs. Hosei and Sunday, December 10, Waseda vs. Keio.

The Tokyo league officials for 1939 are Ryozo Asano, president, Paul Rusch of St. Paul's University, chairman, Shiro Akaboshi, adviser, Professor Tokuji Ogawa, St. Paul's University, secretary and Shoichiro Matsumoto, Sale and Co., Ltd., treasurer.

Gehrig Is Improving

ROCHESTER, Minn.—Cheered by an optimistic report from a Mayo Clinic physician, Lou Gehrig prepared to leave for Chicago to rejoin his New York Yankee teammates.

Dr. H. C. Habein, who is in charge of treating the former Yankee first baseman for a form of infantile paralysis, issued the following statement upon conclusion of a two-day examination today:

"The general condition of Lou Gehrig is definitely improved. He had gained weight and feels well in every respect. As for his trouble in regard to the nervous system, there is no evidence of progression. We will continue along the same line of treatments, with few modifications."

Asked what he thought about the report, Gehrig answered, "I've been feeling right along that I was getting better, but it's good to get the news direct from headquarters."

BRITISH PILOT SETS 368 M.P.H. SPEED MARK

N.Y. Times

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah, Aug. 23—John Cobb, quiet British businessman, boosted the world's automobile speed record above six miles a minute today, with a new mark of 368.85 miles per hour for the measured mile and 369.74 for the kilometer.

In two beautiful, whistling runs along a thirteen-mile straightaway and through mechanical timing traps 2,600-horsepower Railton Red Lion to speeds never before equaled on wheels. Hitherto they had been approached only by Captain George E. T. Eyston, also an Englishman. Eyston's old record for the mile was 357.5 m. p. h. and for the kilometer 357.34.

The speed for the mile of 368.85 was an average computed from 370.75 for the out-run—fastest mile ever traveled over ground—and 366.97 on the return.

A VARIANCE IN SPEED

Headed north, Cobb's rate for the kilometer was 367.92, slower than for the mile, because the measured kilometer lies at the south end of the track's center section and is reached before the driver can push his machine to maximum velocity. On the return the situation was reversed. The kilometer speed shot up to 371.59 while the mile dropped to 366.97.

Times in seconds for Cobb's record-shattering runs were: northbound mile, 9.71; kilometer, 6.08; southbound mile, 9.81; kilometer, 6.02; averages—mile, 9.76; kilometer, 6.05.

"Let me digest this one first," Cobb said when asked if he contemplated further assaults on the land speed record.

Before leaving the salt flats for England, however, the sportsman will try to break four other marks, three now held by Eyston and the other by a German, the late August Rosemeyer. They are for five and ten miles and for five and ten kilometers. The attempt will not be made before Friday, Cobb said.

Cobb admitted traveling at six miles a minute is not a diverson he would care to indulge in every day.

"It's not particularly frightening," he declared. "But there's always the uncertainty, when you start out, about reaching the other end. And I can assure you it is a relief when you do reach that other end and pull up to a safe stop."

OVERSHOOTS NORTH PIT

An orange sun glared behind low-hanging clouds as Cobb flashed over the thirteen-mile straightaway. His twenty-four-cylinder job traveled so fast through the measured mile it overshot the north pit by approximately a half mile, nearly seven miles from the timers' stand.

Cobb smiled confidently as he was lifted from the nose-cockpit. He said he never reached full acceleration.

Mechanics immediately removed the hull and began changing tires for the return trip. The four tires withstood the strain and did not shed rubber. Ice was added to the cooling system during the brief pit stop.

Awaiting the start of his run this morning, Cobb presented his British driver's license to A. C. Pillsbury of Los Angeles, chief timer.

"I suppose you want to see my license," Cobb said in all seriousness.

Pillsbury smiled, then replied:

"A man who can drive an automobile six miles a minute doesn't need a license in Utah."

CINCINNATI REDS STILL LEADING NATIONAL LOOP

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—The strong Cincinnati Reds still held their leading position in the senior loop today, but with the St. Louis Cardinals not far behind, and the 1938 Pennant-winning Chicago Cubs in third position. The Boston Red Sox were in second position following the New York Yankees, already assured of the American League flag, while the Chicago White Sox were close behind the Redlegs.

The standings follow:

DIMAGGIO'S HITTING AVERAGE DROPS IN INDIAN FRAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—Joe DiMaggio, who recently declared Mel Harder to be one of the hardest major league baseball pitchers to hit, demonstrated his point yesterday by going hitless in five times at bat, as the Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees 4-3. Harder limited the Yankees to nine hits and dropped Dimaggio's batting average below the .400 mark for the first time in many weeks. Young Oscar Gimes broke up the game with a tenth inning homer after the Yanks had tied the count with two runs in the eighth.

The second place Boston Red Sox beat Detroit 2-1, with Dennis Galehouse pitching out Tommy Bridges. Bobby Doerr drove in Ted Williams with both the Boston runs in the fifth and seventh innings respectively.

Two errors by George Case in the eighth inning allowed two runs to score and gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Senators in Washington.

A rookie pitcher, Lester McCrabb, made his debut with the Philadelphia Athletics and earned a 9-1 victory over St. Louis. He was aided chiefly by Wally Moses, who got four hits in four times at bat. The Athletics scored three runs in the first and three in the third inning.

WALTERS WINS 23RD

The three leading teams in the National League baseball race won their games yesterday.

Bucky Walters chalked up his 23rd win of the season by pitching the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 win over Brooklyn in 10 inning. He yielded only five hits. Frank McCormick's tenth inning single scored Billy Werber with the winning run.

The second-place St. Louis Cardinals turned five hits into a 4-3 win over Philadelphia. Terry Moore's seven inning homer with Don Padgett on base, put the game on ice.

GALENTO TABS LOU NOVA GOOD

NEW YORK—In a masterly monologue, Two Ton Tony Galento, the odd oval man from Orange, N. J., revealed that it is Joseph Louis who disturbs his dreams, although Lou Nova will be the object of his dissection next week in Philadelphia.

"This Nova is a good fighter," the baldish beer baron showed surprising gentleness. "I hope to knock him out. I don't know exactly when I'll do it, but I'm charging out fast to get it over as quick as I can.

"The only thing I want now," the Galento tenor suddenly surged with passion, "is a return match with that bum, Louis! That's why I'm fighting Nova. I wanna get Louis in the ring with me again next June. Boy, I'll knock him silly then awright!

LOU BEST

"I'll tell you something. I seen how Nova fights and he's a better man than Louis. He's a fine battler, plenty of guts. A lot more than Louis. That's where I got it over Joe. He ain't got no guts. I'd rather fight two Louises than one Nova any time.

"You know why I lost to Louis? Everybody was telling me to be careful, be careful, be careful. My Manager Joe Jacobs and everybody. Careful for what? The next time I get in with Louis, I won't fool around being careful. I'll come out with the first bell swinging punches until he goes down. I'll flatten him, awright, the guy ain't got the guts.

LOUIS PHOOEY

"You sports writers think Louis can punch, the odd oval-man from Orange curled his lips to denote contempt. "Nah, he can't punch. He's a lucky fighter. He cuts you when he hits and he makes it look as though he's got a terrific wallop. The blood came over my eyes and blinded me and a guy can't fight with blood in his eyes."

Louis Kayoes Bob Pastor In Eleventh

Domei Tsushin

BRIGGS STADIUM, Detroit, Sept. 20—Joe Louis, heavyweight champion, tonight kayoed challenger Bob Pastor in the eleventh of their 20-round title bout. The end came when the 11th frame was 38 seconds old. Pastor was slated to put up a stiff battle, but he did not fare well.

It is rumored that Louis will not make any more attempts to defend his title this year, which will leave the heavyweight field without any interesting matches until "Two Ton" Tony Galento, recent winner over Lou Nova, the Californian, is matched with the champion again.

200 SCORE SET IN TRAPSHOOT

N.Y. Times

VANDALIA, Ohio, Aug. 22—An Ohio farmer and a Wisconsin tavern owner's wife became North America's clay target king and queen today at the fortieth annual Grand American trapshoot.

P. O. Harbage of West Jefferson, 40-year-old farmer, broke 200 in a row from 16 yards to annex the men's laurels, while Mrs. William Gilbert, 27, of Madison, Wis., startled the talent by breaking 98 of 100 with a borrowed gun to climb upon the feminine throne. She has been shooting only one year.

Harbage succeeds Joe Hiestand of Hillsboro, Ohio, holder of the title for three of the last four years. Mrs. Gilbert takes over the laurels of Mrs. Lela Hall of Strasburg, Mo., who had ruled the last four years, the most sensational string of victories in the "roaring grand's" history.

HIESTAND BREAKS 198

Hiestand, in surrendering his crown, broke 198 of 200, but Mrs. Hall, ill since Saturday, did not compete. She came to the grounds, defying her physician's orders, but was dissuaded from firing.

Mrs. Gilbert, after beating a field of twenty-two feminine stars over the 100-target route, went on to break another 100 in a row, giving her 198 of 200 for the highest score ever registered by a woman in the North American championship. She used a gun borrowed from a friend just before the shooting started.

Harbage cracked 200 in a row for the third time this year, to lead a field of 380. Back of him came George Gady of Leavittsburg, Ohio, and Art A. Finney of Mankato, Minn., with 199, while about twenty had 198.

Mrs. W. D. Treadway of Jessup, Del., and Miss Florence Mos of Cincinnati finished second to Mrs Gilbert with 97.

The hard-shooting Western team repeated its 1938 victory over the East in a 2,000 clay event, 1,958 to 1,945.

Fred Tomlin of Glassboro, N. J., and Clyde C. Mitchell of Atlanta led the professional contingent with scores of 199 of 200.

Johnson, Fastest Pitcher In History, Now Farmer

WASHINGTON—Fan support is usually evenly divided between warring World Series teams but 15 years ago baseball witnessed a unanimous sentimental wave for Washington every time Walter Johnson pitched against New York.

From all over the land there came telegrams carrying best wishes to the "Big Train." It was his first chance in an Autumn classic after 18 years of meritorious service in the major leagues.

Year after year he had toiled for a team that more often than not finished in the second division. But there never was a gipe out of Sir Walter. He had just gone out and pitched—and led the league in strikeouts 12 times, eight years in succession.

He pitched the first game of the 1924 Series. And he lost. It went 12 innings before a wild throw by Earl McNeely cost Johnson the victory.

Later in the Series his second opportunity came. But the long years of toil, and the strength he had put into winning 23 games for the Senators during the campaign, had taken a lot out of Walter. He was wild and his fast ball didn't have its usual zip. The Giants beat him again.

After these two heart-breaking setbacks, Johnson sat on the bench as the seventh and last game was played. For eight innings the teams battled doggedly. Finally, in the ninth Johnson was sent in, to win or lose the World's championship for Washington. For four innings he held the Giants in check.

Then in the twelfth McNeely came through with the hit that won World Series game.

Today John is a farmer in nearby Montgomery county, Maryland. He grows crops, raises hogs and chickens and operates a small dairy.

He's well liked and respected by his neighbors and last Autumn was elected a county commissioner.

Walter will be remembered as the fastest of all fast ball pitchers. At his prime he didn't need anything but his fast one. The batters seldom saw it. He struck out 3,497 players in his 21 years with Washington, a record that likely will never be equaled.

And he never once had a sore arm.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

LITTLE MERCY SHOWN IN BASEBALL RECORDS DURING CURRENT SEASON

NEW YORK—Those New York Yankees have made it a record year for big league record-making. They've pounded the ball around in a manner showing no respect at all for marks of old and venerable standing, and their most recent display of audacious powerhousing tied a record that had been good for 38 years.

That was the 21-0 massacre of the Philadelphia Athletics, the most merciless beating administered a major league club since the Detroit Tigers did the same thing to the Cleveland Indians in 1901.

The Yanks haven't been alone in the assault upon records. A few other clubs have figured in it collectively and individually, but McCarthy's crew leads the way.

PHILADELPHIA VICTIM AGAIN

A few examples:

They pounded hapless Philadelphia hurlers June 28 for eight homers in one game to break a seven-homer record they had shared with four other clubs. The old mark was first made in 1886. Their five homers in the other half of a doubleheader that day added up to a new record of 13 circuit blows in a double feature.

They tied a major league record by scoring in every inning against St. Louis July 26.

Individually, Lou Gehrig's 2,130-game consecutive playing streak—established when he retired this Summer—stands as the greatest mark, but Rookie Richard Atley Donald broke an old first-year pitching record by winning his first 12 games. Harry Krause of the Philadelphia Athletics won 10 in 1909.

Di Maggio, Selkirk and Dahlgren teamed up to tie a major league record June 28 by hitting home runs in succession in the same inning. Ben Chapman, Trosky, and Heath of Cleveland had done the same thing three days before.

The Yanks tied one record on the unusual side, playing an entire game July 14 against Detroit in which they scored only one assist, that by Gordon, Crosetti had the only assist in a game in 1934.

OUTSIDE CONTRIBUTIONS

Record accomplishments from other clubs included:

New York Giants, with five home runs in one inning against Cincinnati, broke a four-homer record set by Pittsburgh in 1894. Cincinnati tied a record with four consecutive doubleheader triumphs, the last coming on July 30.

Jim Tabor, Boston Red Sox rookie, tied two major league records by hitting four home runs in a doubleheader and hitting two home runs with the bases filled during a single game.

Ben Chapman of Cleveland rapped out three triples in a game to tie a major league record, and Marvin Owen of the Chicago White Sox tied one with four doubles in one game.

Brooklyn entered the record lists in typical daffy fashion—the Dodger outfield went through a game with the Pirates July 15 without making a single putout or assist.

REDS' FIRST BASEMAN AIRS BATTING SECRET

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Although only in his second season in the major leagues, Frank McCormick, handsome first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, will not be accused of vanity if he reveals his formula for hitting a baseball.

The 25-year-old Irish-Bohemian who topped the National leaguers in number of hits, 209 last year, has a simple batting rule.

"Never take your eye off the ball while at bat," he advises, "and swing on the first ball which comes over the plate in the strike zone."

In other words, rookies, it's easy to rank third among the leagues individual batters with an average of .326 in your freshman year:

'WATCH THE BALL'

Just watch the ball and don't let a good one go by.

It worked for husky Frank in 1938.

"All my baseball life I've hit the first pitch, or at least the first 'good' ball pitched to me," he said. "I figured it out for myself when I was a kid playing amateur ball. The pitchers would try to get me in a hole, that is, get ahead of me by sneaking over a strike before I started swinging.

"So I fooled them and began swinging on that first good pitch. All last season the National league pitchers tried to get that first strike past me but they seldom did."

GUESSING NOT WORTHWHILE

Frank doesn't believe in "guessing" at the plate.

"Anytime I 'guess' what the next pitch is going to be and try to get set for it, I usually bring down trouble on myself," he says. "There are rare times when the pitcher is so far in the hole, he practically has no choice but to try and throw a fast one over the plate. Even then, you can guess wrong, especially on those pitchers who figure you're looking for that fast one and instead take a long chance with a curve."

Meiji Shrine Meet Now Under Way

The Summer division, including swimming and yacht events, of the Meiji Shrine Athletic Meet formally opened its tenth gathering at the Meiji Shrine Swimming Stadium following an impressive opening ceremony by paying respects at the Meiji Shrine.

More than 1,000 aquatic champions gathered from all over Japan to participate in the annual event, which will continue for four days beginning Thursday.

Welfare Minister Naoshi Ohara delivered an opening address. He is the president of the Meiji Shrine National Athletic Meet.

The Autumn division of the Shrine Meet will be held for five days beginning October 29.

ENGLISH SUN MUCH TOO HOT FOR FOOTBALL

LONDON—As the sun blazed down on the West Indies bowlers while they toiled by no means unsuccessfully against the England batsmen at the Oval, the curtain went up on English football, when the Jubilee Benevolent Fund matches were played. Never has our great Winter game opened in more unseasonable conditions, and when the players left the grounds all over the country they looked as if they had walked out of a lake. The intense heat clearly impaired the standard of football and can you wonder? Temperatures of 80 degrees were recorded on several grounds. As a result the attendance were, on the whole, most disappointing.

It is estimated that the matches were watched by about 350,000 persons, the biggest crowd of the day being at White Hart Lane where there was an attendance of 35,000 to see Arsenal beat Tottenham Hotspur by one goal to none.

In Scotland the "Glasgow Herald" remarks:

The return to Summer conditions makes one more than ever convinced that the League football season in Scotland ought to be delayed until the beginning of September at least. In these sweltering days it is more a trial of endurance than of skill for the players, not to mention the plight the spectators, who are hardly likely to find the exertions enacted before their eyes on sunbaked, unyielding turf much of an antidote for that "hot and bothered" feeling. Football is essentially a Winter pastime, but, one supposes, there is the commercial aspect to be considered. Getting games out of the way now is some kind of insurance against the weather vagaries round about Christmas and the New Year. To delay the start of the season might cause confusion later on when the Scottish Cup has got into its stride.

SOME SURPRISES

The big surprise was Derby County's defeat by Leicester City. The score was 6-4, and for the winners Liddle gave a very sound display. He got two for himself, and he added no end of pep to the side. There were of course, many hat-tricks. For Portsmouth, Anderson got three, so did Dorsett for the Wolves, James for Chelsea, Ferrier for Oldham, Chalmers for Aldershot, and Alsop for Walsall.

Major Buckley must have been fully satisfied with the performance of the Wolves and, of course, with Dorsett himself. One can hardly think the Wolves' great rivals, Everton, can have been similarly satisfied. Their defeat at Liverpool did not make good reading, and only Lawton showed anything like England form.

What does not make good reading is the number of penalties awarded all over the country. We can only conclude that they were the result of the reminder sent out to referees about the footnote to Law 12 on obstruction.

FEW INJURIES

Fortunately there were few injuries to record among the players despite the hard grounds. Springett, the Gateshead left back, came off worst of all. He had to be carried off the field on a stretcher. Jones and Morris, the Birmingham forwards, both had to leave the field. Monday, Charlton's back, was taken to hospital with a leg injury.

There were, of course, numerous casualties among the spectators as a result of the intense heat, and one onlooker at Swindon collapsed and died. Irving, the Halifax Rugby League forward, was unable to play as he was suffering from sunstroke.

IN SCOTLAND

Falkirk swept the newly-promoted Cowdenbeath out of their path to the extent of seven goals. Bolton Wanderers will be interested to note that Carruthers, the right-winger with whom they parted last season, scored four goals. The League Championship looks like remaining in the hands of the holders, Rangers. Aberdeen, for instance, gave a somewhat abject display at Motherwell while Heart of Midlothian were disappointing against Celtic. They have never won at Parkhead since 1902. If Celtic had Delaney back in the team they would be well set to chase Rangers. At the same time they appear the only club Rangers have to fear. Rangers were more than a cut ahead of Ayr United, who have lost nine goals in two games and scored none. McNee (Hamilton) made a most satisfactory debut for the winners.

St. Johnstone, like Ayr United, have got off to a bad start—six goals lost in two games and none scored. Alloa lost five goals in the first half at Albroath, where the clever play of Gould on the right wing tore holes in their defense. Hibernian were good, if narrow winners over Clyde, while Albion Rovers played so well against Partick Thistle they scarcely deserved to be beaten.

Yawl Tioga Too Wins

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia—Winner of the Marblehead-Halifax ocean yacht rate, the Boston Yacht Club yawl Tioga Too swung at anchor while stragglers in the 366-mile contest continued to poke their way through fog shrouding the Nova Scotia coast.

In the second place and winner in her class was the Grenadier of Marblehead, which arrived at 12:59 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time today, nine hours after the Tioga Too reached anchorage after the race from Massachusetts.

Behind the two leaders tonight came the sloops Gypsy of Boston and Rampage 11 of New York. Gypsy passed the finish at 6:27 p.m., and Rampage trailed her by twelve minutes, but the New York craft's allowance placed her ahead on corrected time.

Tioga Too, a scratch boat, covered the distance in 59:02:30. Tonight she was established definitely as winner. Grenadier's elapsed time was 67:58:41, corrected to 67:22:53. Gypsy's times were 73:27:00 and 73:25:43, and Rampage's 73:39:55 and 71:37:56.

Basketball Coach Shows New One

LAWRENCE—As director of the national basketball research committee, Coach Phog Allen keeps throwing new ideas at 'em. His latest invention is "Goal-Hi," a game leading to basketball.

It is a basketball hoop mounted without backboard on an upright pole which is adjustable to eight, nine and ten foot heights. It can be set up in a backyard and the game played in a twenty-five foot radius, both teams shooting for the same goal.

Several Kansas high school coaches attending Summer session are having lots of fun playing the game and said they would have to have "Goal-Hi" put on grade school playgrounds to start young players shooting at the rim instead of banging at the backboard.

To give the game an interesting debut, Phog recently used two teams of Kansas and Ottawa University players in a regulation bout.

SINGLE SHOT TAKES RIBBON AT TROPHY MEET

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—A single shot by each contestant today determined the winner of the Crowell Trophy match at the National Rifle Association meet, William F. Johnson, an insurance inspector from Jamaica, L. I., annexing the shoot-off honors.

When this match was fired at 600 yards prone, Johnson and Sergeant Hansford Wagner of the United States Infantry, the defending champion, tied with 50 each and 10 "V" shots. Wagner scored a four, Johnson ending the event with a five.

Claude L. Floyd Jr., United States Marines, Hinesville, Ga., and Melvin L. Wilson, United States Coast Guard, Baltimore, established a new mark in the Marine Corps Cup fixture with possible 100s and 13 V's. The previous record was 100 and 12.

TIE WITH POSSIBLE 400's

Vere F. Hamer of Woodstock, Minn., a civilian, was third with 100 and 11. There were 1,982 entries in the match, fired over the 600 and 1,000 yard ranges with service rifles.

The preliminary R. W. S. course match over the small-bore ranges resulted in a tie between Merle Israelson, Akron, Ohio, and Ranford Triggs, Madison, N. J., each posting a possible 400. Third place went to R. W. Rust, Chickasha, Okla., with 398. He outranked C. W. Whipple, Somerset, Pa., and Al Freeland, Rock Island, Ill. The event, fired over the fifty-meter range with 40 shots for record at prone, drew a field of 461.

New Yorkers, finished as follows: J. A. Borokhovich, Brooklyn, 395; Roy Bryant, Springfield Gardens, 394; Tom Lewis, Garden City, 393, and B. Evans, New York City, 393.

CAPTURES DEWAR EVENT

The life members' Dewar course contest was captured by E. N. Moore Jr., Detroit, with 398 out of 400 and 27 shots in the center of the target ring.

F. O. Kuhn of Stratford, Conn., was second, with 398 and 26 X shots. C. L. Wood, Casey, Ill., 398 and 25, placed third, and J. E. Lacey, New Haven, Conn., 398 and 24, annexed fourth position. H. Vander Hyde, Jamaica, L. I., with 395 and 17, was topped by H. Anderson, Jackson Heights, L. I., who had 395 and 19, for high score among the New York entrants in the match.

A. O. Franz of Alton, Ill., headed a list of 500 in winning the Western Trophy small-bore match with a possible 400 and 32 X's, outranking J. E. and Jack Lacey, who tied for second at 400 and 31.

New York shooters finished in the following order: Bryant, 398; Borokhovich, 399; Albert Pione, New York City, 395; L. M. Temple, New York City, 397; Anderson, 395, and C. E. Carrigan, Farmingdale, 395.

There were 1,927 riflemen on the firing line in the competition for the Coast Guard Trophy .30-caliber rapid-fire match, over the 200 and 300-yard ranges.

Sergeant Coats Brown, United States Infantry, Fort McClellan, Ala., and Corporal William W. White of the Fort Lewis, Wash., Infantry, deadlocked at the top at 99 out of a possible 100, each scoring 49 at 200 yards and 50 on the 300-yard range. The next four competitors finished with 99 each but are in lower brackets with 49 at the 300-yard stage.

JONES BEATS REEVES

Emmett Jones of Los Angeles, won the center, slow-fire pistol match on the 50-yard range with 186 out of 200, leading Harry Reeves, Detroit policeman, who holds the national title, by three points.

The center, timed-fire event at 25 yards went to Reeves, who posted 200 and 48 center shots to outrank Paul Chapman, Washington, with 200 and 45. Harry L. Voelbel, New York City policeman, came in third with 196.

George J. Kecho of the Indiana State police took the restricted pistol contest with 281 of 300. The medalist test was taken by Emmett Jones, with 286 of 300, and the center, rapid-fire shoot by John Heath, United States Marine Corps, with 197 of 200.

Twedell Signs with Packers

GREEN BAY, Wisconsin—Francis Twedell, All-America guard from Minnesota, has been signed by the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. Twedell will join the Packers Thursday when they journey to Dallas, Texas, for a game Labor Day with the Southern College All-Stars.

CUBA TAKES WORLD TITLE

HAVANA, CUBA—The Cubans won the world amateur baseball championship by defeating the Nicaraguans, 9 to 1, in the seventh game of the series. This was the Cubans' fifth victory without a loss. A crowd of 10,000 in Tropical Stadium went wild with excitement as the home team won.

A home run, the first of the series, by stocky Cayasso, the Nicaraguans' first baseman, accounted for the visitors' lone run in the fourth inning. They made seven hits in all, but failed to push another score across the plate, chiefly because of the excellent fielding of the Cubans.

Solorzano, starting Nicaraguan pitcher, held the Cubans scoreless during the first four frames. In the fifth the Cubans put two men on the bases and then a sacrifice bunt and a hit to center field brought in two runs. Cuervo, Cuban first baseman, hit a three-bagger in the sixth and scored on a sacrifice fly.

The Nicaraguans put Melendez in the box in the seventh inning and the home forces promptly went on a scoring spree. With the bases full Melendez walked one man. Then a three-base hit and a pair of singles brought the total to six runs for the inning.

Garcia was substituted for Melendez in the eighth and kept the Cubans from crossing the plate again.

The score by innings:

England Beats West Indies In London Cricket Series

N.Y. Times

LONDON, Aug. 22—Five years ago Ralph Grant was on the West Indies test cricket team skippered by his brother, George, that won the "rubber" against England. It was the only series taken by West Indies cricketers from the mother country.

When the West Indian team was chosen this year Ralph was appointed captain. He failed to duplicate his brother's feat, as the Englishmen won the three-game series that ended today with the final match a draw.

The first game ended in an eight-wicket victory for England. The second test was drawn.

The tourists held an advantage in the first two days of the final game at the Oval, scoring a first-innings total of 498, against the Englishmen's 352. England, however, rallied in the second innings today with 366 for three when Leonard Hutton and W. H. Hammond, captain, broke a third-wicket test partnership.

The young Yorkshire star, whose 364-run stand against Australia last year tops all test records, and Hammond registered a partnership score of 264 runs, two better than the previous high third-wicket tally set by Hammond and D. R. Jardine against Australia in 1929.

Hammond scored 102 in 155 minutes and was bowled by Clarke for 138. Hutton was still at the wickets at the close with 165.

Threatening skies kept the crowd down to 6,000.

The score:

MEYER PREDICTS GAIN IN SHOVEL PASS USE

NEW YORK—With 300 college, prep and high school coaches in attendance, Leo R. (Dutch) Meyer of Texas Christian gave the first of a series of lectures that marked the opening of The New York Herald Tribune's fifth annual football coaching school at the Man Building in the New York World's Fair.

Meyer devoted his talk to that important weapon of the modern game—the forward pass. Such noted passers as Sammy Baugh and Davy O'Brien have been players at Texas Christian, and Meyer's discussion was received with attention.

In the first half of his talk he outlined three important phases of his subject—the passer, the receiver and protection.

Meyer expressed the opinion that the use of the shovel pass will increase widely. He charted pass plays against five-man, six-man and seven-man lines and gave illustrations of zone passing.

Among the coaches present were Lou Little, Columbia; Tuss McLaughry, Brown; Wallace Wade, Duke; Charley Caldwell, Williams; Herb Kopf, Manhattan; Lloyd Jordan, Amherst; Major Larsen and Rip Miller, Navy; Harry Ellinger, Dartmouth; Moe Daly and Harry Jablonsky, Army; Nelson Nitchman and Al Ciampa, Union, and George Munger, Penn.

Tony Galento, heavyweight boxer, poked his head into the classroom but then retired. When the session was over Galento gave an exhibition of shadow boxing.

Derringer, Walters Lead National League Pitching

NEW YORK—Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters, both of the Cincinnati Reds lead the parade of pitchers in the National League with fifteen won and seven lost and twenty-two won and ten lost respectively. Larry French of the Cubs follows with twelve won and six against him.

In the American league, Atley Donald still maintains a slight lead over his teammate, "Red" Ruffing, who has twenty to his credit and five against him. "Lefty" Grove held the lead for a while but the hot pace of the New York Yankees was a little too warm for his teammates and he has now dropped to fourth place, Heving taking third.

Tops Bait-Casting Mark

SAN FRANCISCO—Walter Willman of Kansas City bettered two national records in winning the three-eighths-ounce distance bait event of the thirty-first annual tournament of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs.

His average was 348 feet, 44 feet greater than the previous national record average of 304 feet, established by Lee Sens of Baltimore at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1937.

Sens also bettered his own record, with an average of 333 feet, to place second. Dr. W. S. Howe, St. Petersburg, Fla., was third, with an average of 329 feet.

U.S. COLLEGE ELEVENS PLOT FALL WARS

NEW YORK—It won't be long now. The Eastern All-Stars started the local gridiron ball rolling when they began practice for their meeting with the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds, and now seven New York colleges represented in the sport are starting preparations for the Fall grind.

In fact, Long Island University, which is resuming football after a lapse of about ten years, started working out last week at Manhattan Beach under the guidance of Clair Bee. And Fordham, New York University and Manhattan will all jump on the band wagon this week. The Rams will start for Rose Hill, the N. Y. U. squad will depart for its Lake Sebago camp, Sloatsburg, N. Y., and Manhattan will again train at the La Salle Military Academy, at Oakdale, L. I.

Benny Friedman will gather his City College players together and again use the Wayne Country Club, at Tyler Hill, Pa., for the preseason preparations.

LOU LITTLE RETURNING

Although Columbia will not start active work for another two weeks, Lou Little will return from Cape Cod and get things ready. Lou Oshins, head man at Brooklyn College, has not announced any starting date as yet, but no doubt he will have the boys out in uniform within the next few days.

Everybody has been talking about Fordham's team this Fall. Jim Crowley lost only three important players by graduation last Fall, the co-captains, Harry Jacunski and Mike Kochel and Paul Berezney (all are members of the Eastern All-Stars), and a whole flock of potentially great sophomores are coming up from the freshman squad. Bill Krywicki, quarterback, leads the returning squad of seventeen lettermen.

Len Eshmont, the brilliant broken field runner, will be a junior this year and with last season's experience he promises to be sensational. The Rams open their season on Sept. 30, with Waynesburg, but after that its sure to be tough sailing against Alabama, Tulane, Pittsburgh, Rice, Indiana, St. Mary's and N. Y. U.

Things look none too bright for the N. Y. U. followers. Seven veterans were lost by graduation last June and there is a possibility that several other lettermen may be forced to the sidelines beause of injuries and ineligibility. More than 50 candidates have been invited to camp by Dr. Mal Stevens, and he undoubtedly will do plenty of experimenting before choosing his varsity line-up.

STIFF SCHEDULE FOR N. Y. U.

The University Heights eleven will face one of its toughest schedules in years, meeting Colgate, P. M. C., North Carolina, Carnegie Tech, Georgia, Lafayette, Missouri, Georgetown and Fordham in that order.

Herb Kopf will be starting his second season at Manhattan and he has invited eleven seniors, eight juniors and twenty-four sophomores to the Long Island camp. With Holy Cross to be met in Worcester in the opening game on Sept. 30, and Duquesne, Auburn, West Virginia, Detroit and Villanova to follow, the Jaspers are faced with the problem of getting into condition early and holding their peak right through Nov. 28.

Columbia will hold its opening drill on Sept. 11 at Baker Field. Little has lost his whole first-string backfield, including Sid Luckman (who also will play with the Eastern All-Stars), two first-string tackles, two varsity centers and an outstanding end in Johnny Siegal (another All-Star player). As usual, the Lions have a heavy schedule. They open against Yale on Oct. 7 and then meet Army, Princeton, V. M. I., Cornell, Navy, Tulane and Colgate.

Cobb Sets Three More Speed Marks

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah—John R. Cobb, of London, the six-miles-a-minute man, set three more world automobile speed records today. Driving his twenty-four-cylinder Railton Red Lion over the thirteen-mile saline straightaway, Cobb established these marks: Five kilometers, 326.66 miles an hour; meters, 326.66 miles an hour; ten kilometers, 283.01 miles an hour; ten miles, 270.35 miles an hour.

The old records were: Five kilometers, 292.12, set by Sir Malcolm Campbell on the Salt Flats in September, 1935; ten kilometers, 238.67, set by Campbell at Daytona Beach, Fla., in September, 1935; ten miles, 223.9, set by the late Berndt Rosemeyer, of Germany, at Frankfort, in 1937.

HILLBISH WINS 50-MILE TITLE ON MOTORCYCLE

SYRACUSE, N.Y.—Lester Hillbish, of Reading, Pa., piloted his motorcycle at an average speed of more than seventy-six miles an hour and won the national championship fifty-mile race on the New York State Fair Grounds mile dirt track this afternoon.

He lapped all except three of the sixteen starters, and completed the distance in 39.15.59 minutes. Taking the lead from Frenchy Costonguay, of Springfield, Mass., at the end of ten miles he never relinquished it.

The victory gave Hillbish his fourth national championship of the year. He already had won the three, five and ten-mile events.

Finishing in order after Hillbish were Stan Witinski, Reading, Pa.; Eddie Kretz, Los Angeles; Ted Edwards, Birmingham, Ala.; Costonguay, Babe Trancrede, Woonsocket, R. I.; Al Shaffer, Columbus, Ohio; Carl Capella, Gowanda, N. Y.; Robert Sparks, Walkerville, Ont.; J. B. Jones, Marion, Ind.

The summaries of other races:

First race five miles—Won by John Finenko, Binghamton, N. Y.; A. C. Schlegel, Buffalo, second; George Selzer, Akron, Ohio, third.

Second race, five miles—Won by Leo Eddy, Gowanda; Ben Margeson, Vestal, second; James Hill, Springfield, Mass., third; Julian Wooleyham, Newark, Del., fourth.

Fourth race, five miles—Won by Melvin Rhoades, Harrisburg, Pa.; H. A. Emery, Norwich, Conn., second; Roy Venettozzi, Utica, N. Y., third; Bob Hallowell, Yonkers, fourth.

Fifth race, five miles—Won by Charles Grover, Detroit; Dick Milligan, Los Angeles, second; Andy Groback, Reading, Pa., third; Harrison Reno, Pomona, Calif., fourth.

U.S. Trackmen Triumph Over All-Ontario Squad

CRYSTAL BEACH, Ont.—Herbert Thompson New York Negro Sprinter, contributed two first places today to the five out of six won by United States athletes in an international track meet against an all-Ontario squad of Canadians.

Thompson raced down a none-too-fast track in the unusual times of 0:09.6 for the 100-yard dash and 0:21.6 for the 220-yard event.

Ted Nebrich, of Buffalo, won the one-mile run in 4:24.5; Wayne Rideout, one of the Texas twins, led the field in the 880-yard event in 1:56.6, and a United States relay team consisting of John Kelley, Thompson, Nebrich and Rideout, scored in a medley event.

The lone Canadian victory was furnished by John Loaring, who beat Kelley to the tape in the 440 in 0:51.8.

PRIDDY, RIZUTTO SET FOR YANKS

NEW YORK—The dream of every kid ball player on every corner lot in America is being lived by two youngsters on the Kansas City Blues—Gerry Priddy and Phil Rizutto, the two most coveted and highly-prized ball players in the minors.

Rizutto is nineteen years old and a product of the New York sand lots. Priddy is twenty and a former American Legion player from Los Angeles. Together they form the greatest kid keystone combination the minors have seen in many a year. And they belong to the New York Yankees. Money can't buy them.

Already George Weiss, head of the Yankee farm sytem, has shaken his head to offers of $100,000 and more. They are conservatively valued at $150,000 as baseball flesh is priced these days. The Yankees plan to keep them together in the minors one more year for seasoning and introduce them to Yankee Stadium fans in 1941.

BOTH GOOD HITTERS

Every scout who's looked at these kids has placed the stamp of approval on them. They have everything—speed, defensive skill, baseball savvy and above all they can hit. The latest American Association averages list Rizutto hitting .344 and Priddy .332. They have have made about fifty more double plays than any other keystone combination in the league. Rizutto, with about thirty stolen bases, is close to the top in that department.

And both of them practically walked right into the Yankees' arms. Rizutto, a poor Italian boy who they say had never seen a major league game, heard about the Yankees having baseball classes at the stadium to instruct young players and asked to join. Paul Krichell, Yankee scout, who was conducting the school spotted Rizutto among hundreds of applicants and recommended that the Yankees sign him. Bill Esscik, Yankee scout on the Coast, picked up Priddy at about the same time.

This is their third year in organized baseball. Priddy played at Rogers, Ark., in 1937, and Rizutto at Bassett, Va. They joined up at the Yankees' Norfolk, Va., farm in 1938 and became roommates and inseparable pals.

RIZUTTO FAST AS RABBIT

Rizutto is the fielding marvel of the association, ranked as a better shortstop than Pee Wee Reese, of Louisville, who brought $75,000 in cash and players from Brooklyn, and Jimmy Pofahl, of Minneapolis, who fetched $40,000 from Washington. He is fast as a rabbit despite his short legs—he's only 5 feet 6 inches tall. Priddy, who plays second, is the steadier of the two and the longer hitter.

They are cocky, likeable kids who have supplied most of the fire for Kansas City's pace-setting club. The fact that the Yankees have Jeo Gordon at second and Frankie Crosetti at shortstop, the majors' best second-base combination, doesn't bother Rizutto and Priddy in the slightest. They both are sure they'll be playing side by side on the Yankees in 1941.

Dodgers Recall 14 Men from Minors

NEW YORK—The Dodgers have recalled fourteen optioned players from Montreal of the International League, Nashville and Memphis of the Southern Association, Milwaukee of the American Association and Elmira of the Eastern League, it was announced through the Associated Press.

The list included seven pitchers, topped by Lefty Wayne LaMaster, one-time Phillies' hurler, and Gene Schott, former Reds' twirler; three infielders, two outfielders and a pair of catchers.

From Nashville the Dodgers brought back catcher Charles George, who has been hitting in the neighborhood of .400; first-sacker Bert Haas, well over .350; pitchers George Jeffcoat and Sam Nahem and shortstop Woody Williams.

In addition to Schott and LaMaster, pitcher Bill Crouch, infielder Don Ross, outfielder Goody Rosen and catcher Christ Hartje also were recalled from Montreal. Pitcher John Gaddy was summoned from Memphis, outfielder Oris Hockett from Milwaukee and pitcher Paul Paynick from Elmira.

The Dodgers explained that, with the exception of Montreal, all the clubs appear headed for play-offs in their respective leagues, so that those players are not likely to join Brooklyn until next Spring.

Wozniak Again Wins President's Cup Swim

WASHINGTON—Little Steve Wozniak, twenty-two-year old Buffalo swimmer, won the President's Cup three-mile race for the third straight year.

Wozniak covered the triangular course in 1 hour 13 minutes 41 1-5 seconds. He competed in a mile swim at Detroit and flew here for the Canoe Club race.

Daniel Felski, seventeen-year-old Buffalo High School lad, finished next to Wozniak. Robert Donnelly, of Worcester, Mass., Boys' Club, was third.

The Scranton Y. M. C. A. won the team title for the second time with seventeen points.

Tieup Is Awaited

TORONTO—Don Ross president of the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the International Baseball League, has stated that the Leafs may have a working agreement next season with the Philadelphia Athletics, of the American League.

Ross and Tony Lazzeri, manager of the Leafs, returned Friday from Cleveland, where the Athletics are now playing, and said Earl Mack, acting manager, was unable to give him a definite answer to proposals for an agreement because of the illness of his father, Connie Mack. Ross will confer with Connie Mack at the season's close.

Ross said Earl Mack had told him the only reason for which his father might be reluctant to enter an agreement would be the possibility he might not be able to give the Leafs enough good players to put them in the first division.

LASKER WINS TITLE FROM 24 CHESS RIVALS

HAMILTON, N. Y.—Opposed by thirty members of the New York State Chess Association, in convention here under the auspices of Colgate University, Dr. Emanuel Lasker of New York City, former champion of the world, gave a brilliant performance in his exhibition of simultaneous play in the Student Union Building.

The 70-year-old veteran was at the top of his form and provided some startling combination to puzzle his adversaries. After playing for five and one-half hours he wound up with a score of 26½ points, winning twenty-four games, losing only to Charles E. Dunn of Newburgh.

Dr. Lasker drew against W. M. P. Mitchell of Brookline, Mass.; Lynn H. Bryant of Binghamton, Dr. Max Herzberger of Rochester, Paul Morgan of Syracuse and Dr. Charles H. Hewlett of Schenectady.

LEADS CLASS A RIVALS

The introductory address was made by Dr. C. Harold King of the Colgate faculty, newly elected president of the State organization.

Erich H. Marchand of Clayon, N.M., won the cup in Class A of the general tournament, the other prize winners being Dr. Herzberger, second, and Bryant, Constantine Rasis, New York City, and Bernard Wolk, also of New York, tied for third.

In Class B the honors went to Schuyler Broughton of Brooklyn. The veteran D. Francis Searle of Rome was next, Arthur Fox of Albany third and Frederick Ekstrom of Brooklyn fourth.

Harry Moldt of Rome, one of three of his family competing, captured the cup in section 1 of Class C. The second and third prizes were shared by Henry Greenfield, and Vincent Weig, Rochester, G. S. Donohue, Hastings-on-Hudson, finished fourth.

MRS. NYE IS WINNER

In Section 2 of Class C, the victor was Mrs. Carl Nye of Syracuse, with Professor Robert F. Brand, Cazenovia, as runner-up. Bertram Davis, Oneonta, was third.

With eight rounds completed excepting one game from the eighth, the prizes in the championship tournament depend upon the outcome of the five matches in the ninth and final round. At that stage the likely winners of the first three prizes were Arnold S. Denker, 6½—1½; Isaac I. Kashdan, 6—2, and Albert S. Pinkus, 5—3, all of New York.

Boris Blumin of Montreal also was within reach of a prize. The pairings for the last round were: Kashdan vs. Willman, Mott Smith vs. Garfinel, Pinkus vs. Denker, Platz vs. Chernev and Shainswit vs. Blumin.

Wullschleger Captures Dawes Outboard Trophy

MARIETTA, Ohio—Art Wullschleger, of Larchmont, N.Y., Cornell University student, outsped professional and amateur outboard motorboat drivers today and won the Charles G. Dawes Gold Cup in the tenth annual Mid-East regatta.

Lew Carlisle, of Geneva, N. Y., defending champion, finished in eighth place.

Wullschleger also won the Class F amateur race.

Other winners included Gar Wood jr., of Algonac, Mich., Class A amateur.

Hungary Defeats Germany in Soccer

Domei Tsushin

BUDAPEST, Sept. 24—The Hungarian soccer team today upset the German team seven goals to two before a crowd of 28,000 people.

The Hungarian team led five to one at halftime. The international match was their 14th meeting.

Wolfe Wins Junior Title In National Rifle Meet

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—Fred Wolfe, seventeen years old, of Denver, scored 370 out of a possible 400 at the national rifle matches today and won the national individual Junior Rifle Corps championship gold medal and the Cooper Trophy.

Wolf outranked David Parsons, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., and Robert Lafferty, of Aurora, Ill., who also had strings of 370 each over the four-position course. It was Wolfe's score of 88 at standing position which decided the match. In this event Parsons scored 84 and Lafferty 79.

Fourth place went to Roy Brant, at Long Island, with 369, and fifth place to Norman Sawyer, of Queens Village, N.Y., with 368.

Alfred P. Hemming, of Detroit, national all-around pistol champion, outshot 227 of America's law enfocement officers and won the national police individual pistol title.

The Detroit policeman scored 288 of 300 in the match which consisted of ten shots of slow fire at 50 yards, and ten each of timed and rapid fire at 25 yards.

The team match title passed to the U. S. Treasury team, which scored 1,162 of 1,200 for a new record by five points. The defending champion Detroit squad was second with 1,156, and New York third, with the same score.

Hemming and Harry Reeves, of Detroit, won the police doubles crown with 588 of 600, Hemming getting 295 and Reeves 293.

John W. Aitken, of Overly, N. D., member of North Dakota's civilian team, won the national 30-caliber standing position championship with 96 of 100.

U. S. National Ski Tourney in Spring

BERLIN, New Hampshire—Alf Halverson, president of the Nansen Ski Club, announced today that the 1940 national ski championships would be held here late next February.

Halverson said arrangements would be made to run a special train from Chicago, with intermediate stops, for the event. He is head of an eight-man commission named by Governor Francis P. Murphy to negotiate to bring the 1942 International Ski Federation championships to Berlin.

Penn, Cornell Shift Date

PHILADELPHIA—The traditional Thanksgiving Day football game between Pennsylvania and Cornell will be played this year on Saturday, Nov. 25, instead of Nov. 23, the day President Roosevelt has announced he would designate as Thanksgiving Day.

It will be the forty-sixth game between the two universities and the first time since 1895 that it will not have been played on Turkey Day.

Both teams have games on Saturday, Nov. 18, and it was felt the players would not have sufficient rest if the game was played on the new Thanksgiving date.

WASEDA WINS SUMO

At the annual intercollegiate sumo tournament held at Hiyoshidai, Waseda wrestlers beat Keio and the above photo shows the presentation of the championship flag at the ring.

Cornell Builds Unique Course

ITHACA, N. Y.—One of the most scientifically designed nine-hole golf courses in America is in process of construction at Cornell University by Robert Trent Jones, well-known golf architect of New York and Rochester.

When ready for Cornell students in the Autumn of 1940 it will provide holes of such variety that graduates of the course will be prepared to tackle any golf course in the country. The holes are designed so that they will call for the use of every club in the golfer's bag.

Bounded on the south by Kline Road and the Country Club of Ithaca and on the north by Warren Road, the course will be approximately 3,500 yards long with par either 35 or 36. It will comprise about sixty-nine acres of the university poultry farm and parts of the recently acquired Hasbrouck and Warren farms.

An appropriation of $25,000 by the board of trustees has enabled the Department of Physical Education and Athletics to proceed with the project. It will enable Cornell students to play at a nominal fee and is another step in the program of carry-over sports fostered by James Lynah, director of athletics.

Sufficient land is available for the expansion of the course to eighteen holes within several years.

The holes are being constructed so that back trees and alternating trees will add variety to the approach to the greens.

Toronto Cricketers Get 200

TORONTO—The Toronto Cricket Club declared its innings at 200 runs for seven wickets today against the public schools' team from Great Britain. L. B. Barrow led the batsmen with 46 runs.

Syracuse Lists 72 For Football Work

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Coach Ossie Solem has invited seventy-two candidates to the Syracuse University football training camp. The men will report on the campus Sept. 7 with practice slated to begin the following day. This allows Solem only three weeks to prepare for the opening game here Sept. 29 against Clarkson. The first major test is against Cornell at Ithaca Oct. 7.

Solem will begin his third season at Syracuse. He conducted a boys' camp in Minnesota during the Summer.

ENDS—Philip Allen, Lester Balmer, Gerald Batten, William Bruett, John Deyermond, Lester Dye, Charles McPhail, Henry Piro, Thomas Prentiss, John Sidey, John Lynch, Henry Jacobsen, Prescott Thorne.

TACKLES—Robert Avery, Leo Bielski, William Eschenfelder, James Garvey, William Heater, George Hooper, Thomas Kinney, Kenneth Martin, Joseph Rigan, Alanson Wick, Ernest Ascherman.

Trip Calls for 360 Gallons

NEW YORK—Trainer Mat Bullock plans to transport 360 gallons of water for the University of Illinois football team on the trip to Los Angeles, where Southern California will be met on Oct. 14.

Palapsco Sold For $6,300

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug 25—The annual Saratoga yearling sales ended tonight with forty-two head, including four ponies, going under the hammer for a total of $48,225.

Consignments were from the Sanford Stud Farms, W. H. Laboyteaux, G. D. and J. E. Widener, C. T. Chenery, Longchamps Farms, William Ziegler Jr. and others.

While no startling bids materialized, there were numerous interesting transactions. Top price of the night was $6,300 for the Sanford 3-year-old gelding Palapsco, which recently won by a wide margin at the Spa meeting. The son of Imp Blue Pete-Lady Baltimore was knocked down to J. Lombardo of Medford, Mass., a newcomer to the sales paddock.

Elwood Sachsenmaier parted with the well-known 3-year-old filly Charlotte Girl for $4,000. She was sold to the Cromwell Bloodstock Agency of Lexington, Ky.

Preston Burch paid $3,000 for the jumper Sabastapool. Major L. A. Beard took the 3-year-old filly Frivolous Girl for the same price.

Frank Kearns, veteran trainer, who parts company with Warren Wright's Calumet Farm at the end of this month, bought Major-Minor, a 3-year-old cold, for $2,700. Kearns plans to race a string of his own.

Leicestershire, a 4year-old gelding that John Sanford bought as a yearling here for $13,000, was consigned by his owner tonight and taken for $300 by John Bosley. Leicestershire never got to the races.

Maraton, a Chilean winner as well as a handicap victor in this country, drew only $150 from W. D. Cleland.

Eastern Title at Stake

NEW YORK—The Central States Racing Association of Dayton, Ohio, will stage its annual Eastern States midget automobile racing championship at Thompson Stadium in Stapleton, S. I., tomorrow night. Drivers who compete regularly at Hershey, Pa.; Philadelphia and Freeport, L. I., will be among those to see action.

Eight events make up the program, which will close with a forty-lap race for the Eastern title. Among those competing will be Doc Shanebrook and Jimmy Brock, Detroit; Carl Forberg, Omaha, Neb.; Tony Bettenhausen, Chicago; Roscoe Hough, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Ted Hartley, Roanoke, Ind.; Dave Randolph, Durham, N. C.; Charley Miller, Linden, N. J.; Harry Sheeler and Chet Gibbons, Paterson, N. J., and Bub Walker, Lawrence, L. I.

Jacqueline Cochran Sets U.S. Plane Speed Record

BURBANK, Calif. — Jacqueline Cochran set a new national air record for 1,000 kilometers today, flying from Burbank to San Francisco and return at an average speed of 214.95 miles an hour. The former record, which she established two years ago, was 302.895 mp. p. h. Elapsed time over the 621-mile course was two hours. 53 minutes and 30 seconds. She flew most of the way at 14,000 feet.

The international record for 1,000 kilometers is 325 m. p. h., established by Furio Niclot in 1937.

The flight, Miss Cochran said, served as a tune-up for her new Seversky military pursuit plane for the Bendix Transcontinental air race early in September. She won that race last year.

Coach Johnson in New Post

NEW YORK—Dean Johnson, who leaves Freeport High School to become football coach at the high school in Taft, Calif., is a native of California. He took a course in physical education at the University of Illinois.

YANKEES BATTING POWER WINS AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—The New York Yankees today clinched their fourth consecutive baseball pennant, breaking the American League record and equaling the National League record set by the New York Giants from 1921 to 1924. If Joe Carthy's team wins the World Series, which begins in Yankee Stadium, October 4, it will be the first club in history to do it four times in a row. The series will be played October 4 and 5 in New York and then move for the next three games in the park of the national league winners, probably the Cincinnati Reds.

The New Yorkers made the Detroit Tigers the victims of the game that clinched the pennant. Marius Russo pitched the Yanks to an 8-5 victory. Bob Rolfe and Joe Gordon collected three hits each. Rolfe drove in five runs, including three in the seventh inning, when he tripled with the bases loaded.

The second place Boston Red Sox dropped another game to Cleveland, 21. Ken Keltner provided both the Cleveland runs. He hit a homer in the fifth and drove in Bruce Campbell in the seventh. Ted Williams' homer was the only run the Red Sox could get off Mel Harder's pitching.

TWO-HIT PERFORMANCE

The best pitching of the day was turned in by Joe Haynes, 21-year-old right hander of the Washington Senators. He held the St. Louis Browns to two hits and earned a 4—0 victory. Haynes walked one batter, struck out four and allowed three to reach first base.

The Chicago White Sox booted away a 7-6 game to the Athletics in Philadelphia. The Sox were guilty of four errors. Sam Chapman drew a walk in the last half of the twelfth and then Eric McNair and Joe Kuhel successively fumbled grounders by Bill Lilliard and Dario Lodigiani, allowing Chapman to score.

REDS WIN AGAIN

The three leading teams of the National league—the Cincinnati Reds, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs—continued their winning ways.

The Reds took another game from New York, 6-1 behind Bucky Walters' five-hit pitching.

The Cardinals had a narrow squeak but came out with a 6-5 win over Boston. Two men were out in the seventh inning when Lyn Kig went in as a pinch hitter and delivered a single drawing in two runs and butting the Cardinals in the lead. Six errors by the Philadelphia Phillies, including three by shortstop Art Scharein, gave the Cubs an easy 8-2 victory. The Cubs scored three runs in the fifth and three in the sixth.

The Brooklyn Dodgers scored all their runs in the eighth inning and beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2. The Pirates rallied in the ninth when, with one man out, Lloyd Waner doubled and scored on Chuck Klein's single. Joe Bowman forced out Klein. Paul Waner singled and Arkie Vaughan grounded out, ending the game.

SEASON'S BEST PITCHER

Today's victory for Bucky Walters was his 25th of the season making him easily the season's outstanding pitcher. He has been beaten ten times, including three times by the Cubs. Walters' teammate, Paul Derringer, has won 21 games and lost seven. Bowman of the Pirates has a record of twelve and five Larry French of the Cubs has thirteen and seven and Harry Gumbert of the Giants has fifteen and nine.

The American League list of leading pitchers reads like this: Atley Donald, Yankees, thirteen and three; Joe Heving, Red Sox, eleven and three; Red Ruffing, Yankees, twenty-one and six; Lefty Grove, Red Sox, fourteen and four; Fritz Ostermueller, Red Sox, eleven and four.

Australian, Philippine Amateur Wrestlers Arrive Here Friday

A party of nine champion amateur wrestlers from the Philippines and Australia together with their coaches and trainers will arrive at Kobe on Thursday aboard the N. Y. K. liner Kitano Maru to compete in the Pan-Pacific Amateur Wrestling Championships to be held in the Kanto and Kansai districts on October 8 and 15, respectively.

The members of the Australian and Philippine teams are;

Australian team—T. Albieg, coach; F. Findlay, trainer; E. Purcell, bantamweight; R. Purchase, featherweight; R. Garrard, lightweight, and T. Trevaskis, welterweight.

Philippine team—Florendo coach; P. Landero, bantamweight, Florendo (younger brother), featherweight; Bernabe, lightweight, and Bacabac, welterweight.

The Australian wrestlers are champions of their respective divisions while Bacabac on the Philippine team is the welterweight champion.

They will arrive here Friday and stay at the Y.M.C.A. in Kanda-ku.

EPATANT BESTS FIELD AT SPA; SICKLE T. WINS

N.Y. Times

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y.—Aug. 26—Epatant, the Flash Stakes winner, captured the Grand Union Hotel Stakes today over a rough track that caused the withdrawal of Bimelech, who will be reserved for the Hopeful, rich stake on the final program next Saturday. Boy Angler, Bimelech's stablemate, went to the post and suffered his first defeat, finishing fifth among eight who ran for the $10,375 purse as 15,000 persons watched.

Half an hour later Mrs. B. F. Whitaker's Sickle T. drove to victory in the $10,600 Merchants and Citizens Handicap after he had been made a short-priced favorite at 7 to 5. The margin was half a length and the triumph was worth $8,050.

Thanksgiving gained the place after havng made all the early pace. Strabo's late charge landed third money.

It was one of the meeting's best days of racing, although form held up not at all as had been the case earlier this week. This was largely because of the track, which was baked on top and gummy underneath. Some called it good, some slow and some drying out. Whatever it was, it was hard to run over for the horses.

A CONSECUTIVE TRIPLE

Ronnie Nash, who handled Sickle T., appeared to have no trouble, however, as he gained a triple, the other two winners being Bright Gray and Gas House, long shots in the sixth and seventh races. Since the Merchants and Citizens was the fifth, Nash's triple was consecutive. It also was a perfect score, for he had only three mounts.

Epatant's victory was worth $8,625 in the Grand Union, and he fought it out gamely to beat Smart Bet a head on the post. The winner, owned by Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, and gave women owners the two main stakes. In the Merchants and Citizens, women owners scored a sweep, all four places going to them.

Jerome H. Louchheim is the owner of Smart Bet and William Ziegler Jr. is the owner of In Charge, who was third, so the success of feminine owners was partly halted in the 2-year-old stake. Boy Angler, owned by Mrs. Charles Freeman Sheldon, whose racing name is "Mr. French," finished up the stretch after showing that he did not like the going.

Opening the public choice, Boy Angler went up in the betting to be 5 to 2 at closing. By contrast Smart Bet was backed down from an opening at 5 to 2 to a closing at 2 to 1.

SMART BET AWAY FAST

This support seemed justified, for the Louchheim racer was off fast and soon opened what some thought a commanding lead. But Epatant was always in close pursuit. At the head of the stretch he came around the leader, and standing a long drive he was just up to nip Smart Bet in 1:14 flat for the six furlongs. In Charge also came from far back.

Sickle T's good race was expected. Previously a winner over the track, the son of Sickle showed that he was a hard-hitting horse who could handle rough footing.

Thanksgiving ran fastest away from the gate, and it seemed as if he would lead from end to end as he had to take the Travers last year. But Sickle T. never was far away.

Going past the far turn Sickle T. challenged the leader. Nash made a keen move at the head of the stretch when he went inside Thanksgiving instead of outside. This saved ground and also discounted any hope Eddie Arcaro, up on Thanksgiving, may have had as to making the other go wider still.

While all this was going on Strabo was far off the pace. He came fast in the closing quarter, but Sickle T. in the meantime had gone into the lead. Tired as he was, Mrs. Whitaker's color-bearer lasted. The three-pound pul Sickle T. enjoyed over Thanksgiving told in the last furlong. The time was 1:58 2-5 for the mile and three sixteenths.

The racing began with a stake and an upset victory that started many off on the wrong foot. Thomas Hitchcock sent out Rioter and Constructor as an entry in a field of five, and the two were heavily backed at 6 to 5. They finished three, four, respectively, while C. Mahlon Kline's Whaddon Chase scored by half a length at 12 to 1.

This victory was due in no small part to Tom Roby's capable ride in waiting behind the pace. He turned loose in the last half mile and earned for his employer $2,025 of a gross purse of $2,875.

HOMBURG IS PULLED UP

Second was Mrs. Gwladys Whitney's Rhalamanthus. Third went to Rioter and fourth to Constructor, while pulled up and not finishing was Homburg, heavily played second choice at 8 to 5.

The race produced two casualties, Homburg and Constructor. The former looked very much as he walked off as if he had a bowed tendon. Constructor was cut down on the near foreleg, and the gash could be plainly seen as Jockey A. Scott brought him back to the scales.

It was a strange race, with plans going awry and Whaddon Chase doubtless more than a little lucky to win despite Roby's ability and the obvious fact that the son of Monk's Way was well trained. For one thing, it seemed that the Hitchcock plan of bracketing Rioter and Constructor went aglimmering right after the start. In the first 100 yards or so, going into the first jump, it seemed that it was Rioter who jumped on his stablemate.

However that may be, Constructor went right to the front, evidently against the wish of Scott, who tried with all his power to take back. A declaration had been made by Mr. Hitchcock that he would win with Rioter.

While Scott was wrenching back on Constructor, Rioter was going easily behind the pace. Homburg's rider, Willie Collins, also appeared to be waiting to see what Rioter had in reserve, evidently fearing that horse most.

RHADAMANTHUS TAKES LEAD

While that watching game was going on, McGovern aboard Rhadamanthus evidently decided he had no watching to do, but ought to get there fastest in the shortest possible way. So he went blithely ahead and opened a big lead with Mrs. Whitney's colorbearer.

It seemed that he would steal off and win the race until Roby went after him. So in the last half mile Whaddon Chase and Rhadamanthus, the longshots, put on a pretty battle while the choices finished up the stretch.

The winner was timed in 4:19 3-5 for the two miles under 131½ pounds. A pound and a half of this was overweight.

The second race saw the defeat of another favorite, and a very short priced one at that, when Generalis was outgamed in the stretch by Blue Stocking. Generalis was held 1 to 2, backed down from 3 to 5, while Blue Stocking went up in the betting from 2 to 1 to 3 to 1.

The race was solely between these two for the whole of its six furlongs, Generalis going out to set the pace, and Blue Stocking having the power to run his down. They were eight or ten lengths ahead of the nearest of the others, who was Lumiere.

Nick Wall was in Blue Stocking's saddle, none the worse for wear even though he had not felt so well yesterday. The prospect of Wall being ill caused Trainer Matt Brady to get another rider for William Ziegler Jr.s' horses. Wall is the contract rider for Messrs. Ziegler and Brady.

Keio-Waseda Baseball Series Slated, Oct. 15, 17

The baseball classic of Japan or the semi-annual series between Keio and Waseda universities will be played on Sunday, October 15 and Tuesday, October 17, a national holiday, at the Meiji Shrine grounds, according to a revised schedule of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league.

Both teams are presently tied for the topnotch position in the league standings with five victories, one draw and one defeat each.

The revised schedule also includes the following games, all to be played at the Meiji Shrine stadium:

October 7: Teidai (Tokyo Imperial) vs. Meiji, 1 p.m.; Keio vs. Rikkyo, 3 p.m.

October 8: Meiji vs. Teidai, noon; Waseda vs. Rikkyo, 2:30 p.m.

October 14: Meiji vs. Hosei, 2 p.m.

OHIO STATE READY FOR ALL COMERS

COLUMBUS, Sept. 13—When he asked 62 candidates to report for Autumn practice dourfaced Francis Schmidt gave open warning to Ohio State football foes to look out for the "Buckeyes" this season, says Jim Emerson, United Press staff correspondent.

The gridiron invitation list, which includes 21 of 24 available lettermen, is the longest in Coach Schmidt's six-year tenure at Ohio State. Football-minded Columbus regards the large squad as an indication of the thoroughness and determination of the ex-Nebraska lawyer in his efforts to recoup some of the diminished "Buckeye" football prestige.

In past Autumns, Schmidt has been content to work with squads of between 50 and 55 men, probably the smallest in the Big Ten conference considering the 13,000 Ohio State enrollment.

MORE AGILITY, LESS BEEF

But the "Buckeye" coach is overlooking no potential star halfbacks or linemen this time when he assembles the machine which must plough through a typical "murder row" Ohio State schedule. The "Buckeyes" meet Northwestern, Minnesota and Cornell on successive October Saturdays.

The squad will be well-sprinkled with experience but Schmidt and his aides have a man-sized job to build a first class line. The forward wall was last year's headache and may or may not be the same this season. Schmidt indicated last Spring that he would demand more agility and less beef in his linemen to smooth the path for his net razzle dazzle attack that fizzled last Fall.

Charley Maag, giant sophomore center last year, has been shifted to tackle and Jim Daniell, an extremely handy sophomore, may land the other starting post. Daniell is a younger brother of the former Pittsburgh all-America tackle.

NEW ARRIVALS

Charley Anderson, an aggressive Negro, and Pete Hershberger are two sophomores who will push the veterans Esco Sarkkinen, Sam Bartschy and Frank Clair for regular end service.

The return of six lettermen who saw almost equal duty last season well fortifies the two guard positions. Captain-elect Steve Andrako, who divided the center post with Maag in the final games last year, should supply the fighting spark of leadership which the team lacked in 1938. He will be supported by Dick Wuellner, Claud White, both lettermen.

Keith Bliss and Wendell Lohr, ends; Co-captain Carl Kaplanoff, Alex Schonbaum and Joe Aleskus, tackles, and Pete Gales, guard, are the chief graduation losses from the line. The backfield loses only Co-captain Mike Kibealo, halfback and quarterback, and Bill Bullock, reserve full-back.

Jim Langhurst who shot up unheralded as the brightest star of the 1938 eleven will be back to hold down the fullback job for the second year. Frank Zadworney, regular blocking right halfback for two seasons, also is back.

THE SCHEDULE

Don Scott, who showed flashes of greatness as a sophomore halfback last Fall, has been moved to quarterback and starred as a passer and ball-carrier in that position in Spring drills. He may cash in on his early promises in a big way this Fall.

Johnny Rabb, 1937 fullback ace, hopes an injured knee is recovered sufficiently for him to bid for a halfback job. He was out all last season. Jimmy Strausbaugh, speediest runner last Fall, must clear up scholastic difficulties to be eligible.

Tom Kincaid, Dick Fisher, Jack Graf and John Halibran are promising sophomores, any of whom may develop into a backfield sensation.

The schedule: Oct. 7, Missouri at Columbus.

Oct. 14, Northwestern at Columbus.
Oct. 21, Minnesota at Minneapolis.
Oct. 28, Cornell at Columbus.
Nov. 4, Indiana at Columbus.
Nov. 11, Chicago at Chicago.
Nov. 18, Illinois at Columbus.
Nov. 25, Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Berwyn Legion Victor, 12-0

SUMTER, S. C.—The Berwyn, Ill., American Legion junior baseball team defeated Passaic, N. J., 12 to 0, today and won the championship of the Eastern region. The Illinois team, which defeated Passaic, 14—8, in the three-game series opener Tuesday, will play Omaha, Neb., in Omaha for the national championship.

81,456 SEE N.Y. GIANTS TOP COLLEGE ALL-STAR ELEVEN, 9-0

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

CHICAGO, Aug. 30—The New York football Giants unlimbered their heavy artillery before a record crowd of 81,456 in Soldier Field tonight and dropped three neat bomb-shells into the laps of the College All-Stars. By the margin of three field goals the champions of the National League toppled what had been heralded as the strongest of these selected college teams, 9 to 0, in the sixth annual Chicago Tribune game.

Ward Cuff booted one from the 34-yard line in the opening session. Then Ken Strong, back in a New York uniform for the first time in four years, split the uprights from the 22 in the second quarter and also hammered home the final blow with a magnificent 41-yarder in the last.

That was all there was to it. The Giants, never beaten in an All-Star game, rose to the heights like the great team they are, turning in such an efficient, workmanlike job that this battle had few of the thrills of any of its predecessors.

LOSERS ARE SMOTHERED

The New Yorkers were just too good, smothering the collegians at every turn. It was almost as if the All-Stars were trying to force their way into the meat grinder as the Giants restored professional football's prestige in these affairs to bring the totals to an even balance. The score now stands at two victories for the professional elevens, two for the collegians and two ties.

Only three times in the battle did the college lads break past midfield and two of these occasions came in the final quarter when it was too late to be of any appreciable advantage. It was not until then that the Stars were able to bring their statistical output up to fairly respecable proportions.

A quick glance at the statistical table might make this seem like a fairly even contest. It was not. The Giants clamped down on the collegians early and often, to the complete chagrin of a crowd which topped by several hundred the previous best mark and turned in a gross of $162,350 to the Chicago Tribune charities, also a new high.

SOAR STAYS ON BENCH

From a football standpoint this was really an excellent game. As a spectacle it might have seemed dull, so one-sided was it. Even at that, Stout Steve Owen did not use all his weapons, Hank Soar, Kink Richards and a few more New York reliables being kept on the bench all the way.

Only twice did the Maramen fail to capitalize on scoring opportunities. On one of these occasions a pass was intercepted with the ball on the All-Star 13 and, a few moments later, as the New Yorkers drove to the 2, Cuff, the automatic one, missed a simple 9-yard field goal. Perhaps it was too easy.

The rest of the way the Giants had the pressure on. The highly touted Davey O'Brien and the greatly publicized Sid Luckman did little pitching of any value. Billy Patterson of Baylor stole that phase of the show, but if it had not been for Bill Osmanski of Holy Cross the New Yorkers would have slaughtered the All-Stars.

The Crusader took over the collegians' ground-gaining department completely and made almost half of the tackles while he was in the line-up. Up ahead, Ed Bock of Iowa State, Ed Beinor of Notre Dame, Ky Aldrich of Texas Christian and Waddy Young of Oklahoma did rather well. George Faust of Minnesota was a grand blocking and kicking back. But outside of these few, the All-Stars were long on the all and short on the stars.

STILL THE WHIRLING DERVISH

As for the Giants, they did so excellent a job that it was almost hard to pick out the heroes. Practically no one performed poorly. Tuffy Leemans was the whirling dervish of old, Ed Danowski the same old passing wizard, Bill Karcis still a wild man in his line bucking, and Jim Poole, Johnny Dell Isola, Orville Tuttle and Frank Cope superb up ahead.

And of course Mel Hein was in the game. To say that he starred almost is unnecessary. Between halves the crowd watched while he received the Joe F. Carr Memorial Trophy as the most valuable player in the league in 1938. It left absolutely convinced that he rated it.

This All-Star team, culled from the All-America lists of a year ago, was not a good unit. Elmer Layden naturally used his Notre Dame system, and the single blocking was a bit too heavy a burden for his squad to absorb in three weeks. The Giants did not help any with the fierceness of their charge and the completenes of their blocking.

They started rolling very early in the battle, Cuff failing on a 47-yard field goal effort to check temporarily the initial drive. But right afterward they fled 33 yards along and Cuff to reach the 27. Then Ward made the first score with a 34-yard placement that was so perfect that Referee Bill Halloran signaled it was good while the ball was still in midair.

USES DIFFERENT STYLE

When the second quarter began the minions of Mara had a conplete new team. It was entirely different in its style of attack than the other group, substituting the rapier of Leemans for the bludgeon of Karcis. It went 69 yards in eight plays to the 11. Then Strong yanked off his pull-over. The old master was true to the mark in his 22-yard field goal.

In the third quarter Poole intercepted an O'Brien toss and the Giants whirled up to the 13, when O'Brien returned the compliment by intercepting in turn. But that merely postponed things. Back came Karcis, Danowski and Co. to the 2—going forty-three yards in all—only to have Cuff hit an upright with his easy 9-yard field goal effort.

Finally in the last session, an exchange of quick kicks gained thirty-five yards and Strong re-entered the game to make good with a gorgeous forty-one-yarder. Up to this point the All-Stars had gone by midfield once, a foray to the Giant 34 in the second period. But with the issue settled the Owen troupers eased up.

Patterson began to peg that ball and the collegians traveled to the 31, Len Barnum intercepting a boomerang pass. Shortly afterward, Vic Bottari, Patterson and Luckman completed three forwards in a row to go up to the 22, only to have John Mellus intercept a Luckman heave as the game ended.

The alertness of the Giants was amazing. They intercepted five passes in all and so rushed the enemy pitchers that O'Brien and Luckman completed only one aerial apiece. Had it not been for Patterson, the college lads would have been pretty sad in this phase of the game.

And now the Maramen have the All-Star game in New York next Thursday as their next objective, meeting a different kind of team in an Eastern group that will have the well-trained Pitt eleven of a year ago as the basis for a starting unit. This may be different but don't sell those Giants short.

KATO CLOUTS 2 HOMERS AS NAGOYA WINS

Masaji Kato, rightfielder of the Nagoya nine, pounded Ted Kameda of the Eagles for two homers to aid his team to a 4-0 triumph in Wednesday's doubleheader of the professional baseball league at the Korakuen stadium here.

Inability of Kameda to hurl winning ball has been one of the surprises this year. His record is far from the sensational one he registered upon his arrival from Hawaii two years ago.

The Tokyo Giants hung on to first place in the Fall season by downing the Dolfins by a 5-1 score with Pitcher Stalphin yielding six scattered hits.

FIFTIETH YEAR AS GRID COACH FOR A.A. STAGG

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND

STOCKTON, Calif., Aug. 29—Fifty-five years ago this Fall two eager-eyed Yale freshmen quickstepped from the campus toward New Haven Bay, intent on becoming crew racing immortals of Old Eli.

On the way, they met a classmate whose enthusiasm lay in the field of football, a rough, tough game of that era, but one packed with thrills.

He talked fast and convincingly.

Why turn out for crew when football was to be had for the asking?

SNARED ONE VICTIM

The spellbinder snared one victim, a 22-year-old smallish fellow weighing 149 pounds. He turned back to the football field. A famed career and glorious future hinged on that decision. Amos Alonzo Stagg laughingly explains today it was his first "reverse play."

Because "Lonnie" Stagg decided to chase a bag of wind around a field instead of pull an oar in a racing shell, football this Fall puts on display the first man ever to coach the sport a half century.

At 77 years of age, Stagg is as active as most men 20 years his junior. He begins his seventh season at the College of The Pacific with an infectious enthusiasm that borders on the unbelievable.

RETIRED HIM

Seven years ago, the University of Chicago arbitrarily retired him because he had reached the age limit. He had coached there 41 years; before that two years at international Y. M. C. A. training school, now Springfield (Mass.) College.

Retire on his laurels to a well earned rest?

Not the Stagg of seven years ago. He perused the many offers after his Chicago farewell and decided to go West, as Horace Greeley advised the young men of the last century.

DRAMATIC INTERLUDE

It was a dramatic interlude in a career already crammed with amazing episodes.

Dr. Tully Knowles, President of the college and a former University of Southern California man, prevailed upon Stagg to come to Pacific. Neither has had cause to regret.

Last year, the dean of coaches produced the Far Western Conference championship team. As a post-season achievement of proverbial story-book ending, he led his little squad to Chicago to defeat his old university, 32 to 0.

ENGLISH SOCCER DRAWS 400,000 ON EVE OF WAR

LONDON, Sept. 2 —More than four hundred thousand soccer fans forgot hovering war clouds today and flocked to cheer their favorites in the English Football League fight. All games were carried out without a hitch, although several visiting teams had difficulty reaching grounds, due to mobilization and transport difficulties.

Doubt was expressed in some circles late in the week that the eighty-eight English league clubs would see action, but the fottball association announced late Friday the situation in the United Kingdom arising from the international crisis did not warrant cancellation of matches. The Scottish, Irish and Rugby League fixture lists also were played.

FRENCH CALL OFF GAMES

The French Football Federation, on the other hand, called off all week-end matches in that country.

The only incident of the day occurred at Blackpool when a bottle was thrown near the Wolverhampton goalkeeper after a brilliant Blackpool offensive. The referee instructed two policemen to potrol the goal area, and the game continued without further interruption. Blackpool, incidentally, defeated the Wolves, 2 to 1, in a thrill-packed game.

Blackpool spent nearly $200,000 in a team-building program last year and is receiving dividends from the outlay. It is the only team in the first division with a 100 per cent record.

The Scottish League picture remains about the same as last week. The league-leading Glasgow Rangers posted their fourth victory in five starts and hold a one-point lead over Falkirk. The Light Blues defeated Third Lanark, 2 to 1, and Falkirk made it 2 to 1 over Queen of South.

After a scoreless first half at Blackpool, Dodds sent the home team into the lead at the fifty-six-minute mark, but McAloon brought scores even one minute later. Five minutes from time Dodds again worked in close and scored the tie-breaking goal.

A feature of the English League play was the scoring rapidly by individual players. Morrison, West Bromwich Albion forward, scored twice in the first minute against Tottenham Hotspurs, although the Albion lost, 4 to 3.

CINCINNATI REDS WIN PENNANT BY VICTORY OVER CARDINALS

Domei Tsushin

CINCINNATI, Sept. 28—The Cincinnati Reds today defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3 to capture their first National League pennant in 20 years.

By RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, Sept. 1—Caught between the bases . . . Advance notice to the Cincinnati Reds and other interested parties: Red Ruffing will pitch the first and fourth games of the approaching World Series . . . The Yankees will go to 103 victories if they play .500 ball through September . . . Lyn Lary says Myers is the fastest Cardinal and not Gutteridge . . . Myers must be able to carry the mail . . . Paul and Lloyd Waner, the Pirate outfield twins, will be apart in another year . . . The critics said this last Winter, but now they mean it . . . . Jersey City has replaced Newark as the power of the International League . . . That gives the Giants one decision over the Yankees.

Wonder why Tom Yawkey is stalling 1940 contract business with Joe Cronin? Paul Derringer and Wally Berger are the only Cincinnati players with previous World Series experience. . . . And Berger figures to watch the next classic from the bench, unless McKechnie uses him as a pinch hitter. . . . McKechnie will soon become the only manager in history to win three pennants in the same league with three different teams . . . He already has won with the 1925 Pirates and the '28 Cardinals. . . Marvin Bruer of Kansas City had pitched a perfect game until two were out in the ninth inning . . . Not one Columbus player had reached first base . . . Then Eddie Oorgan, pinch hitter, topped a ball in front of the the plate and beat it out.

Rumor has Hank Greenberg leaving Detroit in 1940, with Rudy York taking over the first base duties of the Tigers . . . The Yankees would like to have big Hank, who is the outstanding Jewish player of all time . . . But the Tigers must look upon such a move as ridiculous . . . Washington looms as a strong possibility . . . Detroit probably is interested in Cecil Travis, the shortstop . . . The Chicago White Sox are tagged the Gashouse Gang of the American League . . . With big league clubs allowed to carry 25 players, there seems no need of fellows like Terry Moore, Myril Hoag and Jimmy Foxx appearing on the hurling rubber . . . Since 1900, Brooklyn has finished last in the National League only once—1905.

No Cincinnati player has paced his circuit in home runs since Fred Odwell ranked first with the unimpressive total of nine in '05 . . . Down New York way they think Bill Terry will put Burgess Whitehead and Alex Kampouris on the trading block this winter. . . . Dan Howley, long a power in the International League, has been released as Toronto general manager . . . Tony Lazzeri is now running the club in the office as well as on the field . . . Monte Pearson observes his 30th birthday tomorrow, and Joe Heving his 38th . . . Alex McColl, once on the Washington pitching staff, will manage a Greenville (S. C.) again in 1940 . . . Cedric Durst stays with San Diego in '40.

The Cubs need a new shortstop . . . . Bobby Mattick will do in the field, but not at the plate. . . . Rumor has Kiki Cuyler headed for a piloting berth in the senior league. . . . The former outfield star has done a great job leading Chattanooga in the Southern Association . . . Connie Mack is around again talking about building another pennant winner at Philadelphia. . . . What a man! . . . .

Reds Still Need That 1 Game to Top National Loop Pennant

Domei Tsushin

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27—Aided by two costly errors, the St. Louis Cardinals shutout the Cincinnati Reds 4-0 today and moved within two and a half games of the Reds, who need but one game to clinch the National League pennant.

The Cardinals with William "Bill" McGee on the mound held the Reds to four scattered hits, while they garnered seven hits for four runs off William "Bucky" Walters.

Keio Teams Enter Finals of Doubles In Nichi Nichi Tourney

The semi-finals of the doubles of the Tokyo Nichi Nichi's annual tennis championships Thursday afternoon at the Waseda University courts resulted in an all Keio University affair in the finals scheduled for play this afternoon.

Fujikura and Yamakawa eliminated their school mates, Kusumoto and Yamagata, 6-3, 11-9, 4-6 and 6-2 while Tsuruta and Kagitomi took the measure of Kimura and Taneda of Waseda University, 6-4, 6-1, 3-6, 3-6 and 8-6.

Miss Yuki Kamo, national women's champion, disposed of Miss Asano, 6-2 and 6-0, in the second round of the women's singles.

Mrs. Kuwana and Miss Imai defeated the Miyagi sisters, 6-0 and 6-1, in the second round of the doubles.

The Dodgers could have used Bill Posedel, whom they sent to the Bees for Al Todd. . . . Bill has won 14 games for the crippled Boston club . . . The White Sox have drawn 146,000 through the Comiskey Park turnstiles in four night games . . . Forget about the Red Sox moving the Fenway Park right field bleachers closer to home plate.

Moe Berg's home run at Detroit on Wednesday was his first in four years of American League play with the Red Sox. The catcher hit two back in 1935. . . . Moe hits plenty of homers, however, in his pre-game discussions on the bench . . . . Traveling about 45,000 miles by train, automobile and plane, Al Schacht has done his comedy act before some 500,000 fans this season . . . At least, that's what his advertisement in the Sporting News reveals . . . The International League and American Association close their schedules Sept. 10, but the play-off card runs into the first week in October . . . The Phillies have had a tie-up with Baltimore since John Ogden's arrival at Shibe Park.

FORWARD PASSES PROVIDED MOST RADICAL CHANGE

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND

STOCKTON, Calif., Sept. 1—American college football has undergone many changes since its inception but the most revolutionary step of all, in the opinion of Amos Alonzo Stagg, was the introduction of the forward pass.

Reviewing 55 years of active participation in the sport, this is his 50th as a coach, the stocky grey-haired mentor of the College of The Pacific here said the decision to permit throwing of the ball in a forward direction caused the junking of practically all earlier theories of attack and defense.

CAME IN 1906

The forward pass came into being in 1906. It was born of desperation at a meeting of the Rules Committee. Football was in the bad graces of the public; in fact it was tottering on the edge of a precipice. The battering ram and push, pull and twist tactics of 1905 had created havoc. There was a strong feeling for outlawing the game.

In the Rules Committee meeting grave-faced old men discussed the situation. Stagg was there representing the University of Chicago, where he coached for 41 years before the arbitrary age retirement limit there sent him westward.

The forward pass originated at this gathering. Who of those present proposed adoption of this now universally used aerial offensive weapon?

CLAIMS NO CREDIT

As Stagg recalls that contribution to football history it was Dr. H. L. Williams, then University of Minnesota coach, who first said: "Why not let them throw the ball forward?" It is a controversial matter. Two others also are credited with conceiving the idea. But Stagg, who disclaims any credit for it, thinks Dr. Williams was the man.

The idea was adopted with the proviso that if the ball crossed the scrimmage line it had to be passed five or more yards to either side of center. It could cross the line diagonally or the passer could run to either side before throwing just so the five-yard minimum was observed.

MARKINGS CHANGED

As a result of the new pass rule, markings of the field were changed from a gridiron pattern to a checkerboard effects on longitudinal and latitudinal lines. This permitted closer check on the five-yard passing zone regulations.

Although Stagg claims no credit for originating the pass, he believes he made more use of it than any other coach the first year. He worked out a varied assortment of plays to be used against Minnesota in the opening Conference game of 1906. The game was played in thick mud and Quarterback Walter Eckersall was unable to try one pass. Minnesota won 4-2 and knocked Chicago out of the championship running. On the following Saturday the passing attack was sprung on Illinois. Chicago won 63-0, a score so large the fans could scarcely believe their eyes.

Tri-District Women's Track Meet To Be Held In Tokyo, Oct. 7 and 8

The second annual tri-district women's track and field championships, under auspices of the Yomiuri Shimbun, will be held at the Meiji Shrine stadium on October 7 and 8.

In conjunction with this meet, an open men's team will battle for honors with a picked student's contingent.

Kohei Murakoso, Japan's No. 1 long distance runner, and Ryutoku Yoshioka, best known sprinter in the Far East, will compete for the "open" team.

3 ELEVENS STAND OUT IN BIG SIX

KANSAS CITY—Like a chorus of dancers, every football member of the Big Six Conference appears dazzling from a distance.

Oklahoma is proud of its line prospects; Kansas State has its Elmer Hackney and Missouri its Paul Christman; Iowa State is alive with a new feeling and some good sophomores; Kansas hired Gwinn Henry, the midland's football wizard; and two poor seasons in succession have never before plagued Nebraska.

But in reality—as in every good chorus—the Conference has two rows. Out front are Oklahoma, the 1938 champion and Orange Bowl competitor; Nebraska and Missouri. Iowa State, Kansas State and Kansas are allotted space farther back on the stage.

Graduation took from the Sooners an all-America end, an outstanding guard and five backs from their 1938 machine. Another back can't play because of injuries, so Coach Tom Stidham must go through the Fall with only two complete lines, a dozen or so average backs—and Jack Jacobs.

JACOBS HEAP BIG SECRET

Jacobs is a full blooded Indian, continually on the gridiron warpath. He's a sophomore and scarcely mentioned by any Sooner officials except in their report that he was injured in a Spring workout.

He is being kept undercover as a surprise for Northwestern in Evanston on Oct. 7.

Gilford (Cactus Face) Duggan, a tackle; Ralph Stevenson, a guard, and End John Shirk are expected to twinkle in the line.

Except for Center Charles Brock, just about the entire sophomore eleven which represented Nebraska a year ago will be available again for Maj. Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones.

The Huskers were still seeking their first victory as the October pages fell from the 1938 calendars. Things will be different this year and if Vike Francis turns out to be just part of the player Brother Sam was a few years ago, the Nebraskans may be great.

Herman Rohrig, a quick halfback, was good enough as a sophomore last year to win second all-Big Six recognition.

CHRISTMAN'S BACK

Missouri kept in the 1938 picture with one of the nation's best passers along with a great center and a set of ends who were outstanding defensively but usually just standing when it came to pass catching.

Paul Christman, a tractor-legged halfback, returns to do the tossing. He can run as well, and sometimes plunges. He was the conference's outstanding sophomore of 1938.

As ends Coach Don Front will have Orf and Orf, not a laugh but twins who have the first names of Robert and Roland. Both won letters by spectacular performances in the wind-up games last fall.

Squat, rubbery Don Ducheck is the top candidate for the center post vacated by Jack Kinnison.

Loss of all-America Guard Ed Bock, Quarterback Everett Kischer and six other regulars would have been disastrous to Iowa State's prospects any other year but the feeling generated by last seasson's second-place club carried through the Spring drills where Coach Jim Yeager says he uncovered enough talent to put another smart eleven on the field.

Yeager's only lament is that he found only enough for one team, a problem Iowa State coaches face annually. Hank Wilder, a crashing halfback; Capt. Martin Boswell, a rangy end; and Jack West, a center, are available from the 1938 team which lost only its final contest.

HACKNEY IS BIG HOPE

Elmer Hackney, Mr. Muscle of Kansas State, is the hope of Coach Wes Fry. Holder of the collegiate shotput mark and a former Big Six mat titleholder, Hackney hits the line with all the finesse of a runaway freight.

He was all-Conference fullback and placed on the all-America honorable mention roll last Fall but couldn't gain a starting berth on his own team. This year Coach Fry says he will start every game. Don Crumbaker is a better than average end.

At Kansas, Coach Henry finds ball carriers plentiful but a line below par. He lost Ralph Miller, a lean-limbed, racing halfback, because of a knee injury.

His Offensive hopes center on Dick Amerine, Bill Bunsen, Milt Sullivant and Frank Bukaty.

Line candidates are numerous with only the guard positions well manned. There's no question about Mike Sibianich and Quido Massare being able to take care of themselves.

Here's how the teams finished in 1938:

					Pts.	O.P.
Oklahoma	5	0	0	1.000	90	0
Iowa State	3	1	1	.700	58	50
Nebraska	2	3	0	.400	47	49
Missouri	2	3	0	.400	52	75
Kansas State	1	3	1	.300	55	86
Kansas	1	4	0	.200	48	76

WORCESTER MAKES EXCITEMENT

LONDON, Aug. 21—The Cricket Season has suffered terribly from the weather, but when we did have fine weather the public roled up most encouragingly, confident that the system of declaring and scoring (coupled with the versatility of captains) will provide thrills and excitement.

This last week Derbyshire defeated Gloucestershire by one run at Cheltenham. That run defeat just about wrecked Gloucestershire's championship hopes. Another thrill-in victory was secured by Middlesex, who beat Essex by five runs at Southend. Eastman, limping because of water on the knee, went in last for Essex, with Farnes to run for him. Essex then needed 21 runs to win, and it looked easy until Smith got poor Eastman leg before. The same fixture had an almost similar ending last season when Midlesex beat Essex by one wicket. On July 11, the first tie in county cricket for 13 years occurred at Kidderminster in the match between Worcestershire and Somerset. Worcestershire seem to have specialized this season in exciting finishes, for they beat both Glamorgan and Northamptonshire by one wicket at Stourbridge and Rushden, and overcame Yorkshire at Stourbridge by 16 runs.

At Lords the last Test Match against the West Indies drew a vast crowd and everybody got value for money.

TOO HOT FOR FOOTBALL

As the August sun blazed down on the West Indies bowlers while they toiled by no means unsuccessfully against the England batsmen at the Oval, the curtain went up on English football, when the Jubilee Benevolent Fund matches were played. Never has our great Winter game opened in more unseasonable conditions, and when the players left the grounds all over the country they looked as if they had walked out of a lake. The intense heat clearly impaired the standard of football; and can you wonder? Temperatures of eighty degrees were recorded on several grounds. As a result the attendances were, on the whole, most disappointing.

It is estimated that the matches were watched by about 350,000 persons, the biggest crowd of the day being at White Hart Lane where there was an attendance of 35,000 to see Arsenal beat Tottenham Hotspur by one goal to none.

In Scotland the "Glasgow Herald" remarks:—"The return to Summer conditions makes one more than ever convinced that the League football season in Scotland ought to be delayed until the beginning of September at least. In these sweltering days it is more a trial of endurance than of skill for the players, not to mention the plight of the spectator, who are hardly likely to find the exertions enacted before their eyes on sunbaked, unyielding turf much of an antidote for that "hot and bothered" feeling. Football is essentially a Winter pastime, but, one supposes, there is the commercial aspect to be considered. Getting games out of the way now is some kind of insurance against the weather vagaries round about Christmas and the New Year.

FOOTBALL SURPRISES

The big surprise of August 19, was Derby County's defeat by Leicester City. The score was 6-4, and for the winners Liddle gave a very sound display. He got two for himself, and he added no end of pep to the side. There were, of course, many hattricks. For Portsmouth, Anderson got three; so did Dorsett for the Wolves, James for Chelsea, Ferrier for Oldham, Chalmers for Aldershot, and Alsop for Walsall.

Major Buckley must have been fully satisfied with the performance of the Wolves, and, of course, with Dorsett himself. One can hardly think the Wolves' great rivals. Everton, can have been similarly satisfied. Their defeat at Liverpool did not make good-reading, and only Lawton showed anything like England form.

What does not make good reading is the number of penalties awarded all over the country. We can only conclude that they were the result of the reminder sent out to referees about the footnote to Law 12 on obstruction.

Fortunately there were few injuries to record among the players. Springett, the Gateshead left back, came off worst of all. He had to be carried off the field on a stretcher. Jones and Morris the Birmingham forwards, both had to leave the field: Monday, Charlton's back, was taken to hospital with a leg injury.

Night Golf Coming, P. G. A. Official Says

CHICAGO—Night golf is not just a fantasy, but something that definitely is going to take its place in the realm of sport, says Fred Corcoran, tournament bureau manager of the Professional Golfers Association.

"An engineer to whom I talked recently said floodlights can be carried around golf courses," Corcoran said today, "and this would make possible night exhibitions. From that point I think it will be just a step to complete lighting systems good enough to follow the flight of the ball.

"In recent years about 70 per cent of the golf played in the East has been of the twilight variety. What's fantastic about the thought of thousands of office workers playing after dark, getting in nine or eighteen holes in he cool of he evening?"

NEVERS THINKS CHICAGO CARDINALS HAVE CHANCE IN PRO GRID LEAGUE

By LEO FISCHER

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 1—Ernie Nevers, husky blond coach of the Chicago Cardinals, is doing the talking.

"I wish I could tell you how we shape up," he remarked as he kept a discerning eye on the practice field where two-score men were going through their paces. "Certainly I think we'll have a much better team, but how much better I can't say for sure."

"Do you think with Marshall Goldberg in your lineup you'll have a pennant contender in the National Pro league?" Your wandering reporter asked.

"I hope so," replied Ernie. "Given a few breaks—and I don't mean broken arms or legs—and we'll make it tough for any of them. That goes too, even if we do have the greatest collection of ends who won't play pro football this season. Just imagine what we could do in a league that emphasizes forward passing if we had Bill Daddio, Earl Brown and Bowden Wyatt—All of whom should be out there on that field. To say nothing of Gaynell Tinsley, who looks like he won't be back this season.

"Ends are our biggest problem," he continued after a pause to tell a lineman in emphatic language to get more body into a block. "We have five left, two of them holdovers from last year, Bill Smith and Cecil Deskin. Of the new men, the best looking ends are Joel Mason, from Kalamazoo Normal; John Klub from Washington State; Roy Becker from Centenary and Butch Nash who starred at Minnesota two years ago and coached last season. They will all get their share of work the way it looks now.

GOOD START AT TACKLE

"We start building our tackle department with three pretty good veterans," continued the coach. "Tony Blazine, Con Baker and Al Babartsky give us a good start. They're all around 225 this year and haven't slowed up a bit. The best lookers among the new men are Frank Huffman, from Marshall College in Ohio and Butch Zelencik, from Oglethorpe. Both of them hit around 240, too, and act like they're made for pro football."

Another pause and then a big smile as Ernie went into the guard situation. "The biggest job we have here is to pick the best man from a whale of a lot of good material," he explained. "They all look good and we'll have trouble cutting. From last year we have John Bilbo, Nick Cuppiletti and Bill Volok. The best new men are a kid named Dragas from North Dakota State, who may be a real sensation; Ship Farroh, who played for me at Iowa and who's as tough as they make 'em, Andy Sabadas from The Citadel, Jim Thomas from Tulsa, Glynn Rogers from Texas Christian and Joe Zimmerman from Centenary. They'll all scale well over 200—closer to 215, in fact, and all act like real football players.

"So far as center goes, I'm looking forward to Ki Aldrich, the All-American from T.C.U. If he's as good as he seems to be, I won't have any worries about that spot. Henry Adams, a 190-pounder who played at Pitt two years ago and was out of football last year, is no slouch, either. We also have a 205-pound youngster named Omer Kelly from Creighton who can move pretty fast and looks good. And then, of course, our veterans—Phil Dougherty and Len Dugan.

CROWDER LOOKS GOOD

"Georgie Faust, the quarterback from Minnesota, may be our regular until Frank Patrick gets over his injuries. We also have a youngster named Earl Crowder from Oklahoma who looks pretty fair in that spot. He's six feet tall and weighs 200.

"There's no weakness in the left-halfback department with Goldberg on our team. He should make a great pro player, with his size and temperament and the ability to stand the tough going. I know he'll be just as popular with our team as he was at Pitt.

"Jim Neill from Texas Tech, Rock Reed from L.S.U., Don Cosmi from Montana, Fritz Waskowitz from Washington and a lad named Robbins from Arkansas are other new men who stand out at that position. Robbins can kick as well as anyone on the squad, while Neill is a whale of a passer.

"We have three veteran right halfbacks—Doug Russell, Milt Popovich and Jimmy Lawrence for a good start on that side. Two boys from a couple of small schools—Carr from Valparaiso and Cecil Sigmon from Lenoir Rhyne should make the grade as reserves for this spot.

"We're well fortified at fullback with Sam Agree and Everett Fisher and a pretty good new boy named Fred Parker." Fisher played fullback at Santa Clara and end for the Cards last season, but now is again in the backfield.

"There you have our sqaud. Maybe our personnel doesn't look so good on paper, but we'll give 'em all a fight on the field. It's a scrappy outfit—without that defeat complex."

Students Cycling Races Slated Sunday

Competing for the first time on a 40 degree banked circular course of 500 meters recently constructed at the Omiya park, records galore are expected to be smashed in the fourth annual national students cycling championships to be held Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. The course originally was meant for the 12th Olympic Games next year.

Waseda, Keio, Meiji, Rikkyo and Hosei universities of Tokyo and the Enki Technical College of Chosen will compete.

The events include: 500 meters, 1,000 meters, 5,000 meters, 10,000 meters.

Porter's Mite Wins As 25,000 Look On

PAWTUCKET, R. I.,—Shaking off the challenge of W. L. Brann's Challedon, who was the 11-to-20 favorite, W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite today won the first renewal of the James C. Thornton Memorial Handicap, at a mile and a furlong for 3-year-olds, before 25,000 persons at Narragansett Park.

Porter's Mite took the lead at the far turn, finishing a length and a half ahead of Challedon. The show went to Friedberg and Axton's Montsin.

Porter's Mite, who earned $4,730 net, paid $18.20, $3.30 and $2.80 for $2. Challedon returned $2.60 and $2.40 and Montsin $4.70.

U.S. RETAINS WIGHTMAN CUP BY 5-2

By KINGSLEY CHILDS

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—Just as most of the 5,000 spectators had anticipated, the United States forces handily retained the Wightman Cup at Forest Hills yesterday, but a large portion of the laurels for the final session of the two-day international tennis classic was unexpectedly reaped by England's 21-year-old Miss Valerie Scott in her first appearance on the West Side Tennis Club's stadium courts.

Although Miss Scott, a newcomer to Great Britain's squad this season, opened yesterday's program by routing Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, America's second-ranking player, 6—3, 6—4, her mates were unable to follow her splendid example, and the Star-Spangled delegation thus swept to a 5—2 verdict for its ninth straight success in the series.

With Great Britain lagging at 2 to 1 as she stepped onto the turf, Miss Scott proceeded to defeat Mrs. Fabyan in such impressive style that veteran followers of the sport tabbed her as one of the most promising feminine stars to visit these shores in several years.

SERIES STARTED IN 1923

Her triumph deadlocked the team count at 2-all, but America's old stand-bys, Miss Alice Marble and Miss Helen Hull Jacobs, came through with flying colors in the next two singles contests to keep the cup in this nation's custody. The United States is now credited with thirteen decisions in the 17-year history of the competition, which began in 1923.

Miss Marble, holder of the women's national and Wimbledon crowns, rallied grandly to subdue Miss Kay Stammers in a hardfought overtime encounter at 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, and then Miss Jacobs clinched the trophy for the defenders by trouncing Miss Ruth Mary Hardwick, 6—2, 6—2.

The afternoon's wind-up duel between the rival first-string doubles combinations mattered little, but it was punctuated by some sparkling shot-making as Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan came from behind to vanquish Miss Stammers and Mrs. Freda James Hammersley at 7—5, 6—2.

Formidable at the net and a powerful volleyer, Miss Scott occupied the pace-setting role all the way as she downed Mrs. Fabyan. The young English ace had a big edge in placements in the opening set and then in the next chapter profited substantially when her swift, low returns forced her rival into errors.

MISS SCOTT SERVES WELL

For the most part Miss Scott fared well on her own service and dropped her delivery only twice, whereas she broke Mrs. Fabyan's on four occasions. However, the invader's backhand was shaky at times, especially when she was back on the baseline, and this weakness cost her quite a few points.

Apparently stimulated by Miss Scott's brilliant perfomance, Miss Stammers lashed out against Miss Marble with determination when the battle between the opposing No. 1 single players got under way. The English ace's aggressiveness was an important factor in the initial set and she flashed better control than Miss Marble.

But at the outset of the next chapter Miss Stammers's hopes of avenging the straight-set reversal received from Miss Marble in the Wimbledon final began to fade. The Californian cracked Miss Stammers's service in the first game and led throughout the set, scoring quite often with well-executed placements. Meanwhile Miss Marble consistently held her service, although otherwise there was little to choose between them.

For more than half of the final set they continued to match each other's efforts, with neither displaying any great degree of superiority. Miss Stammers, at several opportune moments, sent her shots outside of the lines by inches. Still she remained in the running until Miss Marble broke her service in the eighth game to lead at 5—3. Then, temporarily, Miss Stammers staved off defeat by taking the American's delivery, but the situation was reversed in the next frame when Miss Stammers could win only one point on her own.

TAKES FOUR GAMES IN ROW

The contest in which Miss Jacobs sealed the American success was a match of errors, for Miss Hardwick was charged with fifty-two and the victor with twenty-seven, while the earned points totaled only six apiece. The English player simply did not have the strokes to combat Miss Jacobs's potent drives and effective chopping.

Miss Jacobs rather consistently kept her rival scurrying about the court and did not permit her to get set for return shots. The result was that Miss Hardwick had to hurry to get her racquet on the ball and she frequently slammed it into the net or outside of the court. In the opening set Miss Jacobs reeled off four straight games to lead at 5—1 and in the second, upon trailing at 2—1, embarked on a five-game spree to clinch the decision.

Fujikura and Yamakawa Win Doubles Title

Registering a major surprise, Fujikura and Yamakawa of Keio University defeated their more experienced team-mates, Tsuruta and Kagitomi, in the finals of the doubles of the Nichi Nichi's annual tennis championships Friday afternoon at the Waseda University courts. The score was 6-0, 6-2, 2-6 and 6-4.

In the semi-finals of the women's doubles, the Kamo sisters defeated Mrs. Hayakawa and Mrs. Ban, 6-3 and 6-0, while Mrs. Tomonaga and Mrs. Uyeno eliminated Mrs. Kuwana and Miss Imai, 6-1 and 6-2.

TROTTING MARK SET AT SYRACUSE

N.Y. Times

SYRACUSE, N. Y. Aug. 31—Peter Astra, 1939 Hambletonian winner, lost his first heat of the 3-year-old campaign but won the $7,500 Governor's Trot at the New York State Fair today. A 27-year-old world's record was broken in another feature of the Grand Circuit program.

The world's record was set by Greyhound, 1:55¼, and Rosalind, 1:56¾, the two fastest trotters in training. They were hitched to a pole and set a sensational mark of 1:59 for the mile oval, breaking the existing mark for a two-horse trotting hitch by more than four seconds.

The old record of 2:03¼ was set by Uhlan and Lewis Forest at Lexington, Ky., in 1912. Greyhound, owned by E. J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill., and Rosalind, owned by Gibson White of Lexington, Ky., covered the last half mile in 58 seconds, one of the most remarkable finishes ever seen on any track. Fractional times were 0:31½, 1:01, 1:29 and 1:59. Sep Palin drove.

Peter Astra, owned by Dr. Leroy Guilinger of Andover, Ohio, took the first two heats of the Governor's Trot to insure first money but finished third in the final heat, being unable to stave off the stretch drive of Gauntle, owned by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Conn., and also being nosed out by Bagpiper from the Arden Homestead Stable, Goshen, N.Y.

The victory moved Peter Astra's earnings for the year past the $39,000 mark, as first place in today's race was worth $3,112.50.

JARETZ NOW BEST SPRINTER IN AMERICA

N.Y. Times

DETROIT, Aug. 27—Ralph Flanagan of Austin, Tex., completed his fourth straight slam of the distance events. Peter Fick of New York was dethroned as America's leading sprint swimmer and five tiny athletes from far away Maui, Hawaii, won the team championship as the senior men's National Amateur Athletic Union outdoor championships ended tonight.

Flanagan, 22-year-old student at the University of Texas, won the 880-yard free style tonight to go with the mile and 440-yard titles he had captured earlier. He has not lost a national championship race since 1935, when he was beaten in the 440-yard event in Detroit after having won the mile and the 880.

FIRST BY 30 FEET

Flanagan was shooting at his world record of 10 minutes 7.6 seconds, but he failed by 4.3 seconds. He won by 30 feet from Kiyoshi Nakama of Maui, the new 220-yard free style champion.

Fick's downfall in the 100-meter free style was not surprising, because he had barely survived the trials this afternoon. The six finalists hit the finishing mark within a yard of each other tonight and after a long conference the judges decided Otto Jaretz, 17-year-old Chicago high school student, was the winner. Fick could do no better than fifth.

Adolph Kiefer of Chicago retained his 300-meter individual medley championship and failed by only two-tenths of a second to equal his national record of 4:02.

DETROIT A. C. SECOND

The Alexander House Community Association, the Maul team, was the first to represent Hawaii in the national championships since 1928 and became the first organization to take the title from the mainland of the United States. Maui scored thirty-two points, three more than the Detroit Athletic Club.

Second to a teammate, Al Patnik, in almost every meet for the past three years, Earl Clark, Ohio State University athlete from Miami, Fla., won his first major swimming title when he captured the ten-meter platform diving championship this afternoon.

Clark dethroned Elbert Root of Detroit, triumphing by a point and a fraction over the defending champion. Clark trailed Patnik in the three-meter springboard event Friday, but the latter did not compete in the high board event.

880-YARD FREE STYLE

Qualifiers—Ralph Flanagan, Austin, Texas; James Tanaka, Honolulu; Kiyoshi Nakama, Maui, Hawaii; Carlos Rivas, Honolulu; Henry Paris, San Francisco; Gordon Devlin, Toronto. Best time, 10:31.3, by Flanagan.

Final—Won by Flanagan; second, Nakama; third, Tanaka; fourth, Rivas; fifth, Devlin; sixth, Paris. Time—10:11.9.

300-METER INDIVIDUAL MEDLEY

Qualifiers—William Lucas, Olympic Club, San Francisco; Adolph Kiefer, Medinah Athletic Club, Chicago; George Gibbons, Boys Club, Olneyville, R. I.; Paul Herron, Olympic Club, Stockon, Calif.; Jose Balmores, Maui, Hawaii; Andy Clark, Detroit Athletic Club. Best time, 4:08.2, by Lucas.

Final—Won by Kiefer; second, Clark; third, Gibbons; fourth, Lucas; fifth, Balmores. Time—4:02.2 Heron withdrew because of illness.

100-METER FREE STYLE

Qualifiers—Otto Jaretz, Medinah Athletic Club, Chicago; Takashi Hirose, Maui Hawaii; Howard Johnson, Yale University; William Prew, Detroit Athletic Club; Robert Pirie, Toronto; Peter Fick, New York Athletic Club. Best time in preliminaries and semi-finals, 0:59.8, by Hirose.

Final—Won by Jaretz; second, Johnson; third, Pirie, fourth, Hirose; fifth, Fick; sixth, Prew. Time—1:00.7.

10-METER PLATFORM DIVE

Won by Earl Clark, Ohio State; second, Elbert Root, Detroit Athletic Club; third, Lieutenant Frank Kurtz, United States Army Air Corps, March Field, Calif.; fourth, Jack Cullimore, Detroit Athletic Club; fifth, John Simpson, Birmingham; sixth, William Brink, Detroit Athletic Club.

FINAL TEAM SCORES

Alexander House Community Association, Maui, Hawaii, 32; Detroit A. C., 29; Medinah A. C., Chicago, 23; Ohio State University, 13; Nuuana Y. M. C. A., Honolulu, 7; University of Michigan, 4; Olympic Club, San Francisco, 4; City-Wide A. C., Honolulu, 4; Toronto, Y. M. C. A., 4; Yale University, 3; Olneyville Moys' Club, Providence, 3; Hui Makani, Honolulu, 1.

Melville Hunter Victor

LAKEVILLE, Conn.—John Melville of Hyde Park, N. Y., took the lion's share of the honors in the opening events today of the seventh annual Lakeville horse show.

Melville's Lap Wonder captured both the lightweight and thoroughbred hunter divisions and was second in the hunter hack class. His Maryland won the event for mares suitable to produce hunters.

Alfred M. Maclay Jr. of Millbrook, N. Y., won the A. S. P. C. A. Good Hands competition.

Purdue Candidates Set

CHICAGO—Although another ambitious program has been mapped for Purdue eleven, prospects are anything but gloomy. Seventy-five candidates are listed on the tentative roster, including twenty-five lettermen from last Fall's squad.

In the opening contest the Boilermakers will oppose Notre Dame. Then come games with Minnesota, Michigan State, Santa Clara, Iowa, Northwestern, Wisconsin and Indiana.

Johnson a Prize Rookie

NEW YORK—Coach Ray Flaherty of the Washington Redskins in the National Football League nominates Jimmy Johnson, former University of Washington star, as his prize rookie. Johnson is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 190 pounds. Owner George Marshall predicts that Johnson will be one of the outstanding new halfbacks in the league this season.

'WHO'S CATCHING?'

By JOHN R. TUNIS

Atlantic Monthly

The coach spat copiously and ejected tobacco juice on the grass behind third base. He was a man who had lived hard and played hard, with a face tanned and reddened by the sun of fifty ball parks, and a nose reddened by something besides nature.

"If you had a team of perfect players out there on that field and offered me my pick, I'd choose the catcher. Every time."

Football stars are occasionally beautiful but dumb. Baseball demands intelligence, especially behind the plate—because the catcher is the quarterback of baseball. He runs the team and is the only man who sees every player on the field and every move that takes place. He calls the pitches and sometimes directs much of the defensive play. He is the one person on the team who can never for a moment relax, whether his team is in the field or at bat. He must know wind conditions in every ball park, and his duties vary from studying the opposing batteries, the mental condition of his own pitcher, and the spacing of the outfielders, watching runners on base, keeping track of the tactical situation and seeing that the rest of the team knows it also; to backing up third and first except when a runner is in a scoring position.

PITCHERS WATCHED

All the spectators at a ball game watch the pitcher. Pitchers get the headlines. The Ruffings and Grissoms and Vander Meers attract the publicity, but the Dickeys, Mancusos, and Hartnetts can make them or break them.

Probably there is no such animal as a typical big-league catcher, but J. Luther Sewall of the Cleveland Indians comes fairly close to it, despite the fact that he is a graduate of the University of Alabama and that only one man in four in the National League ever attended college. If you saw Luke sitting in the lobby of the Hotel New Yorker reading the Times, you'd place him as a successful business man. That's precisely what he is, too. Top salaries for catchers in the big leagues range around $18,000. Dickey of the Yanks, generally considered the best catcher in baseball, receives this, while Gabby Hartnett of Chicago makes $17,835. Sewall is paid over $10,000 this year. But Luke has other than financial distinctions.

He is the oldest active player in the game today, with a major-league catching record that is likely to last. Starting with Cleveland in 1921, he has played with Chicago, Washington, and Brooklyn, has averaged ninety games a year, and is now playing his nineteenth season, outdating Hartnett by a year and Lou Gehrig, of the Yanks, by four. Now he's back where he broke into baseball in 1921. A reserve, but still liable for duty.

Let's see how Sewall gives his signals. There are signals in baseball for pitching, batting, and fielding, but the pitching signals are always given by the catcher. He uses the fingers of the right hand, although occasionally he signals by touching his mask or placing his free hand on his leg or hips. Each pitcher on the squad has his own signals, so that a big-league catcher must know six or seven different sets. The important thing is to have the pitcher concentrating upon the batter, so the simplest signals are best—for instance, one finger for a fast ball and two for a curve.

The catcher gives the signals by extending his finger down his leg while crouching, so that the opposing coaches on first and third cannot see. Some players are adept at stealing signals. The greatest signal stealer in the major leagues is Del Baker of Detroit. Charlie Dressen, Brooklyn coach and former manager at Cincinnati, is another. When the National League team played the American League in the All Star game of 1937, Dressen was coaching the National side. There were men from eight National League clubs on the team, and the night before the game some discussion rose as to what signals should be used. Dressen told them to use their own signals and said he would understand each set.

SIGNALS MUST BE CHANGED

For this reason signals must be changed every few innings. In fact, some catchers have a different set for odd and even innings, or for the first five and the last four of the game. There are catchers who use the ball-and-strike count. If it's one ball and one strike, the signal is the third one flashed. Whenever he thinks the batters are getting his signals from their own coaches, the catcher calls for a switch. That is, he may call for a fast ball and then, by tapping his knee with his mitt, indicate that he wants a curve. Some pitchers cross up their catchers and aren't overpopular on that account. I know one sensational star who nearly annihilated several catchers last season by tossing a curve when a fast ball was called, or shooting over a fast one when the catcher expected a change of pace.

Obviously when a player is traded to another team in the league the whole system of signaling must be overhauled. There have been catchers who betrayed the pitch to the batter by their stance.

When a catcher stands upright, it is evident a fast ball is coming—hence the necessity for a uniform stance on every pitch. Some pitchers betray the pitch by little movements such as sticking out their tongue or lifting their left leg higher on certain balls. Infielders also betray the pitch by shifting position too soon. One such move cost the Brooklyn team victory in the World's Series of 1920. Burleigh Grimes, the famous spitball pitcher, won the second game 3-0. But the Cleveland scouts got a tip on his throwing: each time he pitched a spitball Kilduff, the second baseman, would scoop up a little dirt into his glove so that the wet ball wouldn't slip if a grounder came his way. By watching carefully, Cleveland beat Grimes 8-1 in the fifth game and 3-0 in the last one.

Signals are also intended to help fielders get the jump on a hit ball. To know where the ball is likely to be hit, every infielder has to know what the pitch is and therefore watch the signals carefully. But the third and first basemen cannot see the catcher's fingers, so the second baseman and shortstop usually relay it with a word. 'Heads up,' 'Look out, Jim,' or some tip gives them the pitch and an indication which way to start for the ball.

Some pitchers prefer certain catchers and insist on having that man catch them and no one else. Bob Feller of Celveland always wants to be caught by Ral Hemsley. When Dizzy Dean joined the Cubs he refused to let anyone but Hartnett catch him. It was this confidence he had in Gabby which enabled him to pitch winning ball, once beating the Giants with Hartnett behind the plate by throwing only 88 balls in nine innings.

The catcher gives all the signals to the pitcher, but offensive signals are usually given by the coach behind third, who is seldom an active player. Jack Coombs, the old Athletic pitcher now coaching at Duke, explains why someone not in the game should direct offensive strategy. Once he decided to let a boy on his squad act as coach at third. This lad was to hold his cap in his left hand as the signal for a hit-and-run, and take his cap off his head as a signal for a steal. When three men had all hit safely and all stolen second, third, and home, Coombs rushed to the players' bench. He discovered the boy at third had taken off his cap and forgotten to put it back on again.

Catchers have many tricks to influence umpires, none of which, needless to say, are oversuccessful. They try to block an umpire's vision on bad balls, but the umpire who knows his business sees each ball as it comes across the plate. One favorite trick is to swing the ball over the center of the plate as it strikes the mitt to make it appear a strike. Often when there are two strikes on the batter and the next pitch is close the catcher will hurl the ball to third as if it were a strike and the man were out. These gestures influence the fans more than the umpire.

Everyone, including the manager of the Cubs, admits that Gabby Hartnett is one of the best catchers in the big leagues today. One player even goes so far as to call him the greatest catcher baseball have ever seen. That man should know. He was once Gabby's manager on the Cubs, and has had pretty fair success since. His name is Joe McCarthy. Hartnett, who has also worked for Bill Killefer, George Gibson, Rogers Hornsby, Rabbit Maranville, and Charlie Grimm, reciprocates by nominating McCarthy as the greatest all-round manager in the game. Statistics seem to bear him out.

There's eternally something different in baseball, which is one reason it has lasted one hundred years from the time when Abner Doubleday laid out the first diamond at Cooperstown, New York. Sewall, a catcher with twenty-five years' experience in college and big-league baseball, puts it this way: "I try to learn something different every afternoon. That's what makes baseball so interesting. There's a different problem coming up in every game."

Yugoslav Tennis Stars May Play Here in Fall

The Japan Lawn Tennis Association has received a telegram from Ferenc Puncec and Drage Mitic, Yugoslav Davis Cup players now competing in tournaments in the United States, expressing their desire to visit Japan this Fall.

The Association accordingly decided to extend an invitation to the Yugoslav net stars to visit Japan.

The Yugoslav team, champion of the European zone, was downed in the interzone finals by the Australian team, this year's winner of the Davis Cup.

The Yugoslav net men will most likely reach Japan at the end of October.

GRIFFITH FAVORS 3 MEASURES IN BIG LEAGUES

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK—Though he's coming to 70, and was once so conservative that even the Tories called him a stuffy reactionary, Washington's Clark Griffith within recent months has introduced and plugged three measures which are making the nervous Nellies of the American League rebard him in the same light as a union leaguer looks upon Commissar Molotov.

He has recommended that the big leagues play only night ball from July 1 to August 31 each season, and that every big league team's farm-clubs be limited to one in each league classification. His latest suggestion, which the American League's publicity office has not chosen to release, asks that a rule be put in effect forbidding a pennant winner to make a trade with another big league club for a year after winning the pennant.

VIEW ON NIGHT BASEBALL

Griffith's view on night baseball—for which he has no personal love—is that if it is all right for a team to play seven games a season it must therefore be all right to play 60. "Consarn it," he swore over a long distance phone to us today, "I won't put lights in my ball park until they make my suggestion a law. Seven games! Why it takes three years of that kind of night-time dilly-dallying to pay for your lights. If we're going to play night baseball in the big leagues, let's play it. Let's not tease 'em."

He's content that if the farm system of the Yanks is confined to one class AA team one class A, one class B, C, and D club their monopoly would end.

The Yanks either owned or had working agreements with a dozen teams last season. Of course Griffith realizes that the mere number of farm teams doesn't insure a big league club's continued success, as witness the decline of the Cardinals. But he thinks he sees a subtle restraint of trade somewhere in the bushes of a multi-club organization. He believes that young players, just beginning, will spurn the contracts of lesser farm systems and join up with the more far-reaching firm. This, Griffith thinks, shunts most of the good talent in the direction of a Yankee farm, but whether he could stop this flow by a law that would drag the Yanks' farms down to the numerical value of the Phillies' or Brown's seems to this writer to be highly doubtful. The Yanks have a way with them. If they want a kid badly enough they will go to him casually and say, in effect, "listen to all the offers, get the best price you can—and then we'll give you more." Nobody can resist that.

The other owners wouldn't dignify Griffith's third proposal—the one which would forbid a pennant winner to make a deal for a year—by taking a vote on it. As soon as it was presented at the American league meeting the day before the recent all star game, it was turned over to a committee headed, ominously enough, by Ed Barrow, president of the Yanks.

Under Griffith's plan it would be all right for a pennant winner to bring in rookies from it's farm system, but it would be prohibited from plugging up other holes with seasoned players brought or bought from rival major league teams.

WOULDN'T HURT YANKS

As if by a guilty conscience, remembering his reputation as a Yank-baiter, Griffith volunteered the information that this wouldn't hurt the current Yanks, whose only big league acquisitions this year are Oral Hildebrand and Jimmy Deshong.

He foresees some future pennant winner, harassed perhaps by the lack of replacements available from its curtailed farm system and injuries to its regulars, raiding a semi-bankrupt big league club and getting the players who would prolong the team's reign as champ. A rule prohibiting such action would tend to equalize pennant races and halt the practice certain forlorn clubs have of selling their best players to headline teams in need of another star. He thinks that too many big league clubs are becoming ill-disguised farm teams.

Griffith has dedicated himself to seeing that his three farsighted plan become law.

Miss Yamauchi Sets New High Jump Mark

Miss Riye Yamauchi, graduate of the Chukyo Girls High School, set a new record in the women's high jump Sunday at Nagoya by clearing the bar at 1.61 meters.

Miss Yamauchi established her feat during the women's track and field tryouts of Aichi prefecture for the Meiji Shrine games in Tokyo late this month.

Keio Wins Cycling At New Omiya Course

Scoring 24 points, Keio University's riders won the 4th annual national inter-collegiate cycling championships Sunday at the new Olympic course at Omiya Park.

Meiji was second with 18 points and Rikkyo, Waseda and Hosei tied for third with 14 points. Enki College from Chosen placed sixth with 8 points.

KEIO DEFEATS SHODAI, 7-1 IN SOCCER OPENER

With a thousand athletes and officials participating, the fifth annual soccer festival was held Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium with perfect Autumnal weather prevailing.

Five games were played, the first between Keio University, national champions, and Shodai College which opened the Kanto Inter-Collegiate league. Keio, once again the favorite to win the championship, packed too much science and ability for Shodai and won by a 7-1 score, the count at half-time being 2 to 1. Harima and Ninomiya, two players of Olympic experience, led the attack for Keio.

In the other contest of the inter-collegiate league, Waseda ran away from Nodai by seven goals to nil, the tally at half-time being 1 to 0.

In the industrial teams' group, the Nippon Kogaku eleven fought to a 1-all draw with Chiyoda.

In the higher technical school division, the Yokohama Technical School aggregation swamped the Foreign Language College by 17 goals to nil, the score at the end of the first half being 8 to 0.

The soccerites from the Toshima Normal School drew with the Aoyama Normal team, 1-1, in the contest representing the Middle School Federation.

YANKS ARE 3 TO 1 FAVORITES TO BEAT REDS IN WORLD SERIES

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—With sports writers almost unanimously agreed that the Cincinnati Reds have but an outside chance to win the World Series which opens here next Wednesday, "bookies" today were quoting the powerful New York Yankees three to one favorites to cop the world baseball championship for the fourth consecutive time.

Sports quarters here predicted that Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds will send his ace mound star, Bucky Walters, into the first game in an effort to stop the bludgeoning Yanks headed by Joe Dimaggio. Paul Derringer probably will get the call for the second game.

Between them, Walters and Derringer have won 52 games during the season for the Reds, the former having piled up 27 wins and the latter 25. Badly outmatched in other departments, Manager McKechnie probably will depend solely on his pitching staff.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees too is not without his troubles. Though possessing the heaviest-hitting aggregation in either League, he will be forced to do without the services of the veteran Lefty Gomez whose pulled muscle has not healed completely. Gomez probably will not be in shape to take part in the series.

The Yankee managerial staff, sports observers believed, will send Charlie "Red" Ruffing to the mound for the first game which will be played in the Yankee Stadium.

SERIES STARTS WEDNESDAY

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—The Cincinnati Reds, who clinched their first National League Pennant in two decades last Thursday, will meet the World Champion New York Yankees, American League flag winner, next Wednesday for the first game of the 1939 World Series, annual American baseball classic.

In the last-minute scramble for places in the senior circuit, the Brooklyn Dodgers staged a brilliant spurt to edge the Chicago Cubs, last year's pennant winners, out of third place by a margin of only half a game. During the middle of August, the Dodgers were in sixth place.

Though the St. Louis Cardinals failed in their last-minute drive for the flag, they finished a good second. The New York Giants slipped badly during the early part of the season and never recovered. The Phillies gained a strangle-hold on the cellar position by winning only 45 games and dropping 106.

In the American League, the Yankees lived up to pre-season dope by sweeping through the season in championship style. Despite the loss of "Iron Man" Lou Gehrig and the Washington jinx, the Yankees, aided no little by Joe DiMaggio's mighty bat, cashed in on 106 victories while dropping a mere 45.

The Cleveland Indians, despite a late season rally, failed to overtake the Boston Red Sox who clung on to second place. The White Sox were only two games behind the Indians. Detroit, despite "Schoolboy" Rowe's sensational twirling, slipped into the second division followed by the Washington Senators, the Philadelphia Athletics and finally the lowly St. Louis Browns.

The Browns had the dubious honor of winning the least number of games in either circuit. They lost 111 and won only 43.

The final standings of the teams in both major leagues are as follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Cincinnati	97	57	.623
St. Louis	92	61	.601
Brooklyn	84	69	.549
Chicago	84	70	.545
New York	77	44	.510
Pittsburgh	68	85	.440
Boston	68	88	.417
Philadelphia	45	106	.298

AMERICAN LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	106	45	.702
Boston	89	62	.589
Cleveland	87	67	.565
Chicago	85	69	.552
Detroit	81	73	.526
Washington	65	87	.428
Philadelphia	55	97	.362
St. Louis	43	111	.279

Nikko Starts Drive To Attract Visitors In Winter Sports Season

Residents of Nikko, which boasts of the best skating rink in the Far East, have started a drive to attract visitors in the forthcoming Winter season.

Scheduled to be held in Nikko are the national inter-collegiate ice sports championships on January 6 and 7. A movement is also afoot to have the Five Imperial University Ice Hockey series, Meiji Shrine ice games, Waseda versus Keio tournament, and national championships staged at Nikko.

With the Welfare Ministry cooperating, Nikko is planning construction of quarters for athletes and visitors and seating facilities for spectators.

STAGG SCOFFS AT ALL-AMERICA

By RUSSELL J. NEWLAND

Christian Science Monitor

STOCKTON, Calif.—Near the end of every football season, the big push is on to name All-America teams. A great many coaches and others indulge in this player juggling act.

For 49 years, the mentor who antedates all others consistently has declined to pick an All-America player or team. That man is Amos Alonzo Stagg.

No other expert is better qualified to name one or 11 players to an all-time, all-star team. He's either watched or had first-hand information on all the good ones since the first All-America team was chosen in 1889.

Stagg, as a slippery little end at Yale, was named on the first All-America eleven. It appeared in Harper's Weekly, in the sports section edited by Casper Whitney. Credit for the selection is given generally to Walter Camp, an earlier Yale football hero and recognized "father" of the All-America tribute to college pigskin men.

That first team lined up this way: ends—Arthur Cumnock, Harvard; A. A. Stagg, Yale; tackles—Charles O. Gill, Yale; Hector W. Cowan, Princeton; guards—William W. Heffelfinger, Yale; John Cranston, Harvard; center—William J. George, Princeton; quarterback—Edgar Allen Poe, Princeton; halfbacks—James P. Lee, Harvard; Roscoe H. Channing, Jr., Princeton; fullback—Knowlton L. (Snake) Ames, Princeton.

Such distinction is the dream of almost every player. The laurels rested lightly on Stagg's shoulders. He recalls that in 1889 he "didn't get especially excited" over his selection. Fifty years later, starting his seventh season at the College of The Pacific here, he is of the same opinion.

Many a star has roamed the gridirons before his eyes, and he thinks many another will before he yields the coaching scepter.

But Amos Alonzo Stagg, dean of coaches, says he never will nominate a player for an All-America team.

TENNIS SAID 500 YEARS OLDER THAN BASEBALL

Talk about racing's being the sport of kings! Why, it can't hold a candle to the game whose national tournament was recently played at Forest Hills, New York.

From the fourteenth to the eighteenth century the kings of Europe not only watched tennis but played it themselves; Henry VIII, until he was too fat to waddle across the court, bet heavily on himself and usually lost; Henry IV of France—Henry of Navarre—dashed about all day in a torn shirt and cheap breeches until he was so tired that he compared himself to an old donkey whose legs have failed him. Young Henry V of England had been such a playboy with Falstaff and other tosspots that when he came to the throne the French Dauphin sent him a barrel of tennis balls as a hint that he was fit for nothing else.

At Hampton Court Palace, near London, you may still see the indoor court on which many of the early English monarchs romped; for, until the late nineteenth century, tennis was played indoors or on a walled court and had resemblances to our modern squash or rackets game.

It wasn't only kings and nobles who played. The Venetian ambassador to France wrote home at the close of the sixteenth century that there were 1,800 tennis courts in Paris.

And did players take the game seriously in those days! We read of two noble lords, the Earls of Southampton and Montgomery, falling out over a game in 1610 so violently that "their rackets flew about their ears." Try to imagine Don Budge and Fred Perry beating each other up with rackets!

Even the ancient Greeks and Persians liked to throw a ball about, and by the twelfth or thirteenth century players were smacking it back and forth to each other with their hands, as in modern handball. Then a barrier, the predecessor of the net, was set up between the players, and in the fourteenth century the game began to look a bit more like modern tennis.

Of course there were no hollow rubber balls then; the medieval balls were covered with leather or cloth and stuffed with wool, hair or what not. Shakespeare reveals that barbers sold the flowing beards occasionally mowed from patrons' faces to tennis-ball makers. In "Much Ado About Nothing" Claudio says of Benedick, who has recently sacrificed his whiskers, "The old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis balls."

Some folks found that whacking such a ball for an hour or so was hard on the hands, and so wore a glove. Even that wasn't enough for many tender palms, and in the 14th century a bright lad in Italy thought of stretching four or five leather strings across the glove, so that with the fingers slightly bent the shock of the stroke fell upon this crude little net—and there was the germ of the tennis racket. Of course it was an easy step from that to moving the leather-strung glove off the hand and putting a handle on it, though for the next three centuries the handle was so short that a modern player couldn't have done much with it.

Finally, in 1873, people began to play tennis outdoors in England, and the modern game was developed.

In May, 1874, Miss Mary Outerbridge, member of a prominent family in Bermuda, came over to New York with a net and some rackets and balls and introduced the game for the first time to America. It was at first taken up largely by society folk and, not being played as strenuously as it is now, often appeared as mixed doubles, with ladies in long skirts and corsets waving ineffectual rackets at the ball. It was regarded by the laity as pretty feeble stuff.

"The elegant and dignified pastime of lawn tennis," wrote an editor of 1880, "will be languidly indulged in as usual by the snobs and lah-de-dahs at Newport this Summer."

Some of these scoffers actually didn't discover until the advent of professional tennis what a really terrific game it can be. No male tennis fan need feel apologetic for the game that was played by Benvenuto Cellini and Henry of Navarre.

GEHRIG, DI MAGGIO, SIMMONS CHANGE BASEBALL PICTURE

By RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON, Sept. 6—That no sports picture changes more rapidly than baseball is emphasized by headlines of a year ago today. Here are a few: Ruthian Records Fall Before Gehrig . . . Passeau Wins for Phillies . . . Tigers Triumph With Auker . . . Pittsburgh Clings to Lead . . . Keller Stars for Newark. Frankie Frisch's Cardinals, with a patched-up infield, were sixth in the National League, hidden by the Bees. The Pirates were leading the race by 4½ games. Bill Cissell was playing third base for the Giants. Zeke Bonura, Al Simmons and Lynn Lary were in the American League. Burleigh Grimes was the manager at Brooklyn and Jimmy Wilson at Philadelphia. The Red Sox had Ben Chapman in right field and Ted Williams schooling at Minneapolis.

Certainly the affairs of Lou Gehrig are more shocking than all others combined. It was just a year ago that the Yankee first baseman caught up with Babe Ruth in the important matter of driving in runs. Both have produced 100 or more in each of 13 seasons. It was just 12 short months ago that Gehrig established a new major league standard by passing the 100-runs-scored level for the thirteenth year. No other player has done this.

UNBELIEVABLE

Gehrig, perhaps the king of all first base guardians, now seldom mentioned in the stands at Yankee Stadium, or in the other seven parks around the American League circuit. Gehrig, whose endurance play over 15 hard campaigns is called the outstanding single achievement of modern baseball, and certainly a feat which will never be equalled, Gehrig, the man with the piano legs and the big dimples, now a solemn, insignificant figure lost in the shadows of the dugout. Unbelievable. The departure of Lou as a player was front page news many weeks ago, and baseball by this time is fully aware of its great loss. Anything written at this stage of the season may read like an anticlimax. And yet, looking back over the sports pages of September, 1938, and recounting these final accomplishments of the player, his sudden ending seems even more incredible than it did when it actually happened. Indeed, truth can be stranger than fiction.

In his fourth season with the Yankees, Joe Di Maggio may reach a peak which escaped many of the game's leading hitters. As the 1939 American League race turned into September Lane, the "Frisco Kid" was still over the magic .400 level. Steering clear of a prolonged slump, he will become the first Yankee in history to scale that pinnacle and the eighth player since the majors turned the 1900 milestone.

TERRY LAST IN

Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby are the granddaddies of all .400 hitters. The Detroit outfielder and the National League second baseman each went over the top three times. Hornsby did it within the space of four years. Neither had the benefits of the so-called rabbit ball. The Rajah's .424 average for 1924, with the Cardinals, is No. 1 among moderns. Others to make the grade are Harry Heilmann, Joe Jackson, Larry Lajoie, George Sisler (twice) and Bill Terry. The present manager of the Giants was last in, with .401 in 1930.

Di Maggio's work becomes more noteworthy when it is remembered that a majority of American League ball parks favor the lefthander. The Yankee, swinging from the opposite side of the plate, rarely benefits from the various short barriers behind the right fielder. If Di Maggio, with his eagle eye, faultless timing and tremendous wrist power, could turn around and bat the other way, particularly at Yankee Stadium, that current inflated average would rise many points higher.

It is odd that Bill McKechnie has strengthened—or has attempted to strengthen—his Cincinnati club for the September drive with three players cast adrift by the Boston Bees. Niggeling and Shoffner on the mound, and Simmons in the outfield, all had terms with the Hub outfit.

SIMMONS AT CINCY

Conflicting opinions surround the moving of Simmons to the Ohio city. Some think he will help McKechnie outdistance the Cardinals. Others think Bill will eventually find him an anchor in this stretch run. Al was taken, after rivals waived on him, to fill the Cincy hole in left field.

While an American Leaguer, Simmons early gained the reputation of being a "money player." That is, he was at his best in a crucial series, when the high position of his team was threatened. Water Bucket Al batted .333 in three World Series with the old Athletics. But here in Boston this season, before he went West with McKechnie, the veteran outfielder seemed to have lost his once-renowned ability to deliver in the pinch. Numerous times he walked to the plate with important Bee runs waiting on the bases and either fanned or hit into a double play. The Simmons of American League fame would have broken up many of those 25 games the Bostonians lost by one run.

Tokyo U.S. Football Season Under Way Today

The Tokyo Inter-collegiate American Football league will start its sixth annual season at 3 p.m. today at the Korakuen stadium in Tokyo with Keio and Hosei clashing.

Two new rules have been adopted by the league. The one bans any protests against the referee's decisions and the other permits of no water drinking by the players on the field.

Meiji is a strong favorite to retain its championship.

Shortly after noon Monday, representatives of the teams and league officials worshipped at the Meiji Shrine and prayed at the Yasukuni Shrine for the success of the troops in China.

KEIO DEFEATS HOSEI, 13-6 IN U.S. FOOTBALL

Keio University's Japan-trained American style footballers vanquished their colleagues from Hosei University by 13 to 6 Wednesday afternoon at the Korakuen stadium at Suidobashi as the sixth annual season of the Tokyo Inter-collegiate American Football league got under way before an enthusiastic crowd.

Opening ceremonies saw the five member teams of the league, Meiji, Keio, Hosei, Rikkyo and Waseda, march on to the gridiron. Gathering in front of the main stand, the players and officials prayed in the direction of the Imperial Palace, Meiji and Yasukuni shrines. The national emblem was raised after which a minute's silent prayer was observed in thanks to the soldiers on the China fronts and those who have fallen on the battlefields. The championship pennant was returned to the league by Captain Ban of Meiji. A message from League President Ryozo Asano was read. The player's oath was given by Captain Ban after which the game got under way at 2:55 p.m. with Referee Sho Matsumoto blowing the whistle.

KEIO SCORES FIRST

Play was listless for the first 10 minutes with neither team able to show any good football leading to scoring positions. But Keio's eleven gradually began to function and worked the ball down the field for the game's first touchdown after 13 minutes of play. The linemen opened big holes as Tamura and Todo toted the ball alternately for consistent gains. The two also swept the flanks for yardage that pushed the yardsticks back. Todo finally crashed over for touchdown. Try for extra point failed.

Hosei had an opportunity to score in the second quarter when it recovered a fumble on the Keio 22-yard line but Keio put up a stonewall defense and the half saw Keio leading, 6-0.

Hosei gave fans a thrill when Right Halfbacak Ono picked his way through left tackle immediately after resumption of play, then cut in to the right and romped 63 yards before he was brought down on the Keio 5-yard line. He then plunged through left guard to deadlock the count at 6-all. There was no conversion.

TAKEMURA ROMPS 65 YARDS

Keio, roused from sluggishness by the unexpected Hosei touchdown, put over the winning touchdown in the next five minutes of play. Todo feinted on an end run to the right but passed to Takemura who reversed to the left flank. With excellent interference furnished him by his teammates, Takemura got off into the clear and ran 65 yards to cross the final stripe standing up. Todo crashed through right tackle to score the extra point.

Hosei threatened late in the third quarter with the ball on the Keio 10-yard line but lacked the necessary drive for touchdown.

Both teams tried desperately to score in the fourth period with aerial attacks without success.

GREEN MATERIAL FACES HARVARDS FOR GRID TEAM

By WEB MORSE

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON—On the surface it would appear that the Harvards are in for a none too prosperous football season. The old stadium with the same ivy covered tradition is there, the Dillon Field House is equipped with the same modern paraphernalia and Dick Harlow has lost none of his football cunning; but the material problem really is something.

Fifteen lettermen were on the team that beat Yale, 7-0, last year who will not be back. There probably are and have been 15 better men lost to squads, but these boys knew the Harlow system and could execute many of the valuable intricacies so dear to that system. There are coming prospects and contemplative changes of men from one position to another that might solve the problems, but to know Harlow is to know that he harbors no great trust in sophomores.

NOT GOOD BALANCE

The schedule is not one of good balance. Bates is the first game billed for Oct. 7 and should not be too much. Chicago follows the next week end and while the Maroons are not rated highly, it could be something of an assignment to have the team ready because the game is to be played in Chicago and that means a valuable day of practice lost to travel.

Back in Boston the next four week ends are games against Penn, Dartmouth, Princeton and Army successively. The game with Penn will give the man from the Pocono Mountains more than a little concern and Dartmouth, while rated below par at this early date, is no breathing spell at any time. Princeton and Army can be tough, depending upon whether they point for the Harvard game or not, and the records indicate that the Tigers have gone down to ignominious defeats in the past two Harvard games.

TRADITIONAL YALES

Regardless of how the results go to this part of the Harvard schedule, the Crimson will be heading for that traditional affair with the Yales. First the Harlow product will brush up with what should be a polish game against the New Hampshire Wildcats and then the Soldiers Field gates will open to Yale.

By the time the Yale grid forces reach Boston, Nov. 25, Harlow will know his team and know it well. If the sophomores live up to possibilities and the veterans come through, the 15 lettermen will have been forgotten and the Eli will be in for a very busy afternoon.

GRADUATIONS LOSSES

The graduation losses look dark and threatening on this end of the schedule. It is not easy to replace such veterans as Bobby Green, Don Daughters, Ken Booth, Nick Mellen, Dave Glueck, Tim Russell, Cliff Wilson, Austie Harding and Frank Foley, not to forget Win Jameson, Jim Fearon, Chief Boston, Ben Smith, Bob Burnett, and Mike Cohen.

Only three of the 11 men who started against Yale return: Capt. Torbie Macdonald, Joe Gardella and Tom Healey. Three substitutes of that game are back in Bill Coleman, Mose Hallett and Don Lowrey. All the others combine to present Mr. Harlow with a puzzle more baffling than the usual cross-word variety.

Pan-Pacific Wrestling Meet Slated On Sunday

The Japan Amateur Wrestling Association's Pan-Pacific wrestling championships will be held Sunday, beginning at 6 p.m., at the Hibiya Park amphitheater with Australia, the Philippines and Japan competing.

The Australian and Philippine teams, who have been training at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at Kanda since their arrival last Friday, will compete in all divisions from bantamweight up.

TROJANS PICKED TO WIN PACIFIC COAST FOOTBALL

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6—Now that virtually every rival coach in the Pacific Coast conference has "conceded" the pigskin championship to the University of Southern California, there is little left for headman Howard Harding Jones to do this Fall.

All the grey-haired veteran has to accomplish is:

1. Bowl over, in order, Oregon, Washington State, Illinois, California, Oregon State, Stanford, Notre Dame, Washington and U.C.L.A.

2. Rebuild the entire right side of his line, bereft of the men who were the seasoned starters of his 1938 machine.

3. Find out what to do with no less than a half dozen very efficient quarterbacks, on the one hand, and fill a yawning gap at right half.

4. With the Pacific Conference championship.

Strange part of the 1939 outlook for the Trojan warhorse is that last year, before the season started, Jones' rival in the Far West graciously put him on the same spot as this year. They said he couldn't lose.

But the Trojans did lose—handed a whopping defeat by Alabama in the season's opener. The experts quickly decided they had been mistaken, and the Jones critics demanded his job.

It wasn't until later in the season, when the Trojans continued their uphill struggle, winning game after game, that another reversal presented itself, and when the climax of the Rose Bowl victory over Duke was achieved, the Jones-U. S. C. bandwagon once again was loaded to the gunwhales. It's still loaded, which is fine with everyone except the headman and associates close to the situation.

There is no doubt U. S. C. has a world of material, but it is unbalanced. He has replacements for the jobs vacated by graduation, but it will be difficult to replace, for instance, Red Morgan, the big right halfback, or Captain Don McNeil, his center. Ray George, at right tackle, Fisher, regular starting guard, and Stanley, senior end, were experienced men in the Jones system.

Just who will fill their respective shoes remains to be seen. The other side of the line is intact. He has good end material, but Jones would feel better if he knew for certain that Al Krueger, pass catching hero of the Duke conquest, would be ready for action.

Barring the right halfback position, U. S. C. is well fixed with Bob Hoffman at the blocking left half spot, and Sangster and Peoples at full.

For the quarterback role—most any coach would be willing to boast any two of the candidates. Ambrose Schindler, 1937 star, is back. Grenville Lansdell, daring signal caller, pass-tosser and broken field runner, is another. And Doyle Nave, the lad who fired the four passes that brought Duke to its knees, won't sit on the bench again all year for another dramatic appearance such as occurred last January in the Rose Bowl.

Maybe the rival coaches are right about U. S. C., but there's one coach willing to wait awhile to find out. His name is Howard Harding Jones.

Kanto Beats Kansai In Golf Competition

By nine points to six, Kanto defeated Kansai for the second straight year in their 13th annual intersectional play Wednesday at the Ibaragi links.

The scores were:

	Kanto	Kansai
Doubles	3.5	1.5
Singles	5.5	4.5

The record now stands 11 victories for Kanto and two for Kansai.

Gimbel Trophy To Canadians

TORONTO, Sept. 12—Precedent was set at the International table tennis championships, concluded over the weekend at the Canadian National Exhibition, when Canadian plaers won the Gimbel Trophy and the men's doubles title.

Canada's international team, made up of Montreal players, defeated the United States squad in six straight games to win the premier event of the three-day tournament and Pierre Chapdelaine and J. J. Desjardins, both of Montreal, defeated Lee Webb and Mr. Hersh, Detroit, 24-22, 21-19, 14-21, 21-14.

Harry Cooke of New York, deefeated L. Burnstein, Detroit, in the men's singles final 21-18, 21-13, 21-17. Cooke also teamed with Ruthe Brewer, New York, to win the mixed doubles over Miss L. Thall, Columbus, Ohio, and Chapdelaine, 18-21, 21-19, 18-21, 21-9, 21-14.

Miss Brewer retained her single women's title by defeating Mrs. Norman Studer, Ohio, 21-8, 21-17, 10-21, 21-19. Mrs. Studer was runner-up to Miss Brewer here in 1938.

NAMING OF BEST U.S. GRID TEAM IMPOSSIBLE

NEW YORK—The caliber of football coaching has improved so uniformly all over the nation and the struggle for star players is so keen, that a clearly outstanding national team is parctically impossible. Twenty-five years ago one man, Walter Camp, could pick a representative all-America team from the games that he witnessed himself and confine his choice to the East and Midwest. Today all-America teams must be picked by large committees and no one feels certain that any 11 men represent the best in their positions.

Less than 10 years ago the Southwest was almost unknown in national football. Last year it produced several great teams and one of the greatest. The education of the coaching profession through schools, books, moving pictures, and scouting has been so progressive that almost all teams use very similar offensives and defensives. This puts a premium on co-ordination or team play and on those players who possess the spark of genius that enables them to rise to great heights in their specialty. Such men last year were Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian in forward passing, Eric Tipton of Duke in punting, and Bill Osmanski of Holy Cross in ball carrying.

PROPHET ON SPOT

The prophet who attempts to pick the best team for the coming season is certain to accomplish two things: First, to put himself on the spot; and second, to put the team he picks on the spot. Every section will have at least one outstanding team and even though a half dozen play-off games are held in various Bowls, there will be no agreement on a single champion when the season is over.

Yet in the face of all this, there is one eleven that stands out in the esteem of those who should know best—the football coaches themselves. The Tennessee Volunteers are a great team because Coach Bob Neyland last year turned out one of the smoothest offensive units football has ever seen. They went through a hard schedule, won the Orange Bowl decisively, and started preparation for this year almost immediately after their final game. Most of that squad is back and they have in Cafego a great star to climax their smooth, powerful attack.

FACING HANDICAPS

Any general summary of prospects for the season must recognize the handicaps facing the half dozen usual national leaders. Pittsburgh, Duke, Texas Christian, Cornell and Dartmouth are faced with an unusually large loss by graduation. Holy Cross, Navy, Temple, Iowa, Boston College, and Pittsburgh must overcome the handicap of launching new coaching regimes. The combination of these two handicaps puts Pitt in a lower position than they have occupied for several years. On the other hand, a new coach may provide the incentive to turn out a championship outfit as at Boston College.

In the East, Carnegie Tech has most of last year's great team again ready for action. With Condit and Muha leading the way, they should be one of the top teams. Boston College has the material to be a champion, while Fordham and Villanova are counting on just as powerful squads as they fielded last Fall. Army and Navy may develop faster than expected, but they cannot expect outstanding teams for at least another season.

PENN LOOKS BEST

Cornell has a veteran backfield to help its defense of the Ivy League, but several losses in the line give every member of the League a chance to win. Right now Penn looks strongest. Princeton has enough veterans with exceptionally strong sophomore material to give everyone a battle. Dartmouth needs only a blocking back to be great. Harvard has enough sophomore material to win, if Harlow can bring them around in time. Columbia will be stronger but probably will not have reserves enough to stay up all season, and Yale looks very blue from every angle.

Brown should have a great record this year, but it is hard to classify the team as either big or small. Amherst looks like a repeater for the Little Three title, although Williams will provide more opposition and may surprise the Jeffs. Rutgers is in the same position in the Middle Three. The Scarlet has most of their championship team back, but a heavier squad at Lehigh and a stronger offense at Lafayette spell trouble for Harvey Harmon. Connecticut State in New England, Franklin and Marshall, and Muhlenberg in Pennsylvania, and Niagara in New York loom up as favorites for their divisions.

FREQUENT UPSETS

Too many football fans follow the big teams exclusively. The smaller colleges have a habit of not running as true to form, consequently they provide more excitement and interest. This is partly because their prospects are not canvassed so thoroughly, but more because their schedules are so evenly balanced that up-sets come every Saturday throughout the season.

SCRIBES ASKED TO SELECT ALL-STAR MAJOR LEAGUE TEAM

By RUMILL

Christian Science Monitor

Once again the Sporting News has asked members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America to select an all-star major league team. Each scribe names 11 men, including three pitchers, with total number of votes dec ing each position. Keen rivalry often develops among the writers and annually not more than one or two agree with the team which eventually is the popular choice. Even for those who are in close touch with the National and American Leagues from February to mid-October, picking the correct group is not a simple task. Players like Di Maggio, Dickey and Walters make the job easy in some spots, but the rest of the road is harder sledding.

Among the current crop of first basemen, Frank McCormick, Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Mize stand out. McCormick will lead the National League in producing runs. He is dependable in the field and a 154-game performer. A home run threat as well, Frank is the heart of the Cincinnati offense, and the Reds are moving toward the pennant. Mize has tremendous power at the plate and will pace the circuit in batting. His bludgeon has played a front role in making the Cardinals a stubborn threat in the flag race. Foxx heads the home run parade and was having another great year with the Red Sox until forced to leave the field. The temptation is great to name Jimmy or Mize because of their clouting consistency, but McCormick's all round class cannot be ignored. One vote for the Cincy star.

GORDON AT SECOND

With Charley Gehringer and Billy Herman no longer riding high Joe Gordon and Bobby Doerr dominate the second base group. The competition is close here. Doerr is hitting 10 or 15 points above Gordon, but Joe is in the home run race and will drive in better than 100 scores for the Yankees. Also, it is agreed, the New Yorker has a slight edge on the defensive side. Some may contest this latter point, but it nevertheless is true. A vote for Gordon.

The leading shortstops are Joe Cronin, Leo Durocher, Arky Vaughan and Luke Appling. Durocher is making a brilliant managerial start with Brooklyn, and perhaps chiefly because of his inspiring play at short. Vaughan and Appling are well above .300 on the offensive list. But there is a suspicion that sentiment will decide this compact situation in favor of Cronin, whose timely hitting and hustle have helped keep the Red Sox high despite sour pitching. A ballot for Trisco Joe.

Third base? Red Rolfe, Ken Keltner and Stanley Hack. Stan is well behind his 1938 pace, but has strong backing in the National League. Rolfe and Keltner were hitting about even when official averages were last released. Red's base hit output of better than 200 and the position of the Yankees in the standing will settle this one. Ring the gong for Rolfe.

Any number of debates will arise in regard to left and right fields, but nobody will contest Joe Di Maggio's claim on the center pasture. The Yankee stands alone. For right field, it could be Ival Goodman, Teddy Williams, or Mel Ott. The Yankees, after the All-star game, said that Goodman was the "toughest" hitter in the National League line-up. Williams is the freshman darling of the Red Sox and may become the first rookie in history to lead his circuit in driving across runs. However, this department leans in the direction of Ott, who is undoubtedly one of the least appreciated ball players in the game. One vote for the "Little Giant" of the Polo Grounds.

In left field there could be Joe Medwick, Bob Johnson, or Mornie Arnovich. Johnson has a surprising offensive record with a team hopelessly out of the running since the beginning. Arnovich, with the lowly Phillies, has hustled all season and for much of the way set the batting pace. But for every day performance, Medwick can carry the mail. A chalk mark for Ducky-Wucky.

Behind the bat, no all-star aggregation would be worthy of its rating without Bill Dickey—another Yankee who towers over all rivals. Gabby Hartnett has faded this year. Cochrane is no longer around. Harry Danning is a big man at the Polo Grounds, but not big enough to push Bill aside. Check the name of Dickey.

Picking two of the three pitchers is not difficult. Bucky Walters and Red Ruffing deserve all-star ranking. Both may be outstanding figures in the approaching World Series. Behind them are several possibilities: Curt Davis, Paul Derringer, Luke Hamlin, Bill Posedel in the National League; Atley Donald, Bob Feller and Dutch Leonard in the American. Without looking too long, one vote for Derringer. Let the protests come, if any.

ENGLISH SETTER JUDGED BEST IN N.Y. SHOW

N.Y. Times

TUXEDO PARK, N.Y., Sept. 9—Champion Maro of Maridor, orange and white English setter owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. Biddle Duke of Tuxedo and handled by Charles Palmer, today won the highest title awarded at the twenty-first annual fixture of the Tuxedo Kennel Club. In addition to capturing the best-in-show honors, Maro also landed the trophy for the best American-bred in the exhibition.

It was the best show in the history of the local organization and also the largest, with nearly 800 dogs listed. A world record was established when 167 poodles were benched as a result of the specialty event of the Interstate Poodle Club. Never in any country had so many specimens of the breed been brought together in competition or exhibition.

Delightful weather favored the show and brought out a notable attendance of fanciers and members of society.

BOXER IMPORTED CONTENDER

Maro has achieved top laurels many times. The son of champion Sturdy Max and champion Lakeland's Dawn, acquired by the Dukes when Dwight E. Ellis dispersed his famous kennel, is one of the famous quartet headed by Daro of Maridor, best in show at Westminster in 1938. The latter is now at the Ellis plantation in Albany, Ga.

The award of best in show again was somewhat of an anti-climax as there were six American-breds judged first and there was only one imported dog. The latter was the boxer, Utz V. Dom of Mazelaine, owned by John Phelps Wagner of Milwaukee and handled by Leonard Brumby.

Maro came through a spirited series of competitions and in his group had to defeat the noted Labrador retriever, champion Earlsmoor Moor of Arden, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Milbank of New York City and handled by James Cowie.

One of the closest contests of the day came in the working dog group which was won by The Boxer. His closest rival was the Old English sheepdog, the famous champion Merriedip Master Pantaloons, owned by Mrs. Lewis Roesler of Great Barrington and handled by George J. McKercher. The sheepdog was the best American-bred in the group.

BLAKEEN EIGER POPULAR

Battling all the time for the American-bred title and the right to enter the final competition was the great white poodle, champion Blakeen Eiger, owned by the Blakeen Kennels of Mrs. Sherman R. Hoyt of Katonah, N.Y., and handled by Mrs. Hoyt.

Eiger naturally had to be in perfect show form to lead the huge entry of poodles in the specialty event. He was a strong favorite of the ringsiders.

One of the most popular dogs in the final judging was the Brussels Griffon, champion Burlingame Hellzapoppin, owned and shown by Mrs. Rosalind Layte of Short Hills, N. J. This is the fourth consecutive show in which Hellzapoppin has been first among the toys for a total of nine group triumphs.

Another group winner that attracted the gallery was the Welsh terrier Windermere Roberta, owned by the Misses De Coppet of Narragansett Pier, R. I., which yesterday went best in show at the specialty exhibition of the Welsh Terrier Club of America. Roberta again showed beautifully under the handling of Robert Snodgrass and topped a grand lot of terrier breed winners.

Second in the division was the Kerry Blue, champion Blue Flame of Delwin, owned and handled by Edwin A. Sayres of Peekskill, N.Y.

The other contender among the best American-breds was the perennial winner, champion Meadow Lark Draftsman, owned by the fox-catcher beagles of Wilmington, Del., and handled by Nate Levine.

FUTABAYAMA AGAIN WINS UNDEFEATED

Grand Champion Futabayama is as strong as ever and will be difficult to defeat in the championships of the Spring professional Sumo (Japanese wrestling) tournament next January at the Kokugikan bowl in Ryogoku, Tokyo.

Wednesday afternoon saw him win another tournament with an undefeated record in the Osaka season at the Nishinomiya ball park when he forced Grand Champion Minanogawa out of the ring for his thirteenth victory in as many days.

Runner-up to Futabayama was his stable-mate, Nayoroiwa (the two do not wrestle against each other), with 12 victories and one defeat, the latter at the hands of Akinoumi, who scored an upset in the Spring tournament this year by stopping Futabayama's undefeated record for three years.

Clinching championship honors among the "juryo" or wrestlers immediately below the "makunouchi" or first ranking circle was Genjiyama with 12 victories and one defeat.

The results on the concluding day of the tourney Wednesday of the principal bouts after the intermission follow:

Genjiyama defeated Fujinosato.
Kaneminato defeated Tomoegata.
Yamatoiwa defeated Ayanishiki by forfeit.
Jintozan defeated Tsurugamine.
Shachinosato defeated Taikyuzan.
Ohshio defeated Wakashima.
Ryogoku defeated Aobayama.
Yamatonishiki defeated Fujigadake.
Kasagiyama defeated Tatekabuto.
Takanobori defeated Komanosato.
Itsutsushima defeated Banjaku.
Asahigawa defeated Ryuozan.
Hishuzan defeated Kojimakawa.
Saganohana defeated Kashimanada.
Nayoroiwa defeated Dewaminato.
Mayedayama defeated Haguroyama.
Futabayama defeated Minanogawa.

Crucial Games Slated In 'Big Six' Varsity Loop

The Tokyo Six University Baseball league, which has been on a two-week holiday because of inability to use the Meiji Shrine stadium, will resume activities Saturday afternoon with a doubleheader at the same diamond.

Meiji is favored to down Tokyo Imperial in the first game. Keio and Rikkyo will meet in their second and final clash of the season. Keio at the moment is tied with Waseda for the league lead.

On Sunday, Meiji and Tokyo Imperial will cross bats in their second game while Rikkyo and Waseda will mix it up in their second game.

With victories by Waseda and Keio, their traditional series on October 15 and 17 will decide the championship.

Rikkyo Cagers Favored To Retain Title

The 16th annual Kanto Intercollegiate basketball season will get under way on Saturday night at the National Gymnasium at Suidobashi with a doubleheader, Rikkyo meeting Shodai and Tokyo Imperial clashing with Meiji.

Games will be played every Saturday and Sunday nights for the next two months.

Rikkyo, with last year's team virtually intact, is favored to retain its championship.

Waseda, with Yokoyama and Munakata of Olympic fame, is expected to give Rikkyo a keen battle in the pennant chase.

Basketball received great encouragement from the visit last Summer of the Canadian Westerns, which lost to the All-Japan combination in a three game series.

N.Y. Times

HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 4—The clock turned back to 1914 today as an Australian tennis team won the Davis Cup preparatory to heading home to join the colors.

In a rally without precedent in the long history of the challenge round, the players from Down Under completed their sweep of the last three matches in the series with the United States at the Merion Cricket Club today to reclaim the Davis Cup for Australia for the first time since 1919.

With the United States leading by 2 matches to 1 by virtue of its victories in the opening singles, Adrian Quist overcame Robert Riggs in a beautifully fought endurance contest, 6—1, 6—4, 3—6, 3—6, 6—4, and John Bromwich summarily squelched America's fading hopes with a crushing victory over Frank Parker, 6—0, 6—3, 6—1.

These two triumphs, in conjunction with their victory in the doubles yesterday, gave the Australians the verdict by 3 to 2, marking the first time since the cup was put in competition in 1900 that a team had lost the first two matches in the challenge round and still managed to win.

WARD MAKES PRESENTATION

While President Holcombe Ward of the United States Lawn Tennis Association was turning the Davis Cup over to the victors in the presentation ceremonies on the courts, a cablegram was placed in the hands of Sir Norman Brookes, instructing Captain Harry Hopman and his team to return home by the first available boat. Twenty-five years ago, Sir Norman received similar instructions to report for war duty after he and Anthony Wilding had won the cup from the United States at Forest Hills.

As the winning players gathered around the cup, which apparently every one but themselves had thought was sure to remain here after the opening day's matches, they were as happy as a lot of schoolboys. The fact that all of them might be carrying guns within a few months did not enter into their thoughts for the moment. That scrap could wait for a little while. All that counted at this time was that they had redeemed themselves magnificently, coming from far behind to achieve the victory which they had been favored to gain originally by odds of 3 to 1.

CROWD ACCLAIMS TRIUMPH

The triumph was whole-heartedly acclaimed by the crowd of 7,500, despite its keen disappointment over America's loss of the cup. How much the spectators wanted the trophy to stay here was evidenced in the enthusiasm with which they cheered Riggs as he came back brilliantly after losing ten successive games in the first two sets and his defeat after he appeared to have the tiring Quist at his mercy at the start of the fifth set, left them depressed and fearing the worst.

Their fears were quickly realized, for it was soon perceived that Parker, with his totally inadequate and incessantly attacked forehand, was no match for Bromwich, who took the first seven games, lost the next three and then won ten more in succession before yielding the only other one that Parker got.

In winning today, Quist and Bromwich, particularly the former, vindicated the judgment of those who had visualized them as such dangerous threats before the series started. They were so much better than they had been on the opening day that there was no comparison. The greater speed of the turf, dried out by two additional days of sun, probably had something to do with it, and Sir Norman had predicted that in the role of underdogs they would play better tennis than they did when they were the big favorites.

Quist expressed the belief after his match that he had played the best tennis he has ever produced in this country and vouchsafed that his lack of a stiff test in months preparatory to his meeting wtih Parker on Saturday had been responsible for his faulty play on that occasion. Today, the 26-year-old Australian had his ground strokes functioning beautifully, and it was the strength of his drives, especially his powerful, flat forehand that enabled him to turn the tables on Riggs, who defeated him in the opening match of last year's challenge round series.

TAKES TEN GAMES IN ROW

The gallery could scarcely credit its eyes as Quist ran ten games in succession after losing the first one of the match on his service. Riggs had turned in such a masterful performance against Bromwich that the crowd had complete confidence in his ability to clinch the cup, but here he was being played to a standstill.

Against the Australian's fast, deep drives the American was hitting raggedly from both sides. He could not generate any pace, he was short of length and he was not volleying well, chiefly for the reason that his approaching shots were not giving him adequate protection against so sharp a hitter as Quist.

Quist got better and better and his superiority stood out particularly in the return of service. He was keeping his service high on Riggs' backhand and the American did not like it, and Riggs was not putting Quist's backhand under the pressure that did Parker.

In the second set Riggs called on his drop shots in the effort to break up Quist's drives, but neither they nor his lobs availed. The Australian continued to pound the ball back deep, and get to the net for winning volleys and smashes and Riggs continued to volley badly or to find himself passed.

The play was getting closer now, with long deuce games the rule, but Riggs could not break up Quist's procession until the score stood 4—0. In the next game Quist reached 40—15 on two passing shots and a double fault, and here the tide turned. The pace of the bitterly fought games finally began to tell on the Australian and his errors enabled the other to salvage the game.

Riggs now forged ahead, fighting with might and main and getting more speed and length on his shots as the opposition weakened. The crowd cheered him on and it seemed that he might save the set as he went to 3—4. But Quist, conserving his energies for his service, saved the vitally important eighth game from 15—30 to stay ahead at 5—3.

When Riggs won the ninth quickly with his service the gallery was prepared to see him get on even terms, for Quist was plainly fading. But the Australian had saved himself in the ninth again for his service, and after Captain Hopman had administered to him, he went out and took the tenth game at love for the set, Riggs presenting him with the first two points on weak returns of service that brought groans from the worked-up gallery.

The match was decided here in this second set. Riggs came back to win the third after some of the most sensational play of the match. At first Quist appeared ready to concede it. Then, at 0—2, he changed his mind as he perceived that Riggs was tiring too and presenting him with point after point on bad mistakes, and shortly they were going at it hammer and tongs again until Quist finally broke from fatigue.

After the rest period Riggs played his finest tennis of the match to break down Quist's resistance. The American had all his confidence now. He was timing his shots perfectly and his drop volleys were working like a charm as he carefully opened the court, while his marvelous backhand lobs were keeping the other back.

RETURNS TO THE FIGHT

Quist looked like a very tired man as he lost the last four games of the set, with Riggs going along like a whirlwind, and when the American took the first game of the last set from 0—30 with two volleys and a smash the crowd was sure that the cup was safe. But Quist had far more in reserve than any one suspected. He now came back into the fight with the same kind of tennis he had shown at the start.

Riggs, taken back by the strength of the resistance, was forced on the defensive. His volleying touch deserted him. His lobs lost the necessary length and Quist's deadly forehand, which Riggs insisted on attacking, passed him beautifully time and again.

Quist took five games in a row. Here Riggs braced and staged a rally that had the crowd in an agony of suspense and excitement. Fighting magnificently, Riggs pulled up to 4—5, saving a match point in the bitterly contested ninth game of 16 points, but Quist put everything he had into the tenth, attacked irresistibly at the net and with his service, and the match ended as Riggs' return of service overreached the base line.

A KEEN DISAPPOINTMENT

The match between Parker and Bromwich was an anticlimax despite the fact that it was the deciding one. After his victory over Quist, Parker's performance today was a keen disappointment and his forehand never before has looked so utterly inadequate. Bromwich hit nine out of every ten balls to the forehand and it was by everlastingly adhering to this plan that he won by his crushing margin.

The tennis was totally uninteresting to watch. At first the gallery started chuckling as the two players stood at their baselines and exchanged 30, 40 or even 50 drives, with hardly a volley, the first game lasting six minutes. But after a set of that, it had enough, and some of the crowd began to leave.

Parker caused a flurry as he took three games in a row from 0—1 in the second set to lead, 3—1, attacking brilliantly at the net and smashing more decisively. But from then on he was at Bromwich's mercy, whether he stayed back or went forward. He could not keep the ball away from the Australian's double-handed drive, and no matter to which side he played it or how high he sought to keep it, it always came back. Bromwich won the next ten game with the loss of eleven points, dropped the next one, and then ended the hopelessly uneven match.

YANKEES CLUB SAID WORTH $7,000,000

NEW YORK—The New York Yankees and their elaborate baseball farm system can be had for a paltry consideration of $7,000,000, according to Byron Clark, attorney for the estate of the late Col. Jacob Ruppert which owns the properties.

"We all know that it was the Colonel's wish to preserve the Yankees and their farm teams," Clark says. "But we also know that conditions which cannot be foreseen in a man's lifetime often create necessities after his death.

"We have been pestered with queries about the Yankees, and the best way to dispose of such queries is to set a price. Obviously, it is not within my province to decide the price, but I think Ed Barrow (president of the Yankees) has said something about seven million."

It is thought that the willingness to dispose of the Ruppert estate's baseball holdings may be attributed to the size of the inheritance tax.

Attorney Clark can think of only four or five men in the country prepared to handle the disposal of the Yankees who rolled to pennants and world series the last four years. Clark thinks that the sponsors of the radio broadcasts might profit from a baseball chain investment.

Commenting on the situation, Bill Corum, well-informed sports columnist of the New York Journal-American, says:

"It does seem a pity that a man who puts as much money—probably approximately $10,000,000—and as much love and care as Col. Ruppert put into the Yankees, can't leave it behind him to live on his name.

"Purely for the purpose of making our point clear, let's assume that the inheritance tax on Col. Ruppert's estate finally is set at $6,000,000. His fortune was in the brewery, the ball team and real estate.

"The brewery is strictly a family-owned affair, which the ball club no longer is, and it is patent that it would be the last thing to be disturbed. Real estate prices are so low in New York at this time that it just as patently is a poor time to sell. That leaves the ball club and its affiliates."

Yugoslav Tennis Players To Arrive On Oct. 27

Ferenc Puncec and Drage Mitic, Yugoslav Davis Cuppers who lost to Australia in the inter-zone finals this year, will arrive at Yokohama on October 27 on the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Hiei Maru, according to information received Thursday by the Japan Lawn Tennis Association. They will sail from Seattle on October 13.

Puncec and Mitic will be in Japan for two weeks and will appear in exhibitions of two days each in Tokyo and Osaka.

Australia and Japan To Battle for Wrestling Honors Here Sunday

Australia and Japan are expected to battle it out for the topnotch honors in the Pan-Pacific amateur wrestling meet to be staged from 6 p.m. Sunday at the Hibiya Park amphitheater. The Philippines is expected to finish third because of the comparative newness of the sport in that country.

Japan is said to have an advantage over Australia in the lighter divisions but the case vice versa in the heavier classes. The performance of R. Garrard, who competed for Australia in the 1936 Olympic Games at Berlin will be watched with especial interest.

The drawings made Thursday afternoon at the Waseda University gymnasium follow:

Bantamweights: Kurihara (Meiji) versus Purcell (Australia); Michiaki (Waseda) versus Landero (Philippines).

Featherweights: Omiya (Waseda) versus Kaku (Meiji); Purchase (Australia) versus Florendo (Philippines).

Lightweights: Kin (Meiji) versus Inaba (Keio); Garrard (Australia) versus Bernabe (Philippines).

Welterweights Washimi (Meiji) versus Bacabac (Philippines); Kikuma (Keio) versus Trevaskis (Australia).

Stars of Former A's Honor Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11—Stars of yesteryear who won many pennants for Connie Mack and the Philadelphia Athletics played an old-timers game yesterday at Shibe Park with the Stars of 1910-'14 beating the 1929-'31 Stars, 6 to 4.

The game was played between games of the Boston Red Sox-Athletic double-header. Policemen wearing the uniform of the 1910 era patrolled the field. Connie Mack, baseball's grand old gentleman, Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis and American League President Will Harridge watched from among the crowd of 23,235.

The 1910 team scored all of its six runs with two out in the second. Three of the runs were walked in with the bases full.

Among the stars who performed were Amos Strunk, Topsy Hartsel, Eddie Collins, Frank "Home Run" Bakers, Stuffy McInnis, Eddie Murphy, Jack Barry, Ira Thomas, Chief Bender, Jack Coombs, Paddy Livingston, Ben Egan, Cy Morgan, Harry Davis, Wally Schang, Herb Pennock, Dave Danforth, Ben Houser, Rube Oldring, Carroll Brown, Joe Bush Morrie Rath, Dan Murphy, Stan Covelski, Rube Bressler, Max Bishop, Mule Haas, Mickey Cochrane, Bing Miller, Jimmy Dykes, Joe Boley, Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg, George Earnshaw, Cy Perkins, Howard Ehmke, Walter French, Jack Quinn, and Eddie Rommel.

In the evening they held a "reunion" at a downtown hotel.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	R	H	E
1929 champions	3	1	0—4	7	0
1910 champions	0	6	x—6	4	0

Grove, Rommel, Quinn, Earnshaw, Walberg and Cochrane. Coombs, Morgan, Bush. Brown, Pennock, Covelski, Danforth, Bender and Livingston, Egan, Schang.

3 KEIO STARS ELIMINATED IN NET TOURNEY

Major upsets were registered Thursday afternoon in the quarter-finals of the men's singles of the Tokyo Nichi Nichi's annual tennis championships at the Waseda courts when three Keio University stars were eliminated by Waseda University players.

Yasuo Tsuruta, considered as one of the leading players of the country, was downed in three straight sets, 6-1, 6-4 and 6-1 by Keiji Nakahara. Tsuruta has been in a slump but he was expected take Nakahara. While Nakahara was in top form, there is no question that Tsuruta's lack of fight was most responsible for his defeat.

Yasu Kimura not only played a good smashing game but his court strategy was most effective and he took Kokichi Kagitomi in three sets, 6—1, 9—7 and 6—2. He concentrated his attack on Kagitomo's weak points.

Taneda played a consistent game to defeat Yamagata, 7—5, 9—7 and 6—3, but only after a keen battle.

Fumiteru Nakano of Hosei University, member of Japan's Davis Cup team last year, had no trouble eliminating Chikaoka of Waseda University in three straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, and 6—2.

PORTLAND CLUB PRODUCES GIRL SWIM STARS

A group of seven girl swimmers from Portland's Multnomah Athletic Club have given indication by their impressive competitive record this year that they must be seriously reckoned with for the next Olympic Games, says the Christian Science Monitor.

These girls, who average 15 years of age, show no respect for their elders—at least, not their swimming elders. For in this year's women's national swimming championships all seven scored points to give their Club second place in the nationals.

Star of the team is a little 13-year-old, Nancy Merki. Early in the season, the shy but pleasant Portland miss stole the show at the Far-Western A. A. U. Indoor championships in Seattle. There she pleased the crowd by setting a new Pacific Coast record in swimming the 400 yard freestyle in 5m. 36s., practically without competition. In this meet she also scored a second place in the 220 sprint, and swam a lap on the winning 400 yard freestyle relay team.

NATIONAL CHAMPION

Few people expected her to do that well in the national championships against the best swimmers in the country. But little Nancy proved to all that she was America's leading middle distance woman (at 13) swimmer, by winning the 400 and 800 meter freestyle events, placing second in the mile, and partaking in the 400 meter relay win of the Multnomah girls. In the longer event she shattered Katherine Rawls' American record by 13.3 seconds. And in the 400 meter race, Nancy was only 1.1 seconds over Helen Madison's gest time of 5m. 29.6s.

Nancy isn't the only Multnomah star. Far from it. All seven of the girls show great potentialities, and their coach, Jack Cody, hopes to soon have seven champions.

OTHER STARLETS

Other girls on the team are Brenda Helser, Ann Cooney, Joyce Macrae, Nancy Lewis, Bernice Lindsey, and Mary Ann Hansen. A free style swimmer, Miss Helser placed right behind her teammate Nancy Merki in the national 400-meter event, and is even better in the sprints.

Miss Cooney specializes in the backstroke and Miss Lindsey in the breaststroke, while the others are free style swimmers primarily.

Although the women swimmers from the Los Angeles Athletic Club won first place in the Nationals, the Multnomah mermaids had the consolation of defeating them in the Seattle meet earlier in the year.

Have you ever wondered what a football player does on his vacation? A check-up on the Summer activities of the University of Oregon gridmen would show a variety of occupations, most of which help to put the athletes in good shape for the coming season.

LIFEGUARDS

Four of the boys are doing highway construction work—Roy Jensen, Ernie Robertson, Bernie McCudden, and Merle Peters. John "Buck" Berry and Dick Horne are lifeguards. Steve Anderson, Doug Caven, and Willie Reynolds are working in a cannery, while Ray Segale, Marshall Stenstrom, and Erling Jacobsen are doing the advance work in the Seattle branch of a can company.

Plunging fullback Frank Emmons is baling hay on an Oregon farm, and 225-pound tackle Jim Stuart works on a ranch. The backfield star, fleet Jay Graybeal, has been driving a freight line truck in his home town, Pendleton.

But the coach has not followed the diversified activity of his players. Like the proverbial mailman who goes for a walk on his day off, Coach Tex Oliver spent part of his Summer teaching a football school in Nampa, Idaho.

DIMAGGIO HELD OUTSTANDING PLAYER OF SEASON IN BIG TIME

By JOHN KIERAN

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK Sept 13—These are unsettled times, but there are some minor matters—and some major ones, too—that have been just about settled on the diamond. The Yankees are coasting in. The Giants are away out. Brooklyn has been a pleasant surprise. The Cardinals, wherever they may finish, have been a disappointment to Owner P. K. Wrigley and the general report of the press is that Gabby Hartnett is no longer a barrel of fun, though this observer, in sundry meetings with him this season, saw no lessening of his genial spirit.

The St. Louis Browns have last place cinched in the American League and the Phillies will not be disturbed in their tenancy of the National League cellar. There may be minor adjustments—or "counter-attacks with pursuit"—among the clubs from second to fifth place in the American League and third to sixth place in the National League. Economic pressure exists in those areas. From fourth place up there will be a cut out of the world-series melon. Below that the clubs get no melon; they get the berry.

PERSONAL NOTICE

The rookie star of the season is Ted Williams of the Fenway Millionaires, who, in addition to hitting the ball a mile, shows a strain of Babe Herman influence in the outfield and general genial behavior, all of which is pure profit for the fans. Until the Red Sox arrived in New York in April to open the season at the Stadium Ted Williams hadn't worn a necktie since the day he was graduated from high school in San Diego, Calif. The dreadful threat that caused him to give in and don a necktie was that he wouldn't be allowed in the hotel dining room unless he was so equipped. He still protests that ties give him a pain in the neck. But a young fellow will make some sacrifice for a noble cause like the custom of eating regularly.

The outstanding player of the season is Giuseppe DiMaggio of the Yankees and Fisherman's Wharf, San Francisco. He plays center field in the Bronx and host in San Francisco, where his restaurant is as popular as the owner. Jolting Joe is as good as the best in fielding and throwing and one still burning question in a season on the wane is whether or not DiMaggio will be able to hit over .400 for the year. He is half a lap ahead of any other hitter in either big league and he is only 24 years old. Some critics foresee a great future for him.

ON THE MOUND

The outstanding pitcher of the year, as viewed from this corner, is Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati Reds, a reformed infielder, who refused to take "no" for an answer when they told him six or seven years ago that he couldn't stick in the big leagues. The former light-hitting infielder of the Boston Bees and futile Phillies was the first twenty-game winner of the year and the last time this observer looked had won more games than any other pitcher in the American or National League. He's a particularly affable gent and as modest as he is tall. He is over six feet in height. Though he wouldn't say it himself, Bucky is pretty much of self-made success, but Mild Will McKechnie contributed some kindly starting and finishing touches.

The one and only free-wheeling base stealer in big league circles is George Washington Case, the mercury-footed outfielder of the Washington Senators or "Nationals," as Owner Clark Calvin Griffith prefers to call them. At a recent check-up it was announced that Case had pilfered fifty bases and nobody else was near enough to wave at him going by. It's too bad this ancient art is being upheld by only one man. There's an opening in that direction for some hustling young fellows.

Among the established heroes who have done well for themselves in this campaign are Cholly the Red Ruffing of the Yankees, James Emory Foxx of the Fenway Millionaires (now recuperating from an appendectomy) and Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians. Mistakes are made at first sight, but no mistake was made when practically all observers at first sight of Bob Feller said that he couldn't miss. He hasn't let them down.

HONORABLE MENTION

Big Frank McCormick, the first baseman of the Reds, deserves honorable mention for general good behavior around first base and leading the National League in the number of runs driven over the plate. Another first baseman who deserves a sprig of laurel is George McQuinn of the St. Louis Browns, who is a real artist around the bag and not a bad hitter at all. McQuinn is too frequently overlooked because he plays for the Browns. In baseball, that's almost the equivalent of going into hiding.

Lonnie Frey has been the spark-plug of the Cincinnati Reds. Red Padgett, Johnny Mize and Muscles Medwick have been the heavy artillery in the attack of the Cardinals, but old John Leonard (Pepper) Martin was the gent who first put fresh gas in the tank of the stalled Gas House Gang machine.

Mel Ott has been standing like a lighthouse for the Giants, with wreckage all around him. The Athletics made Connie Mack sick.

THE BIG CLUB

The big club of the season, of course, is the Yankees. They may be the best club in baseball history. The jury is still out on that one and high words have been heard over the transom. They will set a record shortly by winning their fourth straight American League pennant. They set a record last October with their third straight triumph in world-series competition. They lost the services of the great Lou Gehrig this year, but they came up with Charley Keller who is a real ball player now and going to be a great one unless Marse Joe McCarthy misses six guesses, all of them to the same effect.

Marse Joe McCarthy, bearing his blushing honors thick upon him, is in for another round of plaudits for the masterly way in which he keeps a hand on the helm of his great club. Robert the Red Rolfe, Dartmouth alumnus, has made more hits than any other big league player to date this year; red roses for Robert the Red. And if Bill Dickey isn't one of the great catchers in baseball history, this observer is Soviet Ambassador to the Court of Larry MacPhail.

GOMEZ LECTURED ON PITCHING AT COLUMBIA

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK—Class of 30 students, including two negroes and a middle aged lady named Lillian Spaulding, filed silently into the box-like classrooms this morning and on the dot of 9:30 Prof. W. L. Hughes brought in the day's lecturer. The lecturer was Lefty Gomez, and the class, of course, was the Columbia Teachers' College Baseball Course.

We sat down in the seat next to Miss Spaulding, who whispered rather solemnly that she didn't think there was anything strange about a woman attending the class. "I have two hundred boys under me back in Three Rivers (Mich), and what I can learn here certainly won't hurt me any." She carried a black notebook filled with data on how to play second base, how to break up a double play, how to bunt, hook, slide and catch, and other data that had fallen from the lips of previous lecturers. She also had a textbook, called "Baseball," and written by Daniel E. Jessee, M. A., Coach of Trinity College—the one in Hartford, Conn.

The class seemed a trifle awed as Gomez, in gabardine slacks and a sports shirt open at the neck, picked up a ball from the teacher's desk, and plopped it up and down in his big left hand, waiting for somebody to ask a question.

HOW BALL IS GRIPPED

Prof. Hughes, to get the thing started, asked him first how he gripped the ball, and Gomez cheerfully began to talk about the advantages of having the seams of the ball under the tips of your fingers. He showed them too, how to hold your glove in front of the ball, before you throw it, so that the batter or rival coaches can't see what you're going to throw.

"You want to keep from getting into habits in pitching, too." Gomez warned the reflective students, some of whom were taking notes furiously. "There is one young fellow in our league how who should never lose a ball game. In fact he should never give a hit, but we know that before he throws a curve, with men on bases, he'll always bring his ball and glove down here and rest it a moment on his belt. If he's going to throw the hard one he rests it a little higher. So we know what's coming."

"He means Feller," one of the students whispered sagely to another.

A student asked Gomez to demonstrate how he picks a man off first base, and he smiled and said, "I haven't picked one off for so long I forget." But he took off his coat, and stretched his arms a few times as a pitcher does when he's getting ready to throw. Then he stopped, looked around the class room and said, "but where's first base?"

The lecturer got a little confused on one question, having to do with whether it was a balk to make a motion toward second and then not throw the ball. Ethan Allen, the pitcher who is Prof. Hughes' assistant in conducting the class, mildly corrected Lefty and Gomez breathed, "ay, it's just as well I came up here this morning."

Gomez then told the class the problems of pitching with men on bases, and demonstrated what a small portion of a pitcher's actual strength can be used, when he is forbidden the use of a good windup because of the men on bases. He said too, that a pitcher would much rather face a pull hitter (for instance a righthander who hits to dead left) than one who swings a little late and dumps the ball into right. "They seem to have better batting eyes," he said. "Luke Appling, for instance, will foul off a dozen balls against you, and you'll have to pitch to him until you're about unconscious. Then he hits one and you're losing, 2-0."

"Who did he says fouls 'em?" one of the students asked us.

"Appling of the White Sox," Miss Spaulding answered, crisply.

"Pitching is funny," the lecturer went on. "Some days my arm feels very light and that ball really sails. Other days I couldn't throw a ball out an open window, if the draught was blowing in." The students laughed and one asked him, "how do you account for the fact that a big league pitcher, who knows all the ropes, will allow himself to be reached for hit after hit? of course, I know this doesn't happen to you ..."

"You haven't been reading the papers lately," Gomez snapped, cheerfully.

Gomez then when into a long discussion on how a pitcher should cover first base, on a play that pulls the first baseman out of position, but he stopped in the middle of it and laughed. "I'm a fine one to be lecturing to you on that play. We lost to the white sox recently because I was too dumb to cover first." However he went to the blackboard and drew out a diagram and told the class to watch out for the runner's spikes. Miss Spaulding made a firm note on that one.

HOW MANY PITCHES

"How many pitches you got? I mean how many types of pitches?" a student asked. Gomez thought that one over a while and said, "I got a few that I try to keep inside the park."

He counseled to resist using rubbing alcohol on their pitching arms. "I don't believe in alcohol," Gomez said, "except, of course, in beer," he added thoughtfully. He thought it was a good idea, too, to obey a good catcher's signals. "I shake off Dickey every once in a while," he said. "Won't take his signal. I figure that this might be the right time to try to sneak over a special pitch. Figure it might get by—and it always does. It gets by the outfielders and the guy goes for three."

There was a pregnant pause as the class fruitlessly groped for more questions, and after a moment Prof. Hughes got up and guessed that that would be all. Miss Spaulding snapped her notebook shut and led the students from the room.

Nakano Enters Finals Of Nichi Nichi Tourney

Fumiteru Nakano of Hosei University, member of Japan's 1938 Davis Cup team, entered the finals of the Tokyo Nichi Nichi's annual tennis championships Friday afternoon at the Waseda University courts by eliminating Yasu Kimura of Waseda University, 11-9, 6-2 and 6-2.

Kimura played mighty good tennis to give Nakano a rub in the first set but he was no match for his more experienced opponent in the second and third sets.

Taneda of Waseda defeated his team-mate, Nakahara, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 and 6-4 in the other match of the semi-finals.

SOONERS FACED WITH PROBLEM OF GREEN MEN

NORMAN, Okla., Sept. 11—"Graduation took four of my best backs, and there's no substitute for experience," sighed Tom Stidham, University of Oklahoma mentor who last year, in his second season as head coach, built a team that ranked fourth in the nation.

But shed no tears for titanic Tom. Even he will admit he's more pleased with the looks of the gang of huskies who reported yesterday for the season's first workout than he was with his 1938 squad at the start.

BACKFIELD GONE

Such capable backfield performers as Hugh McCullough, Otis Rogers, Earl Crowder and Gene Corrotto are gone from the team which won the Big Six Conference title and finished the 1938 season all victorious. So are Waddy Young, All-America end, and Jim Thomas, dependable guard.

Although Stidham himself believes his team will have more offensive versatility than last year's, it will be on defense that the 1939 Sooners should hold the upper hand.

Young is the only starter missing from the rugged line which held opponents to 43.4 yards per game and allowed no Big Six eleven to cross the goal line.

MORE COLORFUL

"I think our team will be more colorful," Stidham declared, indicating he intended to stress the aerial game and hoped to develop some climax runners.

The Sooners start off the hard way. They open with Southern Methodist here Sept. 30 and meet Northwestern at Evanston and Texas at Dallas before returning home to open their Big Six schedule.

If Stidham chooses to get all experience possible into the line-up against S. M. U., here is the way the Sooners probably will look: —

Ends—John Shirk, 6-4 and 200 pounds, and Frank Ivy, 6-3 and 190 pounds, two-year lettermen; tackles—Gil Duggan, 6-2 and 210 pounds, and Jud Bowers 6-3 and 212 pounds, two-year lettermen; guards—Ralph Stevenson 5-11 and 185 pounds, and Jerry Bolton, 5-11 and 190 pounds, two-year letterman; center—Cliff Speegle, 6 feet and 176 pounds, regular last year as a sophomore; backs—Beryl Clark, 5-10 and 162 pounds, one-year letterman; Bill Jennings, 6 feet and 175 pounds, one-year letterman; Dick Favor, 6 feet and 185 pounds, one-year letterman; Bob Seymour, 6-2 and 185 pounds, two-year letterman.

KUKULJEVIC COMING HERE WITH PUNCEC

Franjo Kukuljevic, who played in exhibition matches here last year, will come to Japan late this month instead of Drage Mitic of the Yugoslav Davis Cup team along with Ferenc Puncec, it was learned as a result of a transpacific radiophone talk between Mr. Puncec and an official of the Japan Lawn Tennis Association on Friday.

Mr. Mitic is unable to come to Japan, having accepted an invitation to play in South America, it was said.

Inasmuch as the Yugoslav players will be in Japan for two weeks, the Association has decided to move up to an earlier date the national championships which have been scheduled to start on November 11 at the Koshien courts, near Osaka, so that the Yugoslavians will be able to compete. The last foreigners to participate in the national championships were Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Henner Henkel of the German Davis Cup team in 1937. The Baron won the singles title and the two walked away with the doubles championship.

Mr. Puncec and Mr. Kukuljevic will appear in exhibitions at the Denyen courts in Tokyo on November 4 and 5. The two put up a good fight against the Australian Davis Cup team in this year's inter-zone play.

But for the new European war, Japanese tennis fans would have been able to see the Aussies play here on their way home. The conflict put an end to arrangements completed by the local Association.

HORSE RACING IN CALIFORNIA GETS ATTENTION

LOS ANGELES—Gov. Culbert L. Olson has appointed George Killion, his assistant secretary, as a "temporary member" of the California Horse Racing Board.

This opened the way for an immediate conference between Edward R. Young, chairman of the board and its sole surviving member, and Killion for the purpose of setting racing dates in Southern California next Winter.

Those close to the administration stated that it was reasonably certain that a "split season" would be arranged.

This split season would give Santa Anita 25 days of Winter racing and Hollywood Park 25 days of Winter racing.

The first meeting would probably be given to Santa Anita and it would open Christmas Day.

Hollywood Park would then follow, with its 25-day meeting running well into March.

A shorter Summer meeting than has been the custom would then be worked out, some believing that each track would be offered 14 days of Summer racing, making 28 days in all, prior to the annual meeting at Del Mar.

The Governor recently suggested that he believed that a system whereby Santa Anita and Hollywood Park would alternate Summer and Winter racing would be fair and equitable.

At the same time, though, it was known that Young, chairman of the board, believed that the more reasonable plan would be to split the lucrative winter dates between the two tracks.

Whether the Santa Anita Track will take kindly to Summer racing was a matter of conjecture. The natural schedule would see Hollywood Park open Memorial Day and run to approximately June 20. Santa Anita would then follow, getting the benefit of a July 4 holiday.

Such a program would give Southern California 50 days of Winter racing, exclusive of charity days, and 28 days of Summer racing, making a total of 78 days of racing as against the present schedule of 98 days.

Chairman Young and Governor Olson, in numerous conferences, have worked out a program which will, they believe, prove satisfactory to the horsemen and to the public.

Normally this program would have the approval of the racing board, Claude I. Parker, prominent Los Angeles attorney, and Henry Potter Russell, of Carmel Valley, have resigned from the board.

Parker withdrew from the board with the statement that he felt that the Governor was permitting advisers to bring politics into his attitude in regard to the allotting of Winter racing dates.

DERRINGER HAD BIGGEST YEAR, AIDED REDS TO WIN PENNANT

Editor's note: The following comment is by Rumill of the Christian Science Monitor on Paul Derringer, leading pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, twice beaten by the New York Yankees.

With the converted infielder, Bucky Walters, getting Most Valuable Player consideration for his 23 mound victories, a husky fellow named Paul Derringer is currently playing second fiddle in the pitching situation at Cincinnati. Although in possession of 20 triumphs, the big right-hander is overshadowed somewhat by the brilliant development of his team mate and former third baseman. But Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds is not fooled by the heavier attention given to Walters.

"Bucky has pitched great ball for us, as the records prove," said McKechnie on his last visit to Boston. "His swift rise in the profession is perhaps the best story of the year. We all realize where we would be without him. But we also know where we would be without Derringer. Don't underestimate his part in this race. I haven't talked so much about him because I knew what he could do. The club was confident in the beginning that Paul would win 20, at least. And he has."

The Derringer machine is rolling toward its most successful season in the majors. With No. 21 coming up, Paul is a cinch to better his previous high total of 22, cornered in 1935. Now that the Cardinals are threatening again, McKechnie may be forced to work the right-hander overtime and there is a chance that he may go as high as 26 or 27 triumphs.

Always a control pitcher, Derringer has amazed the experts this year. In better than 260 innings, he has passed approximately 30 rival hitters. There is no way of telling how many of these were intentional, but there is a suspicion that at least one third belongs on his mythical list. With the tying or winning run in scoring position, it is not sound baseball to pitch to a good hitter. Smart hurlers like Derringer, however, will throw near the plate in an effort to coax nibbles from the anxious batsman. If he hits at a bad ball, the percentage is in favor of the man on the mound.

RECORDS NOT LISTED

The Little Red Book, authority for major league records, does not compile figures on this important department of pitching, unfortunately. Most bases on balls for innings, games and seasons are listed, but the "fewest" side of the story is eliminated. However, Derringer's feat this season must be close to an all-time record. An average of about one tenth of a pass per inning over a lengthy campaign is worthy of special mention in this or any other diamond century.

Derringer's work should be a lesson to every young pitcher and the incentive to practice control. Those free tickets to first base will beat you almost as often as hits. Ask any big leaguer. Paul has been hit often in numerous games, but rarely does a safe knock follow a pass. The percentage against a batter hitting safely is something like three to one. In other words, the average batsman will connect only once in three trips to the plate. Therefore, if you walk him you are giving him a "break."

NINE LOSING GAMES

Since the start of this exciting flag race, Derringer has appeared in only nine losing games. He was charged with seven of these. Along with the 20 contests he has won and the seven lost, Paul has worked in six others which were either won or lost by a team mate. Also, he pitched a nine-inning tie with the Cardinals.

If the Reds get into the World Series with the Yankees—and there is a hard road ahead before they either eliminate or yield to the Cardinals—Derringer figures to be an effective weapon against the famed New York powerhouse. For one thing, his brilliant control suggests that the Yankees will get few fat pitches at which to hit. Along with his ability to get balls within the strike zone, he knows the trick of putting something on them, which happens to be important, also. Particularly when throwing up to the Yankees. Paul is fast, has a good curve and the stamina to work often in a set of games as short as a World Series.

Big Paul has waited eight years for a second fling at an October classic. He was a rookie with the Cardinals when the first taste came, back in '31. You may remember that he started and lost two games. But he is a seasoned pitcher today and critics—in the National League, at least—think his next chapter in the blue ribbon show will be much different.

Australian-Philippine Wrestlers to Take On Y.M.C.A. Team Wednesday

Lightweights: Takeda vs. Garrard (Australia); Harada vs. Bernabe (Philippines).

Welterweights: Ko vs. Trevaskis (Australia); Takehiro vs. Bacabac (Philippines).

Women Boxers 'Seen' as Threat To Men Pugilists

By MORTON MOSS

NEW YORK—Joseph Louis and those other so-called invincibles of the egg-eared and flattened-nose fraternity, today must beware a boxing menace which is arising among a bevy of bruising women whackers.

Though woman's place used to be in the home, it is now tapping somebody on the dome, according to irrefutable evidence obtained by this horrified male correspondent after an investigation of Captain Lee Posner's showboat skiff, The S. S. Clermont.

Captain Posner (who really is no captain but a connoisseur of the exotic in theatrical entertainment) has corraled a stable of lipstick larrupers who batter each other fiendishly in three-round bouts while the Clermont nightly swims up the Hudson river under the noonlight. The clientele is lured aboard by an advertisement that specifies dancing and fighting. Mickey Walker, ex-pugilistic mighty, betrays his masculine heritage by acting as master of sock ceremonies.

An evening's program calls for five female ring rumpuses, and the girls can't scratch because they must encase their handsies in padded gloves.

The lipstick larrupers are bedecked in blue trunks and white, armless shirts with the emblem of a toy bulldog—please bow, Mr. Walker—on their shapely backs. The ruthless rounds are two minutes and the gladiators get a minute rest period between the innings.

They are equipped with chest protectors made of rubber and aluminum and supplied by Mr. Foulproof Taylor who also supplies protective gadgets to mere masculine maulers. The brawling babes come in assorted sizes and poundage from 110 up to 180.

What we cannot understand is the treason of the menaced men folk to their kind. Famous fellers like Tony Canzoneri, Berney Ross and Bob Olin have at one time or another attended these cuffings and bestowed advice freely with no thought of the woe they are storing up for the guys of tomorrow. Canzoneri and Ross were guest referees and Olin observed as a spectator.

Benny Leonard, a lightweight of note some years ago, soon may be commandeered as an umpire. Jack Dempsey was calendared as referee the night his appendix acted up and forced his hospitalization.

The lipstick larrupers hail from numerous points of the compass, many of them having assaulted New York in search of careers behind the footlights. Heavyweights Anne Daily and Edna Nadish represent Winston-Salem, N.C., and Jersey City, N.J., respectively.

Other duke delegates are Middleweight Sylvia Bruce, Detroit; Welterweight Mary Jane Cameron of Boston; Bantamweight Julia Toughy, Albany; Flyweight Nicki Novell, Nashville, Tenn., and Lightweight Rose Rella of Reading, Pa.

YEARLING SALE AT SARATOGA IS THRILLING

By BOB CONSIDINE

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y.—Of all the romantic by-products of thoroughbred racing, including that breathless pause just before the Kentucky Derby when the band plays "My Old Kentucky Home," I'll take the sight and sound of a Saratoga Yearling sale as the top thrill of them all.

The setting, for instance: the great trees, heavy with August, embracing the covered sales ring . . the bright sharp lights that flood the place and press against the black face of the night . . . the nervous whinnie and fretful stomping in the long lines of stalls . . . the soft purr of limousines sidling up to the curbs, like fat black cats . . . the quiet assurance of the beautifully gowned women, and the men whose stiff shirtfronts have yet to wilt . . . the limp red flag out in front of the place, on which is written "auction this day." . . . the soft sibilating sound of women's skirts, as they take their places near the edge of the ring, and the respectful clatter of the lesser lights, come to witness the disposal of a parcel of yearling from one of the great breeding farms.

LIKE A RITE

One whispers, rather than talks . . . one whispers for a number of reasons, half of them only vaguely sensed . . . it is like a rite, and it awes a person to remember that in this selfsame ring, a certain frightened longlegged yearling once stood, unhappily surveying the white faces in front of him . . . his sharp ears pricked up as the bidding quickened and his wondrous head turned this way and that, as if to study the men who wanted to own him . . . at last the bidding reached $5,000 and stopped . . . and the big gangling colt was taken away that night to a new barn, the barn of a man named Riddle . . . he got a name, too . . . they called him Man O' War, because he was as big and as virile and as tough as one of them.

Soon enough, now, a man with the disagreeably sing-song voice of an old time auctioneer steps up on a little dais that looks down on the ring, and in a voice almost as incoherently nasal as the chant of a tobacco auctioneer he tells the assembly the few salient facts that it already knows: the name of the farm or stable that is disposing of the stock, the fine horses whence these yearlings have sprung, and the advisability of bidding fast, and high.

Then the yearlings . . . known only by numbers, though the auctioneer traces their lineage back down the equine ages, and you hear names that stir up dusty memories . . . Fair Play . . . Sir Gallahad . Sweep . . . The Porter . . . Sickles . . Sun Beau . . Marcia Marguerite . . . Crusader . . Top Flight . . . Domino . . . Ben Brush . . they're lonely and abandoned-looking, these slender young descendants of horsedom's blue-bloods.

They've been kept up long past their bed times, and they long for the comfort and security and privacy of their soft stalls— . . . the bright lights, after their dim stable, make their big dark eyes roll scandalously, and the strange hush of the audience and the high twang of the auctioneer alarms them . . . the only friend they see is their groom, who stands near them and talks softly to them, and walks them around the ring so that the bidders can cast quick shrewd glances at their conformation and the soft play of their smooth young muscles . sometimes the yearlings are gripped with overpowering curiosity, like puppies, and they'll go to the retaining fence and nuzzle gingerly at the shirtfront of one of the bidders . . and the people there will chuckle and someone will say, "aw, go'wan and buy him," and the man, who may not want this one, will blush a little and rub the colt's tender nose.

Then the bidders . . . there is none of this jumping up and shouting "I'll make it twenty one hundred and fifty." . . These cool, imperturbable people have an idea what they want, before they come, and a good idea as to how much they'll pay for what they want . . it's difficult to see them do the actual bidding, particularly if the bidding is being done by one of those glum and uncommunicative trainers sometimes a bidder will raise only a finger and the hawk-eyed auctioneer, knowing them from previous years and appreciating their Dun and Bradstreet rating, will translate that finger lifting into a fresh bid, and go off on a sing-song search for a higher offer . . . sometimes the subtle elevation of a Whitney eyebrow is all that is necessary to close a deal . these things are quiet, seemly, as if out of respect to the feelings of the yearlings . the annual sale, involving millions, and redirecting the course of thoroughbred racing, is the most well-bred barter in the world.

Occasionally . . . but rarely . it is a little grim . . . a new millionaire or millionairess comes to the sale and takes a bright-eyed, sadistic pleasure in outbidding a Vanderbilt or a Phipps . . . if the nouveau riche bidders are particularly offensive, some blue book bidders, properly primed with Napoleon brandy, will indignantly go up the bidding ladder with the newcomers, until they get an aloof kick from their bourbon mates . . but these toe-to-toe bidding contests don't happen very often, to the undisguised disappointment of the auctioneers . . so you don't think about them very much . . . you think about the yearlings, and the easy gentility of most of the bidders, and the strange and almost eerie pomp and circumstance that attends this most curious auction and in every rolling-eyed yearling you sense the makings of another Man O'War.

Reich Handball Team Beats Denmark, 11 to 7

Domei Tsushin

LEIPZIG, Oct. 8—Apparently taking advantage of the peace offensive, Germany and Denmark today vied for the honors in an international handball meet before a crowd of 15,000 spectators. Germany in a second half rally won by a score of 11 to 7.

The match was attended by many prominent Nazi sportsmen, including the Reich Sports leader, Dr. von Tschammer und Osten.

The brilliant rally by the Germans featured the game as they were lagging behind in the first half by a score of 7 to 4.

German Cycling Team Defeats Hungarian, 35-19

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, Oct. 8—Meeting for the first time since the World War, Hungarian and German cycling teams today competed in a fast meet in the Wansse stadium. The German team won on points registering 35 to 19 by Hungary.

CALIFORNIAN BOXERS TO MAKE DEBUT, NOV. 7

The schedule for the six members of the San Jose College boxing team of California to arrive at Yokohama on October 26 aboard the Kamakura Maru has been announced by the Japan Amateur Boxing Federation.

The Californians will make their debut in Tokyo on November 7 and will appear in matches at Osaka and Keijo, before returning here for another bout. A welterweight, bantamweight and featherweight each and two lightweights will comprise the visiting team.

Members of the All-Kanto students team to take on the Californians on November 7 will be selected after tryouts at the outdoor wrestling arena in the Outer Gardens of the Meiji Shrine on Saturday night, October 21. Three candidates will be selected for each weight, one of whom will be designated to take on the Californians in the respective divisions.

The complete schedule follows:

October 26: Californians arrive at Yokohama.

November 7: Meet All-Kanto students team at Korakuen stadium, 6 p.m.

November 12: Meet All-Kansai team at Koshien stadium, 6 p.m.

November 19: Meet All-Chosen team at Keijo athletic field, 6 p.m.

November 24: Meet All-Kanto team at Hibiya Park amphitheater, 6 p.m.

All roads will lead to the Meiji Shrine stadium next Sunday and Tuesday with Keio and Waseda universities, traditional rivals in Tokyo's "Big Six" Baseball league, scheduled to clash to wind up the Fall Season. Interest is at a high pitch as it was in the Spring season for the reason that both teams are tied for the topnotch position and will be fighting for the league championship.

A third game was necessary in the Spring before the title went to Waseda. A play-off may be necessitated again.

Keio is determined to win its first title in 13 seasons or seven years. Team averages show Keio with a better batting mark, the figures being .232 and .223 respectively. The same is the case with fielding, the averages being .969 and .962.

The history of the Keio-Waseda series is one of surprises, the two teams always putting up a brand of nip and tuck baseball no matter either side is in a slump. It has been the breaks that have decided the outcome. In 64 games played between the two to date since the revival of this dual competition, Waseda has won 34 games and Keio 29. One game ended in a draw.

Pitching will decide the series. It was Right-hander Ishiguro's effective work that won the title for Waseda in the Spring. No doubt he will be called upon to do the twirling in the first game with Southpaw Kondo held in reserve. Or it might be the other way round with the Waseda coach depending on Kondo's sharp breaking drops to turn Keio back.

The bespectacled right-hander, Takagi, will be depended on to pitch Keio to the pennant. His effective change of pace may give the anxious Waseda batsmen plenty of trouble and it will be no surprise if he will be good for one victory. Right-hander Shiraki will be ready to relieve Takagi.

Games on both days will start at 1:30 p.m. with the gates to the stadium opened at 8 a.m.

On sale each day will be only 200 tickets at 50 sen each and 15,500 outfield tickets at 30 sen, beginning at 11 a.m.

DETROIT LIONS BEAT CARDINALS BY 21 TO 13

DETROIT, Sept. 10—The Detroit Lions vanquished the Chicago Cardinals, 21 to 13, today in the opening game of the National Football League season, scoring twice in the first period on long touchdown runs and once in the closing quarter on a sustained march.

The crowd of 15,075 persons was scarcely seated before Lloyd Cardwell, veteran Detroit halfback, ripped around his own left end for 70 yards and a touchdown. James (Monk) Moscrip added the first of three extra points he booted in the contest.

Midway in the period a pass from center fell to the ground in the Chicago backfield and Moscrip darted through, picked up the ball and ran 66 yards for a second Detroit score.

Early in the third period a pass interception by Cardwell enabled the Lions to get to the Chicago 4, but the Cardinals held. After a punt exchange Detroit started a 54-yard march that ended with Johnny Pingel, former Michigan State star, smashing over from the 2-yard stripe on the opening play of the final quarter.

The Cardinals, who never threatened in the first three periods, opened up with a last-quarter passing attack that yielded both their scores. Jack Robbins and Bill Smith were the participants in both tallies, the first touchdown play producing a gain of 48 yards and the second 31 yards. The line-up:

Detroit (21)		Chi. Cards (13)
L.E.	Hannemann	Mason
L.T.	George	Baker
L.G.	Feldhas	G. Rogers
C.	Wojciechowicz	Adams
R.G.	Wither	Carter
R.T.	Johnson	Babartsky
R.E.	Moscrip	Smith
Q.B.	Pingel	Faust
L.H.	Vanso	McDonough
R.H.	Cardwell	Russell
F.B.	Shepherd	Agee

SCORE BY PERIODS

Detroit	14	0	0	7—21
Chicago Cards	0	0	0	13—13

Touchdowns—Moscrip, Pingel, Cardwell, Smith 2. Points after touchdown—Moscrip 3 (placements), Smith (placement).

Y.M.C.A. DRAWS WITH VISITING WRESTLERS

The amateur wrestling meet between the Y. M. C. A. team and a combined Australian-Philippine squad formed from the latter two visiting aggregations Wednesday night at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium ended in a 2-all draw.

One of the best bouts of the evening was the victory by Garai featherweight of the Y. M. C. A. team, who is a member of the Waseda University squad as well, over Twaits of the Australian team by a decision.

Ko of the Y.M.C.A. team, member of the Meiji University grappling team, defeated Bacabac of the Philippine team by a fall in 3 minutes 46 seconds in one of the welterweight bouts.

With the exception of Twaits, all competing members of the Australian team, Trevaskis, Garrard, and Purcell won victories for the visiting squad.

The results follow:

Bantamweights

Purcell (Australia) decisioned Sato (Y.M.C.A.).

Arakawa (Y.M.C.A.) won by fall from Landero (Philippines), 11 minutes 41 seconds

Featherweights

Garai (Y.M.C.A.) decisioned Twaits (Australia).

Yamane (Y.M.C.A.) won by fall from Florendo (Philippines), 9 minutes 43 seconds.

Lightweights

Garrard (Australia) won by fall from Takeda (Y.M.C.A.), 6 minutes 12 seconds.

Bernabe (Philippines) won by fall from Harada (Y.M.C.A.), 5 minutes 26 seconds.

Welterweights

Ko (Y.M.C.A.) won by fall from Bacabac (Philippines), 3 minutes 46 seconds.

Trevaskis (Australia) won by fall from Takehiro (Y.M.C.A.), 7 minutes 2 seconds.

Keio, Meiji Elevens To Meet on Oct. 28

Two changes have been made in the schedule of the Tokyo Intercollegiate American Football league.

Keio and Meiji universities will meet at 3 p.m. at the Korakuen stadium on Saturday, October 28, instead of October 26.

Waseda and Hosei universities will clash at 3 p.m. Sunday, October 29 at the same stadium, instead of October 31.

The next game will be played on Thursday, October 19, at 3 p.m. at the Korakuen stadium between Keio and Rikkyo universities.

Giants Rout Eagles 15-4 At Korakuen

Banging out 13 hits, including two homers, two triples, and three doubles, the Giants ran wild over the Eagles, 15 to 4, as the professional baseball teams returned to the Korakuen stadium here Wednesday afternoon.

Centerfielder Ritera, who hails from Manila, led the Giants' attack, clouting a homer, a triple and a double. Backstop Yoshiwara also smashed one into the stands off Mochizuki, who pitched the entire game for the Eagles notwithstanding the shellacking he received.

The Senators and the Nagoya combine battled to a 2-all tie that was halted because of darkness after the last half of the eleventh inning.

NORNAY SADDLER IS BEST DOG IN N.Y. SHOW

By HENRY R. ILSLEY
N.Y. Times

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 10—For the forty-sixth time, champion Nornay Saddler today was awarded the title of best dog in show. The world-famous smooth-coated foxterrier owned by the Wissaboo Kennels of James M. Austin of Westbury, L. I., and handled in the ring by Leonard Brumby, captured the highest honors at the annual all-breed exhibition of the Westchester Kennel Club, held on the polo field of the Westchester Country Club.

In the final competition only three remained in the ring, the ultimate winner; the boxer, Utz V. Dom of Mazelaine, owned by John Phelps Wagner of Milwaukee and handled by Harry Hartnett, and the English setter, champion Maro of Maridor, owned by Mr. and Mrs A. Biddle Duke of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and handled by Charles Palmer.

The last-named took the award for the best American-bred in show. Yesterday Maro won this title and was also best in show at the Tuxedo Park fixture.

1,000 DOGS ON BENCHES

Westchester went over the top today in the matter of entries with more than 1,000 dogs on the benches.

This was the largest and most important exhibition at which the new method of judging the best American-bred and then the best in show has been in vogue. There were many differences of opinion as to the success. However, the spectators no longer are in doubt as to what is going on.

The victory of the English setter among the six American-bred dogs which topped their respective groups was decidedly popular. He was in very fast company, but there is no second choice in this, nor in the final.

A great impression was made on the spectators by the pure white standard poodle, champion Blakeen Eiger, owned and handled in the ring by Mrs. Sherman R. Hoyt of Katonah, N. Y.

SEALYHAM IS POPULAR

Much attention was given to the Sealyham terrier in this competition. Also pure white, he had many supporters. He is champion Radio Beam of Robin Hill, owned by Mrs. Robert B. Choate of Danvers, Mass., and handled by Bob Craighead.

Other candidates for the American-bred honors were the lovely orange Pomeranian Moneybox Gold Coin, bred, owned and shown in the ring by Mrs. Vincent Matta of Astoria, L. I., and the Doberman pinscher, Westphalia Rembsa, owned by the Marienlaand Kennels of Baltimore and handled by Harold Larrell. Completing the group was the Borzoi, Champion Otrava of Romanoff, owned by Mrs. Rosanelle W. Peabody of Maplewood, N. J.

ALL-JAPAN 1939 SWIM TEAMS ARE SELECTED

Canceling all plans for participation in the 12th Olympic Games scheduled for Helsinki inasmuch as the Japan Amateur Athletic Federation has decided to halt all preparations because of the outbreak of the European War, the Japan Swimming Federation has canceled its selection of Olympic candidates and selected an All-Japan team of 35 members for the 1939 season.

WAR HALTS SOCCER FOOTBALL AND OTHER SPORTS IN ENGLAND

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—Well, what with one thing and the other (you see how discreet we newspapermen have become since censorship started) I certainly chose a nice time for the annual brief respite from writing this daily feature.

"I suppose you take advantage of a period of transition," a colleague remarked as we chatted on the eve of what promised to be a vacation taken at the changeover point between Summer and Winter sport in Britain. Unfortunately, on this occasion, a period of transition took advantage of me. For no sooner had the Department turned its back on the sporting scene than the sporting scene disappeared.

DRASTIC CHANGES

And now a new one is being modeled to conform with the drastic change imposed on national life here since 11 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 3.

At present the shape of things to come in British sport during wartime is hard to make out in detail. But, judging from the opinions expressed by the authorities controlling various branches of athletic activity, the situation is likely to become more or less analagous to that which obtained here between 1914 and 1918. That is to say, clubs of all kinds will do their best to carry on, for the sake of those people who, more than ever, may need what they have to offer in the way of recreation, but major competitions will be suspended "for the duration," and sport as a spectacle for public entertainment will be subject to restrictions inherent in the altered conditions of living or imposed by the powers that be.

SOCCER FOOTBALL

Now, the greatest sporting entertainment of all in England between the end of August and early May is Soccer Football, as played Saturday after Saturday by the 88 professional clubs operating in the League. This abruptly came to an end a few days after the outbreak of war, but it was soon made clear that the public would be give some professional Soccer to watch in areas where the Government felt that it could permit crowds to assemble.

But, of course, professional play is quantitatively only a small part of Soccer, although it gets such a lion's share of the limelight. The game is played by amateurs who outnumber the "pros" by many thousands to one, and the wholesale diversion of these people into the fighting forces during wartime makes it very difficult for their clubs to keep in action. This remark applies with equal force to Field Hockey and the handling code of football, played under the rules of the Rugby Union. Devotees of Rugger are particularly disappointed at the cancellation of this season's outstanding features, for these included the visit of a strong touring side from Australia and the return of the French XV to the international championship after an absence of eight seasons.

'FRIENDLY' MATCHES

In the realm of the Rugby League, which promotes professional Rugger in the north of England, the ordinary League and Cup tournaments have been abandoned for 1939-40 and clubs will meet each other simply in "friendly" matches. Here, too, a special attraction has been lost—the tour of a side of Rugby Leaguers from New Zealand, which had already started when war broke out.

Needless to say, since the fighting forces have practically a corner in athletic talent of all kinds, service sport will be more spectacular than ever before, while the clubs will have to get along as best they can with young 'uns, old 'uns, serving members on leave, and members engaged on national service near at hand.

In golf, while the clubs propose to continue, the outstanding major British events of 1939 have been canceled—including, alas! the visit of Britain's professional team that was to have opposed the pick of the Americans for the Ryder Cup on the Ponte Vedra course at Jacksonville, Florida, Nov. 18 and 19—and in cricket, now ended for 1939, the proposed tour of England's team in India this Winter has been called off. The Marylebone Cricket Club's side was to have set sail Sept. 22.

TENNIS

International lawn tennis has suffered, too, because Donald Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Lester Stoefen and W. T. Tilden—America's ace professionals—have decidd not to visit Australia, as they intended, and the proposed tour of an American amateur team in Australia has been abandoned. Lawn tennis clubs intend to keep going. Affiliated to the English Lawn Teennis Association are 3,000 clubs with memberships averaging 150 players and more than 10,000 with memberships around 100, and they are determined to provide their facilities as long as possible, knowing how much these are likely to be appreciated in war time, especially by people engaged on national service, which means many more folk than ever before outside the fighting services and stationed, so to speak, on the home front.

Gehrig Named Member Of N.Y. Parole Commission

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Oct. 11—Henry "Lou" Gehrig, former star first baseman of the world champion New York Yankees, was today appointed a member of the municipal parole commission by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia. The former Yankee star, who retired last June because of chronic infantile paralysis, will receive a yearly salary of $5,700.

Mayor LaGuardia said, "Gehrig will be a splendid man for the position being an inspiration to youngsters who have gotten into trouble."

NEW CROP OF ALL-AMERICA PLAYERS BILLED

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Since the football season is at hand again, remember little Davey O'Brien, Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, Parker (Bullet) Hall and Johnny Pingel?

They made up the All-America backfield last Fall, and they'll probably be heard of again as heroes of play-for-pay football. But unless you follow the fortunes of the pros, it's likely you'll only see their names this Fall prefaced by "as good as" or some similar comparative phrase.

NEW CROP COMING

There's a new crop of All-Americans in the making. The college press agent who hasn't a candidate, usually with a colorful nickname, is as rare as a college coach without an alibi. So you'll see and hear new names in place of that familiar quartet and the fellows who pressed them for top honors last Fall—Bullet Billy Patterson, Sid Luckman, Vic Bottari, Bronco Brunner, Bob MacLeod and Howie Weiss, to name a few.

There's no use even trying, at this stage, to pick the rising stars, but there are plenty of hints as the press releases roll in.

No doubt, you'll hear a lot this Fall about Len Eshmont, who as a Fordham sophomore last year carried the extra weight of such names as the "Rambling Ram" and the "Atlas Antelope."

COLUMBIA'S HOPE

Then Columbia offers Les Stanczyk, third of his clan to play for the Lions, as the lad who'll make eastern fans forget Sid Luckman's passing. The relayed words of one observer are "he cuts like Cliff Montgomery and runs with all the power of Al Barabas."

Texas Christian already, has picked the player to fill O'Brien's shoes. He's Jack Odle, hailed as being better than Davey or Sammy Baugh were at the same stage of their careers. Pitt has some good backs, but not another Goldberg. It seems unlikely Michigan State will produce another Pingel or "Ole Miss" another Hall, although Merle Hapes is trying his best at the latter job.

CALIFORNIA BOOSTERS

California boosters modestly admit "Long Louie" Smith will be the best all-around halfback on the Pacific Coast this year and a worthy successor to Bottari and Sam Chapman. Kansas State fans are praising Elmer "One Man Gang" Hackney, the record-smashing shot putter, to the skies.

Some of the others who may catch the fancy of the fans—with a little urging, of course—are "Bolo" Perdue, the Duke end or Capt. Allen (Sweet Pea) Johnson; Big John McLaughry of Brown, "Bomber" Bill Hutchinson of Dartmouth, Harold Van Every of Minnesota, Jim (Sweet) Lalanne of North Carolina, or maybe one of that Notre Dame gang, Bob Saggau, Lou Zontini or Capt. John Francis Kelley.

National Tennis Meet Slated Nov. 6-15 At Koshien Courts

The national tennis championships will be held at the Koshien stadium, near Osaka, for ten days beginning November 6, according to announcement Thursday by the Japan Lawn Tennis Association.

The dates have been moved up to allow Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic, members of the Yugoslav Davis Cup team, to compete. They are scheduled to arrive at Yokohama on the Hiye Maru on October 27 and will appear in exhibitions here before going to the Kansai.

SPANIEL WINS TRACKING TEST IN NEW YORK

By HENRY R. ILSLEY

N.Y. Times

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y., Sept. 11—Seven dogs, representing five breeds, competed today in the annual tracking contest of the Obedience Test Club of New York. Four qualified, earning their A.K.C. certificates.

A keenly interested gallery watched the trials, which were held on the estate of Henry J. Whitehouse in this town and were judged by Josef Weber, noted professional trainer, obedience test judge and author.

The dogs were not scored by points, but were placed in the following order:

First, Mrs. Radcliffe Earley's cocker spaniel bitch Lovely Nuisance; second, Mr. Whitehouse's standard poodle dog Nunsoe Skagin of Carillon; third, Carillon Kennels' (Mrs. Whitehouse Walker) standard poodle Carillon Epreuve; fourth, Mrs. Aurelie Tremaine's wire-haired foxterrier bitch Dusky Doll.

CAPTURES MARYLAND PLATE

The first three dogs placed gained cash prizes of $15, $10 and $5, offered by the Obedience Test Club. Lovely Nuisance, in addition to first money, annexed a sterling silver plate provided by the Dog Owners Training Club of Maryland.

Competition was limited to dogs which had won their C.D.X. suffix and were ready for the utility class, or had already acquired their U.D. title. Both of the poodles previously had qualified as U.D.

Rules for tracking call for a course not less than a quarter-mile in length, with scent at least a half-hour old. These requirements were exactly observed, each dog having a separate trail. The Misses Frances Thord-Gray and Blanche Saunders set the trails.

Despite a high wind, scenting conditions appeared excellent and about equal for all contestants. This was shown by the fact that the winner started last, while the others placed were the first three to compete.

STARTS UNDER HANDICAP

Performances were superior to any developed in past trials. The handlers, except Mr. Whitehouse, were women and most of the latter were decidedly nervous. Lack of experience and over-anxiety were the most obvious handler faults.

Lovely Nuisance, C.D.X., handled by the owner, 2½ years old. She is by Hadecda Forerunner—Blue Consolation and was bred by Joseph B. Fariey.

This merry little miss started under a handicap, her handler being misinformed as to the exact spot at which the trail began. Consequently Lovely Nuisance failed to get the scent and went away aimlessly. She was recalled by the judge and put on the right line.

Immediately on getting the scent she was away with a gay dash, carried the line with hardly a check around two sharp turns and located the wallet dropped at the trail's end. Her elapsed time was six minutes, but nearly half of it was consumed by the initial false start.

HIGH STANDARD IS SET

Nunsoe Skagin started slowly for Mr. Whitehouse but was business-like in his tracking, checking infrequently. After his most serious check he cast out and recovered the line, going on well to find his object. His elapsed time was three minutes.

Miss Saunders handled Mrs. Walker's Epreuve and was second to start. Epreuve had one major check and went well after being put on the right line again. The elapsed time again was three minutes and these two performances set a fast pace and high standard for the others to shoot at.

Miss Tremaine's fox terrior, while an eager worker, was slow to settle down and comprehend what was required. Dusky Doll failed to pick up the scent at the first start and immediately was off the line. Sent away again, she found the line and again checked. She back-cast, found the trail and then overan it. Ordered back, she found again and finally reached her objective after eight minutes.

The other contestants, who failed to qualify, were the Cosalta Kennels' German shepherd dog champion Anthony of Cosalta; Mrs. Marion H. Shaw's German shepherd dog Arra of Cosalta and Miss Natica Bates's Kerry blue terrier Ruraidh O'Donnell.

RUNYAN WINS WESTCHESTER OPEN GOLF

By LINCOLN A. WERDEN

N.Y. Times

MOUNT KISCO, Sept. 1—For the fifth time in nine years Paul Runyan of Metropolis won the Westchester open golf championship when he finished with a seventy-two-hole score of 283, one stroke ahead of the Blond Bomber of Winged Foot, Craig Wood, today.

The finish had its share of thrills when the race settled down over the Lawrence Farms Country Club course between Runyan, who vaulted into national prominence soon after capturing this tourney as a newcomer to the district back in 1931, and Wood.

Mike Turnesa of Fairview, yesterday's leader with 138, tripped over the incoming nine this morning by using 40 strokes over that distance so that when the field started the final eighteen holes, the scoreboard read Runyan and Wood tied at 212; Turnesa, 213; Pat Circelli of Rockwood Hall, 218; Dan Galgano of Green Meadow, 219; Rod Munday, Runyan's assistant, 221, and Herman Barron of Fenway, 222.

BARRON FINISHES WITH 296

Circelli was among the early finishes, coming in with a four-round aggregate of 290, after a concluding 72 to capture fourth place. Galgano was next with 294 and Barron two shots back at 296.

Turnesa put himself out of the running for the title this afternoon by taking 37 to the turn, a nasty 6 occurring at the par-5 ninth after his drive landed in the bank of the creak and he had to play out of the water before trying for the green, but Mike's closing 73 gave him a total of 286 and third prize.

Runyan, one of the nation's consistent money winners in the golfing world, was approaching beautifully on both his rounds today, and when Paul's short game is clicking he is practically unbeatable. Trailing Turnesa by four strokers and bracketed with Wood at 142 starting this morning, Runyan holed a 70, two under par, after playing the first nine in 33. Wood, in his first Westchester open championship, was still all even with Runyan following his own third-round 70 that included two penalty strokes for going into the creek at the ninth and seventeenth holes.

TIED STARTING LAST NINE

Over the first nine of the fourth and final round Runyan and Wood were both 35. Then Wood gained a one-stroke edge with a birdie 3 at the eleventh, where Runyan carded a 4.

Runyan gained ground with a par 4 at the sixteenth, where Wood failed to get home and took 5, and with a birdie 4 at the seventeenth, where Craig's best was a 5. Wood still had a chance to catch Runyan at the eighteenth, where Paul three-putted for the round. Although Wood previously had had birdie 3s on two preceding rounds at the eighteenth he failed for the one that would have meant a tie. His approach stopped twenty feet from the pin after a prodigious drive. Wood hit his putt well but the ball hit the cup and jumped out, thus costing him his chance to catch his rival. Runyan's four rounds were 72, 70, 70, 71.

Teidai Rugby Team Defeats Rikkyo, 12-3

Scoring 12 points in the first half, Tokyo Imperial University's rugby team defeated the Rikkyo University fifteen, 12 to 3, Thursday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

Teidai (Tokyo Imperial) registered two tries and two penalty goals. Rikkyo's only score was a penalty goal in the second half.

While rain that fell throughout the game marred play on both sides, it was a case of the stronger team winning.

The line-ups were:

Teidai: Kinoshita, Kobayashi, Kawada, Shiraishi, Nanbu, Takashima, Okuhira and Shinozaki, forwards; Yamamoto and Uetake, halfbacks; Takahashi, Meguro, Nakanishi and Sakamaki, three-quarters; Shibuno, fullback.

Rikkyo: Kobayashi, Nakahara, Ibara, Okakura, Fujii, Katagiri, Kinda, forwards; Takehisa, Iki and Nakayama, halfbacks; Mitsuta, Ito, Ogawa, Atsumi, three-quarters; Fujii, fullback.

SAN FRANCISCO INTERESTED IN HOLDING '40 OLYMPIC GAMES

Christian Science Monitor

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16—What is going to happen to the 1940 Olympic Games?

These wars are beginning to get in the spikes of the world's athletes. First the Games were transferred from Tokyo to Finland because of the Far Eastern conflict. Now there is extreme doubt as to whether they will be held at all; first, because of Finland's location in Europe; second, because of the threat of a long, drawn out central European war; and third, because many of the world's best athletes have been, or are being mobilized.

The United States has always wanted as many Olympic Games held here as were feasible. Already there are several moves afoot to have the 1940 Games held here.

Rumor hath it that Cleveland and Detroit are "interested." There is more than rumor to the story that San Francisco and Los Angeles would give exceeding their best to have the athletes come out here.

In fact—and this is a distinct possibility—were the Games, or what's left of them, to be held here at San Francisco it just might mean that the Golden Gate International Exposition would keep its gates open for another Summer.

POCKETBOOKS ZIPPED

There is much agitation for the Fair to continue another year. But the pocketbooks of the local bankers, merchants, and politicians are neatly zipped shut as they are not so sure they are going to come out of 1939 with all they invested in the Fair. Thus they are cautious about giving the nod to another year for the Treasure Island Fiesta.

But—were the Exposition to grab off the Olympic Games show, build a large stadium at the northeast end of Treasure Island and open the Exposition about the first of June to run through September for the duration of the many sports events, including yachting and crew, it is not unlikely the necessary financial backing would be forthcoming.

The Winter Olympics could be held at Yosemite National Park's spectacular Winter arena or the events could be spaced around the Pacific Coast from Mt. Rainier to Sun Valley, Mount Hood, and Yosemite.

The Golden Gate International Exposition's sports program for 1939 has been fairly successful from the opening featured intercollegiate skiing competition, through the Pacific Coast basketball tournament and the international and Pacific Coast yachting regattas this Summer.

REGAIN STANDING

With full focus being placed on the Games and thousands of Americans coming to witness the most colorful athletes in the world the Exposition would shoulder its cloak of internationalism that has somewhat been lost under the brilliance of the New York Fair's gigantic splendor.

The Exposition officially closes here on Dec. 2. With the proper publicity, and refinancing, which is conceivable through State and Federal assistance if a goal such as the Olympic Games were aimed at the Exposition, the Fair could be re-opened for a four-month, hilarious, spectacular, speedy, 1940 finale. It looks like a natural!

MUST MOVE FAST

The promoters of such an idea will have to move fast. New York's Grover Whalen is no snail. His Fair needs plenty of "punch" to put it over in 1940 as the recently released balance sheets indicate. I think that Los Angeles would even support the Games idea for its northern sister-city.

Certainly, in the eyes of sports men the world over, it would be better to hold some sort of Olympics with every pation offering the best competition it can secure rather than to cancel the Games and wait another four years. Such Games should do more to create international amity—even though Germans and British were competing in the same races—than almost any other means, except of course the conference table.

Why not give it a try?

Hanada to Fight Kongo Next Thursday

The best fighter in Japan in the light ranks will be decided next Thursday night when Yoichiro Hanada, recognized flyweight champion but who is now a full-fledged bantamweight, will take on Iwao Kongo, flyweight ace of the Usuda Boxing Club, in a 10-round bout at the Hibiya Park amphitheater.

The two fought to a draw two years ago. It will be a case of Hanada's speed and experience matched against Kongo's style of 100 per cent offensive. The bout has all the indications of being one of the best of the year.

The smoker, sponsored by the Usuda Boxing Club, will sport an eight-round semi-final, two six round specials and three four-round preliminaries. The first bout is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m.

Bill Tilden Back in America

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—The big "T" man is in town, with no more idea where the next bounce will take him than one of those fur-bearing tennis balls he practically skins with every serve.

There is only one "T" in tennis, and he is William Tatem Tilden, the man who made big business out of a tennis racket. He arrived in the United States liner Washington with several hundred other hurry-homers, firmly convinced two and one-half years abroad is just enough, particularly when they start a war around you.

LOOKS THE SAME

He looks about the same as when he left, or 15 years ago, for that matter, does "Big Bill." He still has that long, lean, hungry look. His thinning hair is perpetually at high tide, his eyelids droop sleepily, and his gestures are the same quick, flighty movements which intrigued galleries from Forest Hills to the Malay Peninsula.

And it he does say so himself, he never played better in his life than he's playing right now.

"We—Don Budge, Les Stoefen, Ellsworth Vines, and I—played quite a bit in England, and also Paris, Bordeaux and Marseilles. Budge is the greatest player I ever saw. He has everything. I think I won two out of nine matches with him. Stoefen has improved tremendously.

ABANDONED TOUR

"We were planning to leave for South Africa last Thursday, to start our world tour, but decided it wasn't such a good idea for Americans to be world touring right now."

With Robert Ramillon, Henri Cochet and Albert Burke, Tilden made an extensive tour during his long absence, touching India, Egypt, the Malay Peninsula, the Philippines and Hawaii, among other spots.

The nipping of the new tour plans has left the "T" man high and dry as to the immediate future.

"I'm here today, I don't know where I'll be tomorrow," he explained. "We haven't thought about an American tour, but I suppose professional tennis will go on."

As to the war, Tilden said England is taking it in the calmest, coolest, most determined manner imaginable.

"Absolutely no ballyhoo," he explained, "but, well, I'd rather not talk about it."

TONY GALENTO KNOCKS OUT NOVA IN 14TH

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15—The thudding fists of Two-Ton Tony Galento claimed Lou Nova as a victim in a gory, rough-and-tumble heavyweight fight in the Municipal Stadium tonight and shattered the Californian's dream of a chance at the world's heavyweight title next June.

Hammering away furiously, driving his club-like fists from all angles, giving no quarter and asking none, the barrel-shaped Galento, held in contempt as a heavyweight boxer a few short months ago, won fresh laurels as he knocked out Nova in the fourteenth round of what was to have been a fifteen-round battle before a gathering of 20,000 fans who paid estimated receipts of $75,000 to view the spectacle.

The finish came after 2 minutes 44 seconds of the fourteenth session. Nova, floored three times, once for a one-count in the third round and twice in the fourteenth, when he took counts of two and eight, was helpless in mid-ring, seeking surcease from Galento's furious assault, when Referee George Blake stepped between the combatants and signaled a halt. Blake at once raised Galento's hand aloft in victory amid a thundering roar from the crowd.

PLENTY OF ROUGH WORK

Not unexpected was this intervention by the arbiter brought on from California for the occasion. Yet the ending came suddenly, for Blake stepped between the fighters as if he were merely breaking up one of the countless clinches which marked a knock-down-and-dragout fight that held most of the ring's competitive elements, particularly fouls.

The referee could have intervened much earlier and put a quicker ending to a struggle that was nothing but a bar-room brawl. Galento made it so. Nova had a two-inch gash over his right eye, another of similar length under the optic, and he had one an inch long under the left eye from which blood flowed copiously through more than half the battle.

Galento's right eye was closed tightly. He had a split lower lip and bled profusely from a cut under the chin. The combatants were painted crimson from the gore. In the ninth round the more humane in the gathering yelled entreaties that the bout be stopped to save Nova from further punishment.

But the battle was permitted to proceed to the denouement that was inevitable, for one of the most startling ring upsets of recent years.

Galento entered the ring the underdog in the betting. The odds were reported to be 1 to 3 and 1 to 4 in Nova's favor.

There was little betting, so preponderantly in favor of Nova were the forecasts on the bout. Some had even predicted that Galento would collapse of his own wheezy efforts unless he scored a quick knockout. But the globular Orange heavyweight, who is more clown and wrestler than fighter when appraised on the basis of boxing finesse, astounded skeptics with a conquest that removes Nova from the heavyweight title picture, temporarily, at least.

And, in the final analysis, this doubtless is a stroke of good fortune for the studious young Californian. Right now he is not heavyweight title timber—and he may never be. It would be little short of criminal to send him into the ring against Joe Louis.

THE SAME OLD GALENTO

On the other hand, Galento is Galento. He never will change. He can't. He is strictly a barroom fighter, with no pretense to skill or the finer points of boxing. He knows only how to club and swing from every angle, giving and taking until either he or a foe drops.

And, more discouraging still for future foes, Tony never lets slip a chance to ignore ring rules and ethics. He was distinctly on the rough side tonight, going through a repertory that included "mugging," heeling, back-handing, wrestling and a little sly and fancy poking with the open glove and thumb.

His punches opened the cuts about Nova's eyes, but once the skin was parted, Tony saw to it that he brushed, flicked, heeled or mugged at every opportunity to widen the cuts, despite Referee Blake's repeated warnings.

In action as far as the bout went there was unanimity of opinion among the three bout officials that Galento was in front on points. Blake gave old Two-Ton ten rounds, called one even and gave Nova three. Judge Eddie Loughran had the same score, though there was a difference on specific rounds. Blake gave Nova the first, second and eleventh and called the sixth even. Loughran gave him the first, second and tenth and called the fifth even.

HOW OTHER JUDGES VOTED

Judge Frank Knarsborough gave Galento eight and Nova six. The rounds he called for Galento were the third, fourth, fifth, seventh, eighth, ninth, thirteenth and fourteenth. On this observer's scoresheet the fighters were even on rounds up to the finish, but in execution Galento was ahead.

Many ringside observers were caustic in their criticism of Blake's handling of the affair. The criticism came because of Galento's unrestrained indulgence in palpably foul tactics. Round penalties, if not disqualification, would have been imposed had the fight been held in New York.

Following the bout Galento declared his intention of refraining from further fighting until he gets a second chance at Louis and the title next June. He paid tribute to Nova's courage and strength, declaring him tougher than Louis.

Nova took the setback solemnly, saying such experiences come to all fighters sooner or later. But his manager, Ray Carlen, was outspoken in condemnation of Galento's fighting style. Carlen also criticized Blake.

For two rounds Nova was able to assert the mastery of his superior boxing skill. But in the third the battle took on a different aspect when Two-Ton suddenly spilled Nova with a smashing left hook to the jaw for a count of one and had Nova groggy.

Through the fourth Galento had his foe staggering. Nova concentrated on a body fire, evidently intent on wearing Two-Ton down. He might just as well have beat his fists against a stone wall.

In the eighth Tony wrestled Lou down after driving a left to the head, and, as he had in the third-round knockdown, Galento stumbled down with his foe.

The ninth brought cries of "Stop it! stop it!" but Nova went on to win the tenth and he fought valiantly though wearily with a tired foe through the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth. He was doing the same in the fourteenth when Two-ton's left hook suddenly swished through the air and, meeting with Lou's jaw, floored him for a count of two.

TWO-TON CONNECTS AGAIN

Leaping after his stricken foe, Tony clubbed and wrestled and tugged and mauled until finally a left and right to the jaw sent Nova down again, this time for a count of eight. Wearily, Nova pulled himself erect, but after another flurry of punches Blake ended it.

Galento weighed 234½ pounds and and Nova 207.

12 Japanese Athletes Returning From Europe On Yasukuni Maru

Twelve Japanese athletes, who who went to Germany prior to the outbreak of the current war to compete against the German athletes under the management of Seikan Ohki, will return here next Tuesday aboard the N.Y.K. liner Yasukuni Maru with other Japanese refugees from European countries.

A welcome banquet will be given in their honor at the Shirokiya Department Store's dining hall at 6:40 p.m. next Thursday following their reports on the European trip at the same store's theater, where the German ambassador, Major-General Eugen Ott will extend greetings, it was announced Friday.

The members of the athletes party are Seiki Ohki, manager; Kenkichi Oshima, coach; Mutsuo Taniguchi, Masao Yazawa, Yosui Oda, Eiji Miyagi, Iwao Maeda Akira Kawamura, Gengon Kin, Masaru Yamashita, Hiroshi Tanaka and Sanichi Okamoto.

TANAKA WINS HIGH JUMP IN N.Y. MEET

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—Two young New York A. C. huskies, Al Blozis, Georgetown sophomore, and Bill McKeever, Cornell graduate, took the play completely away from the trackmen in the New York A.C.'s 193rd track and field games at Travers Island yesterday. Competing under a bright sun of mid-summer intensity, McKeever won both the hammer and the 56-pound weight throws. Blozis, who obtained a short leave from football practice, was right on his heels with a record-breaking performance in the shot put and a second place in the discus.

A heave of 53 feet ⅞ inch by Blozis dealt the old meet record of 51 feet 11 inches a terrific jolt. The former mark was established by Leo Sexton, also of the New York A. C., in the Spring of 1932. Sexton later went on to win the Olympic title that Summer.

McKeever's 167-feet-9½-inch fling of the hammer was more than a foot better than that of his teammate, Irving Folwartshny, former national champion. His winning 56-pound effort measured 32 feet 11½ inches.

Winged Foot entries, however, weren't nearly so successful in the running and jumping events. Gene Venzke, veteran of countless middle-distance races, was the only Winged Footer to come through with a first place in either of these categories. Venzke won the 1,000-yard handicap from scratch in 2:16, coming up from a trailing position in the stretch. He won by three yards over Curtis Giddings, former N.Y.U. star, now running in the Navy and Gold silks of the Grand Street Boys.

Thomas Quinn, of Michigan Normal, surprised with a victory over both George De George, of the New York A. C., and Masaru Yamashita of Japan, in the two-mile handicap. A seventy-yard starter and overtaken two laps from home, Quinn surged ahead of De George on the final lap and won by twenty yards. Yamashita was third.

Hiroshi Tanaka, Japanese high jumping champion, leaped 6 feet 6 inches and won the running high jump handicap from scratch. Eddie Gordon, of the Grand Street Boys, another scratch performer, took first place in the running broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 3 inches.

The summaries:

Scratch Events

Hammer throw—Won by William McKeever, New York A. C., 167 feet 9½ inches; Irving Folwartshny, New York A. C., 166 feet 2¾ inches, second; Peter Zaremba, New York A. C., 154 feet 4⅝ inches, third; Michael Pappas, New York A. C., 150 feet 1 inch, fourth.

56-pound weight—Won by William McKeever, New York A. C., 32 feet 11½ inches; Peter Zaremba, New York A. C., 32 feet 4¼ inches, second; Michael Pappas, New York A. C., 28 feet 2½ inches, third; no fourth.

Discus throw—Won by Hugh Cannon, New Haven Harriers, 156 feet 11 inches; Alfred Blozis, New York A. C., 154 feet 9½ inches, second; William E. Burton, New York A. C., 140 feet 9¾ inches, third; Norman Curtis, New York A. C., 135 feet 7 inches, fourth.

JIMMY BRADDOCK WAS SPECTATOR OF LOUIS-PASTOR TITULAR FIGHT

By RICHARDS VIDMER

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—There is more to a big championship fight, such as the recent battle in Detroit, than just what goes on in the ring, and looking back there seem to be a few short stories that might be told about the meeting between Joe Louis and Bob Pastor.

Two of the principal characters in attendance were James J. Braddock, from whom Louis won the championship, and his manager, Joe Gould. To the naked eye neither of them had any direct connection with the meeting between Louis and Pastor, and yet they had more than a passing interest in Louis's success.

Not that Braddock has any idea of returning to the ring in the capacity of challenger for the title he once held. He is definitely retired, his last battle behind him. But he and Gould have a working interest in Louis. They get 10 per cent of everything he makes as champion and they don't want to see him beaten.

As you may remember, when Braddock was champion the logical contender was Max Schmeling. He had beaten Louis—knocked him out. In fact, Braddock was under contract to defend his title against Schmeling, but Mike Jacobs persuaded him to defend it against Louis instead. Part of the persuasion was an equity in Louis's future earnings in the event that he won the title.

So now when Louis fights as the heavyweight champion of the world, Jim Braddock and Joe Gould stroll casually about the scene, mingle with the crowds before the battle, eat heartily and lean back in their ringside seats with big cigars stuck out of the corners of their mouths.

"Go on out there and fight, Joe," they seem to say. "He can't hurt us."

SLAP-HAPPY SIGNS

Jimmy Johnston, who managed Bob Pastor into the bout and schooled him for the best fight of his career, sprawled comfortably on a bed in his hotel suite long after the fight was over and his boy had been beaten. There was a smile of satisfaction on his face, for he knew that he had done his job well. It had been quite a trick to get the lucrative match, and by his showing against the champion Pastor's position in the pugilistic profession reached a new high.

"Bob was out on his feet from the first round to the sixth," Johnston explained. "He never knew a thing that was going on, but fought instinctively and followed my instructions from the corner."

"How did you know he was out?" some one asked.

"You can always tell," Johnston explained. "When a fighter comes to his corner between rounds and you ask him how he feels, you know his head is clear if he says, 'Well, he hit me a pretty good punch up here,' or 'I think I can tag him with a left' or something like that. But when you ask him something and he keeps saying, 'I'm all right. I'm all right. I'm all right,' then you know that he isn't."

STRANGE EXPECTATIONS

Pastor himself corroborated Johnston's statement later. In another rom in another hotel he came in with his lip cut and a bandage over his left eye. Otherwise he didn't seem any the worse for wear.

"I certainly was surprised when I asked pop what round it was and he told me the sixth," Pastor recalled in the course of recounting his side of the fight. "I only remember being knocked down once in the first round. After that I don't remember anything until pop told me it was the sixth round coming up. After that I felt all right."

"How did you happen to get that right-hand punch that knocked you out in the eleventh?" he was asked.

"I didn't see it coming," Bob explained, without trying to be funny. "They had the wrong kind of stuff for cuts in my corner and when they put it on my eye I went out for the eleventh round. It didn't dry up but trickled down and stung me so that I couldn't see. The next thing I heard was the referee counting 'eight' and I tried to get up, but nothing moved."

As Pasor went out the door, headed for a night's rest, he paused and added:

"The way I figure it, Joe and I have another fight to make. A rubber match."

"How's that?"

"Well, I won the first one and he won this, so we'll have to fight it off."

The group was too dazed to answer that statement but sat there wondering what in the world ever made Bob think he won the first fight. Maybe he didn't come to at the start of the sixth round after all.

WHAT NEXT?

One of the most serious celebrations after the fight was staged by Joe Jacobs, manager of tough Tony Galento, and the next day he was a little vague about what had happened the night before. So some one told him he had signed for Galento to meet Pastor. Whereupon Jacobs exploded.

"I won't let Tony fight nobody but Louis," he howled. "He's the logical challenger after beating Nova. He ain't goin' to fight Pastor or nobody but Louis."

"But you signed for a Pastor bout last night," he was told.

And Jacobs spent four unpleasant hours before he found out that he was being ribbed.

Meanwhile Ray Carlen, Nova's manager, was going about quietly, willing to start his man on the road back by meeting anybody—Galento in a return match preferably, but if he couldn't get that match he was willing for Lou to fight Pastor or even Billy Conn, the light-heavyweight.

The logical order of ascension to next Summer's profitable meeting with Louis sems to me to be for Nova to fight Pastor, the winner to meet Galento for the spot. If Nova should emerge from the scramble, Louis will be facing the one heavyweight of any standing he hasn't already knocked out. If Galento emerges successfully, Louis will have a man who knocked him down for an opponent. If Pastor should come through the tests, Louis will have to face a fighter who has succeeded in going twenty rounds with him before being caught.

Keio, Waseda Ball Game Postponed Till Friday

Rain all day Tuesday postponed the second game between the Keio and Waseda baseball teams and they will meet on Friday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. at the Meiji Shrine stadium.

The rest Tuesday, today and Thursday, should give the Keio pitchers, Takagi and Shiraki who were bumped hard in the first game on Sunday, sufficient time to recover and start with a clean slate on Friday. And if Takagi, who is most likely to receive the assignment again, is in form, Waseda may receive a shellacking this time, and a third game be necessary to decide the championship of the Fall season of the Tokyo Six University league.

KYOTO TEIDAI TRACKSTERS TOP TOKYO, 199-155

By a 199 to 155 score, Kyoto Imperial University's track and field team defeated Tokyo Imperial University in their 16th annual dual tourney Sunday afternoon at the Chuo University's field in Nerima, Tokyo. The meet was pulled off despite the rain, and performances were consequently greatly hampered by the muddy conditions of the track and field.

The points were split as follows:

1,600-m. relay: won by Kyoto (Murao, Nakano, Nagano, Uyemura); second, Tokyo; time 3 mins. 44.4 secs.

Waseda Ruggers Rout Nihon University, 49-3

Waseda University's rugby team proved all too powerful for the Nihon University fifteen in their game Tuesday afternoon at the Higashifushimi grounds despite the rain. The final score was 49 to 3, the losers scoring but one try in the second half. The score at half-time was 22 to 0.

Waseda took no chances with the team that upset the dope recently by beating Keio.

PLAY RESUMED BY SOCCER TEAMS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Sept. 16—In a brief respite from war anxieties 120,000 English and Scottish soccer fans turned out for thirty-two hurriedly arranged exhibition games today. Four of the matches were played in Scotland.

Resumption of soccer, suspension since the declaration of war, Sept. 3, followed a government decision yesterday to permit games in comparatively safe areas. Football authorities will meet Monday to arrange competitions for the balance of the season.

Nine thousand, the biggest crowd of the day, saw Everton, league champions, lose by 2—1 at Blackpool. No matches were arranged for London, but several were played in districts close to the capital. A good standard was set by the participating league teams, many of which were at full strength.

Most of the contests were between neighboring teams, arranged without regard to their league ranking. Players taking part received no payment.

The day's play was marred by an accident to T. King, Luton Town fullback, who fractured a leg in the game with Brentford. Leslie Compton, Arsenal fullback, was tried at center-forward in the Gunners' match at Chelmsford and scored three goals.

In Northern Ireland the regular Belfast City Cup games were played. Matches in this competition have been staged regularly since the season started in August.

The scores:

KEIO DEFEATS NODAI SOCCER TEAM, 6 TO 2

The drizzle all day Tuesday did not prevent the Kanto Intercollegiate Soccer league from going through with its scheduled games at the Meiji Shrine stadium. In the first division, Kobe national champions, routed Nodai, 6 goals to nil, while in the second division, Rikkyo took Hosei into camp by a 6 to 2 score.

The slippery and muddy condition of the field played havoc with the Keio team, which emphasizes speed as its strongest factor. On the other hand, Nodai gave everything it had to put up a defense. The consequence was that Keio scored only two goals in the first.

It was a different story in the second half when Keio's forward line began functioning and registered four goals. Shinozaki, Harima and Ninomiya, who played for Japan in the 1936 Olympic Games at Berlin, sported a combination that the Nodai defense could not stop.

Rikkyo led Hosei 3 to 1 at the end of the first half in the other game, which got under way at 1 p.m.

The line-ups were:

Keio: Shinozaki, Harima, Ninomiya, Obata and Inouye, forwards; Takashima, Tanaka and Kasahara, halfbacks; Ishikawa and Osaki, fullbacks; Tsuda, goalie.

Nodai: Komatsu, T. Sato, In, Ri, Sei forwards; Takeda, Takagashi, Honami, halfbacks; Sato and Yoshida fullbacks; Isobe, goalie.

Keio Student Wins 50-Km. Cycling Crown

In a closely contested race, Yoshihisa Kanehara of Keio University won the third annual national students cross country cycling championship over a 50-kilometer course in Saitama prefecture Tuesday afternoon. His time was 1 hour 48 minutes 38 seconds.

The race started and ended at Taiseibashi, Omiya.

Three riders from Rikkyo University grabbed the next three places, as follows: second, Nagaoka, 1 hour 48 minutes 52 seconds; third, Saito, 1 hour 48 minutes 52 seconds; fourth, Kawachi, 1 hour 59 minutes 50 seconds.

Tokyo Teidai Beats Rival Kyoto Team In Ice Hockey, 4-2

In the season's first ice hockey game, Tokyo Imperial University's sextet vanquished the Kyoto Imperial University's stick wielders by four goals to two Tuesday morning at the Shibaura rink in Tokyo.

Tokyo led two goals to nil in the first period but Kyoto rallied in the second to deadlock the count in the second period. A strong spurt in the third period won for Tokyo. Both teams used two sets of forwards.

The record now stands 4 to 2 in favor of the Tokyo institution in their dual tourney over six years.

The line-ups were:

Tokyo Imperial: Senishi, Matsuda, Yano and Hashimoto, Katada and Takashima, forwards; Takahashi, Kobayashi and Kagayama, defense; Hamada goalie.

Kyoto Imperial: Iwata, Aikusawa and Iwasaki and Mizuta, Tanigawa and Ko, forwards; Funasaka, Okamura, defense; Shigematsu, goalie.

Chosen Railway Fifteen Beats Doshisha by 36-3

Doshisha University's rugby team went down to a 62-11 defeat at the hands of the Chosen Railway Bureau's fifteen Sunday afternoon at the Hanazono grounds in Kyoto. The score at half-time was 36 to 3 in favor of the team from Chosen.

HANADA BEATS KONGO WHO FORCED FIGHT

Yoichiro Hanada of the Teikoku Boxing Club, recognized as the fly-weight champion of Japan, won the judges' decision from Iwao Kongo, of the Usuda Boxing Club, in 10-round bout Thursday night at the Hibiya Park amphitheater, but he won in no creditable style. He was running away throughout the ten rounds, forcing the younger and less experienced Kongo to take the offensive and resorting to counter-punching. As one of the fans put it, he just about back-pedaled all the way to Chungking.

KONGO MISSES

It must be admitted that Hanada was plenty fast in backing away, and he proved himself so adept in ducking as well, that the rushing Kongo was missing most of the time. Hanada's counter-punches which at times found their targets in Kongo's body and Kongo's missing probably were the factors that influenced the judges' decision. But the real fight fan should ask the question—what kind of a bout would it have been had Kongo elected not to try to make it a fight and refused to lead? Giving credit that is due for his aggressiveness, the decision of the judges' at its best should have been a draw.

There was little action in the first round with Hanada running away. Hanada scored with a hard right to the body in the second round as he backed away but Kongo scored with a one-two attack to the body and then forced Hanada in a corner and shot lefts and rights to the head and body, most of which Hanada cleverly eluded. It was an even round.

In the third round, Hanada cuffed Kongo with a hard left to the head and Kongo slipped to his knees, but he was up without a count. He then countered with a hard right to Hanada's jaw. It was Hanada's round. The fourth round saw Hanada running away as ever with Kongo on top of him as a wild tiger. This time it was Hanada that slipped to the canvas as he attempted to duck away from one of Kongo's rushes. Hanada ran away with great speed in the fifth round to the disgust of many of the fans. He repeated it in the sixth round.

Kongo scored heavily as the seventh round opened with a left that stung Hanada's right eye. He followed this advantage with a two-fisted attack to the head and body. It was his round by a wide margin.

Hanada ran away more than ever in the eighth round but he scored with counter punches to the head and body as Kongo tried desperately to connect a haymaker. Kongo was too much anxious and he missed badly. The ninth was a repetition of the eighth. Kongo rushed out from his corner at the gong for the final round but he was unable to change the tide of the battle. He couldn't get Hanada to trade blows.

Hanada weighed in at 112 pounds and Kongo at 110 pounds.

YAMADA WINS

The best bout of the evening was the semi-final between two good featherweights over eight rounds. Shintaro Yamada, 123 pounds, promising battler from the Usuda Boxing Club, took a clean-cut decision from Seikichi Kaneko of Nagoya, 125 pounds. Yamada just about left-jabbed his way to victory. He also scored with telling right crosses to the face but Kaneko proved to be a tough boy and stayed on his feet throughout the fight.

Among the most enthusiastic spectators were some one hundred wounded soldiers, who were special guests of Kintaro Usuda, the promoter of the smoker.

WHEN REDS WON NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT

CINCINNATI—Berger, Cincinnati outfielder, is shown crossing the plate in the sixth inning with the run which gave the Reds the lead over the St. Louis Cards and, eventually, the National League pennant. Berger got on base by doubling to the left field fence. A bunt by Myers and Derringer's sacrifice fly brought home the baron. Final score was 5-3. But the Reds were beaten four straight by the Yanks in the World Series.

KEIO DOWNS RIKKYO, 15-7 IN U.S. FOOTBALL

Keio University's American style football team won its second straight game Thursday afternoon at the Korakuen stadium by taking Rikkyo University into camp by a 15-7 score.

The Rikkyo eleven, swamped 47 to 7 by the Meiji University squad on October 10, put up a much stronger battle than had been anticipated. As a matter of fact, it led by 7 to 6 at the end of the first half. In the end, it was Keio's speedier offensive that turned the tide in its favor.

Keio was first to break into the scoring column by registering a touchdown after 7 minutes of play in the second half. With Todo and Tazawa doing the ball carrying, Keio worked the ball to the Rikkyo 10 yard line. A forward pass from Sato to Tomi advanced it to the 1-yard line, whence Sato crashed through the line for touchdown. Conversion failed.

Rikkyo gave the fans something to cheer about when from its own 40-yard line, it worked the ball down the field for a touchdown after 13 minutes of play. Suzuki shot a pass to Yamada, who ran to the 10-yard line. Line plunges then carried the ball over the final stripe, with Suzuki scoring the touchdown. Suzuki hit center for the extra point.

Keio marched to the Rikkyo 22-yard line in the third quarter but failed to score.

Resorting to end runs, Keio worked the ball to the Rikkyo 20 yard line after four minutes of play in the fourth quarter. A forward pass from Todo to Yamakata resulted in a touchdown. Todo then crashed through the line to get the extra point.

Keio added two more points by downing Suzuki behind the line when the latter attempted a forward pass.

Keio's superiority over Rikkyo can be seen in the number of first downs. Keio registered 15 as against six by Rikkyo.

Kanto Pro Golfers Are All Eliminated

All Kanto representatives were eliminated in the second day's play of the national professional golfers championship Thursday at the Fuji course at Kawana.

Working their way into the semi-finals were Miyamoto, Toda and Sawada of the Kansai and En of Keijo. In the 36-hole match play today, Miyamoto was scheduled to meet En while Toda was to take on Sawada.

DODGERS TOP CLEVELAND PRO ELEVEN, 23-12

By ARTHUR J. DALEY

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—In a bitter struggle between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Cleveland Rams under the Ebbets Field flood lights last night before a gathering of 12,423, three swift assaults in the opening minutes produced as many touchdowns. The Rams went 50 yards in five plays for the first, the Brooks 55 in six for the second and the Dodgers 82 in only four for the third.

That gave the lads from across the bridge all the lift they needed to turn back the hard-fighting Rams, 23 to 12, as they took first place undisputed in the Eastern division of the National Football League with their second victory in two games. That they tacked on an unneeded field goal in the second session and an even more unnecessary touchdown in the final twenty-six seconds was beside the point.

The game began at such a terrific, breath-taking pace that it could not hope to carry on that way. But even when the pace slowed, the play was tense enough, because this was one fray where the entire premium was placed on the offense.

INTERCEPTION ENDS SCORING

The last batch of Dodger points came on an interception of a desperate aerial. Freshman Herman Hodges grabbed a toss by Freshman Kelly Moan and scampered unhindered over the goal.

If that is discarded in the analysis of the engagement, a truer picture can be presented. First there was a stabbing thrust by Cleveland in the first two and a half minutes, with the great Parker Hall of Mississippi, a rookie back, doing all the damage.

Three Hall passes spanned the majority of the yardage for the initial tally. His 17-yarder to Jim Benton rocked the Brooks right back on their heels when Benton stepped over for the score.

Yet Posty Clark's young men were not daunted. Ace Parker went to work through the air and on the ground, with the killing blow a nimble-footed cut-back by the Ace for 22 yards and the tying touchdown. When Bruiser Kinard converted the Dodgers were ahead, 7 to 6, since Vic Spandiccini had missed his attempt.

After the Dodgers had advanced from their 18 to their 34, the most sensational play of the game developed. Parker faded back and let go a tremendous 60-yarder. Perry Schwartz raced down field, his head cocked over his shoulder at an unnatural angle.

KERCHEVAL ADDS POINT

In some manner he made an impossible catch on the 20, stumbled to the 10, where he fell down, then picked himself up to register. Colonel Ralph Kercheval converted. The play covered 66 yards from scrimmage.

Bill Reissig's 15-yard field goal in the second meant little when it was made, although it did look better when Dutch Clark's Rams tallied in the last quarter. A 79-yard Cleveland drive to the 1-yard line was turned aside by the Brooks, but after Parker had fumbled a kick Cleveland went 22 yards in four plays for a touchdown, John Drake going over from the 2.

The most extraordinary part of this game was the forward passing. The first sixteen aerials all found marks, either on completions or intercentions. Parker made five of six good for 104 yards and Hall thirteen of nineteen for 155.

A beautiful passer, a shifty runner and a sound kicker, Hall was ever a thorn in the Brooklyn side. Drake did some high-class plunging for the Rams, who will be troublesome this season.

For the Dodgers, Parker was the backfield luminary, along with Ace Gutowsky. Schwartz, Harold Hill and Louis Marks did stalwart work on the line.

The line-up:

Dodgers (23)		Rams (12)
L.E.	Schwartz	Benton
L.T.	Disend	Friend
L.G.	Merlin	Bostick
C.	Mark	Cherundolo
R.G.	Sivell	Matheson
R.T.	Kinard	Lewis
R.E.	Hill	Wilson
Q.B.	Parker	Spadaccini
L.H.	Manders	Hall
R.H.	Kercheval	Smith
F.B.	Gutowsky	Drake

KEIO DOWNS WASEDA, 4 TO 1 TO SPLIT SERIES; PLAY-OFF TODAY

Keio turned the tables over Waseda by 4-1 score Friday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium to split their two-game series and the two, still deadlocked for the championship of the Fall season of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league were scheduled to meet at 2 p.m. today on the same diamond in the play-off.

With perfect autumnal weather prevailing, more than 60,000 fans jammed the stadium to see Keio stage a comeback after that disastrous 9-1 defeat in the first encounter last Sunday.

A wild peg to first with two away and the base filled by Third Baseman Minamimura of Waseda in the seventh allowed Keio to score three runs and victory. At that, it was an error too on Keio's part that contributed to Waseda's lone tally in the fifth that for a time seemed good for victory with Pitcher Ishiguro hurling airtight ball.

TAKAGI STARS

Keio banked on the bespectacled right-hander Takagi to win although he was bumped hard in the first game. Takagi, resorting to an effective slow ball and a curve, came through by checking Waseda to four hits. And he walked but one man. But for the fifth when Waseda bunched two hits and scored a run on Second Baseman Miyazaki's boner of a bad peg to first with a man on third, he was never in trouble.

Ishiguro, who pitched Waseda to victory in the first game, too was in fine form. He yielded only six hits. Poor support in the pinches was responsible for his defeat.

The indications today were that the two coaches might start the same pitchers this afternoon in their strategy for the league championship.

With Ishiguro and Takagi engaging in a pitchers' duel, Rightfielder Kajikawa of Waseda was the first man to reach first after two outs in the third when his grounder, not too fast, tunneled through Shortstop Odate's legs. He promptly stole second but Miyoshi fanned to retire the side.

Odate redeemed himself in the next inning by driving a hit that almost knocked Ishiguro down, after one out. Uno doubled to right and sent Odate to third. Rightfielder Kajikawa misjudged the ball. There was no scoring, however, because Iijima popped weakly to Ishiguro and Captain Kusumoto grounded out to second.

Centerfielder Kimura started the fireworks for Waseda in the fifth with a clean hit to left field. He took advantage of the slow throw in and stretched it to a double. Kakijima lifted a Texas Leaguer back of second and Kimura went to third. Ono grounded sharply to third but Uno made a grand stop of it and threw him out at first. Ishiguro too grounded to third. Kimura was caught between third and home but he gained life back at third when Backstop Matsumori pegged to second to catch Kajima off the bag. It was Kimura that was finally run down but the Keio team went to a lot of trouble doing it. With Kajikawa at bat, Ishiguro was caught by Takagi off first. Second Baseman Miyazaki, instead of watching the runner at third, pegged to first in an attempt to get Ishiguro. The throw was wild and Kakijima scored easily.

UNO TRIPLES

Keio got a man as far as third in its portion of the fifth without avail. But it tied the score in the sixth. Uno tripled down the right field foul line and came home on Iijima's fly to right.

And Keio won the ball game in the seventh. Inouye, who had been sent in the game to catch in the sixth and had trapped a man off first and pegged out another at second, Texas Leaguered to right after one out. On a beautifully executed hit and run play, Takagi grounded through short for a clean hit as Shortstop Murase had run to cover second. Kakehi was thrown out, third to first, but both runners advanced a bag each. Miyazaki walked to fill the bases. Odate grounded to Minamimura at third, who pegged a one-bounder to first and it went through Matsui. All three runners scored.

Backstop Ono of Waseda, first up, singled in the eigth, which by the way won for him the league batting honors with a .389 mark, but Ishiguro grounded into a doubleplay. Takagi retired Miyoshi, Matsui and Murase in a row in the ninth inning.

The play by play account follows:

First Inning

Waseda: Miyoshi flied out to center. Matsui was out on a fly to right. Murase flied out to center. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Keio: Miyazaki grounded out, short to first. Odate popped to second. Ishiguro tossed Uno out at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Inning

Waseda: Minamimura grounded out to Takagi. Kimura flied out to center. Kakijima was out, third to first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Keio: Minamimura scooped up Iijima's grounder to third and threw him out at first. Kusumoto was out on a foul fly to Minamimura. Mizuno flied out to left. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Waseda: Ono swung at a slow pitch by Takagi and was out on a weak foul to third. Ishiguro was out on a hopper to third. Kajikawa's grounder tunneled cleanly through Shortstop Odate's legs and he gained life at first. He then stole second on the first pitch to Kajikawa. Miyoshi fanned with the count 2 and 3. No runs, no hits, one error.

Keio: Matsumori saw a third fat strike with the bat on his shoulder and it was Ishiguro's first strike-out. Takagi flied out to right. Kakehi was out, Mianmimura to Matsui. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Third Inning

Waseda: Ono swung at a slow pitch by Takagi and was out on a weak foul to third. Ishiguro was out on a hopper to third. Kajikawa's grounder tunneled cleanly through Shortstop Odate's legs and he gained life at first. He then stole second on the first pitch to Kajikawa. Miyoshi fanned with the count 2 and 3. No runs, no hits, one error.

Keio: Matsumori saw a third fat strike with the bat on his shoulder and it was Ishiguro's first strike-out. Takagi flied out to right. Kakehi was out, Minamimura to Matsui. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning

Waseda: Matsui grounded out to second. Murase was out on a grounder to short. Minamimura flied out to center. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Keio: Miyazaki popped out to second. Odate swung at Ishiguro's first pitch and singled sharply through him. Rightfielder Kajikawa misjudged Uno's liner and let it go for a double, Odate going to third. Iijima popped to Ishiguro. With the count 2 and 2, Captain Kusumoto popped to second. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning

Waseda: By fast running plus Keio's slow throwing of the ball into the infield, Kimura stretched his hit to left into a double. Kakijima lifted a Texas Leaguer to right and advanced Kimura to third. Kakijima then stole second. Third Baseman Uno made a grand stop of Ono's hard hit grounder close to the bag, almost caught Kimura dashing back to the bag, and then pegged Ono out at first. Ishiguro grounded weakly to third but Kimura rushed for the plate and Uno pegged home. Kimura stopped and headed back for third. Backstop Matsumori, instead of throwing to third when he had plenty of time to nab Kimura, pegged to second for Kakijima, who in the meantime had run all the way to third. Luckily for Matsumori, one man was put away anyway for Kimura was finally run down at the plate, Uno making the putout. With Kajikawa at bat, Ishiguro was caught off first by Pitcher Takagi. Second Baseman Miyazaki's bad peg to Iijima in an attempt to run down Ishiguro went wild and Kakijima scored—a gift from Keio. Kajikawa flied out to center. One run, two hits, one error.

Keio: Mizuno was safe on Shortstop Murase's bad peg to first. Matsumori bunted to third to sacrifice him to second and Mizuno took third. Kakehi walked. Miyazaki swung at the first pitch, grounding to short to force Kakehi at second. No runs, no hits, one error.

Sixth Inning

Waseda: Miyoshi singled to right. Inouye was sent in to cach for Matsumori. On what looked like a hit and run play, Matsui missed his swing and Miyoshi was caught off first by Inouye. Matsui grounded out to Takagi. Murase flied out to left. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Keio: Nishimura replaced Kajikawa in right field. Odate grounded out to second. Uno dropped a fly barely inside the right field foul line and it rolled away from Nishiura for a triple. Iijima flied out to right and Uno barely beat the throw home to deadlock the count at 1-all. Kusumoto flied out to right. One run, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning

Waseda: Shortstop Odate robbed Minamimura of a hit by making a grand one-handed backhand catch of his sharp liner. Kimura walked. He stole for second on the first pitch but Inouye threw him out by a mile. Kakijima popped to third. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Keio: Mizuno flied out to left, Inouye lifted a Texas League to right. As Shortstop Miyoshi dashed to cover second, Takagi swung at the pitch and laid a grounder right through the middle of shortstop where Murase ordinarily cavorts himself for a clean hit. Kakehi was thrown out at first, Minamimura to Matsui. Inouye went to third and Takagi to second on the play. Miyazaki walked to fill the bases. Minamimura stopped Odate's grounder but he pegged a bit too low for First Baseman Matsui, who let the ball through and all runners scored. Fast sprinting by Miyazaki scored the third run. Uno popped to first for the third out. Three runs, two hits, one error.

Eighth Inning

Waseda: Ono singled through third. Ishiguro grounded to Takagi, who pegged to second to force Ono. Miyazaki threw to first in time to double off Ishiguro. Miyazaki made a good running catch backward of Nishimura's fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Inning

Waseda: Miyoshi grounded out to third. Matsui was out on a grounder to second. Murase flied out deeply to center. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Toda and Miyamoto In Pro Golfers' Finals

Two of the best known professional golfers in the country, Miyamoto of the Ibaragi Club, and Toda of the Hirono Club, both of the Kansai, were scheduled to meet today in the finals of the national professional championships at the Kawana links.

They had little trouble eliminating their opponents in the semi-finals over 36 holes, match play, on Friday. Miyamoto downed En of Keio by 13 and 12 while Toda took Sawada, a pro from his club, by 9 and 8.

HOWARD HAS ANOTHER CHAMP IN SORTEADO

By MURRAY TYNAN

N.Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—Charles S. Howard, Pacific Coast automobile dealer who had such great success with Seabiscuit and won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last Winter with Kayak II, which he imported from the Argentine, tossed Sorteado, another South American steed, at the New York turf yesterday with a rather astounding result. Sorteado won the thirty-seventh running of the Manhattan Handicap at one mile and one-half, and not only gave a grand performance but also smashed the American record for the distance that was held jointly by War Admiral and Handy Mandy.

Sorteado, which was making his debut in metropolitan racing circles after an indifferent year in California and New England, circled Belmont Park's big course in 2:28 2/5, which shaved a fifth of a second from the old mark. The chestnut invader, a son of Tresiete from Sentina, by Fisherman, added $6,675 to his modest earnings, conquered Townsend B. Martin's Cravat and William Woodward's Isolater by a half length and stole the show on an afternoon that saw Christiana Stable's Miss Ferdinand win the thirty-third Matron Stakes and other horses go in fine style.

20,000 WATCH PROGRAM

With nearly 20,000 racegoers in attendance the afternoon of top class racing also brought such noteworthy items as the victory of John Hay Whitney's Calory, a fine steeplechase that was won by Thomas Hitchcock's Yemasee, and solid winning performances in Class C handicaps by William Ziegler jr.'s Our Mat, and Mr. and Mrs. Amory L. Haskell's Opera Hat, which won the closest decision of the afternoon. The racing was keen, even spectacular from start to finish, but Sorteado's gallop was definitely the strongest contribution to the day's sport.

This running of the Manhattan seemed to be a nice spot for Cravat, but there was plenty of sentiment for Isolater, winner of the Saratoga Cup, and Isidore Beiber's Conde Rico, another South American that broke a record at Aqueduct last Wednesday. There wasn't much enthusiasm for Sorteado, and with Leon Haas up, the four-year-old colt went off at 8 to 1. Eight started.

The race was run pretty much up to expectations, with Conde Rico and Sorteado going along together and Isolater in third place, a length and a half behind them. Cravat followed this pace in fourth place, and when they all hit the last turn he and Isolater moved up toward the front line.

CONDE RICO TIRES

Conde Rico had all he wanted when they passed the ten-furlong mark, and the run down the home stretch was a thriller with Cravat and Isolater coming fast and Sorteado galloping bravely on, giving up his last ounce of speed and strength to hold them. They were catching the South American, but he was still a half-length in front when the weary trio sped under the wire. Cravat beat Isolater a head for the place.

With 112 pounds up, a concession of eight from Cravat and six from Isolater, Sorteado went around as follows: 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:37 2-5 for the mile and 2:02 for the mile and one-quarter. Cravat and Isolater are both eligible for The Jockey Club Gold Cup at two miles two weeks hence, but unfortunately Sorteado was not named for this great sporting test at weight for age.

The Matron did nothing toward giving the turf a champion filly, but it did confirm the result of the Adirondack Handicap at Saratoga and the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Lunger, of Wilmington, Del., who own the Christiana Stable, made a nice investment when they bid in Miss Ferdinand last year for $7,000. That may have looked like a lot of money for the daughter of Bull Dog from Misleading, by Sweep, but Mr. and Mrs. Lunger are now far ahead of their purchase price.

Ono of Waseda Wins 'Big Six' Batting Honors

Kinsuke Ono, burly catcher of the Waseda team, won the batting honors of the Tokyo Six University Baseball league which ended its official schedule for the Fall season Friday afternoon. Out of 36 times at bat in 10 games, he banged out 14 hits for a .389 average.

The averages of the leaders follow:

	G	AB	H	TB	Pct.
Ono (W)	10	36	14	20	.389
Murakami (H)	10	41	14	21	.341

BOSTWICK FIELD WINS U.S. OPEN POLO TITLE

N.Y. Times

WESTBURY, L. I., Sept. 24—The highest honors of American polo rested tonight with three young players of this country and a veteran of British polo. As 12,000 watched through a perfect Autumn afternoon, Bostwick Field took a bitterly fought, and a brilliant game from Greentree on Meadow Brook's International Field and became the national open champion.

The score was 8 to 7, and so close was this match all the way that the count was tied four times and neither side was ever more than two goals in front of the other, and then only once in the game.

In the end, Bostwick Field's victory rested on a desperate, wild galloping save on the part of Ebby Gerry, today a brilliant player and fighter.

REACHES UNDER PONY'S NECK

With the eventual winners leading by one goal, Bob Skene, the Australian with Greentree, leveled off a pretty driver for the goal mouth from the boards. Gerry, alongside of young Peter Grace, Greentree No. 1, set sail after it. Almost in the goal mouth he reached under his pony's neck and slammed. The ball struck Grace's pony and caromed off wide of the posts. There was about a minute of the game left, but that play had settled the issue.

Pete Bostwick, Bobby and Ebby Gerry and Eric Tyrrell-Martin, who last June rode in a losing cause with the British challengers, carried the victory today for Bostwick Field and all four of them shared fully in the credit.

The teams started at the pace they were to travel all the way, each scoring twice in a fast opening period. Ebby Gerry, off very fast, started things by getting away to two goals, one from close up after a long scrimmage and the other on a pass from his brother. Then Greentree came into the picture and Grace scored with a fine neck shot from his near side. Just before the bell Tommy Hitchcock carried up to Skene for the tying goal.

EACH COUNTS IN FOURTH

Bostwick Field went into the lead in the second period with the only goal of the session by Bobby Gerry. Greentree came back in the third, and this time Grace counted after a long Greentree attack. In the fourth each managed to squeeze out a goal.

In the fifth and sixth periods it began to appear that Bostwick Field was slowly taking command. There was only one score in the fifth, Bobby Gerry finishing off a nice run soon after the opening bell. Starting the sixth, Hitchcock, with a superb nearside neck shot from forty yards out, tied the count for the last time at 5—all. From the next throw in, Ebby Gerry was away again, stroking well on his nearside, to put Bostwick Field in front once more and then, late in the period, he stretched the margin to two goals.

GRACE PASSES TO HITCHCOCK

Starting the seventh, Hitchcock tallied when Grace passed up to him from a scrimmage, but Bobby Gerry and Bostwick combined to get up within scoring distance again and Gerry poked the ball through. In the eighth Grace, on a brilliant burst of speed, hooked a saving Bostwick Field shot and then went on to leave it for a perfect Hitchcock goal. Then came Ebby Gerry's remarkable save.

Mrs. John R. Fell presented the historic trophy to the winners. Bostwick Field succeeds Old Westbury as the national champion, the latter team not having defended this year.

WON FIRST TITLE IN 7 YEARS

Members of the Keio University baseball team which won the institution's first championship Saturday in the Tokyo Six University league by defeating archrival Waseda, 2-0, in a special play-off tilt. Picture was taken immediately after impressive closing ceremonies.

ROOKIES' COLLEGE GRID FAME PAYS DIVIDENDS IN PRO RANK

By DILLON GRAHAM

Professional football's fattest salaries go to rookies—big-name college stars who cash in quickly on reputations made on the university fields.

Harold (Red) Grange of Illinois got $50,000 for his first month of pro performanecs in 1925. Last year Colorado's All-America halfback, Whizzer White, was tops with $15,000 from the Pittsburgh Pirates. In 1937 Sammy Baugh was the top celebrity.

This year another pair of All-America backs head the list. Marshal (Biggie) Goldberg, Pittsburgh's ace, will get $11,500 from the Chicago Cardinals, and the Philadelphia Eagles will pay Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian about the same. Probably a dozen other stars will make over $5,000. Some of those players will do as well, on a basis of 11 championship games, as did Babe Ruth with his $80,000 top salary for 154 baseball games.

ABOUT $100 A GAME

The average National league player gets around $100 a game. Players on minor league teams average $50. Players on championship teams also get a "cut" of any exhibition or post-season contests.

Among last year's college headliners who are pro freshmen this season are Columbia's Sid Luckman, Oklahoma's Hugh McCullough, Michigan State's Johnny Pingel, Mississippi's Parker Hall, Carnegie Tech's Ray Carnelly and Baylor's Billy Patterson.

Many fans think the pros play a faster, more thrilling game than the college boys. The pros do take more gambles. They seldom freeze a lead. They're out to score all the points they can, for, in their wide-open games with passes from any and every location, a rival can overtake them almost in the twinkling of an eye.

A DEFEAT NOT RUINOUS

Where a defeat or a tie often ruins a college team's chances of a conference championship, the pros usually can take one or two defeats without being sidetracked. The league is so well balanced that it is almost impossible to escape a setback. The New York Giants lost two games last season, but won the championship.

Veterans of college play find there's plenty still to be learned after they join the pro ranks. Many a college backfield star is just another back when he turns pro. Red Grange was a shining example. After two years as a pro Grange said he had improved 100 per cent.

Heartly (Hunk) Anderson, Detroit's line coach, says it takes the best college lineman at least three years to reach his peak in professional competition because of different playing conditions and more expert opposition.

Kimura of Tokyo Wins Highest Judo Honors

Highest honors in judo was won by a Tokyo representative in the ninth annual national championships which ended Sunday at the Kodokan at Suidobashi. In the finals of "senmon" or experts' group, Masahiko Kimura, 22, of Tokyo Of the fifth rank defeated Tokisane of Hyogo after hard fought eliminations over two days.

The finals for the open title ended in a draw between Asoda of Tokyo, of the fifth rank, and Arai of Ibaragi, fourth rank, when two extra bouts could not decide the winner.

The best experts, irrespective of age, competed in the tourney from all parts of the Empire.

Meiji Tops Waseda Soccerites by 2-1

Meiji University's soccer team pulled off a surprise by defeating Waseda, two goals to one, Sunday afternoon at the Tokyo Imperial University grounds.

Waseda led at halftime with a 1-0 count, the result of Takahashi's tally in 32 minutes when Goalie Watanabe of Meiji made a bad miss.

The winning goal for Meiji was scored by Center Half Takeuchi after 25 minutes of play in the second half.

DIMAGGIO, WALTERS ARE MENTIONED

By RUMILL
Christian Science Monitor

Back in 1911, when Connie Mack's White Elephants were ruling the baseball world and the Yankees—believe it or not—were wandering around in the second division of the American League, the men who inhabit the press boxes decided that what the majors needed were valuable player awards. So, with the unanimous support of the league fathers, the scribes created a Chalmers Award. A trophy was passed along annually to the individual in each big circuit who towered above the rank and file.

The Chalmers trophy prospered for four years. Frank Schulte, Larry Doyle, Jake Daubert and Johnny Evers dominated the National field. Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker Walter Johnson and Eddie Collins—all in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown—gained the plaudits of the writers in the American. When the 1915 campaign rolled over the hill, however, the award was abandoned, as the record books vaguely explain, "because conditions made it seem possible to withdraw the selection."

LEAGUE AWARD

In 1922 the American League started an award of its own, and in '24 was joined by the National. The scribes still played the leading roles, but votes were cast to the league headquarters instead of to the president of the Baseball Writers' Association. This league action continued for several years. Suddenly, however, the executives discovered an angle which had previously escaped them. They came to realize that the players were "cashing" their trophies the following Spring, when it came time to talk contract. The valuable award winners shouted long and loud if their prominence was not richly rewarded in salary. It was this fact which prompted the officials to drop the practice at the close of 1929. The American League stopped in '28, but the National continued on another year because plans had already been made for the '29 award when decision to drop it was reached.

However, the writers were soon at it again. The Sporting News, the only baseball paper of its kind in the country, consented to take the responsibility of the award. For the past 10 years now, a committee of Writers' Association veterans has annually been cooperating with the St. Louis publication in naming the outstanding players. The selections have become a regular duty for the boys behind the typewriters. They wouldn't miss it for anything.

SCRIBES NOW AT WORK

Last year, you may remember, Ernie Lombardi and Jimmy Foxx were the recipients. The baseball thermometer rises and falls rapidly, however, and without notice, Ernie and Jimmy are no longer at the head of their respective fields. New men will soon replace them. Who will they be?

Candidates are as numerous as home runs at Yankee Stadium. If you can take the word of the so-called experts. For example, at least 10 deserving characters are lined up on the National side. There are Bucky Walters, Buck McCormick, Paul Derringer and Billy Werber at Cincinnati; Curt Davis, Johnny Mize and Jimmy Brown at St. Louis; Mel Ott at the Polo Grounds; Luke Hamlin, Brooklyn's "Hot Potato" Bill Lee at Chicago, and hustling Morrie Arnovich at Phillie.

AMERICAN LEADERS

The American League offers Joe Di Maggio, Bill Dickey, Red Ruffing and Frank Crosetti at New York; Ted Williams and Lefty Grove at Fenway Park; Bobby Feller at Cleveland; Clint Brown, the "Iron Man" of the White Sox; Dutch Leonard, the Washington knuckleball ace; Bob Johnson of the Athletics, and George McQuinn at St. Louis. The woods are full of them. Name 10 men in each circuit and still you have forgotten many deserving individuals.

The heaviest sentiment, though, lingers over the heads of Walters and Di Mag. Bucky's mound record this year is one of the most brilliant in modern baseball. They said the heat of Summer would catch up with his seemingly frail build. But it didn't. And because it didn't, the Reds are running toward their first World Series in 20 years. Di Mag. Well, Joe is the same great ball player who has been the heavy cannon in the four straight sweep of the Yankees.

Toda Beats Miyamoto 3 and 2 to Win Pro Title

Toichiro Toda of the Hirono Golf Club defeated Tomekichi Miyamoto of the Ibaragi Club, both of the Kansai, 3 and 2 over 36 holes, Saturday at the Fuji course at Kawana to win the professional golfers' championship for 1939.

By clinching victory, Toda virtually made it a grand slam in major tournaments, having already won the national open, Kansai open and Kansai professional titles.

Toda led 3 up at the end of the first 18 holes in the morning and Miyamoto could not quite catch up. Miyamoto rallied however on the 15 holes, in the afternoon when Toda was 3 up and dormie by taking it. His attempt to one-putt the 16h failed and the match came to an end.

BUNRIKA WINS INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK CROWN

Bunrika University of Tokyo won the national intercollegiate track and field championships for the second straight year in the two-day meet ending Sunday at the Koshien stadium near Osaka with a total of 98 points.

Waseda finished second with 75 points. Nihon University was third with 66½ points and Keio fourth with 28½ points. Other scores were: Meiji 21 points. Kansai University 16 points and Kyoto Imperial University 16 points.

TRAYNOR QUITS AS MANAGER OF PIRATES

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 28—Harold (Pie) Traynor, one of baseball's greatest third basemen and manager of the Pirates for six seasons, resigned today as the sixth-place Buccaneers neared the end of their poorest year since 1917.

The club announced a successor had not been named, but persistent reports said Frankie Frisch, the Fordham Flash and former manager of the Cardinals, would step into Traynor's shoes. Frisch's radio sponsor recently announced he had not renewed his contract as a baseball announcer at Boston because he would manage a major league club next season.

WITH PIRATES SINCE 1920

The 39-year-old Traynor, who has been with the Pirates as player and manager since 1920, will stay with the club, probably as an assistant to Joe Schultz in handling farm interests in the minor leagues.

Traynor, whose team cracked up last year when the National League pennant was within its grasp, said he was quitting because of the club's low position, and added:

"I believe that a change in managers will put the club up where it belongs and give the fans of the Pittsburgh district a better brand of baseball."

President William E. Benswanger, expressing "keen regret" in accepting the resignation, effective at the end of the season on Sunday, said:

LOYALTY IS PRAISED

"Pie's long and honorable career, first as a player and the greatest third baseman in the history of the game, and later as manager of the Pittsburgh club, his loyalty, his devotion to duty and his conscientiousness have won for him an envied place in baseball  We are happy that Pie will continue to be associated with the Pittsburgh club."

The resignation came on the heels of a flurry of rumors that Traynor was out as manager and vehement denials by the Pirate front office that any consideration would be given to the managerial selection until the world series ended.

Pie took over as manager in June, 1934, succeeding George Gibson, and held the post longer than any Buc pilot except Fred Clarke. Traynor's team finished fifth in 1934, fourth in 1935 and 1936, third in 1937 and second in 1938.

RIKKYO DOWNS KEIO FIFTEEN BY 24-16 COUNT

Staging a brilliant rally in the second half, Rikkyo University's rugby team turned the tables over Keio by a 24-16 score before a large crowd Sunday afternoon at the Meiji Shrine stadium. It was Rikkyo's first victory over Keio in three years.

Scoring a try, goal and penalty goal each, Keio led 11-9 at the end of the first half. Rikkyo's score had come through three penalty goals.

The game was a battle royal for [illegible] resumption of play in the second half. Rikkyo's forwards [illegible] suddenly came to life and penetrated the Keio dfense to score [illegible] with Ito carrying. He also kicked goal. Continuing its attack, Rikkyo added again in 22 minutes with Yokoda scoring a try from a scrimmage close to the goal line. Ito converted and Rikkyo forged into a 19-11 lead.

Keio missed its chance to win when Nakasu and Furusawa, two veterans, missed their penalty kicks in 23 and 28 minutes respectively, for in 32 minutes, from a forward dribble, Otani registered a try that would have deadlocked the count.

With no let up in its aggressive play, Rikkyo put the game on ice in 37 minutes when its combination of Okakura and Katagiri scored a try.

A strong attack in the first half, resulting in a 16-0 lead, was responsible for Meiji University's 26-10 victory over the Tokyo Imperial University's fifteen on Saturday afternoon.

Meiji registered 2 tries and 2 goals in the first half and two goals in the second half.

The line-ups were:

Keio: Ikeura, Suyehiro, Otani, Nakasu, Matsuno, Kitamikado and Kokura, forwards; Hasebe, Shinki and Kirita, halfbacks; Yoshida, Oye, Nemoto and Suzuki, threequarters; Furusawa, fullback.

Rikkyo: Kobayashi, Nakahara, Ibara, Okakura, Fujii, Katagiri and Yokoda, forwards; Takehisa, Iki and Nakayama, halfbacks; Mitsuta, Ito, Ogawa and Atsumi, threequarters; Fujii, fullback.

Meiji: Hanaoka, Endo, Sakashita, Hayashi, Ishiguro, Takashima, Ito and Niijima, forwards; Fuji, Matsumoto, halfbacks; Otani, Takahashi, Hamatake and Nakagawa, htreequarters; Fujiwara, fullback.

Teidai: Okuhira, Kinoshita, Kobayashi, Shiraishi, Nabu, Takashima, Ikeda, Shinosaki, forwards; Konishi, Uyetake, halfbacks; Meguro, Nakanishi, Sakamaki, Takahashi, threequarters; Hamano, fullback.

ARCHIBALD KEEPS TITLE AS FEATHERWEIGHT

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Joey Archibald, Featherweight champion of the world, successfully defended his crown tonight by winning the decision in a fifteen-round fight with Harry Jeffra of Baltimore.

The decision was not unanimous, and it was booed lustily by the crowd. Benny Leonard, retired lightweight champion of the world, who refereed the fight, voted for Archibald. The two judges, Frank Schuyler and Dr. O.U. Singer, split. Schuyler cast his ballot for the champion; Singer voted for Jeffra.

ACTION FASTER IN SECOND

The hooting crowd threw newspapers into the ring for five minutes as Officials sought to stage the Spider Armstrong-Marcus Pitts bout, originally scheduled to go on as the semi-final.

The champion, who is from Providence, R. I., weighed 124¾ pounds. Jeffra weighed 124½.

The first round was featured by tugging and hugging and little slugging. Archibald lashed out at the challenger midway in the second, jarring him with rights and lefts to the head. Jeffra returned the blows and shook up Archibald.

Jeffra landed a couple of good rights in the third. Archibald missed three straight lefts, then Jeffra was short with a looping right. Referee Leonard warned Jeffra for hitting during a break in the fourth.

For the next six rounds they chopped away at each other without damage. The tenth saw Jeffra start with a stinging right and Joey come in with a jarring right to the jaw. Archibald drove hard with both hands. Near the end of the eleventh round Harry caught Archibald with a right and a glancing left.

CHAMPION IS JARRED

Jeffra started the twelfth with a rush and belted Archibald about the head. Toward the bell Jeffra jarred Archibald with a left to the head.

Archibald drove in hard as the thirteenth opened, but Harry retaliated with a hard left to the mouth. Carrying the fight to Jeffra in the fourteenth, Archibald was wild with both hands. Harry caught him with an overhand right.

Joey whacked Jeffra with a right and a left as the last round opened. Both missed frequently trying for a knockout.

Armstrong, 124¾, of Montreal outpointed Pitts, 123, Washington, in the six-round semi-final.

CONN RETAINS LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE BY BEATING OFF BETTINA

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25—Billy Conn, world light-heavyweight champion, made his first defense of his crown a successful one at Forbes Field tonight. Before a gathering of 18,422 fans he beat off the challenge of stout-hearted Melio Bettina of Beacon, N. Y., from whom he won the title last July 13.

Fighting as a champion should, throwing caution to the winds and wading right into a more rugged, though more cumbersome foeman, Conn won the decision of Referee Red Robinson and Judges Chick Rogers and Johnny Fundy in a manner that left no room for doubt as to his superiority in the fifteen-round engagement.

To say it was a popular decision would be an understatement. Conn was making his first appearance here as a titleholder. His friends and fellow townsmen made up the crowd for the most part, and when the unanimous verdict was announced, the cheers for "the winner and still champion" had the Pirates' ball park vibrating.

LOSER'S STYLE PUZZLING

Not without serious contention, however, did Conn make this title defense. And he caused apprehension among his army of followers. The rugged, awkward Bettina, with his unorthodox southpaw stance, was something of a problem for the first six rounds.

But thereafter Conn came out of a shell, discarded an unnatural defensive and, fighting in the style and manner to which he is accustomed and attuned, the champion belabored his challenger until Bettina could maintain an erect position in the closing two rounds only with the greatest difficulty.

On this observer's score sheet Conn won the battle by eight rounds to seven on a round-by-round basis. Bettina, winning the first six in a sweep, was hammered through the next six with Conn fighting as Conn can and should fight.

In the thirteenth Bettina rallied desperately and won the round. But in the fourteenth and fifteenth Conn fought with such reckless fury and contempt for the blows of his foe that he swept Bettina steadily before him to clinch victory.

SHARP CONTRAST OF FORM

Though the round-by-round tabulation was close, Conn won off by himself on a competitive appraisal. He was the boxer, he was the ring general, the man with a plan of battle and a smooth method of execution; a rip-tearing, blazing swinger contrasting sharply to the floundering Bettina.

One of the judges, Rogers, had the champion winning by a one-round margin, giving Conn seven, Bettina six and calling two even. Fundy gave Conn nine rounds, Bettina four and called two even. Referee Robinson called nine for Conn, five for Bettina and one even.

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced that of the 18,422 fans who witnessed the battle 17,534 paid. Gross receipts were $67,892 and net $58,117.

Conn won the battle because he could stand up better under a pace, had the resistance necessary for Bettina's club-like blows, could take advantage of the clumsy moves of his rival and had enough in store to come on fighting furiously when fighting brought results.

And Bettina, game, willing, eager in his awkward way, tired perceptibly after six rounds, in which he had things all his own way.

CONN FORCED AGAINST ROPES

For this stage of the fight Bettina rushed Conn tirelessly, had the champion baffled with his southpaw style, repeatedly worked Conn along the ropes, hammering and clubbing with a right hook and a straight or swinging left.

Conn gave his first flash of counter-fighting in the last half-minute of the sixth session, but it was only an attempt to discourage the battering to which he was being subjected about the head and body.

Came the seventh, and a complete change in the action. From the pursued, Conn became the pursuer. He banged Bettina unmercifully with a shower of lefts and rights to the head, face and jaw and punished the challenger about the body in a two-minute outburst that had the Beacon fighter groggy.

In the eighth Conn cut Bettina's right eye with a right-hand smash that sent the challenger back on his heels, and pressed the fighting. It was the same in the ninth, and in the tenth, when Conn opened a cut over Bettina's left eye.

The challenger stumbled through the eleventh and twelfth but came back gallantly with a rally in the thirteenth, when he forced Conn about the ring, ignoring the champion's blows and plunging in headlong with drives to the head and face as he had done in the first six rounds.

VICTOR FINISHES FAST

But that was the end of Bettina's bid. Through the fourteenth and fifteenth rounds Conn pounded him all over the ring, set Bettina back on his heels with powerful drives to the jaw and had the challenger holding and weary from vicious digs to the body until the bewildered Bettina floundered across the ring in coming out of a clinch and another time almost stumbled through the ropes and out of the ring.

Conn weighed 172½ pounds and Bettina 174¼.

The champion's manager, Johnny Ray, left a sickbed to guide him through this fight. Ray suffered an attack of ptomaine poisoning last night and was prevented from attending the weighing held today.

Harry Bobo and George Hughes, local Negro heavyweights, were the combatants in the opening bout, a six-round struggle which ended with a decision in Bobo's favor beyond dispute. Taller, heavier and with a longer reach than his foe, Bobo won handily. He weighed 206 pounds and Hughes 188½.

Emil Joseph, local lightweight, rallied from six knockdowns in the first half of the battle to box his way to the decision over Bill Marquart of Winnipeg, Can., in a sizzling eight-round bout. Each weighed 135 pounds.

Floored three times in the first round, knocked off balance once in the second and sent down cleanly three more times in the fourth round, Joseph quickly shook off the effects of the knockdown blows and won with effective use of a snappy, tireless left jab.

CROWD BOOS VERDICT

The decision was highly unpopular and the crowd booed. But, save for the two rounds in which he had been floored and the second, in which he narrowly escaped being knocked down, Joseph clearly held the upper hand on boxing.

Georgie Abrams of Washington, rallying from two dangerous moments in the first and fifth rounds, hammered his way to the decision over Billy Soose of Farrell, Pa., in a hard-fought middleweight battle of eight rounds. Abrams weighed 160 pounds, Soose 159¾.

In another eight-round contest Milo Theodorescu of Rumania won the decision from Carmen Notch of Pittsburgh. Each weighed 145½ pounds.

MEIJI UPSETS WASEDA FIVE BY 29-24 SCORE

Taking advantage of Waseda's poor form, Meiji University's basketball team sprung a surprise by pulling through a winner by a 29-24 score in the third and deciding game of their two-game series in the first division of the Kanto intercollegiate league Monday night at the National Gymnasium at Hitotsubashi, Kanda.

Munakata of the Waseda team, who has had Olympic experience and was one of the bright stars on the All-Japan team which defeated the Canada Westerns two games out of three this Summer, failed to score a single point. That in itself was one of the deciding factors for Waseda's defeat. While poor teamwork had much to do with Munakata's failure to score, nevertheless it was clear proof that he is still in the depths of his slump that has proved a hard blow to Waseda so far this season.

In a determined effort to win, Waseda switched its line-up, for instance, shifting Oda, a guard, to a forward position but it proved of no avail. As a consequence, the team found trouble throughout the contest in breaking through the Meiji defense.

Center Sonobe and Guards Yamada and Ishii of Meiji, on the other, showed brilliant coordination and were storming the Waseda goal again and again particularly in the second half.

Yokoyama of Waseda, also of Olympic fame, was high point scorer with 12 points.

The score at halftime was 14 to 9 in favor of Waseda.

The line-ups were:

U.S. Army Cancels Preparations for Games

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring today formally canceled the United States Army's preparations to participate in the 1940 Olympic Games in Finland in view of the hostilities in Europe. It was understood that more than 15 Army Officers have been training for the pentathlon and equestrian events.

PERFECT MARK SURPASSED ON FIVE OCCASIONS

By H. ARCHIE RICHARDSON

Brutus Hamilton, head track coach at the University of California at Berkeley, in 1935 wrote an article for the "Amateur Athlete" magazine which he called "The Utimate of Human Effort." In this he attempted to estimate the ultimate limit of man's ability in the Olympic schedule of track and field events.

He took the Finnish Decathlon scoring table as a key by which to arrive at his figures and he gave the real credit to the Finnish mathematical physicists who devised the table. They made the difficult energy, expectancy, and fatigue graphs; they applied the evasive mathematical laws dealing with the physiological compensations; and Brutus carried their work further in order to arrive at his relative "Perfect Records."

BETTERED FIVE TIMES

Now, four years later, it is interesting to look at his table and see how many of his "perfect figures" have been beaten. Since the article was published the 1936 Olympics were staged in Berlin; a remarkable group of athletes competed on a splendid track; and although there were many great performances not one of them equaled any of the "perfect figures."

However on five other occasions the figures have been beaten. In the 400 meters both Archie Williams (U. S. A.) with 46.1, and Rudolf Harbig (Germany) with 46 seconds got under the "perfect figure" of 46.2 Harbig with 1:46.6 also got under the figures in the 800 meters by 1-10 of a second for a new world record for that distance.

TOPPED JAVELIN MARK

Nikko Nikkanen of Finland with a distance of 258ft. 2½in. topped the "perfect figures" of 256ft. 10.32 in. for the Javelin event. And Forest Towns (U. S. A.) who won the 110 meters High Hurdles at the 1936 Olympics ran this event in Oslo, Norway, in 1936 in 13.70s. thus beating the "perfect figures" of 13.82s.

Jesse Ownes got close in two events. His best time for the 100 meters being 10.20 against 10.06. He was even closer in the 200 meters with 20.30 against 20.05s.

It is interesting to note that in the track events, Brutus Hamilton figured that Bill Cair's time of 43.2 in winning the 1932 Olympic 400 meters at Los Angeles was the "perfect figure" for that distance. Yet one year after his article appeared, one of his own runners, Archie Williams, proved his estimate to be wrong. Of course this was no disappointment to Brutus who developed this great Negro runner in less than one year from a 49.8 man to one who was able to run the 400 meters in 46.1, and win this event for the U. S. A. at the 1936 Olympics in 46.5. In the history of track in America there is nothing to compare with this along the line of improvement. And now Harbig has cut 2-10 of a second off the "perfect figures."

HOP-STEP-AND-JUMP

Brutus' figures indicate that the greatest improvement will be in the Hop-Step-and-Jump with the "perfect figures being set at 54ft. 8.28in....that the Mile will not be run in 4 minutes....that it is possible to vault 15 feet...that the 100 yards will not be run in 9s ...that it is not possible for a man to jump 7 feet...that it is possible for a human being to maintain a 4:31 mile rate for three miles, and a 4:45 speed for 6 miles.

The two University of Southern California pole vaulters—Bill Sefton, and Earle Meadows just missed clearing 15 feet by an unfortunate mistake on the part of those responsible for the equipment for that event. Both of the boys have cleared 14ft. 11in. one afternoon at a track meet in the Los Angeles Coliseum and were ready to try to raise the record to 15 feet when it was found that the bar could not be raised any higher.

At a later date this mistake was rectified but the two vaulters never again reached their peak and thus a great opportunity was lost. Bill Sefton has graduated and retired from athletics and although Earle Meadows is still in active competition and vaulting well he has not yet succeeded in raising the record to 15 feet.

While Brutus Hamilton worked out most of his figures for the metric distances he included a few in yardage and because of this it is possible to give a comparison table between amateurs and professionals. With the exception of the 100 yards the advantage is wholly with the amateurs. In the 100 a mathematical comparison between Jack Donaldson, a "professional" runner, Frank Wykoff, and Jesse Owens is in favor of the famous Blue Streak over the two speedy United States sprinters. Donaldson's 9⅜ (9 15-40) just shades the 9.4 (9 16-40) of Wykoff and Owens. Had it been possible to place all three on either the Johannesburg, or the Los Angeles Coliseum track in their peak form that would have been the "100 yard race of all time" and no human eye could have correctly placed the three runners—it would have been a camera finish.—Christian Science Monitor.

VINES DEFEATS PERRY TO WIN U.S. PRO TITLE

Domei Tsushin

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Oct. 22—Ellsworth Vines, lanky Californian and one of the mainstays of Bill Tilden's professional tennis troupe, today copped the national pro title by defeating the great English player, Fredrick J. Perry, in four sets.

For Perry the loss of the match was heartbreaking. Though dropping the first two sets, 8-6, 6-3, the Englishman came back strong to sweep the third set at 1-6. In the crucial fourth set, the two players stroked and volleyed for a total of 38 games.

Fighting desperately, the English player managed to stave off defeat time and again by remarkable recoveries and dazzling placements, Vines, Wonder Boy of Wimbledon, finally won the contest by taking the 38th game. The final scores were 8-6, 6-3, 1-6, 28-18.

In the doubles, Vines and Perry dropped a hardfought match to Keith Glendhill and Bruce Barnes. Both Vines and Perry were extremely tired after their uncommonly long singles encounter.

Glendhill and Barnes defeated the veteran Vines-Perry combination by 6-2, 7-5, 11-9.

In today's matches Vines and Perry gave an exhibition of remarkable stamina. Playing hard tennis throughout, the two men participated in a total of 108 games.

Students Boxing Team Picked to Take on San Jose College Squad

The roster of the Kanto students boxing team to meet the San Jose College leather pushers of California on the night of November 7 at the Korakuen stadium at Suidobashi was announced on Monday. Of sixteen candidates, who will go into group training with quarters at the Nippon Seinenkan at Aoyama on November 1, one will be selected from each division to do battle with the visitors.

The candidates selected follow:

Flyweights: Nagamatsu (Meiji University), Mizutani (Nihon University), Koura (Rikkyo University), Takami (Senshu University).

Bantamweights: Ri (Senshu University); Ota (Meiji University), Matsukawa (Rikkyo University).

Featherweights: Kin (Nihon University), Kanbe (Waseda University), Imamura (Senshu University).

Lightweights: Ko (Rikkyo University), Mori (Meiji University), Fumihide (Rikkyo University).

Welterweights: Ri (Waseda University), Fumiharu (Senshu University), Amano (Meiji University).

The San Jose College team is one of the strongest in American collegiate circles and their performance is being anticipated with great interest. Its visit is being sponsored by the Japan Amateur Boxing Association.

KEIO WON TEAM BATTING FOR SEASON

Keio University's ball tossers, newly crowned champions of the Fall season of the Tokyo Six University league, won the team batting honors for the season as well, according to official statistics released this morning by the league. In 10 games out of 319 times at bat, they banged out 71 hits for a .223 mark. In second place was Hosei with a .222 mark, the result of 72 hits out of 325 times at bat in 10 games.

Waseda, which lost to Keio in a special play-off game for the league title, also registered 72 hits but had two more times at bat than Hosei and finished third with a .220 mark.

Waseda scored the most runs with 49, followed by Hosei with 36 and Keio 27.

Other "mosts" include: two basehits—Waseda 14, three basehits—Keio 7; homers—Hosei 1, by Murakami; total bases—Hosei 99; runs batted in—Waseda; 39; sacrifice hits—Meiji and Rikkyo, 14 each; stolen bases—Waseda; 14; strike outs—Tokyo Imperial 44; bases on ball—Hosei 62.

The team batting averages follow:

	G.	AB	R	H	Pct.
Keio	10	319	27	71	.223
Hosei	10	325	36	72	.222

Keio Meets Meiji In U.S. Football Saturday at Korakuen

Followers of American style football are in for a rare treat next Saturday afternoon when Meiji University takes on Keio at the Korakuen stadium at Suidobashi at 2 p.m.

Keio has won two games to date, having beaten Hosei 13 to 6 and Rikkyo 15 to 7, and is expected to put up a good fight against the championship defending Meiji eleven. In its only game to date, the latter routed Rikkyo 47 to 7.

The 1939 edition of the Waseda squad will make its debut on Sunday against Hosei at 2 p.m. at the same stadium and is a heavy favorite to win.

THE REDS WHO WERE BAGGED 4 STRAIGHT BY THE YANKS

CINCINNATI—Gathered together in a group photo the day after they cinched the National League pennant, are the members of the Cincinnati Reds baseball club. BASEBALL MEN REGARD CINCINNATI AS MIRACLE CITY IN THEIR SPORT

Editor's note: The following is an article by Tom Swope, sports editor of the Cincinnati Post, written late in September when the Cincinnati Reds were about to win the championship of the National League, which they did but were beaten four straight by the New York Yankees in the ensuing World Series early this month.

After a drought of 20 years a big-league baseball pennant appears to be coming to Cincinnati. And if you don't think the populace is excited about it you should stop by and get a load of what's going on in that solid city on the banks of the Ohio.

It is the smallest city in the major leagues, a city with a metropolitan population of about 600,000, in which the Reds of 1938 played to approximately 703,000 paid admissions in starting the miraculous ascendancy of Cincinnati in the baseball sun after 11 long years in the second division of the National League.

That, however, was just a starter. This year the Reds played to 776,558 paid admissions in their own Crosley Field in their first 56 games, with thousands turned away and more thousands who gladly would have paid to see the games not even going to the park on days when capacity crowds were anticipated, because they believed they would be unable to get seats.

And the Reds have played to this multitude in the smallest (in respect of seating capacity) park in the National League without putting the fans on the field to hamper the players.

Baseball men regard Cincinnati as the miracle city in their sport. They call it that because of the tremendous support given any Cincinnati team which puts up a fight for the pennant and also for the loyal way in which the fans stick by their team through adversity, refraining from harsh criticism of the players and manager when things go wrong with the club and rooting hard at all games to help the Reds win.

The best index on the fans' interest in the pennant-hunting Reds is, of course, the paid attendance at the Reds' home games. And this shows that interes in the Reds this year is the greatest ever known. Every ticket sold from now on just adds to the city's all-time attendance record, because this is the biggest year in the club's history.

But the interest manifest in the Reds by the paid attendance figures at Crosley Field is just a starter in showing the enthusiasm up and down the Ohio Valley over the prospect of having a pennant-winning team in this city where professional baseball first came to bat in 1869.

Go to any golf course hereabouts any afternoon the Reds are playing and you will find numerous foursomes accompanied by an extra caddie carrying a portable radio so that the golfers can follow the progress of the Reds.

Get on a streetcar or bus in Cincinnati while a game is in progress and you'll find most of the passengers huddled around someone with a portable radio tuned to the broadcast of the game or straining their ears to catch the news from the ball field on which Cincinnati's heroes are playing.

Go into almost any business house and you'll not only hear a radio telling the progress of the game but find a scoreboard on which the score is marked faithfully. In some public places, electric scoreboards trace the course of the ball for pennant-minded patrons.

There's no way of computing the additional money put into circulation there this year by the baseball fans attracted to Cincinnati by the Reds. It's been a great Summer for the hotels and restaurants. The big crowds usually are at least 30 per cent visitors from Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Ohio.

Which leads to considerable grief for the club's management. Local fans, when unable to purchase reserved seats for games, howl that too many of the precious tickets are sold outside the city.

It's just the old story of trouble arising when the demand exceeds the supply, and it has happened so often this season that the Reds' officials have had enough woes this year to last them a lifetime.

When Bill McKechnie's club played a doubleheader in St. Louis Aug. 13, and lost both games while fans swarmed all over the field in helping form a crowd of 39,224 paid admissions, more than 1,000 Cincinnatians were in the throng. A special rooting party organized in Cincinnati for the games found 663 persons going to and from St. Louis on a special train.

A big day at Crosley Field is like a picnic party. The fans start gathering five to eight hours before game time. They bring their lunch, gallon thermos jugs containing cool drinks, and just have a party while waiting for game time.

Hero worship of the Reds takes many forms, with all members of the club sharing in the adulation. Any time one of the Reds has a birthday while the club is in Cincinnati he will receive from four to a dozen cakes baked and decorated by admiring hands. Women bring bedspreads and tablecloths to the park for the players to autograph, then work in the signatures, afterward listing such articles among their most highly prized possessions.

If the Reds, despite recent shortcomings, hold on to the top to win the pennant, there will be plenty of talk, such as:

"Yeh, McKechnie and Giles won the pennant, but they did it with the ball club Chuck Dressen and Larry MacPhail put together."

Such talk will be partially correct. And partially wrong. Those who are worrying the least about whose ball club it is are McKechnie and Giles. It's their team now and they've done a lot of revamping of what they inherited from the Dressen-MacPhail dynasty to get the Reds into first place May 26 and keep them there ever since.

STARTED IN 1933

MacPhail came to the Reds as general manager in the Fall of 1933 and started right in organizing a farm system for the club. He left in the Fall of 1936 and Giles succeeded him. Giles retained Dressen as manager until mid-September, 1937. The Reds that year finished a bad last. That Fall Giles signed McKechnie to a two-year contract as manager of the Reds, at the highest salary Cincinnati ever has paid a baseball leader—$25,000 a year with two chances to win an additional $5,000 bonus. He could win the bonus either by lifting the Reds from last place into the first division or by drawing 450,000 paid admissions at home. He won it on both counts, but was paid off on the attendance clause held good this year, and he again won the extra $5,000.

For his $30,000 a year McKechnie has provided the Reds with very able leadership, so able that his 1938 team was in the running for the pennant until September and finally finished fourth. He brought on this big improvement principally with players who were on the club's roster when he signed as manager.

The big deals made by Giles and McKechnie since they started teaming together to raise the Reds from last place to the position of prospective pennant winners were those which put Bucky Walters, Bill Werber, Willard Hershberger, Lonnie Frey, and Wally Berger in Redleg togs.

Hershberger was obtained from the Yankee organization at the minor league meeting in Milwaukee in December, 1937, and has been quite an able assistant to the gigantic Lombardi.

Later that Winter Frey was obtained from the Cubs, and under McKechnie's management has developed into one of the game's top-flight second basemen after being pretty much of a misfit at short.

Walters came from the Phillies June 13, 1938, for $47,500 cash and some players, and that was the best deal made by the Cincinnati club in several years. He was a winner last year, and this year stepped out to become the first major league pitcher to win 20 victories. On Sept. 5 he pitched his twenty-second winner of the year, equaling the best winning total of 1938 in the National League.

The most important 1939 addition was that made last Spring, when McKechnie and Giles purchased Bill Werber's release from Connie Mack. Bill has been a real star at third base.

Although interest in the Reds, their goings and comings and in their games, is the highest ever known there, it is a wholesome and not a hysterical interest. No one jumps off the bridges into the Ohio River when the Reds lose a game or two.

"They can't win 'em all!" is the town's favorite slogan for defeats, with "Where can I get some world series tickets?" as the city's chief battle cry at this time.

Himalayan Expedition Returns to Switzerland

Special to The Japan Times

BERNE, Oct. 24—Members of the Swiss Himalayan expedition including engineers Andre Roch and Ernst Huber as well as two mountain guides Fritz Stoeri and David Zogg, who left Switzerland last May returned here yesterday. They were sent by the Foundation for Alpine Research.

On July 5 they climbed the 7,071-meter high Dunagiri and on July 5, Mr. Huber was the first person to reach the top of the 6,051-meter high peak Kataban.

After spending a month exploring the country with an altitude of 6,730 meters there they stopped when at an altitude of 5,700 meters, an avalanche killing two native carriers prevented further advance.

PITT DOWNS WASHINGTON BY 27-6 SCORE

N.Y. Times

SEATTLE, Sept. 30—Pittsburgh's Panthers, who traveled the 2,600 miles from Pittsburgh to Seattle by plane, took to the air again today, completing twelve of eighteen passes for an easy 27-to-6 upset victory over the University of Washington Huskies in an intersectional football opener before 25,000 fans.

The Pitt aerial circus took command in the first five minutes and never was headed, although it looked for a while in the third period as if the weary Panther airmen were heading for the hangar for repairs.

Lightning-fast backfield work by Dick Cassiano, only remaining member of the 1938 "dream backfield," and Ben Kish, rugged 200-pound quarterback, was a deciding factor for the Easterners. The Pitt attack wasted no time getting under way, either by land or by air, and passes had the Husky defenders dizzy.

Washington took the opening kick-off and punted immediately. Starting on their 31, the Panthers interspersed long ground gainers with passes to travel 69 yards for their first score. It came on a fourth down 20-yard pass from Emil Narick to Joe Rettinger, end, who caught the ball in the end zone.

Partly blocked punts by lanky End John Dickinson led to Pitt's second and third touchdowns. Dickinson recovered one on the Husky 44 in the second period, and Cassiano went over nine plays later.

In the final quarter Dickinson blocked another punt by Dean McAdams in the Husky end zone, the ball zooming skyward and coming to rest in the clutches of Tackle Ted Konetsky on the Husky 2. Kish went over three plays later.

RETTINGER CONVERTS TWICE

The final Pitt score also came in the last quarter. Center Dick Fullerton set it up with a 44-yard pass interception, running to the Husky 9, Cassiano passed to kish for the score. Rettinger converted twice and Kish once.

Washington rolled only in the third quarter, traveling from the Pitt 46 for a score, with Captain Don Jones and McAdams biting off most of the yardage. Jones finally scored from a yard and a half out.

The line-up:

Pitt (27)		Washington (6)
L.E.	Rettinger	MacDowell
L.T.	Kristufek	Yonker
L.G.	Gardisek	Garretson
C.	Fullerton	Mucha
R.G.	Klein	Frankowski
R.T.	Konetsky	Sterling
R.E.	Dickinson	Marx
Q.B.	Kish	Bechtol
L.H.	Cassiano	Gleason
R.H.	Narick	McAdams
F.B.	Bonelli	Jones

Score by Periods

Pittsburgh	7	6	0	14	—27
Washington	0	0	6	0	— 6

WHY STAR PITCHERS 'BLOW UP' IN WORLD SERIES GAMES

Loss of Control, Due Usually to Physical Weariness, Is Cause, Bill Dickey Says

By BILL DICKEY
Famous Catcher of World Champion Yankees

N.Y. Herald Tribune

It was the fifth inning of the third game in last year's World Series: Clay Bryant looked as though he could keep on forever. He had pitched four hitless innings, sending one after another of us Yankees back to the bench.

We had won the first two games of the Series, but when Bryant got the first two of us in that fifth inning it seemed a certainty that he was going to pitch the Chicago Cubs right back into the Series. We were putty in Clay's hands.

But then it happened.

With two out in that fifth inning, Joe Gordon, our second baseman, laid his bat against Bryant's curve and sent it screaming into the right-field stands for a home run—the first hit and the first run off the gallant young Cub right-hander.

That hit was like the first crack in a dam. In rapid succession Monte Pearson lashed out a single, Fankie Crosetti coaxed a base on balls and Red Rolfe rifled a run-scoring safety into right field before Bryant could manage to get that important third out. Even then the onslaught was not over. It continued into the next inning and, after allowing three hits and another walk, Bryant was led away to the showers wondering what had happened and why.

Bryant's only consolation was the realization that he was not the first pitcher whom sudden disaster had visited in a World Series game. Nor would he be the last.

DON'T BLOW UP.

When such a thing happens, the general impression among fans is that the pitcher has "blown up." This is wrong. Pitchers don't blow up—except on very rare occasions. When a pitcher blows up, it means that he has lost either his head or his heart, and it's hardly reasonable to suppose that this can often happen to the fellows who are able to fight their way into the World Series.

In Bryant's case, he didn't blow up. He slowed up. You see, when a fellow's working against a bunch of long-distance larrupers like the Yankees there's no let-up in the line-up for a pitcher. He's got to bear down with all he's got, all the time. After four or five innings of grinding pay-off pitches across the plate, he has worked the equivalent of a full nine-inning game against an ordinary team on an ordinary day. Thus it was with Clay Bryant. He gave all he had, and there wasn't any more.

It was the same way with Cliff Melton the year before. The lanky young southpaw of the New York Giants poured everything he had into us for four innings of the second game in a brave effort to match Red Ruffing pitch for pitch. Cliff was roaring along in fine style until he suddenly ran out of gas in the fifth inning. Myril Hoag, our first man up in that stanza, doubled, and before Manager Bill Terry could draw a deep breath Selkirk, Lazzeri and Ruffing had singled in succession. And Melton had to walk the long walk to the clubhouse.

Neither Melton nor Bryant was guilty of losing his head or his heart. Each simply lost the ability to put the ball where he wanted to, so the batters promptly started putting it where they wanted to.

In my eleven years as a big-league catcher, during which time I have caught some of the best hurlers in baseball—and batted against most of the others—I have found that loss of control is usually the real reason for the collapse of a pitcher. By loss of control I don't mean that the pitcher necessarily walks a half-dozen or so men. A pitcher can lose control without issuing a single base on balls. Pitching, you see, is not just a matter of throwing a ball across a plate. Pitching is a combination of science and art in which the pitcher works the corners, never giving the hitter a good ball, always laying it where the hitter doesn't like it or doesn't expect it.

RUFFING A MASTER

Red Ruffing is a master at this. So was Carl Hubbell before his arm began bothering him. Bill Terry's Meal Ticket had almost perfect control and poise. He was positively amazing in the opening game of the 1936 Series between the Giants and the Yanks. If you remember, a steady rain fell throughout the game and the ball was so slippery that the other players had trouble even holding on to it, but Hubbell fingered it as though it had handles. He struck out eight of us, gave up only seven hits and won 6-1, breaking the Yankee streak of twelve straight World Series triumphs. It wasn't his screwball that did it; it was his control, his steady, deadly accuracy.

When a pitcher loses his control it is usually due to physical weariness, as in the cases of Bryant and Melton. The pitcher's forearm and shoulder muscles tire and he begins to miss the corners. Then he has to concentrate on getting the ball over, and the hitter lays against what we call a "crippie"—a pitch that's right down the middle without too much on it.

Sometimes, of course, a pitcher fresh and full of vim and vigor starts off the game without control. It may be just one of those things, that he simply can't find the range; but then again it can be that he is trying too hard. That is, he bears down too much, which places an unnatural strain on his pitching muscles and he loses rhythm of action. Pearson, for instance, was trying too hard at the beginning of that third Cub game with Bryant, and he was so wild that I was afraid he'd never be able to stick around for the finish of the first inning, much less stay in there for the full nine. He started off by walking Stanley Hack and Billy Herman, the first two Cubs at bat. He steadied long enough to get Phil Cavarretta on a fly, but Joe Marty beat out an infield smash to fill the bases with only one out. It was a ticklish spot, especially with two lusty batters like Carl Reynolds and Gabby Hartnett coming up.

So I went out to the hill to talk things over with Monte. These little tete-a-tetes sometimes help a lot. They give a pitcher a chance to get a hold on himself. When I go out to Monte I could see that he was uncertain, so I said, "Listen, Monte, just throw it up there and let these guys hit. Just let 'em try to hit. With as much stuff as you've got I don't see how anybody ever hits you, Monte."

He didn't say anything, but as he took the ball from me he winked, and I knew that there wasn't anything wrong with his head or his heart. As the stands thundered with applause, Monte fanned both Reynolds and Hartnett to end the threat. And he didn't have any more trouble with his control for the rest of the afternoon.

Which, of course, is most important, because control is everything to a pitcher. It is more important than a jug-handle curve or a crashing fast ball. A pitcher can be lacking one or the other or both of these, but he can't work without control.

Many a pitcher has been batted out of the box because the hitters outguessed him. You see, if the batter sets himself for a fast ball and the pitcher serves him a fast one, that batter's chances of lacing the ball are greatly increased. A couple of good guesses and the pitcher is against the ropes. Of course, great hitters don't have to outguess pitchers. Fellows like Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig and Joe Medwick and Charlie Gehringer and others can hit anything anytime anywhere. If they know what's coming up, they'll just hit it a little farther than usual.

Some pitchers unconsciously tip the hitter off to what they are going to throw. For instance, there was one youngster who always wet his two first fingers before he was going to throw a fast ball. The hitters would lay back and wait until he licked his fingers. It amounted to a signal for them to dig in for a smoke ball.

PITCHERS MUST THINK

Speaking of signals, you've undoubtedly seen a pitcher shake his head at the catcher who is giving him the sign for the next pitch. This is known as "shaking off the catcher," and you probably think that the man in the mask is displeased at being overruled. But I like a pitcher to shake me off. It means that he is thinking out there, and I like pitchers to think. A pitcher can think his way out of more holes than he can pitch out of.

Sometimes, in a tough spot, the shaking off is faked to confuse the hitter. You see, most batters follow the catcher rather than the pitcher because they are better acquainted with the catcher's style and know pretty well what he is going to call for in a certain situation. But if they see the pitcher shake the catcher off, it confuses them. They have no idea then what the pitch is going to be—a fast ball, curve or change of pace.

One pitcher I never gave a signal to was Herb Pennock. Telling him what to throw would have been like telling Lou Gehrig how to hit. But Herb never gave me a signal either. I was just as much in the dark as the batter when the old southpaw drew back his left arm to fling the ball. He was a canny craftsman and many times he didn't make up his mind what he was going to throw until just as he was about to let the ball go.

Even when the pitcher isn't a Herbie Pennock, I don't believe in trying to stuff his head with ideas on how to pitch to this or that hitter when the going gets rough. The average youngster is liable to get confused if you try to give him too many instructions right in the middle of a close, hardfought ball game.

One of the surest ways for a pitcher to lose his control and the game is to lose his head in anger over what he thinks are unjust decisions by the umpires. To guard against our pitchers getting all wrought up and let down in violent debates with the arbiters, Manager Joe McCarthy has me do all the squawking. Since Joe has been managing the Yanks I don't believe a single one of our pitchers has been chased out—or knocked out—of a game because of an angry dispute with an official.

The rest of the Yankee pitchers have the same philosophical view as Lefty Gomez when it comes to umpires' decisions.

"I don't expect any mere human," says Lefty with a chuckle, "to be able to judge a pitch right all the time. He's got to miss one now and then. And, after all, what if he is calling them against you? If one man can get you down, you've got a nerve trying to beat nine."

Lefty, as you know, is a deadly man in the clutch. There aren't many pitchers in the history of baseball who have been more dependable than Lefty when it comes to winning that key game. It's a funny thing, for Lefty is as nervous a fellow as I ever knew. In the second game with the Cubs last year he was having trouble in the early innings. With a couple of Cubs roosting on the bases, I walked out to have a talk with him. I held the ball in back of me, Lefty glared, "What do you want me to do—guess what hand you've got it in? Gimme the ball, Bill, gimme it," he said, holding out his hand. It was shaking like a leaf in the wind.

Now, you'd think, wouldn't you, that a pitcher in his state should have been rushed to the showers before he exploded and treated the Cubs to a half-dozen runs? But not the "Senor." As soon as I saw his hand shaking I knew everything was going to be all right. Lefty, unlike other pitchers, is better the more he shakes.

I don't want to give the impression that every time a pitcher is knocked out of the box he has simply lost his control. That is usually the case, but sometimes the batters have been belting him pretty hard—hitting him into tough luck.

POOR SUPPORT CONTRIBUTES TO DOWNFALL

Quite often poor support contributes to a pitcher's downfall. Take the opening game of the 1937 Series when we drove Hubbell from the box suddenly in the sixth inning. He had pitched masterfully until this outburst. After Joe DiMaggio nicked him for a single in the first inning with one out, Hubbell had set the next fourteen batters down in order. Gomez, first Yank up in the sixth, broke this streak by getting a walk. Crosetti then singled, sending Gomez to second. And here was where the first break in Hub's defense occurred.

With Third Baseman Red Rolfe at bat, Catcher Gus Mancuso whipped a peg to second. He had Gomez caught dead to rights, but Shortstop Dick Bartell committed one of his rare miscues and dropped the throw. Rolfe and DiMaggio singled to bring two runs across and Gehrig walked, filling the bases again.

And then Hub's defense cracked once more. Burgess Whitehead, the usually sure-handed second baseman, booted my grounder, which might have been converted into a double play, and Rolfe scored with the third run of the inning. Myril Hoag forced DiMaggio at the plate on the next play—which should have been the third out. Instead it was only the first out.

So when George Selkirk came up and bashed out a single that drove home two more runs, Hubbell was taken from the box. The offense was given credit for knocking him out; but it was the defense that threw him down.

Quite frequently, a splendid stroke of defensive play—such a lightning double play or a brilliant outfield catch—gets a pitcher out of a hole; but almost as frequently some sloppy defensive work gets him into a tough hole.

All of which makes me all the more thankful that those semi-pro teams back home in Arkansas knocked notions of becoming a pitcher out of my head. I pity the poor pitcher—especially in the World Series—and it's always a wonder to me that they stand the strain as well as they do.

Kansai 'U' Gridders Play Rikkyo Saturday

Kansai University's American style football team will meet Rikkyo University at noon next Saturday at the Korakuen stadium as a curtain-raiser to the scheduled Waseda-Hosei game at 3 p.m., it became known today.

The Kansai gridders will arrive in Tokyo Friday night and will leave immediately after the game on Saturday.

Doubles

No. 1—Puncec and Kukuljevic (Yugoslavia); No. 2—Horikoshi and Ubara (Koshien); No. 3—Tsuruta and Kagitomi (Keio University); No. 4—Yamakawa and Fujikura (Keio University); No. 5—Nakano and Yasu Murakami (Hosei and Koshien); No. 6—Ikujima and Yamagata (Kwansei Gakuin); No. 7—T. Yamagata and Kusumoto (Keio University); No. 8—Kimura and Taneda (Waseda University).

ALABAMA TOPS HOWARD, 21-0

N.Y. Times

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Sept. 30—Stalemated for nearly three periods by Howard's superlative defensive play, Alabama's Crimson Tide finally started its roll today to open the 1939 football season with a 21-to-0 victory over the Birmingham Bulldogs before 6,000 fans.

Employing straight, unenlightening football for the most part as Fordham scouts noted maneuvers incident to next week's intersectional fray with the Tide in New York, Alabama scored thrice after falling as many times to cash in on touchdown opportunities in the opening frames.

Sparked by a sophomore fullback, Paul Spencer of Edenton, N. C., Alabama rushed across a touchdown in the third period's waning moments and struck hard for two more parades to the goal in the final quarter. It was Spencer on two scores and Holt Rast on the other, with all extra points booted accurately by Sandy Sanford.

Blackwell's 11-yard sprint on an end-around in the third period to set up the first touchdown and the running and field generalship of Herky Mosley in the fourth were features.

The first downs were Alabama, 13 to 3, while the yardage difference was 234 to 32.

The line-up:

	Alabama (21)	Howard (0)
L.E.	Blackwell	Richardson
L.T.	Merrill	Golson
L.G.	Hickerson	Drake
C.	Avegitte	Cougington
R.G.	Sugg	Sibley

CAN'T PLEASE EVERYBODY IN A PRIZE BOUT, RUNYON SAYS

By DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—We went over to Philadelphia last Friday night to see the heavyweight prize fight between Tony Galento and Lou Nova. We will go anywhere, any time to see a heavyweight prize fight. It is a terrible weakness.

This prize fight between Tony Galento and Lou Nova was a very bloody affair. Most of the blood was shed by Nova, a nice looking, statuesque young fellow from California, but Tony Galento contributed some. Tony nearly always does his full share as a blood donor in any prize fight in which he engages.

WITH A MOON FACE

He is a short, fat fellow with a moon face that slices as easily as a cheese, though Friday night he was bleeding mostly from wounds inside his mouth. Nova was bleeding from cuts around his eyes. One eye looked as if a piece of shrapnel had glanced off it. George Blake, who was brought all the way from California to referee this prize fight finally stopped it in the 14th round because Nova was about all out of blood.

Long before that, however, some of the spectators were shouting "stop it." This might be taken as indicative of great humane instinct in prize fight spectators, but we regret to say that such is not generally the case. We took special note of many of those who were shouting "stop it," and it was our suspicion that they were persons who were either personal admirers of the rotund Galento, or who had taken 4 to 1 against his chances of winning the battle.

In short, we fear that their stopits were prompted not by humanity but by avarice. They hoped to impress the referee with the idea that from the ringside the spectacle had become revolting and thus perhaps sway him into calling a halt forthwith, precluding the possibility of Nova recovering and eventually knocking Tony Galento bowlegged.

It is an old practice among prize fight spectators with wagers at stake. Indeed, crafty managers have been known to plant leather-lunged pals at the ringside for the express purpose of bawling "stop it" at what seem to be auspicious moments. Some referees are peculiarly susceptible to shouts from the ringside. They get to doubting their own eyesight and judgment of what is actually going on before them in the ring.

A DEADLY BORE

Of course there are many spectators who really are stirred by human sympathy for a beaten prize fighter, and perhaps revolted by the sight of blood, and who shout "stop it" out of the goodness of their hearts. But if those same spectators attend a prize fight which turns out to be a truly clever exposition of fisticuffs, with no physical damage on either side, they will go away saying it was a deadly bore and that the prize fighters were a couple of truffles.

A prize fight promoter who decided to specialize in presentations of skill in what is known as the manly art, rejecting bruisers and sluggers, would soon go broke for lack of spectators. This is evidenced by the fact that some of the cleverest boxers the game has ever known could not draw a nickel. What the spectators want to see is a fellow knocked unconscious. The times that Joe Louis just skilfully out-pointed opponents, the spectators got very mad at him.

George Blake did not pay any attention to the shouts of "stop it" Friday night. He is a seasoned veteran of millions of similar shouts in a long career of refereeing, and he stopped it only when he personally thought Nova the victim of unnecessary punishment. Then some of the very spectators who had been shouting "stop it" were around saying he should have stopped it earlier or not at all. We are just trying to show you how the spectator mind works.

George Blake was the referee of the Schmeling-Stribling fight in Cleveland some years ago and stopped it within a few seconds of the final bell when it looked as if another punch might be serious to Stribling. Afterwards when criticized for stopping in with such a short time to go, Blake said:

"I'm the referee—not the timekeeper."

OLD FASHIONED FELLOW

He is an old fashioned fellow who believes that when two big rough fellows are inside those ropes having a prize fight they ought to be allowed to fight without too much interference from the referee. So he did not bother Tony Galento and Lou Nova a great deal but just let them pull and haul and biff and hop as they pleased and that was swell for rough-house Tony, though not so good for Nova.

It was a new style of refereeing for the eastern prize fight spectators who are accustomed to their referees piling on top of the gladiators on small provocation, and penalizing them for minor infractions of the rules. In fact, it was so new that some of the spectators were inclined to squawk about Blake's aloofness from the fighters, and his disregard of any violations of the niceties by the boys, though only recently in New York spectators were squawking because a referee was over-zealous in that respect. There is just no accounting for the spectator mind.

We ran into Gene Tunney, who capped his career as a prize fighter on the same field where Galento and Nova met by taking the heavyweight title from Jack Dempsey. Gene was tickled over winning a good bet on Galento, but he only got 2 to 1. He started telling a crowd that if they had been there the night he fought Dempsey and had taken our advice on the fight they would have gone broke, but that was such a painful memory to us we walked out on him.—King Features.

6 Universities Entered In Boxing Tournament

Nihon, Hosei, Rikkyo, Chuo, and Senshu Universities and Nodai will compete in a boxing tournament next Wednesday night, beginning at 5 p.m., at the Hibiya Park amphitheater.

One fighter each will represent each school in the different weights and the team scoring the highest points will win the championship.

U.S. NAVY TOPS WILLIAM AND MARY, 31 TO 6

N.Y. Times

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 29—A fine second-half attack based on four new backs, three of whom were in their first varsity contest for the Navy, enabled the middies to defeat William and Mary by 31—6 today. This visitors had held Navy to 6-all in the first half.

Wes Gebert and Bob Leonard were the spearheads of a brilliant assault which netted three touchdowns in the final quarter, two of them on passes by Leonard.

Charley Beers, recently promoted from the B squad and Ev Malcolm, a little-used substitute of last year, were other stars of the late drive. Malcolm caught the passes from Leonard that brought the last two touchdowns of the game. Rowse, who scored the Navy's first touchdown in the opening period, was B squad back last year.

START WITH LIGHT LINE

The game started with five replacements in the forward line, which brought the total weight of the combination down by more than a hundred pounds, and the ball-carrying backs, Emmett Wood and Clif Zenz, found few openings.

The visitors were piling through the line so hard that there was a lot of fumbling, and this kept the Navy fighting from the bottom through most of the first quarter and prevented them from scoring in the second; while Birtchfield, in the same period, circled the Navy left end for William and Mary's touchdown.

ATTACK GAINS 275 YARDS

Both the attendance, 20,000, and the comparative figures on the running attack, 275 yards gained to 127, were satisfactory from the Navy standpoint.

Birtchfield, Howard and Matthews, for William and Mary, passed twenty-one times and though only four tosses were completed, gained a total of 101 yards. The Navy passed sixteen times, completed five, and gained 74 yards. However, two of them, were Leonard's touchdown tosses.

In Finland Or None At All, Brundage Says On Olympic Games

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—"If war forces the cancellation of the Olympics in Finland, it should not be held at all," Avery Brundage, Chairman of the American Olympic Committee, declared here today. He added, moreover, that the International Olympic Committee has no right to transfer the games.

If the games are cancelled, he indicated that a series of Pan-American contests may be held as a substitute, and disclosed that New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Havana and Buenos Aires have requested for the games.

Niagara Beats Detroit Tech, 10-7

N.Y. Times

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 23—Niagara University's football squad lost three first-string backs and a center by injury, but defeated Detroit Tech, 10 to 7, in the season's inaugural today.

Captain Al Caisse, Dan De Santis, Lon Manesiotis and Jack O'Laughlin went out of the game with injuries, and Niagara staved off a determined second-half bid by Tech with reserves in her secondary line of defense.

Halfback Caisse plunged through the line on a half spin for 17 yards and a tally in the opening stanza and Bill Flaherty place-kicked the extra point. Flaherty played the third period in place of De Santis and booted a field goal from placement for Niagara's final tally.

Ral Qualman, star Tech halfback, returned a punt 50 yards in the last quarter for Detroit's lone score. Qualman place-kicked the extra point.

The line-up:

YUGOSLAV TENNIS STARS ARRIVE

Left to right: Franjo Kukuljevic, his wife, and Ferenc Puncec of the Yugoslav Davis Cup team who arrived Friday on the Hie Maru for exhibition matches in Japan.

PUNCEC SAYS RIGGS IS BEST TENNIS PLAYER IN WORLD; KUKULJEVIC ALSO HERE

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 27—Without a doubt, Joe Riggs of the American Davis Cup team is the best player in the world today in the opinion of Ferenc Puncec, Yugoslav number one player and who represented his country in Davis Cup tournaments who arrived here late this afternoon accompanied by his teammate, Franjo Kukuljevic and Mrs. Kukuljevic on board the N.Y.K. liner Hie Maru from Seattle.

"During the European zone playoffs, the Yugoslav team was fortunate and we succeeded in coming out as the European champions," said Mr. Puncec." But we lost to Australia in the inter-zone matches.

"In the Davis Cup matches, I was defeated by John Bromwich but when we played against each other in exhibition matches, I managed to beat him. In comparing the players of the world, I would place Bromwich as the second best player in the world."

The Yugoslav players will go direct to Nagoya where they will appear in exhibition matches on Saturday and Sunday. They will then return to Tokyo for exhibition on November 4 and 5. They will enter the All Japan championships to be held at the International Courts at Koshien, near Osaka, beginning on November 6.

Mr. Puncec, who is ranked No. 1 player in Europe, has been seeded No. 1 for the championships, and Mr. Kukuljevic, No. 3, immediately after Fumiteru Nakano, of Hosei University and member of Japan's Davis Cup team in 1938.

Mr. Puncec, who is 25 years old, is not a flashy player but he is consistent and strong in all departments of the game.

Mr. Kukuljevic was here last Fall and appeared in exhibitions against Jiro Yamagishi, Japan's No. 1 player who is presently in the Navy, and a number of other players. He is 29 years old. His service with plenty of cut to it from the portside is one of the most baffling in the game.

After going to Manila to appear in a series of matches, they will proceed to India. Thence they will return to Yugoslavia.

Other prominent passengers who arrived on board the Hie Maru were, Kegeki Aoki, Tatsuo Ishita, Kikue Horikoshi, Kamenosuke Suzuki and Teiji Fijima. The Hie Maru carried 260 bags of mail for this port.

Immediately after registering at the Imperial Hotel Friday afternoon, the Yugoslav stars changed into their tennis clothes and went through a 20-minute workout at the Waseda University courts at Totsuka.

Puncec impressed the onlookers with his hard hitting. His service and net play were most convincing.

Kukuljevic seemed to have improved his back volleying which was one of his weak points in his exhibitions last year.

The two players entrained on the Tsubame express from Tokyo station at 9 a.m. this morning for Nagoya.

U.S.C. TIES OREGON, 7-7 IN 4TH QUARTER

N.Y. Times

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30—The University of Southern California's Rose Bowl dreams got a rough going over today as the Webfoots of Oregon battled the mighty Trojans to a 7-7 deadlock.

Forty thousand fans gathered for this Pacific Coast Conference opener. They saw Doyle Nave, pass throwing hero of S. C.'s victory in the Rose Bowl last January, pitch his embattled mates to a tie midway in the final quarter.

Coach Gerald (Tex) Oliver's well-drilled team from the North, expected to give Troy a workout and little more, staged a brilliant 56-yard aerial attack in the second period and led at half-time, 7—0.

STAVE OFF THE THREATS

Southern California rushed in its one, two and three team, but the Webfoots staved off all threats until Nave went to work.

The last time Oregon defeated the Trojans was in 1915. Unable since then even to tie the men of Troy, they froze onto the ball in the closing minutes, content with an even break.

Nine plays for 58 yards brought the Oregon touchdown. Little Jay Graybeal started the fireworks and turned the job over to southpaw Bob Smith, who finished it with a perfect pass to John Berry as he stood just over the line. Ralph Anderson converted.

Southern California's great array of backs, including Grenville Lansdell, Jack Banta, Bob Peoples and a few more, piled up yardage, but the Webfoots held tight.

TOSSES PERFECT PASSES

With minutes fading, Nave came in. Troy moved from midfield as Peoples and Joe Shell began snagging his perfect passes. With the ball on the 11, Nave found Peoples over in one corner. The ball went home, and Oklahoma Bob jerked and wiggled past two Oregon backs for the score. Phil Gaspar added the tying point.

Again Doyle began throwing the ball, and Troy started toward midfield, but Berry, one of the best men on the field, intercepted and Oregon kept the ball until the final seconds.

Southern California had a big edge in statistics, but that was all.

The line-up:

Oregon (7)		U. S. C. (7)
L.E.	Blenkinsop	Fisk
L.T.	Stuart	Thomassin
L.G.	Robertson	Smith
C.	Samuelson	Dempsey

Swimming Team May Go to U.S. In Summer of 1940

With the outbreak of the new European War precluding all hopes for the staging of the 12th Olympic Games at Helsinki next year, the indications are that a men's Japanese swimming team may compete in the United States in the Summer of 1940.

Negotiations have been started for such a trip by the Japan Swimming Federation. The A. A. U., which controls swimming in America, is believed to be receptive as the objective of the Olympic Games has disappeared.

There is a possibility that a team may be sent to Brazil as well.

ARGENTINE COLT BREAKS U.S. TURF RECORD

By BRYAN FIELD

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK Sept. 24—The South American way was the winning way at Belmont Park yesterday when the Argentine colt Sorteado not only beat the best of our handicap division that could be mustered against him, but set a new American record. The chestnut that Charles S. Howard imported on the strength of his reputation as best of the Argentine crop raced to his promise at last and scored by half a length at 8 to 1 before a colorful crowd that approached 20,000.

In this country, Sorteado races as a 4-year-old because of the difference in the seasons in the two hemispheres and the resulting difference in the birthday that is arbitrarily applied to all horses. With us that birthday of all horses is January 1. In South America it is August 1, which is Winter there.

Sorteado beat one of our best 4-year-olds in Cravat, who was second, half a length back of the winner and a head before Isolater. The late charge of the two was slowly wearing away Sorteado's lead, but it was not quite good enough, so the Howard racer crossed the line with a new American record for a mile and a half of 2:28 2-5, as against War Admiral's old mark of 2:28 3-5.

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON

The difference in birthdays, seasons and hemispheres is interesting as applied to Sorteado and Cravat, since it is directly concerned with the strength of their bone and muscle and the weight they can carry. Cravat, who became a 1-year-old on January 1, 1936, was foaled in the Spring of 1935.

Sorteado, who was a 1-year-old on August 1, 1936, was foaled in September, 1935, the Spring of the Argentine year. Thus it can be seen that Cravat is half a year older, and thus half a year stronger than Sorteado.

The Argentine horse looked big and strong and certainly as mature as Cravat, who was filled out as a 4-year-old should. Yet there is no gainsaying the calendar. The victory left Mr. Howard and his veteran trainer, Tom Smith, with what many now consider the two best handicap stars in the country, —Kayak II and Sorteado.

Kayak II is temporarily on the sidelines, but he will be remembered as the winner of the last Santa Anita Handicap. Sorteado, slower in finding himself, arrived with a bang yesterday. His impost was 112 pounds as against 120, top weight, for Cravat.

The question now arises whether the South American horses are so much better than ours that two of them can top the list here or whether Trainer Smith is a wizard who can make any sort of horse run like a champion. It is an open question on which time will throw a lot of light.

CONDE RICO RUNS FOURTH

For much of the way it looked as if two South American horses might figure in the money. The other, Conde Rico, set much of the pace, and he was not raced into defeat by Sorteado until the head of the stretch. There Cravat and Isolater also charged past him, but Conde Rico hung on well enough to get fourth money. The Manhattan grossed $9,250 and of this amount $6,675 went to the winner.

Both owner Howard and trainer Smith went into the unsaddling enclosure to see Sorteado from just as close at they could get. Tom, who has been dubbed "Silent Tom" because he is so laconic, congratulated Buddy Haas for his ride. It was a keen ride at that.

From an even break Haas found himself away well with Sorteado, but with Sickle T. on the inside of of him and also trying for the van. Conde Rico, on the outside, also was bent on taking the lead. Isolater, farther out, went with the pace too. The result was that Haas never could cross over and take the rail, even though he was in the lead.

Sickle T. was outrun by the time the initial bend was reached, but Conde Rico had got between Sorteado and the fence, still preventing Haas from moving over. On the outside of him, losing more ground still, was Isolater.

In the run down the back stretch Conde Rico moved through on the inside and into a slight lead. He led around the bend toward the top of the stretch.

When the final straightaway was at hand, Conde Rico could do no more and shortened stride. At last Haas could move over, with less than a quarter of a mile to go. It developed Haas had saved enough of his mount's strength to stave off the late rush of the two American stars, who had thrilled all at the Saratoga Cup race.

Isolator was running second inside the eighth pole and, slowly gaining on the leader. But Cravat was gaining even more rapidly and in the last couple of jumps he was up to take the place from Isolater.

5 SAN JOSE COLLEGE BOXERS HERE FOR BOUTS

Five members of the San Jose College Boxing team, California state champions in 1938 and 1939, arrived at Yokohama this morning on the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Kamakura Maru at the invitation of the Japan Amateur Boxing Association. They were accompanied by Coach DeWitt Portal and Mrs. Portal.

They are:
James Kincaid, 145 pounds.
Charles Kerwin, 135 pounds.
Conrad Lacy, 125 pounds.
William Sellers, 117 pounds.
Donald Taylor, 135 pounds.

The visitors will make their debut in Tokyo against an All-Kanto collegiate team on Tuesday night, November 7 at the Korakuen stadium here.

Champions of California for two years, the San Jose College leather pushers are expected to make a good showing. They are probably favored to win from the Japanese. San Jose tied with Washington State for the Pacific coast championships this year.

The indications are that the Japanese collegians will give the visitors a keen battle. Great development in this sport has been made by the Japanese, as can be witnessed by their victories over an amateur Philippine team from Manila last year.

TULANE TOPS CLEMSON, 7-6

N.Y. Times

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30—The Tulane Green Wave launched its bid for national football acclaim today before 25,000 spectators with a narrow and unconvincing victory, 7-to-6, over Clemson College, whose superior generalship gave it a lead at half time.

Red Kellogg saved the game for Tulane near the end of the third quarter after Golden got away from the Wave's 25-yard line for an electrifying 38-yard run through a wide hole opened up by Tulane's right forward wall.

Almost unaided, the great Tulane halfback began punching away, right and left, in efforts which netted 24 yards. Then, with the ball near the goal line, Kellogg, behind a powerhouse, shoved it over and converted.

A fighting Clemson team put the ball into touchdown position at the end of the first quarter following a brief passing attack. Kellogg broke through to take one misdirected aerial, but the ball went to Clemson for interference.

Trexler, substituting for Timmons, found one of the rare holes in the Tulane line and picked up 14 yards. Then McFadden rifled a 20-yard pass to Blalock, who had only to lope 8 yards for the touchdown. McFadden's effort for the point was smothered.

Clemson opened another aerial attack in the fourth, but McFadden's campaign was ended when he was smothered by three Greenies.

Tulane gained 330 yards to 119 for Clemson in running and passing.

The line-up:

Tulane (7)		Clemson (6)
L.E.	Bodney	Blalock
L.T.	White	Fritz
L.G.	Dailey	Moorer

Kansai 'U' Grid Team Needs 10 Prs. of Pants; Rusch Seeking Donations

Kansai University's football team, which is scheduled to play Rikkyo at 12:30 p.m. Sunday at the Korakuen stadium as a curtain-raiser to the Waseda-Hosei game, will be invited to Tokyo on November 26 also for a game with Keio, preceding the Hosei-Rikkyo clash, according to announcement by Paul Rusch, chairman of the Tokyo Intercollegiate American Football league.

Mr. Rusch is seeking contributions from friends of football to provide ten pair of football pants to the Kansai University team. These will cost ¥140. The Kansai school is the pioneer football team of that district and does not have support to enable it to build up an additional team for the encouragement of the game there.

SAN JOSE COLLEGE BOXERS IN DRAW WITH JAPANESE; ARE DISAPPOINTING

By LESLIE NAKASHIMA

San Jose College of California is reported famous for its boxing teams but its leather pushers that came all the way across the Pacific at the invitation of the Japan Amateur Boxing Association proved a disappointment to the writer, even though they drew with the Kanto collegiate picked squad, 2.5 points all in five bouts, Tuesday night in their debut at the Korakuen stadium at Suidobashi.

This opinion stands, notwithstanding the fact that the judges pulled off a raw decision when they awarded victory to Kisho Ri of Senshu University over William Sellers, bantamweights, in the first international bout of the evening. Sellers scored the more points, and what with Ri's two slipdowns during the bout, he should have had the decision.

LAUDED BY JAPANESE PRESS

This opinion stands, notwithstanding the fact that some of the Japanese sports writers, in quite the reverse of their usual attitude in professional bouts, lavishly lauded what they described as ring generalship on the part of the San Jose boxers. They raved about the manner in which the visitors maintained their "form" even when hard pressed at times by the Japanese fighters. They also said the Japanese amateurs have something to learn of footwork and the absence of waste motion as displayed by the Americans.

But it has always been our opinion that aggressiveness is one of the most important factors in boxing, particularly in amateur boxing, and it is it that decides the winner in an exceedingly close bout. The San Jose boxers were disappointing to the writer in that they resorted to counter-punching and demurred against taking the offensive. With a little more confidence, it is quite likely that the visitors might have won the meet by a convincing margin, had they opened up in the attack.

The turnout of fans was surprisingly good, some 5,000 taking in the show.

Sellers and Ri were both cautious as the Japan versus America match got under way at 7:30 p.m. after two exhibition bouts. They fought at long distance in the first round and there was no damage. Sellers scored with straights and lefts to the body and head to take the second round by a wide margin. The Korean student from Nihon University was missing badly. The two gave plenty of action as the third and final round started. Ri hammered Sellers in the body but the latter rallied toward the end of the round. The decision should have gone to him but Ri received the nod.

LONG WINS

Conrad Lacy and Heigoku Kin, of Nihon University, featherweights, fought on even terms in the first round. Lacy took the second round with a left jab earning him points. They were fairly even in the third round but the Korean lad packed the greater wallop in the exchanges. If no extra rounds were to be ordered and draws permitted, this was a draw. The decision went to Lacy.

The only knockout in the international program was scored by Katsuyo Mori of Meiji University, lightweight, who floored Don Taylor after 1 minute 30 seconds in the second round for the full count. After a listless first round when they were feeling each other out, Mori came out fighting mad as the second round started. Taylor got in the first telling punch, a right to the head, but Mori landed a right flush on Taylor's chin and down he went. Taylor came to sitting position at the count of five but he failed ot stand up.

As was the case in the other bouts, there was no action in the first round between Charles Kerwin and Ginshaku Ko of Rikkyo University, lightweights. Kerwin was in a touch spot because he had to win to give his team a chance for victory. Defeat and Japan would be assured of at least a 3 to 2 victory. They continued to fight at long range in the second round. Kerwin was trying awfully hard but his rights, telegraphed so that Ko eluded them, proved of no avail. It was Ko that took the offensive in the third round. Kerwin might have gotten the judges' decision had he been the aggressor, but he was content on counter-fighting. It was ruled a draw. Some of the Japanese sports writers thought Kerwin was robbed. The writer thinks if anything it should have been in Ko's favor.

KINCAID TALLER

With the score 2½ to 1½ points in favor of Japan, James Kincaid and Keikan Ri of Waseda University, welterweights, faced each other for the final bout of the evening. Kincaid was, about half a foot taller than his Chosen opponent. He had too much of a reach for Ri to break through. Kincaid should have made good use of this, jab with his left and swing his right, but he was much too cautious, and it was the shorter Chosen boy doing the leading. There was no action in the first round. Kincaid got his left working in the second round and landed two lefts to the body. Then he hooked two more to the body to win the round. Ri was desperate in the final round but he was powerless before Kincaid's tight defense. The decision rightfully went to Kincaid by a shade, but it was no impressive victory for the Californian with a high reputation.

Two of the six exhibition bouts on the program ended in quick knockouts. Masakiyo Imamura, featherweight of Senshu University, floored Yuichi Kambe of Waseda Uinversity twice for counts of nine before he put him away in the first round after 2 minutes 48 seconds of action. Kun Sen, lightweight, of the Y.M.C.A., was much too good for Kinmo Ko of the B. G. Club, and knocked him out after 1 minute and 45 seconds in the first round.

The San Jose boxers will make their final appearance in Tokyo on the afternoon of November 23 at the Hibiya Park amphitheater.

COLLEGIATE ICE HOCKEY SEASON OPENS

The Kanto Collegiate Ice Hockey league started its 1939 season Tuesday night at the Shibaura rink, with Waseda routing Tokyo Imperial, 9 goals to 1, and Meiji nosing out Keio, 4 goals to 3. Photo shows a scrimmage in front of the Tokyo Imperial University goal which resulted in a goal by Waseda.

NORTHWESTERN IS UPSET, 23-0 BY OKLAHOMA

N.Y. Herald Tribune

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 7—The rugged men of Oklahoma bottled up Northwestern's highly advertised backfield power today and flashed an offensive of their own that was good for a 23-to-0 victory in one of the season's great upsets.

Bill De Correvont, bearing on his broad shoulders the greatest publicity a sophomore back has had in some time, lived up to his advance billing with a sensational exhibition of broken field running. But the scoring summary named only comparative Oklahoma unknowns—a fullback named Bill Seymour and a couple of halfbacks named Dick Favor and John Martin.

It was Seymour who bucked over the Northwestern line from the 1-yard stripe in the first and third periods; it was Martin who intercepted a Northwestern forward pass on his 46-yard line in the closing minutes of the game and ran untouched fifty-four yards for Oklahoma's third touchdown and it was Favor who booted a field goal from the 24-yard mark in the opening period.

DE CORREVONT THRILLS CROWD

But the backs were not the whole story of the game—except for a third period in which De Correvont tore off a thirty-six-yard runback of a kick-off and a couple of amazing runs virtually without interference. The story of Oklahoma's superiority, evident in all but a few moments of the game, is the story of a burly hard-charging line that ripped its opposition to shreds on defense and rolled it down like an army tank on offense.

The Big Six champions wasted no time showing their will to win. Big John Shirk, 6 foot 4, Oklahoma end, reached high for a bobbing fumble from Hahnenstein's arms and was felled on Northwestern's 6-yard line. Seymour went over on the fourth play and Favor failed to convert.

Coach Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern, then sent in De Correvont for the first time and the Oklahoma line, with complete lese majesty, tossed him for successive losses of seven and four yards. Jack Jacobs, Jennings and Sevenson collaborated on a forward-lateral good for seventeen which set up Favor's field goal from Northwestern's 24.

The second period went scoreless, but a blueprint copy of Hahnenstein's first-period fumble—this time on Northwestern's 5 and recovered by Clif Speegle, the Oklahoma center—resulted in a second touchdown in the third period. This time Favor converted.

That was the moment Waldorf chose to send in De Correvont for the second time. For ten thrill-packed minutes the former high school scoring wonder raced across the yard stripes, skipping among red-trousered tackles like a ghost with his shroud on fire. But it was an individual effort, and in the end the ball went over to Oklahoma on Duggan's interception of Clawson's fumble on Oklahoma's 30. De Correvont made one more twenty-nine-yard dash, but he came up from under tacklers so badly battered he had to be taken out.

LINEMEN FEEL HEAT

The lines were drooping fast in mid-summer heat and the fourth period was sensational only for aerial fireworks. Hahnenstein and Soper fired passes wildly and sometimes successfully. Oklahoma had to hold twice within is own 10—but it did hold and then came back for a third touchdown. Johnny Martin, a substitute halfback, intercepted a pass on his 46-yard line and raced untouched fifty-four yards to the goal and he added his own conversion.

The line-up:

Pos.	Oklahoma (23)	Northwest. (0)
L.E.	Shirk	Grefe
L.T.	Duggan	Cutlich
L.G.	Manley	Guritz
C.	Speegle	Haman
R.G.	Stevenson	Method
R.T.	Bowers	Aarts
R.E.	Ivy	Daly
Q.B.	Favor	Conteas
L.H.	Jacobs	Hahnenstein
R.H.	Jennings	Chambers
F.B.	Seymour	Clawson

Score by Periods

Oklahoma	9	0	7	7	—23
Northwestern	0	0	0	0	—0

Touchdowns—Seymour (2), Martin (sub for Seymour).

Points after touchdowns: Favor (place-kick); Martin (place-kick).

Puncec, Kukuljevic Win Second Round Matches

The Yugoslav Davis Cup stars, Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic, won their second round matches Tuesday on the second day of the national tennis championships at the International Courts at Koshien, near Osaka.

Puncec took the measure of Niki of the Tokyo Commercial College, 6-2, 6-2 and 6-2, while Kukuljevic downed Kumamaru of Keio University, 6-0, 6-1 and 6-0.

Fumitera Nakano of Hosei University, No. 2 seed player next to Puncec, had a battle on his hands with Yamakawa of Keio University. He finally won in five sets, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, 3-6 and 6-2.

COTTON LOSES TO COMPSTON IN GOLF PLAY

The Times, London

LONDON, Oct. 2—T. H. Cotton, who was to have captained the Ryder Cup team in the United States this winter, played the first of the series of matches which he has arranged for charity on the Royal Mid-Surrey course on Saturday. The result of the match, which was won by A. Compston by a hole, was less important than the facts that the efforts of the players contributed £150 to the funds of the Red Cross and enabled about 1,000 people to forget their troubles for a couple of hours.

The wind and the hard ground did not make golf easy, but Compston, who was three down with five to play, was round in an approximate score of 73. Compston won the first hole in 3, lost the long second to a 5, and halved the third in 4. At the fourth Cotton was short with his approach, and Compston, who was safely on the green, took the lead again by holing a longish putt for a 3. Both found the green at the short fifth, but Compston, from the extreme right hand edge, was too strong with his first putt, too gentle with his next, and that was all square again.

Cotton got his 4 at the sixth, where his opponent was stymied, but lost the next. He regained the lead at the short eighth, where Compston was bunkered on the right from his drive, and turned with a lead of one hole, the ninth having been halved in 4. Both hit beautiful seconds to the 10th after Cotton's drive had narrowly missed the bunkers on the right, and that, too, was halved in 4, Compston holing a useful putt. Both were on the green at the 11th, and the referee, Mr. H. E. Taylor, had to produce a fishing reel and curtain ring before deciding which should putt first. Major Collis-Browne, the secretary, tired as he must have been after his efforts to keep back the spectators, found enough breath to inquire if he hoped to land a salmon or a trout. Compston finally lost the hole by missing a tiny putt, and became three down when Cotton hit a gigantic drive of some 330 yards to reach the 13th green.

Those who were too weary to make the long trek down by the Observatory missed a most interesting hole. There was nothing in the drives, but Compston was a little too strong with his second and had a horrid chip down the hill. However, he got the ball near enough to the hole and sank the putt, while Cotton, from the foot of the green, was too strong and missed the one back. That was only two up, and Cotton, who was to the left all the way at the 15th, lost that hole too with a 5 against a 4. Compston drove to within five yards of the pin at the 16th, Cotton was in the hollow on the right—and that was all square. At the next Cotton hooked his second, and then, faced with a difficult chip shot, was too weak, and bunkered. Compston nearly sank his 30-yard putt from the very foot of the green and was not asked to hole out. The last hole was halved in an orthodox 4.

FILIPINO WINS WORLD MIDDLEWEIGHT BOXING TITLE, BEATING APOSTOLI

By JAMES P. DAWSON

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—A crowd of about 12,000 fight fans hailed a new world middleweight champion last night in Madison Square Garden.

Ceferino Garcia, doughty little Filipino from Los Angeles, who twice was repulsed in bids for the world welterweight title by Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong, won the New York State version of the 160-pound crown when he knocked out Fred Apostoli of San Francisco in the seventh round of what was to have been a fifteen-round battle.

Under a sense-numbing shower of lefts and rights to the jaw and head, Apostoli sank into defeat 2 minutes and 7 seconds after the bell rang the start of the seventh session.

The defending champion went down three times, falling the last time limp and inert near a neutral corner, victim of a blizzard of blows no middleweight in the land could withstand.

JARRED TO HIS HEELS

A right uppercut which Garcia used with amazing perfection through the fight started Apostoli on the road to defeat. Jarred to his heels shortly after the start of the round under this blow, Apostoli was open for a left and right to the jaw which floored him for a count of two.

Arising from this knockdown, Apostoli, up too quickly in a perhaps unconscious exhibition of strength, was an open target for a shower of punches. Long lefts, left hooks, swinging rights thudded against his unprotected jaw and head in blinding succession as Garcia, victory and the championship within his grasp, fought like a demon.

A right to the jaw finally settled Apostoli, who collapsed slowly on the canvas. The count over the fallen champion reached nine before Apostoli pulled himself erect with visible effort. But he was finished. He had nothing more with which to repulse or withstand Garcia's furious assault.

Garcia knew it and acted accordingly. He leaped upon his tottering rival with tigerish fury, battering Apostoli uninterruptedly, his own eagerness causing wildness more than any feeble counter-fire Apostoli launched.

Finally, after a particularly savage two-fisted outburst, Apostoli crumpled. He was not knocked down by a direct blow. Rather, he slid away from his foe's fire, half-turning blindly toward the ropes, a short distance away, but too long a journey for his numbed muscles, his whirling brain to negotiate.

APOSTOLI SINKS SLOWLY

Apostoli sank to the canvas like a fellow in a slow-motion reel. He settled finally, on his forehead, groping blindly.

Even without looking to the knockdown-timekeeper outside the ring, Referee Billy Cavanagh spread both arms in the ring's time-worn token of "finish." The count, officially, had gone to two on the third knockdown when the referee stoped and lifted Apostoli erect so that the beaten champion's handlers could half-carry him to his corner.

That was the downfall of Apostoli, the rise of Garcia, the acquisition by the Filipino of a mythical ring throne after fourteen years of fighting. This championship came to Garcia in one of the most savage ring encounters this, or old Madison Square Garden, even had seen and in a startling upset.

Apostoli was favored to 5 to 8 entering the ring and was solidly backed. He was making his first defense of his title. He was established as a sturdy, heavy-hitting middleweight of unquestioned courage, a fearless fighter, a strong puncher able to withstand a punch. But he met his master in Garcia, who could absorb Apostoli's best blows and who could hit harder because he hit more sharply and more accurately.

The paid attendance was 11,465 and the gross receipts $35,433. And the fans were rewarded with a battle that held thrills beyond the customary number.

FRED FIGHTS DASHING BATTLE

Apostoli supplied some of the thrills with his dashing fighting against a punishing foe. Garcia, however, provided the big moment.

This product of the sugar cane fields of Manila started boxing about fourteen years ago as an amateur and came along by easy stages. For seven years he has been a fighter of established merit on the mainland. He made his first title bid against Barney Ross, then welterweight king, and failed. He made another bid for this title against Henry Armstrong and failed again.

Convinced that making 147 pounds was his handicap, Garcia then forsook the welterweight for the middleweight ranks— and collected dividends last night.

The only complaint with his station is its controversial condition. He has not undisputed possession of the crown once worn by Stanley Ketchell. Al Hostak of Seattle is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association and it will take a battle between the two to decide the question beyond dispute—if Hostak can be dragged into a ring with the fighting demon who toppled Apostoli.

But those who saw Garcia score this victory are satisfied he is the champion. For Garcia embodies everything that goes to make a titleholder, notwithstanding his long years of ring service and his 29 years of age.

He is strong. He can box. He can punch. He can absorb punishment. He can adjust himself to ring situations as they develop, is resourceful, alert, cool under fire, a perfect fury when the tide swings his way.

Garcia battered past the best Apostoli had to offer in four of the first six rounds. He won the first, blazing away with a volley of blows in a reckless onslaught that parred Apostoli and foretold at least a smashing battle. He won the third and fourth rounds after withstanding a body raking in the second that would have crushed a less hardy, determined fighter.

He came back and won the sixth, on competition and penalty, after having been thoroughly hammered through the fifth. When the seventh came he started by outjabbing his foe, quickly turning to a blistering fire of damaging, finishing blows, once he had stung the man he was to succeed as champion.

APOSTOLI JUST MAKES 160

At the weighing of the fighters at noon, Apostoli faced a loss of his $2,000 forfeit when the official scales revealed his poundage to be 160½. After a massage by Trainer Whitey Bimstein, however, he just made 160. Garcia scaled 153¾.

An upset was scored in a six-round bout when Victor Dellicurti, Harlem middleweight, pounded out a decision over the hard-hitting Walter Franklin of the Bronx. It was a torrid struggle. Fighting fearlessly, with amazing resistance to solid punching and utter contempt for the best punches of his rival, Dellicurti waded right into Franklin from the outset and earned the verdict. He weighed 151¼ pounds and Franklin 157¾.

The card opened with a four-round struggle, in which Gerard Delia, Staten Island welterweight, hammered out a decision over Steven Padon, West Sider. Delia weighed 139½ pounds and Padon 141.

In the second four-round battle Maynard Womer, Charlottesville, Va., light-heavyweight, carried off the decision over Jackie Conn, younger brother of Billy, the world champion in the class. Womer hit too often and too quickly for Conn and was entitled to the honors despite a spectacular closing rally by the young Pittsburgher. Womer weighed 166¼ pounds, Conn 171.

Irwin Kay (Kaplin) of Los Angeles and Irish Johnny Mack of New Britain, Conn., fought an exciting welterweight bout, first of the six-round events, and the decision was a draw. Kay weighed 142 pounds and Mack 141.

Holman Williams of Detroit, 147¾ pounds, won the decision from Carl Dell, Oneonta, N. Y., 148, in the six-round bout that closed the show.

KUKULJEVIC, PUNCEC ENTER QUARTER-FINALS

Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic, visiting Yugoslav Davis Cup stars, entered the quarter-finals of the national singles tennis championships Wednesday at the International Courts at Koshien, near Osaka, on the third day of the annual tourney.

Puncec took the measure of Fujikura of Keio University, 6-4, 6-2 and 6-4. Fujikura got off to a good start by taking the first three games in the first set. He might have run through the set but he missed his points twice to fail making it a 4-0 lead. Meanwhile, Puncec had rounded into form and his brilliant play in the baseline and his accurate cross placements from his backhand proved too much for Fujikura. Puncec is No. 1 seeded man and the indications are that he will probably meet Fumiteru Nakano, Japan's 1938 Davis Cup player, in the finals.

Kukuljevic had a battle on his hands with Nakahara of Waseda University. Nakahara resorted to a strong driving game but Kukuljevic not only outdrove him but broke through Nakahara's attack with his very effective slicing tactics. The Yugoslav had Nakahara running from one end of the court to the other and won the set, 6-4.

Nakahara, however, changed his strategy in the second set, shifting to a conservative game. Kukuljevic attempted to smash it with his usual repertoire of forehand drives and slices, but he committed one error after another to lose the set, 5-7. They fought to a three-all stage in the third set but the tide changed when Nakarara droped his service. It developed into each contestant keeping his service and Kukuljevic ran through the set, 6-3, and he took the fourth set as well, 8-6.

Kodera of Kobe Higher Commercial College, who had been seeded No. 4, lost to T. Yamagata of Keio University in the major upset of the day. Kodera was too eratic all the way. The score was 6-3, 6-2 and 6-4.

In another upset, Hirose, a comparatively unknown player of Kansai University, eliminated Taneda of Waseda University, 9-7, 6-3 and 6-3. Hirose's effective baseline attack was a factor Taneda could not cope with.

The results of the other third round matches follow:

Tsuruta (Keio University) defeated Moroto (Kobe Higher Commercial College), 6-1, 6-2 and 6-2.

Kuramitsu (Koshien Club) defeated Kagitomi (Keio University), 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 9-7.

Nakano (Hosei University) defeated Kusumoto (Keio University), 6-4, 2-6, 6-2 and 6-2.

Kimura (Waseda University) defeated Hirai (Osaka Savings Bank), 1-6, 6-1, 6-4 and 6-1.

Wakabayashi Pitches Tigers to Victory Over Eagles, 2 to 0

Behind the brilliant pitching of the veteran, Henry (Bozo) Wakabayashi, former star of Hosei University, the Osaka Tigers blanked the Eagles, 2-0, in Wednesday's doubleheader at the Korakuen stadium of the soon ending Fall season of the professional baseball league. He yielded only five hits. Ted Kameda, who like Wakabayashi hails from Honolulu, was touched for six hits by the Tigers.

The Senators bumped off the Hankyu squad, 3-0, in the other game.

The Tigers, champions of the Spring season, are but one and a half games behind the Tokyo Giants in the Fall season.

TEXAS DEFEATS WISCONSIN AT MADISON, 17-7

N.Y. Herald Tribune

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 7—A hard-charging Texas University football team which took advantage of every opening handed the Wisconsin Badgers a stunning 17-to-7 defeat before a crowd of 25,000 today.

A substitute fullback, R. B. Patrick, was the spearhead of the Texas third-quarter drive. He ripped through the Wisconsin line for twenty-one yards on five smashes after Gilly Davis, substitute halfback, intercepted a Wisconsin pass in midfield and ran twenty-five yards. Davis went over from the 3-yard line.

A few minutes later a quick kick put Wisconsin back on its own 2. Cone, Badger, back, trying to skirt right end, was hit behind the goal line and downed for a safety. Jack Crain, Texas back, promptly added another touchdown when he broke around right end and galloped thirty-seven yards for a score.

Early in the fourth period the Badgers were pushed back on an exchange of Wisconsin center rolled into the end zone, where John Tennant, halfback, fell on it, for another safety.

Harold Lubnow, Badger reserve fullback, paved the way to the Wisconsin touchdown in the game. Wisconsin got the ball on its 39 and in four plays scored. Lubnow ripped through the Texas line for an eleven-yard gain after a pass from Tennant to Gordie Gile had given Wisconsin position on the 24. Tennant then passed to Don Miller, substitute halfback, for a touchdown

SAN JOSE TEAM MEETS ALL-JAPAN SQUAD SUNDAY

The boxing tourney between the visiting San Jose College team of California and the All-Japan combine will be held at the Koshien ring, near Osaka, at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The San Jose boxers arrived at Osaka by the 10:07 train Wednesday night and registered at the Koshien Hotel.

Draw for the tourney follows:

Bantamweights: Bill Sellers (U.S.) vs. Makino (Japan—Kwansei Gakuin).

Featherweights: Conrad Lacy (U.S.) vs. Inada (Japan—Kansai University).

Lightweights: Don Taylor (U.S.) vs. Katsuyo Mori (Japan—Meiji University); Charles Kerwin (U.S.) vs. Junshaku Ko (Japan—Rikkyo University).

Welterweights: James Kincaid (U.S.) vs. Sai (Meiji University).

It is interesting that Taylor, who was knocked out by Mori in the second round of their bout on Tuesday night in the San Jose versus All-Kanto collegiate team match in Tokyo, will have a chance for revenge.

Kerwin will be meeting Ko for the second time. Their bout was ruled a draw. Some of the sports writers thought he won the decision by a shade but it was Ko who forced the fight all the way through.

The following itinerary has been decided for the visitors by the Japan Amateur Boxing Association:

November 9: sightseeing at Takarazuka.

November 10: Meeting with students of Kwansei Gakuin.

November 11: sightseeing in Osaka and Kobe.

November 12: tourney against All-Japan.

November 13: departure for Chosen.

Paterson Wins British Flyweight Boxing Title

LONDON Oct. 2—Jackie Paterson, the 19-year-old Glasgow fighter who turned professional little more than a year ago won the British flyweight championship at the Carntyne greyhound track, Glasgow, on Saturday, knocking out Paddy Ryan, of Manchester, in the 13th round. The title had been vacant since Benny Lynch relinquished it a year ago last June. Peter Kane, although world flyweight champion in the meantime, never fought for the British title.

Paterson has had a remarkably short career. He reached the final of the Scottish amateur championship two years ago, and since turning professional has had only 18 contests—Saturday's being his nineteenth—of which he has lost two.

FAVORITES WIN AS DOUBLES PLAY STARTS

No upsets marked the second round matches of the men's doubles in the national tennis championships Thursday at the International Courts at Koshien, near Osaka.

The visiting Yugoslav Davis Cup stars, Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic, who are seeded No. 1, won with ease from Fuwa and Matsuyama of Kyoto Imperial University, dropping only four games. The scores were: 6-1, 6-3 and 6-0. Kukuljevic's volleying, sometimes erratic, was one of the strong features of the Yugoslav's attack.

The results of other matches were:

Kimura and Taneda (Waseda University) defeated Masuda and Betsumiya (Kyoto Imperial University), 6-2, 6-3 and 6-2.

Murakami and Nakano (Shomen and Hosei) defeated Tatsuta and Kurokawa (Kwansei Gakuin), 6-4, 6-2, 2-6 and 6-2.

Fujikura and Yamakawa (Keio) defeated Yamagata and Kumamaru (Keio), 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1 and 8-6.

Tsuruta and Kagitomi (Keio) defeated Nakahara and Chikaoka (Waseda), 10-8, 6-4 and 6-0.

Ikujima and Yamagata (Kwansei Gakuin) defeated Okada and Kiyoda (Keio), 6-1, 6-2 and 6-3.

Yamagata and Kusumoto (Keio) defeated Nakamuda and Kodera (Kome Commercial College), 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

Horikoshi and Ubara (Koshien) defeated Tsuda and Mizushima (Keio), 6-2, 6-2 and 6-3.

Play in the women's division follows:

Singles, first round

Oura (Tokyo) defeated Saito (Koshien), 7-5, 6-1.

Iwata (Koshien won by forfeit from Yamakawa (Koshien).

Jun Kamo (Denyen) defeated Uyeda (Koshien), 6-1, 6-2.

Singles, second round

Kimata (Nihon Seimei) defeated Koyama (Koshien), 6-2 and 6-3.

Enotani (Koshien) defeated Kuwana (Denyen), 6-4, 6-4.

Yamakawa (Koshien) defeated Narukawa (Nagoya), 6-4, 6-1.

Jun Kamo (Denyen) defeated Tatsuma (Koshien), 6-1, 6-2.

Hamada (Koshien) defeated Tokuya (Koshien), 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Sawada (Nihon Seimei) defeated Ichibashi (Koshien), 6-0, 6-0.

Toda (Koshien) defeated Hayashi (Nakamozu), 6-0, 6-0.

Iwata (Koshien) versus Oura (Denyen), 6-3, 5-4, stopped because of darkness.

Doubles, first round

Iwata and Saito (Koshien) defeated Yamauchi and Honda (Koshien), 6-2 and 6-4.

Oura and Kamo (Denyen) defeated Koyama and Tokuya (Koshien), 6-2 and 6-3.

The men's singles quarter-finals were to be played today as follows: Kukuljevic versus Hirose, 10 a.m.; Nakano versus Kuramitsu, 12 noon; Yamagata versus Tsuruta, 1 p.m.; and Puncec versus Kimura at 2 p.m.

Rikkyo Routs Teidai At Ice Hockey, 13 to 1

Rikkyo routed Tokyo Imperial University, 13 goals to 1, in their ice hockey game Thursday night at the Shibaura rink. The nightcap scheduled between Waseda and Keio was called off after five minutes of play due to foggy conditions caused by a rise in temperature within the rink.

The forward combination of Sunada, Tanaka and Takahashi packed too much power for Tokyo Imperial University. Rikkyo scored four goals in the first period, three more in the second and six in the third when the losers accounted for their lone tally.

OHIO STATE TOPS MISSOURI, 19-0

N.Y. Herald Tribune

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 7.—Co-ordinating a deadly passing attack with a hard-running game, Ohio State, of the Big Ten, displayed a powerhouse today as it defeated Missouri, 19 to 0, in an intersectional football game.

Missouri, rated an outstanding Big Six team, failed to break through the husky Ohio forward wall, and its aerial offense was bottled up. The visitors were in Ohio territory only twice, and then briefly.

Ohio showed 58,165 fans that it would bid for a high Big Ten berth, scoring before the game was ten minutes old and then coming back in the final period for two more touchdowns.

James Strausbaugh, halfback, took the opening kick-off and raced eighty-five yards to the goal, only to see the score invalidated by penalties. Ohio came right back and marched seventy-eight yards, scoring on Don Scott's eleven-yard pass to Frank Clair in the end zone.

In the fourth period an eighteen-yard pass from John Simione to Charlie Anderson netted the second touchdown. A few minutes later Scott zig-zagged his way beautifully through a broken field for thirty-four yards and the last touchdown.

Clair and Anderson, a big Negro playing his first game for Ohio, were in the clear, as were most of the Ohio receivers when they completed nine out of twenty-five passes.

The line-up:

Pos.	Ohio State (19)	Missouri (0)
L.E.	Esco Sarkkinen	Roland Orf
L.T.	Daniell	Wakemar
L.G.	Marino	Waldorf
C.	Andrano	Ducheck
R.G.	Mosker	Pickett
R.T.	Piccinini	Hass
R.E.	Clair	Robert Orf
Q.B.	Scott	Christman
L.H.	Strausbaugh	Starmer
R.H.	Zadworney	Faurot
F.B.	Langhurst	Cunningham

Score by Periods

Ohio State	7	0	0	12	—19
Missouri	0	0	0	0	— 0

Touchdowns—Clair, Anderson (sub for Clair), Scott.

Point after touchdown—Scott (place kick).

Referee—James Masker, Northwestern. Umpire—Spike Dennie, Brown. Field Judge—David Reese Denison. Linesman—Dwight Ream, Washburn.

BILLIARDS ARE KEPT UP BY BRITISHERS

By R. MAILLARD STEAD

Christian Science Monitor

LONDON—"Business as usual—more or less," is the slogan for English billiards and Snookers' Pool at the start of the 1939-40 season. And judging from the program contemplated it seems set to be more than less. For the body controlling these highly popular indoor games here proposes to arrange the English Professional Championships in London, as usual, and has plans under discussion for deciding the amateur championship—normally a nation-wide proposition, involving hundreds of competitors—in some form modified to suit war-time needs.

Professional competitions never cause any difficulty on the score of numbers, for you could count the real stars in the paid ranks here on the fingers of both hands and even then include a few who would not be accounted to stand much of a chance against the others in a serious match on level terms.

PRO TO TOUR

Like every other sport, Billiards and Snooker are to be utilized now to give the maximum entertainment to people in the fighting forces and those engaged on other forms of national service. Which means pretty well the entire male population and a fair proportion of the feminine one as well. And I learn that it is the hope of the Billiards Association to arrange sectional championships for many of these people and to encourage the professionals to tour around camps and depots giving exhibitions that will be keenly appreciated.

Billiards and Snooker—or the other way round, if we wish to put them in order of present-day popularity—are games with a following so enormous that you can only guess at it. And there is nothing that delights amateur players of all grades more than to watch the professionals in action. At no other game is the gulf between the unpaid player and the paid so unbridgably wide as it is on the billiards table, and to the man who thinks that he is doing extremely well if he makes a billiards break of fifty the ball-control exercised by the maestros as they rattle up hundred after hundred—thousand after thousand even—is little short of wizardry.

Latterly Billiards, by far the older game played with three balls (two white, one red) has been supplanted in public favor by Snooker involving the use of 15 red balls, six colored ones, and a white one, always the one that you strike with the cue. You hope.

SERIOUS GAME

While English billiards, played on a table with six pockets, is a very deep and serious game—a test of mathematical exactitude in the application of dynamics—Snooker is more of a breezy, knock-about business. It is, as probably you know, a matter of "potting" balls into pockets and controlling the ball with which you do it. And you can do these things well enough to have a great deal of fun even if your cue action is a horrible sight and your exact comprehension of what you are trying to do rather limited.

But unless you know something of Billiards and can employ to a certain degree the technique of that inordinately difficult game, your repertoire is severely limited and a sense of ineffectiveness tends to creep in as any spectators who may be around the place tend to creep out.

As the preference for Snooker over Billiards developed in clubs and public halls, the professionals followed the swing of fashion. With the result that in the past few seasons they too have played far more Snooker than billiards.

Their interpretation of the game is a sheer delight. While their exquisite cleverness at billiards passes almost beyond comprehension and becomes so nearly infallible that it might be termed tedious—long sequences of "nursery" cannons and things of that sort—their Snooker is a most diverting business, what with the plonk of the balls into the pockets, driven there at times as fast as the eye can follow, the occasion for spectacular demonstrations of cue and ball control, the engineering and eluding of "snookers," and the translation of players' personality into stroke and counter-stroke.

Snooker, though I guess you know it already, is said to have been laid when a player finds that a ball or balls interposed between the ball or balls that he is required to strike with the cue ball prevent his playing a direct shot at his objective.

In recent years, one of the most striking features of billiards and Snooker—and very nice striking too in many cases—has been the number of women and girls who have taken up the pastimes. They have serious championships of their own, and although there is a great disparity between the standard of their skill and that of men they really must be said to have made remarkable strides considering the overwhelmingly masculine environment in which the game has been nurtured to its present popularity. Formerly, billiard tables were frequently met with in private houses. And now they are having something of a come-back in this quarter owing to the curtailment of public entertainment in many places as the result of war.

Meiji Ruggers Favored To Down Keio Sunday

One of the season's biggest rugby games in the Tokyo Collegiate league will be played Sunday at the Meiji Shrine stadium when Meiji and Keio will clash. Meiji is expected to win by virtue of its strong forwards.

Waseda is favored to take the measure of Tokyo Imperial University Saturday afternoon at the same stadium.

TOKYO GIANTS WIN PRO BALL CHAMPIONSHIP

By defeating the Nankai Railway team of Osaka 2 to 1 Thursday at the Korakuen stadium, the Tokyo Giants clinched the first attempted "long season" championship of the professional baseball league. Out of 94 games played from the Spring, and through Summer up to Friday, the Giants won 65 games and tied in three for a .714 mark. The Osaka Tigers, even if they won all three games remaining on their schedule, will be unable to catch up with the Giants. The Tigers to date, out of 93 games, have won 61, lost 29 and tied in 3 for a .678 average.

But the championship of the Fall season has not yet been settled. The Giants will win this also if they triumph either over the Tigers and Nagoya in their last two games. But, if they are beaten in both and the Tigers win their last three games against the Giants, Hankyu and Senators, the two will be tied.

The standings for the season follow:

	G	W	L	T	Pct.
Giants	94	65	26	3	.714
Tigers	93	61	29	3	.678
Hankyu	93	57	34	2	.626
Senators	93	48	37	8	.565
Nankai	94	40	50	4	.444
Nagoya	95	38	53	4	.418
Dolfins	94	36	55	3	.396
Lions	93	33	55	5	.375
Eagles	93	26	65	2	.286

Pitcher Stalphin of the Giants was lucky to win from the Nankai squad. Second Baseman Kunihisa smashed him for a triple in the second inning and scored on Yoshikawa's single to center after getting two strikes on him.

Masano of Nankai was stopping the Giants cold and the one run loomed larger as the game progressed. But the Giants deadlocked the count in the eighth. Shiraishi singled over second and went to second on Hirayama's sacrifice. Masano uncorked a wild pitch against Chiba to allow Shiraishi to advance to third. The latter then scored on Chiba's fly center.

When it looked as if the game might go into extra innings with Masano retiring two men in the last half of the ninth, Yoshiwara laid down a safety bunt along the third base line after taking a strike. Masano's peg to first was high and Yoshiwara romped all the way to second. It was Pitcher Stalphin himself who next came up to bat. With the count 2 and 3, he swung at his favorite ball, almost shoulder high, and lashed a hit to center to bat in Yoshiwara for the winning run.

Nagoya bumped off the Lion, 3 to 1, in the curtain-raiser.

PITT TRIUMPHS OVER DUKE, 14-13, ON FOE'S ERRORS FOR 3RD STRAIGHT

By STANLEY WOODWARD

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 14—Striking through the air in the third period Pittsburgh's fighting football team scored the touchdown and kicked the point that defeated the powerful and blundering forces of Duke, 14 to 13, before 49,000 in Pitt Stadium this afternoon. The Panther thus won his third straight game under the coaching regime for the tough ones ahead with a new and flaming confidence.

This was a victory earned by capitalization of errors which the Blue Devils of Durham, N.C., provided in profusion.

Duke started as if to mop up the local heroes, scoring at the end of the first quarter after jamming the ball into Pitt territory from the opening kickoff. Pitt contrived to tie the score at 7 to 7 early in the second period when George of Duke's brilliant, if erring, brothers McAfee fired a lateral pass into the hands of Johnny Dickinson, Pitt end.

CASSIANO GOES OVER

Thereupon this operative ran forty-five yards to the Duke 10-yard line and Pitt put it over on the first play with a left-formation pass to Dick Cassiano.

The Duke entourage went back into the lead toward the end of the first half when Pitt undertook a little queer bootball. Ernest Bonelli, Pitt fullback, made a good gain, then fired a lateral into empty air and Burly Burns recovered on the Pitt 42. Duke thereupon marched over, Tony Ruffa, the only triple-threat tackle extant, firing a pass from place-kick formation to George McAfee for the touchdown.

Then Ruffa, who had made good with his previous eleven place-kicks, including a field goal against Southern California in the Rose Bowl, incontinently muffed the extra point. His effort was high enough, but very far on the acid side, nonetheless. It was a slice, the ball going far to the right of the posts.

It didn't seem important at the moment, for Duke had been in almost constant control of the ball game, but when Wesley of the brothers McAfee contributed another bobble to the staggering Duke total, Pitt struck fast and seized the ball game.

Running from the protecting position in kick formation, Wesley went through the right side of the Pitt line and got clear. Only Dick Cassiano, the safety man, was in his way. The latter had prevented two touchdowns with last-ditch tackles. This time he missed, but in missing he won the ball game.

RUNS WITHOUT BALL

He barely joggled McAfee's arm, but that was enough. It came loose and the vociferously partisan crowd was regaled by the sight of a back running for touchdown without the ball. Cassiano was startled to find it on the ground right in front of him as he lay prone. He made haste to surround it.

Pitt made one first down rushing, then went into the air. Three passes were completed in quick succession. The last one was gathered in by Cassiano on the Duke 7. Other eligible receivers quickly turned themselves into blockers and the slick Pitt left halfback used them cleverly in threading his way to the touchdown.

Ben Kish, the hard-boiled Pitt signal caller and blocking back, made no mistake about the extra point. He kicked it as he had kicked the first one, right through the middle.

Duke had one chance to reclaim the ball game, but it was blown by George of the brothers McAfee, who committed another bloomer on top of another piece of brilliance. On the last play of the third quarter, this hot-and-cold operative caught a flat pass and got away for forty-five yards down the side line aided by some tag-tackling. He was knocked off stride and brought to earth on the Pitt 10-yard line. The Dukes lost fifteen yards from that point for clipping on the play, but they still were in good position to score as the fourth period began.

MUFFS PASS FROM CENTER

Red Friesell, the referee, moved the ball to the other end of the field and George of the brothers McAfee immediately muffed a pass from center. It was a forward (or St. Mary's) fumble of such mastodonic proportions that Cassiano, Pitt safety, turned out to be the recoverer.

After that Duke was stymied by close-to-the-chest Pitt play, plus Kish's kicking, plus another fumble by Wesley of the aforementioned brothers. This mired Duke in its own territory and put it on the defense, when it should have been whaling away at the Pitt goal line.

This perhaps gives a rough idea of what kind of a ball game it was. The Dukes seemed to have the superior power, but it would take all the power generated by Niagara Falls to commit so many "rocks" and still go back to Durham as candidates for a student reception. When the McAfee brothers were working for Duke they were magnificent. When they were working for Pitt, however, they were just as effective.

At the outset, the variable McAfees had Pitt on the ropes. Held for downs once on the Panther 9-yard line, Duke came right back and traveled forty-three yards for a touchdown before Dr. Jock Sutherland, a new brother in the pressbox, could say "Hoot, Mon."

The big run in this march was contributed by George McAfee on a third-down fake-kick play. The Pitt left end was sucked in by George's fake, which gave Durham's right halfback a chance to run in the open. Why Pitt should believe Duke would kick on third down from the Pitt 40 with six yards to go was unexplained. At any rate George traveled thirty-four yards to the Pitt 6. From this point Roger Robinson, the big Duke fullback, wrestled it over on the fourth attempt.

Following the George McAfee presentation, an impressive ceremony in which the ball was thrown directly backward to Pitt's end, Dickinson, who was out of the play, and the ensuing Pitt touchdown, Duke looked good again.
